Mr. MYERS. I don't think it's statistical analysis. I just did a present value study, I believe, looking at what's here and what my memory says.

Mr. PORTNOY. Well, this would be a good time, sir, perhaps to give you what I think might be a clearer copy of the work that you performed back in 1985.

Mr. MYERS. That would be nice.

Mr. PORTNOY. If you could give Mr. Myers a copy? Does this look familiar to you, sir?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Mr. PORTNOY. Does it look familiar to you, Mr. Mitchum?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes, it does.

Mr. PORTNOY. Do either of you have any reason to believe this is not the document that Mr. Myers prepared back in 1985?

Mr. MITCHUM. No.

Mr. MYERS. I believe that this is my document, yes.

Mr. PORTNOY. Sir, I would draw your attention to the cover sheet, which is entitled "State Police Communication Bid Analysis." Is that a summary of the work you did?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Mr. PORTNOY. If you look at the first entry, I believe it lists First Capital Corporation and a cost of $18,073,030; is that correct?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Mr. PORTNOY. Was that cost actually the net present value calculation?

Mr. MYERS. Yes. Under that heading it says present value study.

Mr. PORTNOY. What is net present value in this context?

Mr. MYERS. That's the discounted value of a stream of payments that are to be received at some future point in time.

Mr. PORTNOY. And would it be fair to say that this figure is what the bond underwriting would cost the State of Arkansas in 1985 dollars?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Mr. PORTNOY. The second entry is the Raney/Hutton/Lasater proposal, and that lists a cost or a net present value of $18,101,700.

Mr. MYERS. That's correct.

Mr. PORTNOY. So the difference between those two proposals is approximately $28,000?

Mr. MYERS. Twenty-eight thousand dollars, yes, sir.

Mr. PORTNOY. Out of more than $18 million?

Mr. MYERS. That's correct.

Mr. PORTNOY. Have you had occasion to calculate what that difference is in percentage terms?

Mr. MYERS. Umm—

Mr. PORTNOY. Don't even try.

Mr. MYERS. It's a few basis points.

Mr. PORTNOY. Fortunately, I have a calculator and I came up with fifteen one-hundredths of 1 percent. I believe you characterized that difference earlier as?

Mr. MYERS. De minimis.

Mr. PORTNOY. De minimis or infinitesimal. Would you agree with that characterization, Mr. Mitchum?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes, I would.

Mr. PORTNOY. Is there anybody who would disagree that for purposes of a bond underwriting that the difference between these two proposals is effectively zero in price?

Mr. MITCHUM. Correct.

Mr. PORTNOY. Now turning to the second numbered portion of this first page, Mr. Myers, it says, "Other Considerations—A. Timing of Payments. First Capital's bid requires the State to make payments immediately. The Hutton/Lasater bid's first payment is not due until the 13th month. The State thus has the use of the driver's license revenue for a longer period which further serves to reduce the cost." Does that, in effect, confirm what Mr. Young was saying about their proposal, sir?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, it does.

Mr. PORTNOY. So would it be your view that the $28,000 difference we discussed, which we've already established is essentially nothing, does not even include this factor which makes the Raney proposal less expensive for the State?

Mr. MYERS. I believe the calculations that I did reflect the discounting in the use of the State for that money. I think that's just the opposite of what you said.

Mr. PORTNOY. I believe Mr. Mitchum testified in his deposition that he had a different understanding, that the numbers that you came up with did not reflect the arbitrage opportunities that were available to the State under the RHL proposal. Is that your recollection?

Mr. MITCHUM. I believe I was incorrect on that.

Mr. PORTNOY. So that was your understanding at the time, though, sir?

Mr. MITCHUM. Right.

Mr. PORTNOY. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Do we have any more?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Two quick questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Two quick questions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I just want to be clear. We are clear now finally I guess, Mr. Young, when we look at Mr. Myers' analysis, that the First Capital bid, in terms of cost, was lower than the Raney/Hutton/Lasater bid; right?

Mr. YOUNG. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And the difference boils down to this complicated issue involving arbitrage where lawyers can debate until the cows come home about whether the statute allows you to hold back the money to do that or not; right? But what we do know, Mr. Young, is that it all boiled down to the opinion that the law firm issued, that's Jim Guy Tucker's law firm issued that said that it was OK to hold back the money and do this arbitrage.

We also know that this law firm was the law firm that drafted the legislation and was paid by your syndicate and that offered this critical opinion that turned a losing bid into a winning bid. We know that; right?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, I don't think I agree with your characterization that that was what won the bid for us, but—

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is what Mr. Myers, the quote "independent person" prepared. Because if you look, it's right on, you can't, I mean, this thing doesn't lie. This was made up at the time.

In just plain black and white, First Capital comes in first with the lowest cost, but the consideration that turns it is this notion of the Raney/Hutton/Lasater bid holding back the money. And that all boils down to how you read that legislation. The people who read the legislation were bought and paid for by Mr. Lasater. I mean, that seems to me to be the sum and substance of it. You can't deny any more that Mr. Lasater and your firm and the Hutton firm together did, in fact, pay the lawyers who rendered the opinion that allowed this arbitrage deal with the money; right? You guys paid the lawyers?

Mr. YOUNG. I think I would agree that we paid the lawyers for their services.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK.

The CHAIRMAN. No further questions.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Goodwin, you are now the retired former Director of the Arkansas State Police?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Is the Director the top job in the Arkansas State Police?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, 13 years.

Senator SARBANES. You were the Director for 13 years beginning when?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, sir, 1981 and retired in 1994.

Senator SARBANES. Were you with the State Police before that?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. How long were you with the Arkansas State Police?

Mr. GOODWIN. For 25 years prior to that.

Senator SARBANES. Prior to becoming the Director?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. So you had a total of 38 years with the Arkansas State Police?

Mr. GOODWIN. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Are you appointed by the Governor?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, I am.

Senator SARBANES. For a term or for an unlimited period? How does that work in Arkansas?

Mr. GOODWIN. Normally with a change of Governor, the Director will change. It's his option.

Senator SARBANES. Who appointed you as Director?

Mr. GOODWIN. Frank White.

Senator SARBANES. Governor White appointed you.

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Was it open to Governor Clinton to replace you? Under the law, could he have done that?

Mr. GOODWIN. He could have done that, yes.

Senator SARBANES. But he did not, he retained you as Director?

Mr. GOODWIN. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. So you were picked by Governor White but Governor Clinton retained you, well, I guess, until he was gone from Arkansas, and then you decided to retire at some subsequent time?

Mr. GOODWIN. Well, I probably worked at least a year, maybe a year and a half under Governor Tucker.

Senator SARBANES. So you worked through three Governors as Director?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Of the Arkansas State Police?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. I just wanted to be clear on one final point, Colonel Goodwin. It goes back to a point Mr. Chertoff raised. There was a time when Governor Clinton asked you to inquire, at least raised concerns about Mr. Lasater and his cocaine or rumors of his cocaine use. Is that correct?

Mr. GOODWIN. I hope I made it clear that I'm not sure who initiated the conversation but yes, I did discuss it with him.

Mr. COLE. In any event, and I want to be clear too because I think this is important, there was a concern and the Governor shared the concern, whoever raised it, and you checked and found there was no record that Mr. Lasater was being investigated, and he certainly hadn't been tried or convicted at that time?

Mr. GOODWIN. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. So what you were dealing with at that time really was just rumors?

Mr. GOODWIN. That's what I was dealing with, yes.

Mr. COLE. I think earlier you drew a distinction and perhaps you didn't testify fully about it, but you noted that with the E.F. Hutton group and the concerns that some of the board members had raised about Hutton, Hutton had been convicted of Federal fraud charges. In fact, it entered a guilty plea at that time, so there was a conviction there.

Mr. GOODWIN. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. You drew a distinction, at least in your mind, between a situation where a firm had been found guilty in court on the one hand with Hutton, and on the other hand with Lasater, where you had some unsubstantiated rumors, and I recognize that later Mr. Lasater did plead guilty to drug charges and those rumors turned out to have some foundation, but at the time you were dealing with rumors?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes.

Mr. COLE. Then I take it you would have had some question about whether it would have even been appropriate for the State to have taken what would have been pretty serious action against a group of underwriting firms, that would be to disqualify them from the bidding process, just based on some rumors that had not legal foundation at that time?

Mr. GOODWIN. If I had been a member of the Commission, I would have been concerned about it.

Mr. COLE. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. We have no further questions and this panel is dismissed with the thanks of the Committee. We have at least two intervening votes, and so we will reconvene at 3:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 12:40 p.m., the Committee was recessed to reconvene at 3:00 p.m. this same day.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

The CHAIRMAN. Before I swear in the witnesses, I am going to recognize Mr. Ben-Veniste for a statement.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

In response to inquiries that our office has received probably emanating from a story that appeared on the editorial page of The Wall Street Journal some time ago, I wanted to clarify something so I don't have to respond to a number of different inquiries.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think that this will keep people from continuing to raise questions?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Probably not, but it will keep me from having to respond.

The CHAIRMAN. I was going to say, how naive.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In 1984 or 1985, I represented an individual by the name of Barry Seale in a criminal case brought against him in Federal Court in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. Seale had asked me to represent him because of an earlier trial I had just won in the same courthouse.

Ultimately, Seale was convicted of illegally importing quaaludes into the United States, and thereafter became an undercover operator for the Government in several high-profile investigations because a link had been alleged in the right wing press involving Barry Seale, Mina Airport in Arkansas, and Dan Lasater.

I advised Senator Sarbanes, prior to my appointment as Special Counsel to this Committee, that if the Committee were to investigate these allegations, I would feel more comfortable if someone else on the staff were involved. Senator Sarbanes agreed that even though there was not a remote suggestion of a conflict of interest, that given the breadth of the anticipated inquiry by this Committee, the assignment of this area to another staffer would be agreeable.

Accordingly, I assigned the questioning of Mr. Lasater to others, even though this Committee has not concerned itself with the allegations concerning Mina Airport. I personally have seen no evidence from any source that would link Barry Seale to Mr. Lasater, much less to any area under inquiry by this Committee.

Clearly, there never has been nor is there now, to the best of my knowledge, any conflict between my prior representation of Mr. Seale and the work of this Committee. And I wanted you to know that, Mr. Chairman, and of course, Senator Sarbanes and I have discussed this early on and then again I thought it appropriate to make this statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I simply want to say I frankly do not think there was a conflict, but Mr. Ben-Veniste, in really an abundance of caution, thought it would work better this way, and that was the understanding we made at the outset, and I've seen nothing that's changed my view on that.

But I think, sir, that no questions are raised, we are going to follow this procedure although I want to make it very clear I think he could, in my own view, participate without there being a conflict of interest, but we'll avoid any questions about that by following this course of action.

The CHAIRMAN. I appreciate the sentiment shared by my Ranking Member, and I commend Mr. Ben-Veniste for taking this course of action.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. May I ask our witnesses to please stand for the purposes of taking the oath.

[Witnesses sworn.]

The CHAIRMAN. If any of the witnesses would like to make a statement, we would be happy to receive them at this time.

Mr. Bratton.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF SAM I. BRATTON, JR.
FORMER COUNSEL TO GOVERNOR CLINTON

Mr. BRATTON. No, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Gaines.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF MICHAEL J. GAINES
FORMER PUBLIC SAFETY LIAISON TO ARKANSAS STATE POLICE FOR GOVERNOR CLINTON

Mr. GAINES. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Nash.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF BOB J. NASH
FORMER SENIOR EXECUTIVE ASSISTANT FOR ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT TO GOVERNOR CLINTON

Mr. NASH. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. I'll turn to Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Good afternoon, panel.

Mr. Nash, if I could begin with you, sir. Between 1983 and 1988, you were the Senior Executive Assistant to Governor Clinton for Economic Development.

Mr. NASH. That is correct. I may have gone into 1989.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then you became the head of the Arkansas Development Finance Authority?

Mr. NASH. That is correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. While you were the Assistant to the Governor for Economic Development, did you know a man named Charles Stout?

Mr. NASH. I remember that name. I believe he was a board member of the Bond Authority.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was he the Chairman of the Arkansas Development Housing Agency?

Mr. NASH. I can't remember whether he was the Chairman or not. I think I remember him being on the board.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And he was appointed by Governor White who was Governor Clinton's predecessor?

Mr. NASH. I don't remember who appointed him.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ever speak to Mr. Stout about bond underwriting work for the Arkansas Development Housing Authority?

Mr. NASH. Did I ever speak to him when?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Some time during 1983, 1984, 1985, about the Arkansas Housing Development Housing Agency bond underwriting contracts?

Mr. NASH. I was on the Governor's staff at the time and I could have spoken to him if he was on the board at that time.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ever instruct Mr. Stout to include a firm called Collins, Block & Lasater in HDA underwritings?

Mr. NASH. No, I did not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You're certain that you did not do that?

Mr. NASH. I'm certain I did not do that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ever discuss with Mr. Stout on any occasion whether certain underwriting firms should receive a certain percentage of HDA underwriting work?

Mr. NASH. I don't recall ever discussing anything like that with Mr. Stout.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So you never said to Mr. Stout that, for example, the Block Lasater firm should receive 30 percent of the HDA work?

Mr. NASH. No, I don't recall ever mentioning anything like that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Bratton, if I could turn to you. You were counsel to the Governor in the mid-1980's?

Mr. BRATTON. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In that capacity, you were involved in drafting and reviewing legislation?

Mr. BRATTON. Among other things.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let me direct your attention, do you recall legislation to authorize the financing of the police radio system?

Mr. BRATTON. Generally.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And that was part of the Governor's 1985 legislative package?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall whether it was a part of the Governor's package, as it was referred to. It was a piece of legislation that the Governor's office was interested in and supported.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall discussing this legislation with the Governor on any occasion?

Mr. BRATTON. I am sure I did discuss it with him on several occasions during that period of time. I don't have any specific recollection of any conversation.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall the Governor being present at meetings at which this bond underwriting contract was discussed?

Mr. BRATTON. The legislation or bond underwriting?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's talk about some legislation first.

Mr. BRATTON. That's been 11 years ago, and I don't recall specific meetings. Knowing generally how we operated, I am sure the Governor was present on more than one occasion when that piece of legislation and others would have been discussed in the context of the legislative session and the initiatives we were supporting.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You would agree that this was an important item on the Governor's agenda at the time?

Mr. BRATTON. Along with many other things that would have been important.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In terms of how you would have financed the police radio system, you considered a number of alternatives; right?

Mr. BRATTON. I do not recall how many alternatives were considered.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was the actual legislation drafted in your office?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't believe so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware that the Mitchell Williams law firm drafted the legislation?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was Mr. Jim Guy Tucker a partner in that firm?

Mr. BRATTON. I believe he was a partner in that firm at the time.

Mr. GIUFFRA. There was a Mitchell attorney who was present during the capital bid on the legislation?

Mr. BRATTON. There was a representative from the Mitchell firm that was present in some discussions about the legislation, I think.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Available to answer legislators' questions about the legislation?

Mr. BRATTON. On a few occasions that I recall, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know who decided that the Mitchell Tucker firm should draft this legislation?

Mr. BRATTON. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was that a decision that was made by your office?

Mr. BRATTON. I believe that they provided a suggested draft to us. I don't have any recollection that we asked them to do that work.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In her testimony last week, Ms. Wright, who was Chief of Staff at the time, testified that, "All I know is that the work that the Mitchell firm did at our request in working with us on our legislation that was part of the Governor's package on the Governor's initiatives, and it had nothing to do with whatever else they were doing for Dan Lasater." Would her testimony be correct as far as you know? That you would have asked the Mitchell firm to do this work?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall whether we asked the Mitchell firm to do work or not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The State of Arkansas did not pay the Mitchell Tucker firm to do this work. Is that right?

Mr. BRATTON. Not that I'm aware of.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you know who was paying the Mitchell Tucker firm's bills with regard to this legislation?

Mr. BRATTON. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And did you ever ask anyone who was paying the Mitchell Tucker law firm's bills in connection with drafting this legislation?

Mr. BRATTON. No, I did not. It was not uncommon, since neither the Governor's office staff nor the Bureau of Legislative Research staff, had any particular expertise in drafting bond type legislation, for attorneys with four or five of the bond law firms in Little Rock who did bond work to assist in drafting bond-related legislation. Sometimes those firms might have had an on-going relationship with a particular agency that would be involved with it, and would do that type of work.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And sometimes they might be representing one of the underwriters?

Mr. BRATTON. Or have been bond counsel or had worked with an underwriting firm. So it was not unusual where that type of legislation was being considered for us to have the legislation provided to us by a law firm that had bond expertise and expertise in drafting that type of legislation. So I didn't think anything in particular about it one way or another.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You didn't try to find out who was paying the bills?

Mr. BRATTON. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. They, obviously, were not working pro bono or for free?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't know whether they were or not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You didn't think they were, though, did you?

Mr. BRATTON. I didn't have any reason to think about it one way or another. As I said, it was fairly common for firms to assist in drafting legislation, either because of previous work they'd done for the State or perhaps in the expectation that they might get work in the future.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The Committee has received certain billing records indicating that the Mitchell Tucker firm billed Mr. Lasater's firm about $22,000 to draft this legislation. Were you aware of that?

Mr. BRATTON. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were not aware of the fact that the Mitchell Tucker firm was paid by Lasater?

Mr. BRATTON. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Gaines, you were not aware that the Mitchell Tucker firm was paid by Lasater, were you?

Mr. GAINES. No, I was not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Nash, were you aware of that fact?

Mr. NASH. No, I was not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you have any problem, Mr. Bratton, with one of the bidders being involved having their law firm draft legislation? Do you see any conflict potentially there?

Mr. BRATTON. I didn't at the time, and I don't think I do now.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would you have wanted to know that the Lasater firm was paying the Mitchell Tucker firm to draft legislation?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't know whether that would have made any difference.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If you were going to be meeting with the Lasater firm's representatives, or the Mitchell firm's representatives, would you have wanted to know who was paying the bills?

Mr. BRATTON. As I said, at the time I didn't think one way or another about whether they were being paid or by whom they were being paid.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, Mr. Bratton, did you know who Dan Lasater was in 1985?

Mr. BRATTON. I generally knew who he was. I did not know him.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you know that he was a supporter of Governor Clinton?

Mr. BRATTON. I had that general impression, I think.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Gaines, did you know who Mr. Lasater was?

Mr. GAINES. No, I did not know him.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Nash, did you know who Lasater was in 1985?

Mr. NASH. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You believed him to be a supporter of Governor Clinton?

Mr. NASH. I understood that to be the case.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware that Mr. Lasater had held a fundraiser for Governor Clinton on October 4, 1984, at which approximately $50,000 was raised?

Mr. NASH. I read that in the press since I've been in Washington.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Bratton, were you aware at the time that Mr. Lasater had held a fundraiser for Governor Clinton?

Mr. BRATTON. Not that I recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware that at the Governor's request, Mr. Lasater had employed the Governor's brother, Roger?

Mr. BRATTON. At some point, I knew Roger had worked for Dan Lasater. I don't think I ever knew how that came about.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Nash, were you aware of the fact that Mr. Lasater had employed the Governor's brother, Roger?

Mr. NASH. I understand that to be the case now.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Bratton, do you know a man by the name of Michael Drake?

Mr. BRATTON. I know who he is.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He was the Senior Vice President at the Lasater firm?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't know what his title was. I knew he was employed by the Lasater firm in the general timeframes that are under discussion today.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you attend any meetings with Mr. Drake in 1985, in connection with the police bond underwriting?

Mr. BRATTON. I had some discussion with Drake during that period of time while the legislation was under consideration.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you have any one-on-one meetings with Mr. Drake, just the two of you?

Mr. BRATTON. I'm sure he probably came by my office on an occasion and said, what's happening with the legislation, that sort of thing. I don't recall any protracted meetings with him.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were aware that he was interested in having Lasater & Company being hired to handle financing for the radio system?

Mr. BRATTON. I assume that was his interest.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Gaines, did you ever meet with Mr. Drake back in 1985?

Mr. GAINES. I know that I met him I believe at a State Police Commission meeting during that timeframe. I do not recall having any one-on-one meetings with him.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Nash, do you recall meeting Mr. Drake back in 1985 in connection with this bond underwriting?

Mr. NASH. In connection with what bond underwriting?

Mr. GIUFFRA. The police radio system bond underwriting.

Mr. NASH. No, I don't recall meeting with him.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The Committee has obtained billing records from the Mitchell Tucker law firm that reflect that you attended, Mr. Nash, a conference on January 11, 1985, with Mr. Drake and a lawyer at the Mitchell Tucker law firm. Do you have any recollection of that meeting?

Mr. NASH. No, I don't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now the day before the Governor had met with persons from the Lasater firm and also from the Mitchell Tucker law firm, and discussed the police radio financing. Were you aware of that meeting?

Mr. NASH. No, I don't recall that meeting.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The billing records also indicate that on January 15th, 4 days later, a memorandum was sent to you by the Mitchell Tucker law firm and that was a response to a request you had made. Do you recall that at all?

Mr. NASH. No, I don't recall that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The billing records also indicate that there were teleconferences between the Lasater law firm, Mitchell Tucker, and the Governor's office on January 19th and January 23rd. Do you recall that?

Mr. NASH. I'm sorry, ask the question again.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall telephone conferences between the Mitchell Tucker law firm and your office on the 19th and 23rd?

Mr. NASH. No, I don't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If you could put up on the Elmo a March 4th meeting. These are notes of Mr. Bratton, DKS 17800. Mr. Bratton?

Mr. BRATTON. Is that in the packet as well?

Mr. GIUFFRA. It's on the Elmo.

Mr. BRATTON. I can't read it off there.

Mr. GIUFFRA. We will get it for you. It's DKS 17800. These are your notes, aren't they, sir?

Mr. BRATTON. They seem to be.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You attended a meeting on March 4th, again with Mr. Drake who worked for Mr. Lasater and Mr. Selig who worked for the Mitchell Tucker law firm, and Mr. Gaines. Is that correct?

Mr. BRATTON. That's what it seems to indicate. Also Paul Young, Mahlon Hardin, and Joe, who was probably Joe Stuart.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The Governor signed the legislation on April 4th, then the Police Commission made a final decision as to which financing proposal they would accept on May 10th.

Could we put up on the Elmo, DKS 27162. This is a memo from Mr. Gaines to Governor Clinton. Now, Mr. Gaines, you were the liaison between the Governor's office and the State Police; correct?

Mr. GAINES. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The Governor was a busy person; right?

Mr. GAINES. Yes, he was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You would not normally bother the Governor and send him a memo of something containing unimportant information; right?

Mr. GAINES. I would convey to him any information coming from an agency head.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But it would have to be information that you considered important, would it not?

Mr. GAINES. No, it would not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Any information you received from an agency head, you would immediately communicate to the Governor's office?

Mr. GAINES. Pretty much true. I would send a memo directed to the Governor and Betsey Wright.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This memorandum reports on certain observations of Mr. Goodwin. You knew Mr. Goodwin; correct?

Mr. GAINES. Yes, he was Director of the State Police at the time.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This reports on certain observations that he had with regard—

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you, why did you make this memo?

Mr. GAINES. I do not have any specific recall of preparing the memo, but clearly it's a type of memo I would have prepared and obviously, it is my handwriting. I'm only assuming, but I would assume that I had had communication with Colonel Goodwin and he had conveyed to me his observations concerning how he felt the Commissioners were inclined toward the granting of that contract. And I was conveying that information on up to Ms. Wright and the Governor.

The CHAIRMAN. You see what is unusual is that it is not a question of whether the Commissioners were going to vote for or against a particular project. What this is is who the Commissioners are going to vote for as it relates to the undertaking of the work. What relevance would that have to the Governor, to any Governor, forget this Governor, to anyone if indeed he or his office was not interested in that? Do you follow what I'm saying? In other words, look, it's not a question how do they feel about the project. Do we agree? This memo is not with respect to whether or not these Commissioners are for the project. Is that correct?

Mr. GAINES. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. By the way, I take it that you did not speak to these individual Commissioners. You implied or said that you think you got this information from the then-Police Commissioner?

Mr. GAINES. The Director of the State Police. That's my impression that it was probably through a telephone call with Colonel Goodwin.

The CHAIRMAN. Weren't you at this meeting?

Mr. GAINES. I don't believe this was concerning a meeting. I believe the meeting was scheduled at some point in the future, and he was relating how he felt the Commissioners would vote, the members would vote.

The CHAIRMAN. So now here you are, you're talking to the Commissioner as it relates to what he thinks their vote is going to be as it relates to who the underwriter's going to be; right?

Mr. GAINES. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Why did you ask him that?

Mr. GAINES. I don't believe I did ask him that. Again, I don't have any specific recall, but it would have been in the normal course of our business for Colonel Goodwin to either call me or in the course of a conversation with him that I had initiated to say here's my impression of what's going to happen.

The CHAIRMAN. What's going to happen as it relates to the Commission making a decision that they are going to vote on the bonding person.

Let's put it in another area. Let's say it's not this radio thing. Let's say it's going to be another issue, the airport or some other State project. It wasn't your habit of having the Commissioner in charge of the Works Commission call you up and say, "I think this is the way the Commissioners are leaning in terms of voting for the bonding," was it?

Mr. GAINES. It was our general practice for the agencies that we served as liaison to to convey any information coming from the director to Ms. Wright and the Governor.

The CHAIRMAN. Wouldn't this be very unusual to have them conveying to you who they thought and how the votes were lining up even to the point where Rockefeller, we don't know?

Mr. GAINES. I can't address Colonel Goodwin's reasons for telling me that. All I know is that anything he conveyed to me I would have passed on.

The CHAIRMAN. Did somebody ask him to find out who the people are going to vote for?

Mr. GAINES. Not that I'm aware of.

The CHAIRMAN. But he did convey this information to you?

Mr. GAINES. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, Mr. Gaines, the Lasater group was part of a group with Hutton and also with T.J. Raney; right?

Mr. GAINES. Yes, that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In your memo, you don't make reference to Hutton or Raney, just to Lasater; right?

Mr. GAINES. Yes, that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Is that because the people in the Governor's office were only concerned about Lasater and not the other two?

Mr. GAINES. No, I'm assuming that it was because that was the way it was conveyed to me by Colonel Goodwin.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But Hutton was the lead underwriter; right?

Mr. GAINES. That I don't know.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now in the memo, there's a notation from Betsey Wright which says, "Gov, we have real problem here since 'street talk' is that Lasater put in unreasonably low bid knowing he can raise it once he gets it." Up at the top, it says in the Governor's handwriting, "Lasater must be 'told' bid must be price." You got the memo back; right?

Mr. GAINES. I don't recall whether it came back. It was directed back to my suite of offices, but whether I actually saw it or it was filed, I do not know. I don't recall seeing it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you hear any street talk yourself about Lasater low balling the bid?

Mr. GAINES. Not that I recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did the Governor direct you to take any action, for example, contact the State Police and let them know that Lasater was low balling the bid?

Mr. GAINES. No. To the best of my knowledge, I never had a conversation with the Governor about it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Because this memo says that Lasater should be told instead of the State Police right?

Mr. GAINES. I'm not sure I follow you.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The point is that the problem was that Lasater was low balling the bid; right? That's the concern Ms. Wright's expressing in the memo; right?

Mr. GAINES. As far as the street talk? Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The Governor says, tell Lasater his bid has got to be priced. The Governor does not say tell the State Police that Lasater's low balling the bid. Do you see that in the memo, sir?

Mr. GAINES. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You don't know why no direction was given to you to get to the State Police and say Lasater is low balling the bid?

Mr. GAINES. No, I do not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Gaines, you attended a number of the State Police Commission meetings at which the various financing proposals were discussed; right?

Mr. GAINES. I remember attending one in particular where the formal presentations were made. It's very likely, if there were other meetings during that period of time concerning the financing, that I would have been in attendance.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall reporting on those meetings to the Governor and Ms. Wright?

Mr. GAINES. I don't recall doing that, no.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall any reservations being expressed at those meetings about the Raney/Hutton/Lasater group because of certain legal difficulties E.F. Hutton had gotten into?

Mr. GAINES. No, I do not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. There came a time, I believe it was on May 10th, when the Police Commission approved the Lasater group to handle this financing; right?

Mr. GAINES. I mean, I know they were approved, but I do not know when that was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall any discussions during this entire period in which there was any concern about the Lasater group or Mr. Lasater's reputation?

Mr. GAINES. No, I don't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall any discussion at any time of Mr. Lasater's drug use in the Governor's office?

Mr. GAINES. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Nash, do you recall any discussion of Lasater's drug use while you were in the Governor's office?

Mr. NASH. No, I do not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Bratton, do you recall any discussion of Mr. Lasater's drug use while you were in the Governor's office?

Mr. BRATTON. Not that I recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ever discuss with Governor Clinton, Roger's relationship with Lasater?

Mr. BRATTON. No, I don't have any recollection of ever having done so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Gaines, there was a request made by Governor Clinton to Colonel Goodwin to see whether Lasater was under investigation for drug use. Were you aware of that request?

Mr. GAINES. No, I was not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you never discussed the request with Colonel Goodwin?

Mr. GAINES. Not that I recall, no.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now in early 1985, Mr. Bratton, do you recall Roger Clinton testifying at a trial in Federal Court involving a man named Anderson?

Mr. BRATTON. I have some vague recollection of news coverage of it at the time, from that time.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Gaines, do you recall Roger Clinton testifying at that trial involving a man named Anderson?

Mr. GAINES. It seems like I recall, similar with Mr. Bratton, I remember news accounts of that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Nash, do you recall Roger Clinton testifying at Mr. Anderson's drug trial in Federal Court?

Mr. NASH. I seem to remember newspaper accounts or press accounts of that, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If I could just direct your attention to certain press accounts, maybe you can put them on the Elmo.

Now, Mr. Nash, the Gazette was one of the two statewide papers at the time; is that right?

Mr. NASH. What year?

Mr. GIUFFRA. This is in 1985.

Mr. NASH. Yes, as I remember the Arkansas Democrat was one statewide paper, and the Arkansas Gazette was another.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have a copy of that in front of you, Mr. Nash? Mr. Gaines, would you make that copy available?

Mr. GAINES. Sure.

The CHAIRMAN. Just to save time. Let's move it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In this article, which is dated 2/27/85, which is several months before the Lasater firm receives the bond underwriting contract, there's a statement that a woman testifies that Mr. Dan Lasater—

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't you refer him specifically, what column is it that you're talking about?

Mr. GIUFFRA. It is in the second column over, midway down, it is the column which is now marked in yellow.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It's right on your screen.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you see where it says on the screen, and in this, Dan Lasater?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you see that, sir?

Mr. NASH. Yes, I see it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I'll read it into the record. It says:

Ms. Canada also testified that Dan Lasater, an Arkansas native who owns a race horse farm in Florida and who once gave young Clinton [Roger], $8,000 to help settle drug debts, also used cocaine.

Do you recall seeing that at the time?

Mr. NASH. No, I don't recall seeing that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Gaines, were you aware of that testimony?

Mr. GAINES. No, I was not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Bratton, were you aware of that testimony?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware of the testimony, Mr. Bratton, with regard to the fact that Mr. Lasater had paid $8,000 to Roger Clinton to help him pay off some drug debts?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall whether I read that article at the time or not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware of that, Mr. Gaines?

Mr. GAINES. I don't recall being aware of it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Nash?

Mr. NASH. I don't recall being aware of it.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me make an observation. I find that, if you don't recall it now, I understand. But let me tell you something. If something had been reported of this nature in just about anybody's State and particularly as it relates to you gentlemen and the positions that you held, I find it hard to understand why you would not have remembered, yes, there was something about that.

I understand that you can't recall everything. But I tell you this, I don't understand what would be so terrible, and it would be a lot more credible, at least as far as I'm concerned, if you were saying, I recall this. My gosh, you mean to tell me that people didn't comment on that? You mean to tell me that wasn't reported on the radio and television thereafter? It's not credible for three people involved in the body politic as much as you were to sit here now and say that you never even heard that. That's nonsense.

Mr. BRATTON. Senator, if I might respond. I understood the question to be whether today I have a present recollection of having read this article a dozen years ago.

The CHAIRMAN. A dozen years ago?

Mr. BRATTON. I probably read this article. I don't recall.

The CHAIRMAN. There were news accounts about this article, weren't there, Mr. Bratton? Weren't there radio comments? Wasn't there TV comment? Wasn't there other things? Wasn't there talk in political circles? I mean, it would be unusual. Look, I do not think that when we get through, this panel is going to be the hill of beans that's uncovered—but I have to tell you what takes place and the kind of thing that I think is just exasperating, is that it would be absolutely, I believe, unbelievable to anyone who really understands you are deeply immersed in government in politics.

You care for the work you are doing, you care for your principal who you are working for, the Governor. Isn't that true, Mr. Gaines? Didn't you care for him?

Mr. GAINES. Certainly.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course you did.

Mr. Bratton, you were his counsel.

Mr. BRATTON. Absolutely.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Nash.

Mr. NASH. Absolutely.

The CHAIRMAN. My gosh, here the Governor's brother is accused of this and there's testimony to this. Of course, you'd be concerned. Certainly, you would have heard of it. If you didn't read that article yourself the first day, do you mean to tell me acquaintances wouldn't have mentioned it to you? Of course, they would have and they did; and for you to come here and say, "well, I don't recall," it's not credible. Now look, do I expect you to say I remember that very same day, but of course you heard this, and I don't mean you heard this last year or the year before. I mean, it had to be. This wasn't the first time, there were a number of occasions in which this situation took place.

So maybe the question was too narrowly drawn as it related to this specific trial and this specific time. But there came a point in time when there were newspaper articles as it related to this charge. As a matter of fact thereafter, I think it's indisputable that took place. That's just the observation I am going to make. The yellow light is on.

We are in the middle of a vote. We'll come back hopefully in 15 minutes. Try to be a little more up front, please. I mean, that's my observation to you. I think you all do your jobs as best you can. I'm not looking to browbeat, nobody's here looking to browbeat. We want to get your testimony. But I'll tell you, it's hard when I hear the kind of reply that came through. And I don't attribute any bad motives to any of you, but let's see if we can be a little bit more responsive and not so guarded.

By the same token, if Counsel asks you, can you recall a specific meeting at a specific time, I know darn well you may not and you probably can't, because I couldn't. It's unreasonable to expect recall with specificity. But this kind of thing I think is a situation where we have to try to be a little more forthcoming, so we can move through this alot faster.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, let me make this observation.

The CHAIRMAN. Sure.

Senator SARBANES. The question, as I understood it, was whether they recall now having read this article then. I think it's kind of hard to get upset with them when they say, well, you know, I don't recall now whether I read that article or not.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you know what, I think that now we're getting down to the point where we're attempting through lawyers to find a way to evade and to be less than responsive and candid in the totality. You said the whole truth. I mean, the fact of the matter is that you were aware that this was raised back then. Do you recall with specificity the date that you read this? Of course no one would ask that. That's why I say it's disingenuous. All I'm asking and all Counsel's asking, and we will get through with this alot sooner, is be responsive.

Do you mean to tell me that you don't remember having read an article or heard about this thing, or you don't have recall that this thing didn't create a stir in the capitol in Little Rock?

What are we talking about? You didn't live in a State with 500 million people and this was some obscure place; you are in Little Rock. This newspaper is circulated there. You work for the Governor, your principal. His brother, it's been testified, was involved in a situation. You didn't talk about it? You didn't know about it? You didn't hear about it? Of course, you did. And for you to say, well, I don't recall, that's not saying if you don't recall reading this specific—did you hear about what was mentioned in this newspaper? Now do you have a recollection of having come to learn about this?

Mr. Gaines.

Mr. GAINES. I believe my testimony, Mr. Chairman, was that I have a general recall of the press accounts. The specifics of it I don't. This specific reference to a testimony by Ms. Canada.

The CHAIRMAN. You would never remember the name Ms. Canada, of course.

Mr. GAINES. And the fact that—

The CHAIRMAN. But the essence of it is that an $8,000 drug debt was paid off by Lasater.

Mr. GAINES. No, I do not remember that part.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't?

Mr. GAINES. No, sir, I do not. I do remember the—

The CHAIRMAN. What do you remember?

Mr. GAINES. I remember some specific, I mean, just general press accounts of the fact that there was testimony in the trial of Mr. Anderson, I believe. I mean, that's all I remember.

The CHAIRMAN. Testimony, wait. You remember testimony at Mr. Anderson's trial about what Mr. Gaines; nothing specific? Nothing about the Governor's brother?

Mr. GAINES. I remember the accounts that were in the press. I remember that he testified there, but I do not remember the specifics of what he testified to, no, sir, I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. Really?

Mr. Nash, you too?

Mr. NASH. Mr. Chairman, when I was asked the question about whether I remembered about the Governor's brother and Mr. Lasater, I stated that I remember press accounts.

When this was put up on the screen, this highlighted portion, that mentioned the name and the dollars, I specifically do not remember that. There's a figure in there of $8,000. Prior to seeing that on that screen, I would not know, I couldn't tell you what the figure was. I know there was some figure.

The CHAIRMAN. When that came out, when that account hit, people were talking about it, weren't they? Weren't they talking about it in the Capital?

Mr. NASH. I don't recall talking about it in the Capital.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't recall it, Mr. Gaines? Nobody talked about it?

Mr. GAINES. I don't have any recollection of it.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Bratton?

Mr. BRATTON. No, I don't remember. I don't recall.

The CHAIRMAN. If you say you don't recall, you don't recall. I just have to make an observation that I think it would be unusual. It is not credible to think that any Governor, forget this Governor, I mean, if something like that took place. I have to tell you the natural thing would be to say, "My gosh, what do you think about this? Oh, the guy's full of nonsense." I am not telling you and nobody seeks to incriminate anybody as it relates to what an account was, but it is not credible to think that somebody would not recall that kind of situation, given where you were, given where you were working, et cetera. I find it difficult to understand.

I think it would be a normal reaction for you to say, "It didn't happen." OK, that's your testimony. If you don't recall, you know this whole thing, if you're saying it didn't make a little stir within your own political circles and within your own working circles, that's fine, that's your testimony. I accept it for what it is.

We will break and then come back.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. The Governor's brother had earlier pleaded guilty before this article ever appeared.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, that's why I find it rather incredulous that they wouldn't even take note of the fact that this situation with Lasater having paid off the drug debt, that it made nothing. They don't remember it. I mean, really. I think it would be the most natural thing in the world to remember. I cannot understand how the person that you worked for, that you wouldn't see any relevance, you wouldn't recall this, you wouldn't be either surprised or say it's nonsense or whatever. Of course, you would. You are the counsel to this man. You mean something like this, you wouldn't think about it?

Mr. BRATTON. Senator, what I have tried to say is that I do not have any recollection of conversations about these specific allegations that are contained in this article. It is entirely possible that people did comment on it. Do I remember today what those comments were and did they occur? I don't recall and I don't want to speculate about things that might have occurred or were likely to have occurred that I don't today recall.

The CHAIRMAN. I think we have really more than adequately covered it and I may have beaten the horse to death, and I think we ought to move on.

We are going to take a 15 minute break and come back, and at that time Senator Sarbanes will query.

[Recess.]

The CHAIRMAN. We'll resume, Counsel.

Mr. COLE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Gaines, I would like to ask you just a couple of more questions about this memorandum that was shown to you previously. If we could put Mr. Gaines' 1985 memorandum up; thank you.

I think if I understood you correctly, Mr. Gaines, at this time you were the Governor's office liaison with the State Police. You were the Governor's office staff person with the principle responsibility for that agency?

Mr. GAINES. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. I think I also heard you indicate that at this time, that is, May 1985, you did not know who Mr. Lasater was. You did not know Mr. Lasater?

Mr. GAINES. I did not know him. I am confident that I had probably heard his name; but, no, I did not know him.

Mr. COLE. Don't worry, sir. I am not going to suggest otherwise. In fact, it struck me and I'm not critiquing your spelling here. If you look at this memorandum, you spelled his name L-a-s-i-t-e-r, and I think we now know that Mr. Lasater's name is spelled L-a-s-a-t-e-r. That would indicate to me that this is not someone that you are familiar with; in fact, you didn't even know how to spell his last name correctly.

Mr. GAINES. Clearly, I didn't.

Mr. COLE. I thought that was significant, because the suggestion is that somehow you were monitoring the progress of the Lasater group's bid on this bond offering. You were a little behind the curve as far as knowing who was who and what was what.

I guess it goes without saying you've already indicated that no one in the Governor's office told you to monitor or count the votes or count heads on this bond offering. You were just reporting what Colonel Goodwin had given you.

Mr. GAINES. That is correct. I was simply relaying what Colonel Goodwin apparently had told me.

Mr. COLE. And you prepared what appears to me to be a fairly informal handwritten memorandum, and just passed it on to Ms. Wright and the Governor in the normal course of business, as you would if you'd been given information by any department head?

Mr. GAINES. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Bratton, I also have a couple of questions for you. We're going to try to be brief here. In terms of the role of the Mitchell Williams law firm in the drafting of this legislation that authorized the issuance of the bonds for this police radio network, you had as I understand it, a long career in State government, sir, and served as Counsel to the Governor for a number of years, as well as other posts?

Mr. BRATTON. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. In that capacity, did you have considerable dealings with legislation and the State Legislature?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes, I did.

Mr. COLE. Was it unusual for a group that had an interest in legislation or wanted to propose legislation to retain a law firm to write draft legislation and then give it to members of the Legislature or staff in the Executive Branch, hoping it would be proposed?

Mr. BRATTON. Not at all. It was common.

Mr. COLE. So what took place here wasn't out of the ordinary as far as the legislative process in Arkansas?

Mr. BRATTON. No, it was not.

Mr. COLE. And in fact, if a group had something that they wanted to bring before the Legislature and actually have enacted into law, they would need the assistance of a law firm in order to put it in the form of legislation that could then be enacted by the Legislature?

Mr. BRATTON. Most of the legislation in Arkansas at that time, and still today, is drafted by staff at the Bureau of Legislative Research. But when an entity or a business group or some other organization would have particular interest, particularly where some specific expertise would be required, it would be very common for them to have that legislation prepared by attorneys who had that expertise.

Mr. COLE. The final judgment, the final word as to what would be enacted into law and what would be included in the law was still up to the Legislature, I take it?

Mr. BRATTON. Absolutely.

Mr. COLE. Finally, Mr. Nash, I wanted to ask you, what was your position on the Governor's staff in 1985, the period we're talking about here, the spring of 1985?

Mr. NASH. I was Senior Executive Assistant for Economic Development.

Mr. COLE. Did you have responsibility as a liaison with the State Police at that time?

Mr. NASH. No, sir, I did not.

Mr. COLE. Did you have any responsibilities in connection with this bond offering for the State Police Radio Commission?

Mr. NASH. No, I did not.

Mr. COLE. We've reviewed the documents, and I'm just trying to see if you have any information that you can give that will help us on the issue that we're looking at today, the State Police radio bond offering. Did you have any involvement other than what you testified to earlier in that matter?

Mr. NASH. I don't recall that I did. My work was on bond issues relating to economic development, housing, single family, multi-family, industrial development, water, sewer, those kinds of things.

Mr. COLE. So with respect to the police radio network, that's not something you were involved in, you can't really help us on that?

Mr. NASH. That was not my responsibility.

Mr. COLE. Thank you.

Mr. Portnoy.

Mr. PORTNOY. Mr. Bratton, I just wanted to return for a moment to the subject of law firm participation in drafting bond legislation. I believe you testified that this was the norm?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes, sir. In terms of bond legislation, using that term generically, we had no expertise in the Governor's office, and there was no expertise on the Bureau of Legislative Research staff with preparing that type of legislation. So it was very common for lawyers with firms that did bond work to prepare that type of legislation, whether it was for State agencies or some other group that might be interested in having the State undertake a particular project that the draft legislation would come from attorneys at one of four or five law firms.

Mr. PORTNOY. So there was nothing unusual in this case that the Mitchell firm might have participated in drafting legislation to authorize the police radio underwriting?

Mr. BRATTON. Nothing unusual about it at all.

Mr. PORTNOY. Why was legislation necessary in order to do the bond offering?

Mr. BRATTON. The Arkansas Constitution, which was adopted in 1874, has some fairly restrictive provisions about long-term financing options. And so in order to do a deal like the State Police radio system, and finance it over some longer period of time than a biennial appropriation, it was necessary to create a specific legislative mechanism to effectuate the intent.

Mr. PORTNOY. Thank you, sir.

Mr. Gaines, there have been press reports that Governor Clinton in some fashion pardoned Mr. Lasater after his incarceration on cocaine charges. Could you explain? I understand you were on the Arkansas Parole Board at the time; is that correct?

Mr. GAINES. Yes, I was a member of the Parole Board in 1986. I am not sure when that took place, but it was I believe after 1989 which was when I became a full-time member, when we had legislation concerning that. It was not at all uncommon when I was on the Governor's staff to have people with Federal convictions come to us asking for pardons.

Mr. PORTNOY. Could I stop you for a minute, sir? Mr. Lasater's conviction was a Federal conviction?

Mr. GAINES. It was a Federal conviction, yes.

Mr. PORTNOY. So Governor Clinton didn't actually have authority in any conventional sense to pardon him, Mr. Lasater, for his offense, did he, sir?

Mr. GAINES. No, he did not.

Mr. PORTNOY. Please continue, sir.

Mr. GAINES. As I was saying, we did have a number of people come to us requesting pardons for Federal offense convictions, even for some other States, and we would simply refer them back to the appropriate jurisdiction.

We soon became aware, after some discussions within the Department of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, that a provision in Arkansas law provided that a person could not possess a firearm if they were a convicted felon, unless they had a pardon that specifically reinstated the right to possess firearms.

This aspect of our law caused a problem, particularly for the Federal system because they had provisions where a person could apply for a restoration of firearm rights as long as they were in compliance with the laws of the jurisdiction where they resided.

What we developed out of that was a procedure whereby a person with a Federal conviction could make application and receive a document from the State of Arkansas through the Governor's office which they could then take to the Federal authorities and apply for a firearm restoration which at that point then the Federal authorities could either grant or deny that.

Mr. PORTNOY. Would it be correct to say, sir, that insofar as you know, the only practical effect of this document the Parole Board prepared, and I presume the Governor signed, was to permit Mr. Lasater to go hunting?

Mr. GAINES. That's correct.

Mr. PORTNOY. It didn't in any way absolve him of wrongdoing?

Mr. GAINES. Not at all.

Mr. PORTNOY. I believe you indicated in your deposition that the only requirement to receive this kind of dispensation was that the applicant had discharged his Federal sentence; is that correct?

Mr. GAINES. That is correct. We dealt with the Federal cases alot differently than we would a person requesting an actual pardon from a criminal offense, a State conviction. Basically we were interested in assurance that the person had, in fact, discharged the sentence. It seems like we may have also looked to see if there were any fines, restitutions, or those types of things owed. But beyond that, we didn't go into the normal course of notifying officials and doing extensive backgrounds on whether a person was worthy of a pardon from their crime. These were handled routinely. If a person had discharged the terms of their Federal sentence, it was pretty much our position as a Parole Board to go ahead and give a favorable recommendation to those.

Mr. PORTNOY. So it would be fair to say, sir, that this was a routine matter?

Mr. GAINES. It was a routine matter.

Mr. PORTNOY. A relatively common matter?

Mr. GAINES. We did not do a whole lot of those. But they were not at all uncommon.

Mr. PORTNOY. Mr. Lasater didn't receive any special treatment?

Mr. GAINES. No, he did not.

Mr. PORTNOY. Or any special consideration?

Mr. GAINES. No.

Mr. PORTNOY. The Governor's office had no involvement in your deliberations as to whether to approve Mr. Lasater's application?

Mr. GAINES. No, they did not.

Mr. PORTNOY. That was entirely the Parole Board's own decision?

Mr. GAINES. Yes. It would have come to us first, and we would have voted and then referred the file and recommendation to the Governor's office.

Mr. PORTNOY. Thank you, sir.

We're prepared to cede back our time, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Nash, in 1990, were you involved in Governor Clinton's Gubernatorial Re-election Campaign?

Mr. NASH. Yes, sir, I was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What did you do for the Governor's Re-election Campaign?

Mr. NASH. I primarily spoke to economic development and community groups around the State to explain the Governor's record primarily in economic development, and to encourage them to support the Governor for re-election.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were very careful when you said primarily were involved in giving speeches around the State for the Governor. Did you do anything else in connection with the 1990 Gubernatorial Campaign?

The CHAIRMAN. Don't answer that question. Let me ask you this. What other activities did you undertake? You see, I don't want you to say anything else. What other activities did you undertake?

Mr. NASH. I remember seriously licking envelopes many times when that was needed. I would meet with groups and explain the record. I did a wide range of activities, but primarily speaking to groups. That's what I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And were you involved at all in get-out-the-vote activities?

Mr. NASH. No, other than speaking to groups and encouraging them to get-out-to-vote. But not what you would typically call get-out-the-vote activities, no.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put up on the Elmo page 321 of Betsey Wright's January 26, 1996 deposition.

The CHAIRMAN. Can we have somebody help Mr. Nash with that? Thank you, Mr. Gaines.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If I could just direct your attention to the passage that I believe in your copy is marked in yellow on 321.

Mr. NASH. OK. I have the deposition of Betsey Wright. I see where it says page 321, but it's not marked or anything.

The CHAIRMAN. Look at page 321. You see the answer there, "Well, then there is a third conversation."

Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. She says:

Well, then there is a third conversation. I was having a conversation at some point, and I don't remember where or why or how or what the subject was, but the issue of the 1990 campaign came up. I was talking to Bob Nash, and he told me that once Bruce had asked him to go to Perry County and pick up some get-out-the-vote cash for him.

Did there ever come a time during the 1990 campaign when Mr. Lindsey asked you to go to the Perry County Bank, and pick up some get-out-the-vote cash?

Mr. NASH. No.

Senator SARBANES. Are you also going to complete that by setting out Ms. Betsey Wright's testimony in the hearing? When she said, "This was a mistake."

Mr. GIUFFRA. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. She said in her sworn testimony, "This was a mistake."

Mr. NASH. The answer is no.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did there ever come a time during the 1990 campaign when Mr. Lindsey asked you to go to the Perry County Bank?

Mr. NASH. No, not that I recall. Let me say I was asked to go take some loan papers to Perry County Bank and pick up a check. That occurred. And I think I testified to that in my deposition.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up on the Elmo pages 55 and 56 of Ms. Wright's—

The CHAIRMAN. Just for my edification, did you do that then, go over there and pick up a check?

Mr. NASH. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And you testified to this previously?

Mr. NASH. In my deposition, I sure did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. At the hearing last week, Ms. Wright corrected, wanted to change her testimony. Let's focus on the question:

Mr. CHERTOFF. What part of that sworn testimony do you want to correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. The sentence that begins "I was talking" should probably be corrected to read, "I was talking to Bob Nash and he told me that once Bruce had asked him to go to Perry County Bank for him."

Mr. CHERTOFF. For him. So the part where you told us in your sworn deposition, "and pick up some get-out-the-vote cash," that's inoperative now?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir, it is.

Now, Ms. Wright told us last week that after she had her deposition on January 26th, she contacted you. Do you recall Ms. Wright contacting you?

Mr. NASH. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What did Ms. Wright say to you during this conversation?

Mr. NASH. She called and asked, "Did I remember saying to her that I had picked up some cash in Perry County Bank?" And I told her, "No, I did not, specifically did not remember that."

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did she indicate to you why she believed that you had picked up some cash at the Perry County Bank?

Mr. NASH. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did she mention Mr. Lindsey?

Mr. NASH. No, she did not mention Mr. Lindsey.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you contact Mr. Lindsey after you spoke to Ms. Wright and ask him why Ms. Wright might have had the impression that you had gone to the Perry County Bank to pick up some cash?

Mr. NASH. No, I did not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Have you ever spoken to Mr. Lindsey about this trip that you made to the Perry County Bank?

Mr. NASH. No, I have not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's change the subject.

Mr. BRATTON, when you were counsel to the Governor, did you normally speak to Ms. Bassett Schaffer, I guess then Beverly Bassett, who was the Securities Commissioner?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes, I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would you speak to her about investigations that the Securities Department was conducting?

Mr. BRATTON. It was a fairly common practice for her to advise me of enforcement actions that the Department was preparing to take. She normally would not talk to me about investigations when they were considering whether to initiate an investigation, or the progress of an investigation. But it was a fairly common practice for her to notify me before the Department took significant regulatory actions.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would you normally advise the Governor and Ms. Wright of the information that was provided to you by Ms. Bassett?

Mr. BRATTON. On most occasions, I would. Some occasions I probably didn't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And did there ever come a time when Ms. Bassett advised you that Mr. Lasater was having problems with the NASD, the National Association of Securities Dealers, and also with the Arkansas Securities Department?

Mr. BRATTON. I have a general recollection that she did so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I believe in your deposition you could not recollect whether it was before or after 1986?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall what the timeframe was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So you don't know whether it was before or after the police bond offering?

Mr. BRATTON. I am relatively sure it was after the police radio deal, but I am not positive of that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you contact the Governor and Ms. Wright with this information?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall whether I did or not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Bratton, if we could put up on the Elmo, this is a December 14, 1983 letter from Mr. Lasater to Governor Clinton. The Bates numbers are DKSJ 27455 to 27456.

Mr. BRATTON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you have that in front of you, sir?

Mr. BRATTON. I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who is Linda Garner?

Mr. BRATTON. Linda Garner at that time was the State Insurance Commissioner.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now in this letter, Mr. Lasater is discussing the disbursement of certain securities that were owned by National Investors Life Insurance Company, and Lasater expresses his concern on the fourth paragraph of the first page of the letter that First Boston and Stevens are going to be appointed to handle certain future transactions involving this portfolio of securities. Do you remember this issue?

Mr. BRATTON. Only in a very general way.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The National Investors Life Insurance had had difficulty, and they were now liquidating the assets.

Mr. BRATTON. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. At the top of the memo, that is a notation. That is the Governor's handwriting; am I right?

Mr. BRATTON. It is the Governor's handwriting.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It says, "Keep after Garner til you talk to her. You must give him follow-up." Presumably "him" is Lasater. Do you see that there?

Mr. BRATTON. I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ever see this letter back in 1983?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't believe so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Nash, did you ever see this letter?

Mr. NASH. No, I don't believe I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know, Mr. Nash, whether there was ever any follow-up with regard to Mr. Lasater's request to Governor Clinton with regard to Linda Garner?

Mr. NASH. Not that I know of.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Bratton, are you aware of any follow-up?

Mr. BRATTON. Not that I'm aware of.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did there come a time—I believe it was in January 1985—when Governor Clinton replaced Insurance Commissioner Garner? Do you recall that, Mr. Bratton?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you have any role in her termination?

Mr. BRATTON. I was assigned by the Governor the day that he told her he was not going to reappoint her as Insurance Commissioner. I was assigned to go to her office and be there while she moved her personal belongings out of the office.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You actually were at the office while she removed her personal belongings?

Mr. BRATTON. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Bratton, I would like to ask you some questions about something called the Twin City Bank. There was some branching legislation in Arkansas back in the late 1980's. Do you recall that legislation?

Mr. BRATTON. Generally.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware in the period, say around 1987, that the Clintons had an investment in the Whitewater Development Corporation?

Mr. BRATTON. I'm not sure when I first became aware of their participation in that project.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you think it was before or after the 1992 Presidential Campaign?

Mr. BRATTON. It was before the 1992 Presidential Campaign.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware that the Clintons had a loan that related to the Whitewater Development Corporation with the First Ozark Bank?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't believe I was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware that the First Ozark Bank was owned by the Twin City Bank?

Mr. BRATTON. I'm not sure whether I was or not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ever discuss proposed inter-county branching legislation with anyone at Twin City Bank?

Mr. BRATTON. I may have; I don't recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall this legislation at all?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes, in a general way.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If you could just describe for the Committee what the purpose of the legislation was.

Mr. BRATTON. As I recall, it would have allowed under certain restrictions banks to branch outside the community in which their principle office was located, and in some very limited circumstances, I think branch into adjoining counties.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Twin City Bank was located outside of Little Rock; is that right?

Mr. BRATTON. Twin City Bank was located in North Little Rock.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But not in Little Rock. They wanted to be able to have branches in Little Rock. Do you recall that?

Mr. BRATTON. I recall they had some interest in that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Because Little Rock was obviously a bigger market than North Little Rock.

Mr. BRATTON. It was a larger market than North Little Rock.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know whether the Governor was aware of Twin City's interest in obtaining this legislation that would have allowed branching into Little Rock by Twin City?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't have a specific recollection of what he knew or didn't know. I think it was fairly common knowledge what the background of the legislation was and what the concerns were. It was an issue that was kind of—split the banking community. The Governor had supporters on both sides of the issue, so I'm sure he was generally aware of what the issue was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was he aware that the legislation would benefit Twin City? Do you think he would have been aware of that?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall any conversation I had with him that would have indicated what he understood to be the effects.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Under the Arkansas Constitution, there's a provision that bars what's described as special legislation that benefits just one party; is that right?

Mr. BRATTON. That's generally correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall any discussion with regard to this branching legislation, that it might be unconstitutional under the Arkansas Constitution?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall any discussion to that effect.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall whether there was an Attorney General's opinion sought with regard to whether this legislation was constitutional under the Arkansas Constitution?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Bratton was the Governor's office involved in the selection of Mr. Lasater as an investment banker for the police radio contract?

Mr. BRATTON. Not that I'm aware of.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Gaines, what's your testimony?

Mr. GAINES. I'm not aware that they were.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Nash, what's your testimony?

Mr. NASH. Same question?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Yes.

Mr. NASH. I'm not aware they were.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Bratton did Mr. Lasater, as far as you know, receive any kind of special treatment with regard to obtaining the bond underwriting work for the police radio contract?

Mr. BRATTON. Not that I'm aware of.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Gaines.

Mr. GAINES. I'm not aware of any special treatment he received.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Nash, do you have any belief that he had any special treatment?

Mr. NASH. Not that I'm aware of.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Isn't it true, Mr. Bratton, that Mr. Lasater's law firm drafted the legislation?

Mr. BRATTON. It is apparently accurate that the Mitchell firm drafted—there's no question the Mitchell law firm drafted the legislation.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And the Mitchell firm was paid by Lasater; right?

Mr. BRATTON. I think there are some documents that indicate that. I was not aware of that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The bills showed that they charged the Lasater firm $22,000 to draft this legislation; isn't that right?

Mr. BRATTON. The document speaks for itself.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware of an issue—

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Giuffra, how much more time do you have—let me ask Senator Sarbanes—we will try to finish it at this point. Go ahead.

Mr. GIUFFRA. After the Lasater firm was selected to do this work, First Capital, which was the other firm involved in the bidding process, issued a complaint; do you recall that, Mr. Bratton?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall it. I'm aware from a question or two that was asked in my deposition that that did occur. I don't remember the details of it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Gaines, do you recall that issue coming up?

Mr. GAINES. Could you repeat the question?

Mr. GIUFFRA. First Capital, which was the losing bidder, complaining about the fact that Lasater had gotten the bid?

Mr. GAINES. From my deposition, I do recall there was a memorandum that apparently I drafted conveying a dissatisfaction on the part of, I think it was Capital. I don't have it in front of me.

The CHAIRMAN. It was Capital.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up that memo on the Elmo. It's DKS 18184. Do you recall drafting this memo to Ms. Wright?

The CHAIRMAN. Let him take a look at it. Take a look at it, Mr. Gaines, and see to what extent if any it refresh your recollection. Does this refresh your recollection about the event, that there was apparently a protest of some sort, an objection raised, and then you wrote this memo in response to that?

Mr. GAINES. It truly does not. I do not recall writing this memo, but I have no reason to think that it's not one that I drafted.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The fourth paragraph of the memo states, "Capital points out that the legislation"—you have in parentheses "(written by H,L,R)." Who is H,L,R, as far as you know? Is that Hutton, Lasater & Raney?

Mr. GAINES. At this point, I would say that that's who that is referring to.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So you knew on May 15, 1985, that the legislation had been written by the Raney/Hutton/Lasater group; is that right?

Mr. GAINES. No, that is not correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That is what the memo seems to suggest, sir, doesn't it?

Mr. GAINES. The memo suggests that I have written a memo to Betsey Wright conveying concerns expressed by Capital Resources Group over certain issues. I can only assume that I am conveying what I was told by whoever it was that I spoke to—and I don't identify anyone here as having contacted me, but apparently someone with the Capital Resources Group must have contacted me, and I was conveying that information to Ms. Wright. I'm assuming that was part of what they told me, was that the legislation was written by H,L,R.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So it is your testimony that you did not know on May 15, 1985, that the Raney/Hutton/Lasater group had written the legislation?

Mr. GAINES. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you surprised by that?

Mr. GAINES. I don't think—I mean, I don't know whether I was surprised. I don't suppose I was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you know that the Mitchell Tucker firm had drafted the legislation?

Mr. GAINES. I don't know if I knew that at that point or not. I know when I did the deposition I looked at a number of documents, and it was obvious from those documents that the Mitchell firm was involved in the drafting. Whether I knew that at that point, I'm really not sure.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Didn't you attend a meeting, the one on March 4, 1985, put up before Mr. Bratton's notes? And that indicated that you were meeting Mr. Drake, Mr. Selig, who was with the Mitchell Tucker firm, just yourself and Mr. Bratton? That would be the lawyer for Lasater, Lasater's Senior Executive Vice President. You didn't know from that meeting that Mr. Selig from the Mitchell Tucker firm was representing Mr. Lasater?

Mr. GAINES. I don't remember attending this meeting. In my deposition, I saw this and tried to figure out who Mike G. could be other than me. I couldn't come up with anyone else it could have been, but I do not have any recall of attending a meeting with these individuals.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In your May 15th memo, the issue arises as to whether the key issue is whether the investors were to be paid on a monthly or on a bi-yearly basis. Do you recall that issue?

Mr. GAINES. I do not recall it. I see it reflected in the memo.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The critical distinction between the Lasater proposal and the proposal by First Capital was that First Capital provided that investors would be paid on a monthly basis, whereas Lasater was having the payments only twice a year, and therefore would get the arbitrage on the money. Do you recall that issue coming up?

Mr. GAINES. I'm sorry.

Mr. GIUFFRA. They would get the benefit of the use of the money. Do you recall that issue coming up?

Mr. GAINES. I do not recall the issue coming up, but I can only go by what's reflected on the memo.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Bratton, do you recall that issue at all?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall that specific issue.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have that memo in front of you, Mr. Bratton?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes, sir, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up one last document.

The CHAIRMAN. Wait. It says, "I have discussed this with Sam." Mr. Gaines, who would you take Sam to be?

Mr. GAINES. I'd take that to be Mr. Bratton. If you will notice in the first paragraph, it mentions that the matter will be discussed by Legislative Council on Friday. Mr. Bratton was and has, my understanding, attended most if not all of the Legislative Council meetings, and anything that was coming up concerning legislation before the Legislative Council, I'm sure I would have let him know, either by phone or by memo.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Bratton, do you recall having discussed this issue?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall having discussed this issue with Mr. Gaines. It's entirely likely that I did so. I do recall that one or more firms or groups who did not get the business raised various issues about the decision. I don't remember the specific one.

The CHAIRMAN. This was quite specific. You might not recall it at this time. But when you look at the memo and the testimony that we had today from the various people, apparently it was a concern as it related to whether the payments could be structured over a 6-month period of time, as was indicated in the winning bid, which would then make it lower, or whether they had to be made monthly. You have no recollection of that being an issue?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't have any current recollection of that being an issue.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you aware of the fact that the same firm that had prepared the legislation had been retained by the group? It was not just Lasater, it was the group of three consortium that was the winning bid.

Mr. BRATTON. It was my impression at the time that the Mitchell firm, if they were being compensated, were probably being compensated by the Raney firm. I never had the impression that they were being compensated by the Lasater firm.

The CHAIRMAN. The Lasater firm, the Raney firm, and the Hutton firm were all together, weren't they?

Mr. BRATTON. They were part of a package.

The CHAIRMAN. A consortium.

Mr. BRATTON. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. So whether the retainer was with one specifically, and they all chipped in, I mean, their legislative representation was on behalf of this consortium, including Lasater; wasn't that correct?

Mr. BRATTON. Based on the documents today, that appears to be the situation.

The CHAIRMAN. Now here you have this winning consortium; right? They win. They're initially the low bid, or they're the bidder. They're awarded the bid. Did there come a time when indeed they were selected?

Mr. BRATTON. Correct.

The CHAIRMAN. If you want me to do it this way, I will. Did there come a point in time when someone put in a protest?

Mr. BRATTON. As I indicated earlier, I was aware that one or more groups that didn't get the bid had some complaints about it.

The CHAIRMAN. Did there come a point in time when this was brought to your attention as counsel?

Mr. BRATTON. It probably was, I don't specifically recall.

The CHAIRMAN. As counsel, what would you have done to deal with this? Did you then ask for a review to be made?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall what I did, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Would it surprise you to know that the Mitchell firm was then called upon to render a legal opinion in connection with the objection that was raised with respect to whether it was appropriate to make an award based upon a 6-month return, as opposed to the customary one, which was one? Were you aware that they had been called upon to make this review? And do you recall ever getting their legal review?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Does it surprise you now when you look back that the same firm who represented the winning consortium was the firm that was called upon to judge the merits of the complaint that came from one or more of the unsuccessful bidders?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't know whether that happened or not.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me show you a copy of the letter of review. Could we make that available to Mr. Bratton? You want to identify that, please. Do you see it up on the Elmo? I think you have it in your packet. Who is Mr. Erxleben?

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. Ed Erxleben was Director of State Purchasing in the Department of Finance and Administration.

The CHAIRMAN. But you have asked him to review the complaint?

Mr. BRATTON. I have no recollection of having asked him to review the complaint. I believe based on having seen part of Ms. Wright's testimony that she had indicated that she had asked Mr. Erxleben to assist the State Police Commission in establishing procedures to evaluate the proposals and make a determination. So it's possible that she may have asked Mr. Erxleben to make this inquiry, or Mr. Erxleben may have done it on his own. But I don't have any.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's take a look. First we have the memo written by Mr. Gaines, May 15, 1985, Subject: ASP Communications System. You have that next to you, the one you just looked at?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Take a look. They raise a question with respect to the proposal and they point out with specificity, "Act 817 attached, see highlights on page 5," in which they question whether the 6 months payment was appropriate as opposed to the one. That's the question raised; isn't that correct, Mr. Bratton?

Mr. BRATTON. That's what the memo says, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Then on the 16th of May, we have the Mitchell Williams law firm writing to the Director of Purchasing. Would you read that first paragraph? Start with "Dear Mr."—who is that?

Mr. BRATTON. Dear Mr. Erxleben.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Erxleben is the Director of Purchasing. What does it say?

Mr. BRATTON. It says, "You have asked our opinion on a question of interpretation"—

The CHAIRMAN. Stop right there. "You have asked our opinion." So obviously the Director of Purchasing, as a result of this communique that came to the Governor's office on May 15th, whether by you, Ms. Wright, or somebody then calls these lawyers and says, "Hey, look. This has been a question." Is that correct.

Mr. BRATTON. Senator, I don't know why Mr. Erxleben made that request.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't expect you to remember with specificity at this time. We have a May 15th communique which indicates that one of the unsuccessful bidders has protested; right?

Mr. BRATTON. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. On May 16th, we have the Director of the Arkansas Office of State Purchasing, getting a letter written to him from a law firm with respect to the legality of this bid, questions raised; is that right?

Mr. BRATTON. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Obviously, he has communicated to them. Obviously, someone after this was sent to Betsey Wright in the Governors office, communicated this to the Purchasing Director. Is that correct, someone from the Governor's Office?

Mr. BRATTON. No, sir. That is not necessarily correct. What I would assume, as the more likely scenario, is that same objection was raised with the State Police Commission, and that Mr. Erxleben, who had been advising the State Police, raised the question with the Mitchell firm as a result of his role working with the State Police.

The CHAIRMAN. We're getting there. So now the Director of Purchasing raises this question; right? He says, "Go ahead. You have asked our opinion on this to interpret Section 5 of Act number 814 of 1985," right?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. That comes down to whether it's proper to do it in 6 months or a month; right? Isn't that the gist of the memo?

Mr. BRATTON. The question presented is whether Section 5 of the Act requires that lease payments as defined in Section 3 are required to be made on a monthly basis to investors who purchase an interest in a lease agreement authorized by the Act.

The CHAIRMAN. So it is the question raised here in the memo, which Mr. Gaines called to the attention of Betsey Wright; isn't that correct?

Mr. BRATTON. It seems to be the same question.

The CHAIRMAN. Don't you see a problem with respect to the very same firm that represented the successful bidder, then indicating and giving a legal opinion as to whether that indeed was a proper procedure to follow as it related to whether 6 months or a month was permitted, as opposed to having the Attorney General or some other outside counsel being called in for that review?

Mr. BRATTON. Senator, I have no idea why Mr. Erxleben made this request or what he did with the information.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Bratton, I believe you. I don't suggest that you did. You see, the problem here is that attorneys drew up the legislation who represented the successful term. Then when a protest came up, they were the same ones who said that the protest had no merit. Don't you see a problem there?

Mr. BRATTON. No, sir. What I think is entirely possible is that Mr. Erxleben asked the firm that drafted it what their understanding of the intent was. I don't know that Mr. Erxleben made a decision based on what he was told in this letter; rather that it was part of a process that he was going through in trying to make an evaluation.

The CHAIRMAN. What about the propriety of a firm that represents a party in interest, thereafter making a legal opinion upon which you then proceed to sustain this written to the Purchasing Director? You don't see any problem with that?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't see any problem with Mr. Erxleben asking the folks who drafted the legislation what their intent was. If that was the only thing he looked at and made a decision solely on the basis of what's contained in this letter, then I might agree with you, but I have no reason to believe that.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, if you had known that this firm as counsel was also retained by the group, would you have sought or advised that they be the attorneys who would issue an opinion as it related to the awarding of this bid?

Mr. BRATTON. Senator, I don't know that they have "issued an opinion." Mr. Erxleben apparently asked them a question. I don't know that it was intended to be in lieu of an opinion from some official source, or that he understood it to be anything in the nature of an impartial inquiry, that he understood that they had a vested interest. But he asked them what their understanding of the intent was.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes, I want to thank you for having been more than generous in permitting us to follow this line of questioning.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Bratton, isn't it reasonable to assume on the basis of the record before us that Capital had presented to Mr. Erxleben in the State their view of what the statute meant?

Mr. BRATTON. That would be my impression, that that was probably what happened, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. They were a party at interest. They didn't get chosen, but they then came to the State—and I see this reflected in the Gaines memo of May 15th—and laid out their view on the monthly payments question.

Mr. BRATTON. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. And, Mr. Gaines, isn't that reflected in your memo?

Mr. GAINES. Yes, it is.

Senator SARBANES. "Capital points out that the legislation requires monthly payments. See highlights on page 5." I don't know whether Capital also submitted an opinion letter, but they certainly submitted an opinion orally, if not in writing; is that correct?

Mr. GAINES. That is correct. I assume it was oral, but I am not sure.

Senator SARBANES. This was a letter to Erxleben from the Mitchell law firm from Anne Ritchey, a partner at the Mitchell law firm, laying out their interpretation of the statute. Do you have any problem with Erxleben getting this information from the parties that were involved in the process, both the successful and the unsuccessful party?

Mr. BRATTON. It would seem to be an appropriate thing to have done.

Senator SARBANES. This letter didn't make the judgment. Mr. Erxleben in the end, or the Commission itself, if he was advising the Commission, made the judgment.

Mr. BRATTON. The State Police Commission would have made the initial judgment, and would have had the authority to review any complaints that had been raised and take whatever action they thought was appropriate.

Mr. COLE. I have one final question about these two documents, Mr. Bratton. I'm referring to Mr. Gaines' memorandum of May 15th, which I think you have there, and then the May 16th letter from the Mitchell Williams firm. Is there anything that would make you believe that this law firm turned around this fairly complicated opinion letter overnight, as opposed to having previously been asked for it by Erxleben or someone on his staff?

Mr. BRATTON. Certainly much more prompt work than I normally found to be the case in dealing with lawyers.

Mr. COLE. I was going to say I have drafted a few of these in my day, and one of them overnight would be an impressive feat—not impossible, I suppose, but certainly impressive.

Senator SARBANES. Is it correct that the way it's operated in Arkansas that bond counsel would often draft bond legislation since it's fairly technical?

Mr. BRATTON. That was the rule almost without exception.

Senator SARBANES. There is no capacity within the State bureaucracy to draft the bond legislation? It's usually done by the outside counsel; is that correct?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes, sir, that's correct.

Senator SARBANES. And that would be the case regardless? I mean, it would vary, I guess, according to who was seeking the bids, and so forth and so on; is that correct?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. OK.

Mr. COLE. Just to follow up on that, Mr. Bratton, the State Police have never offered bonds before this particular offer that we are talking about today; is that correct?

Mr. BRATTON. There had been some type of financing done to build a State Police headquarters; but that may well have been done by State building services, rather than by the State Police. I simply don't recall. But that would have been the only other instance, and it was probably done by building services, with State Police paying rent as tenant.

Mr. COLE. My point just being that this was a unique situation, so you may have had to turn to someone with special expertise, an outside law firm?

Mr. BRATTON. It was common in doing that type of financing to have the legislation drafted by lawyers who routinely did bond work.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you drafted this, you picked the lawyers for one of the bidders; right? There were a number of people who were interested in this project in early 1985; right?

Mr. BRATTON. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You picked one of them to have a lawyer who would be the drafter of the legislation; right?

Mr. BRATTON. We didn't pick anyone.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did they pick themselves?

Mr. BRATTON. The Mitchell firm on their own initiative, as far as I know, drafted the legislation and submitted it for our consideration.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But other firms drafted legislation and submitted it, and you worked with the Mitchell firm in putting it together; is that right?

Mr. BRATTON. The Mitchell firm submitted the draft of the proposed legislation; that is correct. I have no recollection that any other law firm or any other investment group submitted a competing draft, if you will.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't the Friday firm also submit legislation on behalf of Stevens?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall that they did so. Stevens was interested. But the legislation that was introduced, and passed, passed without a negative vote in either House of the General Assembly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's not my question. You're moving away from my question. You're a lawyer. You understand questions and answers. Listen to me. Are you telling us that the only firm to submit a proposal was the Mitchell Tucker firm on behalf of Raney?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall that the Friday firm submitted a competing proposal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You're telling us at the time you started working with the Mitchell Tucker firm on putting together the legislation, you knew they were working for Raney and Lasater's bid group?

Mr. BRATTON. I had a general impression that they had prepared the legislation at the request of Raney.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you knew when you were putting together the legislation and inviting the lawyers for the Lasater group into the inner sanctum, so to speak, to work with the Governor's office in putting together the package? You understood that the lawyers you were using were the lawyers for one of the groups among a whole number of groups that would have been competing?

Mr. BRATTON. They basically prepared a piece of legislation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Bratton, don't make it seem like you were just a passive actor here sitting like a potted plant in the office while people came in and did things.

Mr. BRATTON. I am trying to answer your question. I did not sit down and negotiate and draft a piece of legislation with lawyers from the Mitchell firm. They did the work. They proposed it and submitted it to us. We went forward with it as the vehicle.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You put the Governor's seal of approval and stamp on that bill; right?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You put that bill in knowing it was prepared by the lawyers for one of a number of competing groups?

Mr. BRATTON. I think everybody who was involved in the process understood that, including other people who were interested in competing for the ultimate business.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's not what Ms. Wright said on Thursday. Ms. Wright said on Thursday she thought this had nothing to do with the Lasater firm.

Mr. BRATTON. I didn't follow.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Wright's testimony last Thursday was that, as far as she was concerned, the Mitchell firm was doing this work for the Governor's office, and she had no idea that this was in any way connected with anything that they were doing for Mr. Dan Lasater.

I'll read you the quote, page 205 of the hearing. Betsey Wright:

All I know is that the work that the Mitchell firm did at our request in working with us was on our legislation that was part of the Governor's package on the Governor's initiatives. And it had nothing to do with whatever else they were doing for Dan Lasater.

Now, you are telling us that you knew all along that they were working with you on the legislation on behalf of Dan Lasater?

Mr. BRATTON. It was my impression that they had prepared the legislation for Raney.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up DKS 17843. Mr. Bratton, to follow up, do you have that letter in front of you?

Mr. BRATTON. What?

The CHAIRMAN. You had it in your packet.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The letter of March 8th. You attended the meeting on March 4th; right?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. At that meeting there were representatives of the Lasater firm; right? Mr. Drake was there; correct? He was there?

Mr. BRATTON. That's what the notes indicate.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Four days later we have a letter from Mr. Lasater's lawyer, Mr. Selig, to you, which says:

Dear Sam:

Enclosed is an original and three copies of an amendment which will substitute the language of the bill we discussed over the phone today for the language of the existing bill.

This letter indicates that you spoke with Lasater's lawyer, Mr. Selig, about the actual language and discussed possible changes with regard to the legislation, doesn't it?

Mr. BRATTON. That indicates I talked to Mr. Selig.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Doesn't it also indicate that you discussed changes in the legislation with Mr. Selig? You were negotiating working with Lasater's lawyer as to what the final terms of the legislation would be?

Mr. BRATTON. No, sir. The bill that was introduced on May 1st was a shell bill that appropriated $1 to buy a radio system. A totally new bill, in the form of an amendment, was adopted and amended onto that bill. It was a draft that was prepared by the Mitchell firm.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The bill was introduced on March 1st; right?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You had the meeting with Mr. Lasater's representatives on March 4th; right?

Mr. BRATTON. That's what the notes indicate.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then Lasater's law firm sent you a new version of the real bill on March 8th; right? That's what this letter indicates, doesn't it?

Mr. BRATTON. It indicates that the Mitchell firm sent me a draft of a piece of legislation; that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That's the legislation that was introduced by the Governor; right?

Mr. BRATTON. That was the legislation that was introduced and passed; yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's go into one more area of inquiry and then we'll be done. The legislation gets enacted on April 4th; right?

Mr. BRATTON. I believe that's the date it was signed.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The State Police award the contract to Lasater on May 10th; right?

Mr. BRATTON. That's apparently correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now after the State Police awarded the contract to Lasater, wasn't there a provision in the legislation that would allow a review by the Legislature?

Mr. BRATTON. I believe there is a provision that provided it be reviewed by the Telecommunications Study Committee, and probably by Legislative Council.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What is the Legislative Council of the Arkansas Legislature?

Mr. BRATTON. The Legislative Council is a body—at that point it probably had 28 or 30 members—that functioned while the General Assembly was not in session. We have biennial sessions that last 3 or 4 months. And the Council was an interim body of the General Assembly.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So under this legislation, if the Legislative Council did not approve Lasater, Lasater would not get the contract; right?

Mr. BRATTON. The Legislative Council's authority was review and advice.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you needed to get their approval in order for Lasater to get the contract; right?

Mr. BRATTON. It would have been possible to go forward without favorable Council action.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But didn't you try to get the approval of the Legislative Council?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Isn't it correct that you initially did not get the approval of the Legislative Council for the Lasater bid?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall. There was a question in my deposition last week that indicated that initially there were more favorable votes than negative votes, but it was short of the majority required for favorable action by Legislative Council.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up on the Elmo DKSX 18182. This is a memo from Betsey Wright to Governor Clinton re: Knox Nelson, State Police Communications. Who is Knox Nelson?

Mr. BRATTON. He was a Senior Senator and Chairman of the Telecommunications Committee.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So he was an important Senator in terms of getting the approval of the Legislative Council; right?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The chairmen of committees are normally fairly powerful people; right?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Both in Congress and in the Arkansas Legislature. According to this memo from Betsey Wright, who was M-a-h-l-o-n? Did he work for the Governor? Was he a lobbyist?

Mr. BRATTON. Mahlon Martin was Director of the Department of Finance and Administration.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He's advising Ms. Wright "that Senator Knox intends to call a special meeting of his Telecommunications Study Committee," and he is aiming for not letting the contract with the investment firm that's been approved by the State Police. Rather, what he'd like to do is have this funded through the State Pension Fund; isn't that right?

Mr. BRATTON. That's what the memo says.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall this issue coming up on May 13th?

Mr. BRATTON. I have some general recollection that Senator Nelson had problems with the proposal.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you discuss those problems with anyone from the Lasater firm?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall that I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This memo indicates that Ms. Wright contacted Mr. Drake, who worked at the Lasater firm; right?

Mr. BRATTON. That's what the memo says.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The memo does not indicate that she's talking to anyone else about the problem they're having with Senator Nelson; is that right?

Mr. BRATTON. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that you then undertook to lobby the Legislature in order to get the approval of the Lasater firm; isn't that right?

Mr. BRATTON. I'm sure we did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And Governor Clinton lobbied to get the approval of Lasater through the Legislature; isn't that correct?

Mr. BRATTON. I don't recall. But I am sure we would have made efforts to try and get favorable action.

Senator SARBANES. On what?

Mr. BRATTON. On getting the contract that the State Police had awarded approved.

Senator SARBANES. And was the contract Raney, Hutton, and Lasater?

Mr. BRATTON. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. So it was that consortium?

Mr. BRATTON. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. To sum up, when there was a problem, there was a problem that arose with Senator Nelson; right?

Mr. BRATTON. That's what the memo indicates.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The memo indicates that Ms. Wright alerted Mr. Lasater's agent with regard to the problem; right?

Mr. BRATTON. That's what the memo indicates.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then the action that was taken was that the Governor's office lobbied the Legislature to make sure that Lasater's bid would get the necessary approval; right?

Mr. BRATTON. No, sir. We lobbied the Legislative Council to get Council's favorable action on a decision that had been made by the Arkansas State Police Commission so we could go forward with the acquisition of a radio system. We would have done the same thing if the Capital Group or Stevens, Inc., or anyone else had gotten the bid based on the decision of the State Police Commission.

Once they had made that decision, then we would have taken the same action in trying to secure Legislative Council's favorable action. It had nothing to do with the fact that the Lasater firm was one of three in that consortium.

Mr. GIUFFRA. How do you know that?

Mr. BRATTON. Because I know how we did business.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Wasn't it also true, sir, that you were alerting the Lasater firm when the problem was arising?

Mr. BRATTON. The memo indicates that Betsey Wright had made Mike Drake aware that Senator Nelson had some concern about the proposal.

Mr. GIUFFRA. No further questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I don't think we have any questions.

The CHAIRMAN. I want to thank the panelists for participating. We stand in recess until tomorrow at 10:00 a.m.
[Whereupon, at 6:35 p.m., the hearing was recessed until 10:00 a.m. on Wednesday, May 1, 1996.]

Didn't have large cocaine dealings with Roger Clinton, lawyer testifies

By Philip I. Lantieri
JAZZIE STAFF

NOT SPRING8 — Sam Anderson Jr., a Not Springs lawyer charged with distributing cocaine and conspiracy to distribute cocaine, took the stand in his own defense Wednesday and denied allegations he had purchased thousands of dollars' worth of cocaine from Roger Clinton.

Both sides have now rested and the case will go to the jury today. Federal Judge Orin Harris kept court in session Wednesday until after 6 p.m. to allow the defense to complete its presentation.

The government has charged that between November 1983 and June 1984, Anderson paid $32,000 for cocaine to Roger Clinton, who is the younger brother of Governor Bill Clinton, and Maurice Rodriguez, a Colombian national living in New York City. Clinton has testified he was the go-between for a majority of the purchases. Clinton and Rodriguez have pleaded guilty to drug charges and have been sentenced to federal prison terms.

Says witnesses lying

Anderson admitted that he used cocaine and gave it to friends, but said he did not sell the drug as several witnesses have claimed.

When United States Attorney W. Aas Hutchinson asked Anderson about some specific allegations by witnesses, Anderson said they were lying.

He said his cocaine purchases from Clinton were far below the figures used by the government and that the drug was intended only for his personal use. Anderson was asked by Hutchinson if he had other sources for cocaine and he said he had made small purchases from Curtis (Chuck) Berry, who said in testimony Tuesday that he was a chauffeur for Dan Laaster, a Little Rock business man. Hutchinson asked Anderson if he had other sources and he said "none of this came to mind."

Anderson said he began using cocaine in 1981 or 1982 and he said it was Roger Clinton who had first offered him the drug. He said he and Clinton were long-time friends and often met in night clubs in Not Springs and that the offer of cocaine "would usually happen late in the evening after we had been drinking for some time."

Anderson said his consumption of the drug increased and he noticed it was having an effect on his health. "I was trying to go non-stop, around the clock, and it began to catch up with me," he testified.

Anderson said he had met Rodriguez through Roger Clinton and another friend, Lana Crews. He said he was told Rodriguez was a chef and that his name was Maurice West. Anderson said he had never purchased cocaine from Rodriguez and had not been aware Rodriguez sold the drug.

Meeting arranged

In the summer of 1984, Anderson said Roger Clinton contacted him and told him that he had to see him. They arranged to meet in a boat on Lake Hamilton because Clinton said he didn't want to be seen in a public place with Anderson, then a prosecutor.

Anderson said Clinton told him that he had been approached by State Police investigators and that he was "very, very frightened." He said Clinton informed him that the investigators wanted to "set up three peepers." Clinton's drug supplier, Anderson and Laaster, Anderson said that during the Lake Hamilton meeting he had seen "an unmarked car coming along the shoreline."

After that conversation, Anderson said Clinton called him on the phone "and talked extensively about cocaine. It was obvious to me that he had been instructed to do so," that he wanted to implicate me over the telephone."

Anderson said that Gina Canada, 23, of Not Springs, whom he dated for a time in 1983 "had not been truthful with this jury" in her testimony. Canada testified Tuesday that she had used cocaine that Anderson had provided and had seen him sell the drug on two occasions. He said that Canada accompanied him on a trip to Europe in 1983 and that their relationship had been "strained" before their departure "and in Europe, it got worse." He said that he terminated their relationship because Canada "had a bad habit of consuming large quantities of alcohol, was abrasive and violent."

Tries to show whereabouts

Using his desk calendars, credit card slips and telephone bills, Anderson attempted to establish his whereabouts on the approximate dates in which the government alleges that various drug transactions were made. He admitted the information would not account for his actions "every hour of the day and night." Defense attorney Floyd Clardy of Bryant said it had been difficult to compile the information "because every time we find the government where Anderson was they changed the notes" of the alleged offenses for which Anderson is charged.

The government did drop one count of the indictment that alleged Anderson distributed cocaine on June 27, 1984, after he showed that he had been in Fort Worth on that date.

Anderson was asked about a Christmas party he is alleged to have held at his home in Not Springs December 18, 1983, during which Roger Clinton allegedly delivered cocaine he had picked up from Rodriguez in New York City. Anderson said he didn't recall the event. "I might have had a party that night, but I just can't recall," he testified.

re: Legal services rendered to date:
Mitchell Law Firm

Dear Bob:

I am enclosing a copy of recent billings from the Mitchell law firm which have been paid by Lasater & Company. The legal services rendered, as you can see from the detail sheets, were in support and advancement of our group efforts on the Arkansas State Police Communications System Financing. Since we (Raney, Hutton, Lasater) agreed to split expenses, liability and fees on this transaction, we would appreciate receiving your check for one-third of these legal fees in the amount of $10,716.98. I fully expect our group to be reimbursed for these expenses from bond proceeds and look forward to receiving your check as soon as possible.

Thank you in advance for your assistance in this matter.

Sincerely,

Michael J. Drake
Senior Vice-President

MEMORANDUM

TO: BETSEY WRIGHT
 FROM: MIKE GAINES
 DATE: MAY 13, 1945
 SUBJECT: ASP COMMUNICATIONS SYSTEM

The financing I will be discussed by the Communications Sub-committee tomorrow and by Legislative Council on Friday.

The Capital Resources group, which did not get the ASP Commission's nod, intend to contest the award to Ruckon, Lasater, Roney on the following points:

1. Capital offered a fixed rate rather than a floating rate, and
2. Capital's proposal was based on monthly payments by the state to repay the debt while R.L.R. based their proposal on payments every 6 months.

Capital points out that the legislation (written by R.L.R.) requires monthly payments (Act 317 attached, see highlights on page 3).

A proposal based on 6 month payments can be lower because it allows the state to earn interest on the pledged revenues during that 6 month period. Capital argues that this is not allowed under the law as written.

I have discussed this with Sam, and he is looking into it.

Mr. Ed Erxleben

Dear Mr. Erxleben:

You have asked our opinion on a question of interpretation of Section Five of Act No. 814 of 1985, the Department of Arkansas State Police Communications Equipment Leasing Act (the "Act"). The question presented is whether Section Five of the Act requires that Lease Payments, as defined in Section Three of the Act, are required to be made on a monthly basis to investors who purchase an interest in a Lease Agreement authorized by the Act.

Section Five dedicates several categories of driver's license fees as a revenue stream for Lease Payments and establishes the methods for transferring those fees from the collecting agencies to the Department of Arkansas State Police Communications Equipment Lease Fund (the "Lease Fund") and from the Lease Fund to whomever is to hold those funds for the benefit of those persons who have either leased the communications equipment directly to the Department or those persons who have purchased an interest in the Lease Agreement in return for a percentage of the Lease Payments.

Section Five requires that license fees are to be transferred "when received" to the Lease Fund. Fees deposited in the Lease Fund are transferred monthly out of that fund in an amount equal to "payments to cover the costs under the Lease Agreement." At the end of each quarter, any pledged revenues remaining in the Lease Fund in excess of a reserve of 30% of a fiscal quarter's requirements of Lease Payments are removed from the Lease Fund and deposited in the State Treasury as special revenue to the credit of the Arkansas State Police.

Section Five does not state to whom the monthly transfers out of the Lease Fund are to be made. Therefore, there is no requirement that these transfers be made to the ultimate payee or lessor under the Lease Agreement. The procedure for transfer allows for maximum flexibility in the structuring of the financing of the equipment while also limiting the amount of revenue that can be accumulated at any time in the Lease Fund. As drafted, Section Five reflects standard practices in tax exempt revenue financings.

The monthly transfer of license fees equal to the Lease Payment requirements and quarterly "cleaving out" of the Lease Fund limits the amount of license fees which can be used to make Lease Payments to the amount actually required by the Lease Agreement.

In a financing of this size (twenty million dollars plus), involving hundreds of investors, the Lease Payments will ordinarily be deposited with a trustee bank which will hold the funds for the benefit of the investors and disburse the funds as required by the terms of the trustee's agreement with the investors. Payments are ordinarily made annually or semiannually to investors. The trustee, however, usually requires transfers to its trust funds on a monthly basis in order to ensure that sufficient funds are available to make payments to investors when due.

Interest earnings on funds transferred to the trustee ~~inure to the benefit of the state and are used to~~ make payments to investors.

If you have any other questions concerning the Act, please do not hesitate to call.

Sincerely yours,

MITCHELL, WILLIAMS, SELIG,
JACKSON & TUCKER

114) for myself in 1982.

115) Q And did you graduate from high school?

116) A Yes.

117) Q Where did you graduate from high school and

118) what year, please?

119) A St. Michaels Central High School in 120) Chicago, Illinois.

121) Q What year was that?

122) A Excuse me, I didn't say that. 1956.

11) Q During the period 1984 through 1985, were

12) you an actuary at that time?

13) A Yes, I became an actuary or received the 14) actuarial designations in 1978 and '79. So ever

15) since that time, I've been in the practice of

16) actuarial science.

17) Q Could you give a brief description of what

18) exactly an actuary does or what it means to be an 19) actuary?

100) A It means that you should have a

101) mathematical background. You go through a whole

102) bunch of tests. The practice of actuarial science,

103) if you are a life insurance actuary, that's the guy

104) that develops the premium and cost for a life

105) insurance policy. I am a pension actuary and so I

106) develop and certify the contribution amounts that are

107) necessary to fund a qualified retirement plan in

108) accordance with the Treasury regulations.

109) Q Were you doing that same kind of work in 110) 1984 and 1985?

111) A Yes.

112) Q You mentioned a number of different

Page 12

11) certifications and licenses you had, that you have

12) right now.

13) A Yes.

14) Q How many of those did you have during 1984

15) through 1985?

16) A All of them.

17) Q Are you familiar with the bond underwriting

18) that was undertaken in 1985 to provide capital for

19) the purchase of a new police radio system for the 100) state of Arkansas?

101) A Yes, I am aware of it.

102) Q And how are you aware of that?

103) A I was asked by Johnny Mitchum after the 104) successful bidder had been selected, to review their

105) decision and give them opinion as to the financial

106) aspects of it, which I did.

107) Q And had you known Mr. Mitchum before he 108) hired you to do this?

109) A Yes.

110) Q How did you know him?

111) A John owned a hospital in Batesville.

112) Arkansas that he had purchased. I believe it was a

Page 13

11) year or two before that, that had a defined benefit

12) pension plan. And I was hired to be the actuary to

13) do the certifications and to terminate that

14) retirement plan.

15) I completed that work and I suppose that's

16) some time in late 1984 when that was done.

17) Q How did he come to hire you to do the

18) analysis that you just described?

19) A John called me up and asked me whether or

100) not I could review it and do the numbers for him, do

101) a calculation for him, and I said yes.

102) Q When he called you, had he told you that a

103) decision had already been made on which underwriter

104) to pick?

105) A Yes.

106) Q Do you know how soon after the decision had 107) been made you were called?

108) A I'm not certain. I've got to say that it

109) was not a lengthy period of time. I've got to say it

110) was something like maybe two weeks or so, but that's 111) a guess.

112) Q And I realize this was a while ago, but I

Page 14

11) wondered if you could explain to me, when he called

12) you up to ask you to do the work, how he described

13) what task he wanted you to perform and what he asked

104) you, what you were capable of doing

105) A He asked me whether I could look at the 106) three or four different proposals that had been

107) presented to the state police board, and whether I

108) could run some numbers to see whether or not the

109) bid

110) that they had selected was in fact the best of the

111) four bids. And that was a present-value calculation,

112) and my memory says that's what I did.

113) Q Did he ask you to do a present value

114) calculation or is that something that you offered to 115) do?

116) A Well, he asked me to do a study that would

117) confirm what their findings were. And in my

118) judgment, the way to do that was, I believe, to do

119) present value numbers.

120) Q Had they done a present value analysis

121) previous to the one you did?

122) A I don't know.

100) Q Were you given a copy of a document that

Page 15

11) identified what their findings were?

12) A I believe so.

13) Q Do you recall what format that was in?

14) A No, I don't recall.

15) Q And just so we're clear, you stated that 106) you were asked to do a study to confirm what their

107) findings were. Was that the commission's findings or 108) do you know whose findings he was referring to?

109) A Yeah, yeah, I mean their decision to go

110) with the winner as to whether or not in my opinion

111) actuarially, whether I concurred with that decision.

112) Q So you weren't, per se, being asked to 113) confirm you were being asked whether you agreed with 114) their choice of the firm that they chose?

115) A I believe that's right.

STATE POLICE COMMUNICATIONS AND ANALYSIS

Attached are the analysis sheets used by the State Police Commission to arrive at the decision to award the financing to E. F. Huston, T. J. Haney and Lassiter.

The following numbers are taken directly from that analysis. The NPV (Net Present Value) analysis is used to equate different payment terms. It takes into account the fact that the State will have the use of the drivers license revenues for 12 months at the beginning and every 6 months thereafter under the Huston proposal. Under the First Capital proposal, the State will pay monthly.

Bidder	Total Net Payments	NPV Net Payments
First Capital	$ 12,984,461	$ 12,984,461
Haney-Huston	11,735,358	12,401,441
Difference:	1,249,103	583,020

If this same analysis were considering Huston credit for his reserve fund at 11.5% instead of 10% and used 9.5% as the NPV factor to reflect the short-term rates available for the investment every 6 months of the drivers license revenues, the results would be:

Bidder	Total Net Payments	NPV Net Payments
First Capital	$ 12,984,461	$ 12,405,432
Haney-Huston	11,581,311	12,492,432
Difference:	1,403,150	99,000

2. OTHER CONSIDERATIONS

A. Timing of Payments

First Cap tells the State to make payments under the Rane-Lass-Lutton - Lassiter bond. The payment is not due until the 15th month. The State thus has the use of the money for a longer period and further serves to reduce the cost.

B. Issue of Bond Issue

The under the bond issue the cost to the State is reduced. The proceeds from the bond issue are not added to the State's cash but are used to pay the bond.

C. The Bond Issue and the State's Cash

It appears the State should not be forced to pay the cost of the bond issue but should be able to extend the cost.

248 I was having a conversation at some point, and I
249 don't remember where or why or how or what the

288 Q Again, you have no - in terms of the way

289 that those withdrawals were done for the get out the 300 Q Last question. Why did your role - why

301 were you no longer the Governor's campaign manager?

302 A Well, I left the Governor's staff toward

303 the end of 1989, though I didn't technically go off

304 the payroll until January of '90. So I was no longer

305 working for him, and I didn't want to run the

The Honorable Bill Clinton
Governor of Arkansas
State Capitol Building
Little Rock, Arkansas 72201

Dear Bill:

It was a pleasure to see you yesterday at the Hot Springs "Christmas to Share" Program and to visit with you by telephone last night.

We wanted to follow up with the details of our conversation in this correspondence. With regard to the dispersal of the securities owned by Mount Hood Pension Fund, National Investors Life Insurance and National Investors Pension Fund, we have been working hand-in-hand with their personnel toward an orderly sale of their holdings and, in fact, we handled the first stage of the dispersal in November when we participated in the liquidation of $30 million of Illinois bonds. The Companies have been our clients for quite some time and our account representatives are very familiar with the portfolios which is extremely important in the sales process.

It is our belief that an orderly dispersal of these securities will benefit the policy holders and the shareholders of these Companies; thereby, benefiting Arkansas citizens the most. To date, the dispersal has been handled within the State; therefore, any gains or losses have remained in Arkansas.

As we discussed, rumor has it that co-managers of First Boston and Stearns Inc. will be appointed the first of the year to consummate any future transactions in the portfolio. It is estimated that there is approximately $1.9 billion of debt securities which it is expected will be sold, and if First Boston is appointed, it will mean that a larger percentage of the proceeds will be leaving Arkansas.

Knowing that we have the same dedication to the State of Arkansas, I do not believe that you will want this to happen. However, we do understand the problems which you face at the Insurance Commission and are cognizant that you may have difficulty in maintaining the status quo as far as the dispersal is concerned.

Faced with that reality, we hope that you will be able to take the initiative in strongly suggesting that Lasater & Company may be included with First Boston and Stearns Inc. as a third co-manager. This would mean that a majority of the business would stay in Arkansas.

DKSN027455

Page Two
 December 14, 1983

With regard to the Board of the Arkansas Housing and Development Agency, it is our understanding that the chairmanship rotates annually. Based on this understanding, we would like to recommend our mutual friend George Wright for the chairmanship. George has expressed an interest in the chairmanship and we believe that he would take the time and devote the energy necessary to do a good job.

In addition, it is our understanding that there will be vacancies in January on the AHDA Board and we would like to strongly recommend Dale Taylor, an attorney with First Commercial Mortgage Company. His background and professional capabilities make him particularly suited for service on this Agency Board.

During the recent Special Session, legislation passed creating a commission to study the possibility of creating an agency similar to the AHDA to do public school financing. We would like to recommend Michael Drake, Vice President of Public Finance at Lasater & Company to serve on the Commission. Michael was born at Judsonia, Arkansas and his undergraduate degree is from Harding College. Michael did his graduate work at Wayne State University in Urban Planning and Fiscal Affairs and post graduate work at the Harvard-MIT Joint Center for Urban Studies. With his educational background and his knowledge of Arkansas and fiscal matters, we believe he is perfectly suited for the Commission and that he will make a significant contribution.

Finally, let me again say that the Insurance Companies' dispersal of its holdings is very important to us and we sincerely hope that there is some way to make certain that we do not lose our position.

Again, we appreciate your able assistance.

Sincerely,

 Dan R. Lasater

Re: State Police Financing Bill

Dear Sam:

Enclosed is an original and three copies of an amendment which will substitute the language of the bill we discussed over the phone today for the language of the existing bill.

Please review the amendment and let me know if you have any questions or want me to do any redrafting.

With best regards, I am

Cordially yours,

REMARKS:

From what I am picking up through Mahlon is that Knox intends to call a special meeting of his telecommunications study committee this week and that he is aiming for not letting a committee go off with investment firm but rather to having money from PERC because he is talking about a low-interest loan but there is no way to justify that as the required PERC "prudent investment"

- I have alerted Drake and suggested that they get an AS? commissioner to set an appointment with Senator Nelson ASAP to see if he has any questions about the proposal.

Any other suggestions?

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

WEDNESDAY, MAY 1, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:18 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING COMMENTS OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

I am going to ask our witnesses if they please would stand for the purposes of taking the oath.

[Witnesses sworn.]

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Counsel, are you representing both Mr. Drake and Mr. Lasater?

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Yes, I am.

The CHAIRMAN. So that's the reason you are in the middle there.

That's a great tie you have on.

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Yours and Senator Mack's, you show brightness, et cetera.

I am going to ask Mr. Lasater and Mr. Drake if they have any statements that they would like to make before we start?

Mr. LASATER. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lasater, we would be happy to receive your statement.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF DANNY RAY LASATER PARTNER, COLLINS, LOCKE & LASATER LASATER & COMPANY INVESTMENT BANKERS

Mr. LASATER. Thank you.

Good morning, Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee.

I am pleased to appear here today and answer your questions.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Lasater, that microphone will move. You can bring it in closer to you. I think that will help a bit so we can hear you a little better.

Mr. LASATER. OK. For the past 10 years, I have often been the subject of inaccurate and misleading news articles. Outrageous and totally false stories about me have appeared in both the local and national newspapers and magazines. A good example of that was in this morning's Wall Street Journal where I was called a "convicted drug dealer" by Mr. Simpson. And I challenge Mr. Simpson and The Wall Street Journal at this time to prove any evidence that they have on that, because that has not been the case.

Political opponents of Governor and now-President Clinton have sought to use this false information for political advantage. In the process, my reputation has been smeared and my business interests have been damaged. Most painful to me, my family has suffered from these unfair attacks. I hope today's hearing will give me an opportunity to finally set the record straight.

In all the attempts to use me to attack the President, what has been lost is my real story and my right to restore my good name and to teach my children to be good citizens. My story is simple.

In the 1980's, I was an owner/operator of my fourth successful business. My company, like many businesses around the Nation, did business with the State of Arkansas. Like many businessmen and other citizens throughout the country, I contributed to the campaigns of politicians like yourself, including then-Governor Bill Clinton. Neither the Governor nor his administration showed me any favoritism.

In the 1980's, I also made mistakes in my personal life. I became addicted to cocaine. I pled guilty to charges of possession and social distribution of cocaine and was incarcerated for nearly a year. Contrary to many inaccurately published reports, however, my activities had no connection whatsoever with dealing drugs or laundering money. I lost my securities dealer license by decision of a Clinton appointee and had to sell my business. I hurt my family and embarrassed my friends. Since that time, I've worked hard to make amends, to rebuild my family, and to dedicate myself to God.

Your investigators know all about these problems and that time. They know that the Governor had no connections to those activities. They know that it has never been alleged that I committed any fraudulent act or lied in the course of any investigation.

My wife and children have been forced to relive that difficult period each time some new effort is made to smear the President with exaggerated allegations about me. You have the right to ask those questions again. Since you already know the answers, however, I simply ask that you do so only upon careful consideration of the rights of my wife, family, and friends.

What saddens me most about the matter is the pain and problems it continues to cause my family and others in Arkansas who were associated with me. At the time, I thought that if I admitted guilt, took responsibility for my actions, and served the sentence imposed on me by the court, I would have paid my debt to society and would be permitted to put the incident behind me and get on with my life. Unfortunately, that has not been the case.

In every election since that time in which Bill Clinton has been a candidate, efforts have been made to use my past problems against him. I continue to hope I can put this particular part of my life behind me, and perhaps my appearance here today can finally close the book on that subject.

Some of you can identify with the pain of unfair allegations of improper conduct. The difference, however, is that when you confront those stories, you chose to run for office. Please remember that when my family and I confront them, we have made no such choice to enter the public arena. Nevertheless, I will answer the questions truthfully, completely, and candidly. Hopefully, this time will be the last.

Before answering your questions, I would like to share with you some information about my personal background. I was born in Arkansas in 1943, but I grew up in Indiana. After high school, I went to work for McDonald's and spent 4 years with that company learning the fast-food business. With partners, I then started my own fast-food chain, Scotty's Hamburgers. That company did well, and we went on to start another national restaurant chain, Ponderosa Steakhouse.

Ponderosa was a tremendous success, and in 1972, I sold my interest in Ponderosa for about $20 million. After the Ponderosa sale, I turned my attention to horse breeding and racing. I owned successful horse farms in Kentucky and Florida. In 1980, I was a co-founder of a securities firm called Collins, Locke & Lasater, which later came to be called Lasater & Company.

I mention these business successes not to boast, although I certainly am proud of the companies that I built and the horses I raised, but rather because my background is important to put into context the events in Arkansas in the 1980's that this Committee is investigating.

For example, it is well known that I was a political supporter of Bill Clinton and that I made contributions to his campaign for Governor of Arkansas in the 1980's. During that period, I could easily afford to contribute to the political candidates I thought were best qualified for public office, and Bill Clinton was only one of the candidates I supported. I doubt that any Member of this Committee would argue with me when I say that I don't believe there is anything wrong with a citizen contributing to the political campaigns of the candidates he supports.

You also should know that I, like thousands of citizens who make contributions to your political campaigns, contributed to Governor Clinton and the other candidates I supported without expecting any favors or special treatment in return. More important, I never received any special treatment from Governor Clinton or anyone on his staff. To the contrary, on the one occasion when I complained to Governor Clinton that Lasater & Company was not receiving its fair share of the State bond underwriting business, he simply told me that we should present our case to the appropriate staff if we felt we were not being treated fairly. He did not take any action on our behalf, and our position among the firms that were underwriting State bond business never improved.

Governor Clinton did not take any action on my behalf. It appeared that he wanted to avoid any appearance of giving me preferential treatment. Even though Lasater & Company was the second largest capitalized securities brokerage firm in Arkansas at the time, we stayed on the bottom tier of firms handling State bond business and never moved up to a higher tier. In my opinion, not only did I not receive any preferential treatment, I may even have received less consideration than I would have received if I had not known the Governor.

You also should know that after my criminal conviction my securities license was revoked in August 1987, by the State Securities Commissioner that Governor Clinton had appointed, Beverly Bassett Schaffer. Because I retained an investment interest in the business to which I sold Lasater & Company, Ms. Bassett Schaffer was extremely vigilant in her oversight of the operation of that firm, advising it in April 1989, that its license would be revoked if I ever acted in any manner to control its operations.

I know that Ms. Bassett Schaffer has appeared before this Committee, so you do not need me to tell you she was a strong, independent regulator with impeccable credentials and character. She certainly never gave me any special treatment. In fact, I think she was particularly vigilant in my case to avoid any appearance that her department was going easy on me. This is the second time I thought I might fairly be entitled to more consideration from the State, but like Governor Clinton in 1984, Ms. Bassett Schaffer was careful to avoid taking any action that might appear to give me preferential treatment.

I would also like to say a few words about my relationship with President Clinton's family. I first met the President's mother, the late Virginia Kelley, at Oaklawn Park in Hot Springs, Arkansas in the 1970's. Mrs. Kelley was an avid horse racing fan, and all of us in the small community of Arkansas racing came to know her well. She was a wonderful woman—warm, friendly, outgoing—and we all miss her very much.

Mrs. Kelley was very proud of her two sons, Bill and Roger. I met Roger first, when he was working as a musician in Hot Springs. At some point, Mrs. Kelley introduced me to her other son, the Governor, when he was at Oaklawn Park. I think I probably would have supported Bill Clinton in any event, but knowing and liking both his mother and his brother, it was easy for me to become a strong political supporter of the Governor.

Much has been made of the fact that Roger Clinton worked for me a few months in 1983. I don't even remember whether it was Mrs. Kelley or Governor Clinton who asked if I would give Roger a job, but one of them did so. Roger was interested in horse racing, so I gave him a job as a stablehand at my Florida horse farm. Roger did the same work and received the same pay as the other stablehands who worked for me. At that time, I employed hundreds of people in my businesses, and I gave jobs to the relatives of other friends and acquaintances. I never expected anything in return, and I never received anything in return.

The last thing I would like to mention is a myth that has been repeated over and over in press articles about me. This is a classic example of how careless reporting can create a false impression. I would hope that the Members of the Committee are sensitive to that kind of reporting and will understand my desire to set the record straight. It has been reported many times that Governor Clinton gave me a "pardon" after my drug conviction. That never happened, and I'd like to tell the Committee what really took place.

In 1989, I wanted to be able to go hunting with my children, but because of my prior criminal conviction I could not carry a firearm, even for hunting. I learned that it was possible to apply to the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms for permission to carry a firearm for hunting purposes. Although the application was to a Federal agency, the agency required approval from the State before it would act on the application. I, therefore, submitted an application to the State Parole Board. The Parole Board eventually recommended to the Governor that the application be granted, which I understood was routine in such cases. Some time later, the Governor granted the application, and I was then able to pursue my application at the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, which ultimately approved my request.

As you can see, Governor Clinton did not give me a pardon. He did not even make the final decision on the relief that I was requesting—that decision was made by the Federal authorities. What makes these false reports about a pardon even more offensive to me is that the State of Arkansas was not even prompt in processing my request, which was completely routine and in no way unusual. Even though this was a routine request, it took a year and a half for me to obtain a State approval.

I can tell you for sure that I got no special treatment from the State on this matter. In fact, I suspect that, like the matters involving Governor Clinton and Ms. Bassett Schaffer, my request may have been processed more slowly and more carefully than that of a citizen who did not know the Governor, as to avoid any appearance of my receiving special or preferential treatment.

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee, thank you for permitting me to make these statements. As I have told you, I welcome the chance to appear here today and finally set the record straight. I am ready to answer any questions you might have.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Mr. Drake, do you have any statement that you would like to make?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF MICHAEL J. DRAKE
SENIOR VICE PRESIDENT
FIXED-INCOME AND TAX-EXEMPT SECURITIES COLLINS, LOCKE & LASATER

Mr. DRAKE. No statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask if any of the Senators have anything?

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Lasater, we are going to get to the issue of special treatment in a minute. I guess, I now understand that you are complaining you were treated worse than everybody else. But first, I want to ask you, did I understand you to deny a moment ago that you were convicted for conspiracy to distribute narcotics?

Mr. LASATER. No. I said I was not a convicted drug dealer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well—

Mr. LASATER. I was convicted of social distribution of cocaine.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Lasater, there is no crime of social distribution of cocaine. You were convicted of conspiracy to possess and distribute cocaine, a Federal felony; isn't that correct?

Mr. LASATER. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were——

Mr. LASATER. But I did not sell drugs.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Lasater, you were indicted for conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute cocaine; is that correct?

Mr. LASATER. That is correct. But again, I repeat, that was on a social basis.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We will get to that in a second. But first, let's be 100 percent clear about the crime you pled guilty to. When you pled guilty, you got up in front of a Federal Judge?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You raised your hand——

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —and sworn an oath?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You admitted your guilt to the crime to which you were charged; correct?

Mr. LASATER. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The crime was possession with intent to distribute cocaine; right?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There is no separate crime for social distribution of cocaine, is there?

Mr. LASATER. I don't know if there is a separate crime or not. But I think there is a separate moral issue.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you think it is morally better to give cocaine away than to sell cocaine. That's the distinction you are drawing; is that right?

Mr. LASATER. I guess that is the distinction I am drawing.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because when you give it away, you are doing a favor to the people you give it to. Is that your thinking about it?

Mr. LASATER. I think there is a difference between selling cocaine and using it on a social basis.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, we are not talking about using it. We are talking about giving it to other people to use. Since you are coming up here and you have made an issue in your opening statement about questions of your character and this whole issue of what you were convicted for, let's get it straight. In your mind, you see a difference between selling drugs to other people and giving drugs to other people?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. You think it's better to be giving it than selling it?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You used to give drugs to your employees; right?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Kind of like a bonus; right?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was kind of compensation?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you do it in order to control them or to have leverage over them?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Drake, you were an employee of Mr. Lasater?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes, I was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You got cocaine from Mr. Lasater?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it your view that Mr. Lasater used cocaine as a tool to manipulate people?

Mr. DRAKE. I think that at a time, I thought that, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, at a time, you told that to a police investigator; right?

Mr. DRAKE. I could have.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Drake, would you please pull that microphone right up in front of you. You can pull it. Why don't you move your chair over a little to the left and that way you can speak into the microphone. Otherwise, we will have trouble.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As a matter of fact, do you remember an investigator named DeLaughter, Doc DeLaughter?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was an investigator with the Arkansas law enforcement authorities?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You talked to him about Mr. Lasater and his cocaine activities; right?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You told Mr. DeLaughter that, in your view, Mr. Lasater used cocaine as a tool to manipulate his peers?

Mr. DRAKE. If that's my statement, then I stand by it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's what you said in 1986; right?

Mr. DRAKE. I may have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You also said that Mr. Lasater used cocaine to reward people or to control people that were loyal to him; right?

Mr. DRAKE. If you are reading from my statement, then that's my statement.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think there is a copy of this statement in your package, if it's not we will get it down to you. It's "Memo to File, October 14, 1986." Now, I understand you didn't prepare this. It's a memo prepared by the investigator.

Mr. FEINSTEIN. That's not in the folder.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We have just given it to the witness. The last paragraph: "It became obvious to him," that's you, "that Dan Lasater was using cocaine as a tool to manipulate his peers and force them to serve as a buffer between the authorities and his cocaine abuse." Then it lists a number of people who were involved in getting cocaine. "Lasater also considered these people loyal to him, because he used cocaine to control them for his benefit."

Mr. DRAKE. Mr. Chertoff, I'd say that this is Mr. DeLaughter's impression of a statement I made to him. It's not a quote from me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I understand it's not a quote. But in substance, this is what you told that investigator in 1986; isn't that correct?

Mr. DRAKE. It's a long time ago. It may be.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You are not prepared to deny that it wasn't said at the time?

Mr. DRAKE. I'm not prepared to admit or deny it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it stands uncontradicted.

You also went on to say in this statement that Mr. Lasater surrounded himself with police officers in order to make himself look like he's a good citizen. Do you remember saying that?

Mr. DRAKE. I don't remember saying it, no.

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Do you have a page reference?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's the very next page. Are you prepared to deny that you said that in substance to the investigating officer in 1986?

Mr. DRAKE. I'm not prepared to deny it, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to ask you, Mr. Lasater, you gave drugs to your employees; right?

Mr. LASATER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You gave drugs to your chauffeur; right? That was Chuck Berry?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Or he gave drugs to you?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He bought drugs for you?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You gave drugs to people you were entertaining; is that right?

Mr. LASATER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Even under-age people you were entertaining; is that right?

Mr. LASATER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I just want to make sure we have kind of your moral compass out here; that giving drugs away to your employees and to people you are entertaining, even if they are under-age, that's better than selling? You see a distinction there? That's your position before this Committee?

Mr. LASATER. I think there's a difference, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me tell you something, I have put alot of witnesses on over the years who have done bad things. I am a firm believer that people do put things behind them and they achieve redemption. But I also know that the first step to that is honesty and accountability for something someone has done wrong. And I have to say that I am astonished to hear you say that you actually view your acts as having given drugs away to these people as somehow morally distinct from selling it.

You also say in your opening statement, Mr. Lasater, that it has never been alleged you ever committed a fraudulent act or lied in the course of any investigation. That's in your opening statement; is that right?

Mr. LASATER. It is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember when Mr. Locke, your partner in Collins, Locke & Lasater, had a bankruptcy case in Federal Court in Arkansas?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was in the early 1980's?

Mr. LASATER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There was a bankruptcy judge named Nixon?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I remember that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was a Federal Judge.

Mr. LASATER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You testified in that case?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Again, you raised your hand and swore an oath?

Mr. LASATER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And do you remember what the Judge said about your testimony?

Mr. LASATER. I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did he say about it?

Mr. LASATER. He said it was false.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, he said that you were involved with Mr. Locke in a conspiracy to hide assets from creditors; right?

Mr. LASATER. That's what he said. But that was inaccurate.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So when you say here, "It has never been alleged that I committed any fraudulent act or lied in the course of any investigation," you don't consider a finding by a Federal Judge that you lied under oath to be an allegation that you committed a fraudulent act or lied?

Mr. LASATER. No. That is an allegation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So——

Mr. LASATER. I stand corrected.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your prepared, sworn statement before this Committee we have already established is false with respect to this statement?

Mr. LASATER. It is false in reference to that statement. But I disagree with Judge Mixon.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, but let me say something, Mr. Lasater. We did not catch you unawares with this question. You prepared this statement. You walked into this Committee Room with this statement to get in the face of this Committee and say that "it has never been alleged that I committed any fraudulent act or lied."

Having put that on the table, you now admit to us that you well and in truth know that there was a Federal Judge who accused you and made a finding that you lied under oath. Correct?

Mr. LASATER. Could I have a second?

[Mr. Lasater and Mr. Feinstein confer.]

Counselor, I didn't have that in mind when I prepared that statement. I had forgotten about it and I apologize.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had forgotten about the fact that a Federal Judge made a statement of finding in open court that you had lied under oath and that you had been involved in a conspiracy to defraud creditors of your partner, Locke?

Mr. LASATER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you testify in that case?

Mr. LASATER. When?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. That was in 1985, wasn't it?

Mr. LASATER. Somewhere in there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was around the same time you were getting contracts from the State of Arkansas to underwrite bonds for the ADFA and for the police radio system; right?

Mr. LASATER. I don't know the exact dates, but it would be in that timeframe, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, we've already established that in the period between February 1985 and May 1985, you were involved in seeking to obtain, and ultimately successfully obtaining, bond underwriting work for you and your syndicate.

Now did you ever disclose at the time that you were dealing with State authorities to try to get this contract that a Federal Judge had made a finding that you had lied and participated in a conspiracy to cheat creditors?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't think that issue of integrity was a matter that should be brought to the attention of the authorities?

Mr. LASATER. I did not disclose it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And by the way, this testimony occurred in open court; is that right?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it wasn't a big secret?

Mr. LASATER. It was in open court.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In Federal Court in Little Rock?

Mr. LASATER. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's the same Little Rock in which your firm was located and where the State Capitol was and where they were going to award the bond contract; right?

Mr. LASATER. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, you met with Governor Clinton in late January or February of 1985; isn't that correct?

Mr. LASATER. I don't know the exact date, but I met with him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had a one-on-one meeting with him?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's with no staff present?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Not even Betsey Wright?

Mr. LASATER. Not that I recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No advisors?

Mr. LASATER. Not that I recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just the two of you? Where was that meeting?

Mr. LASATER. At the State Capitol.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In his office?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How long did it last?

Mr. LASATER. Ten minutes, maybe 15.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just 15 minutes?

Mr. LASATER. Ten or 15.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You left that meeting with the sense that you were going to be unfairly treated or you were going to be getting less good treatment than anybody else?

Mr. LASATER. No, I came to that meeting with that feeling.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You left with what feeling?

Mr. LASATER. I left with the feeling that I did not improve my position any.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I want to put up a letter that is dated February 15, 1985.

The CHAIRMAN. It's in your packet.

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's a letter to the Honorable Bill Clinton.

Mr. LASATER. Yes, it is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You signed it?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was sent; right?

Mr. LASATER. I'm sorry?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It got sent?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, it did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And it says: "Thank you very much for the opportunity to sit down and visit with you regarding the many issues facing Arkansas and relative to areas in which Lasater & Company can assist you in your efforts to promote and develop Arkansas." Now that refers to that meeting, the private meeting, you had with Mr. Clinton; is that right?

Mr. LASATER. I don't know that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, did you have another meeting in which you sat down with him and discussed the many issues facing Arkansas?

Mr. LASATER. No, I don't think so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it must refer to that meeting; right?

Mr. LASATER. More than likely, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That meeting occurs at the very same time that you are in court testifying about your partner's bankruptcy and in which the Judge finds that you are lying under oath. Did you mention to Governor Clinton your experiences with Federal Court that were going on at the same time?

Mr. LASATER. I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now this meeting with Governor Clinton also occurred at the same time that there was a trial going on of a man by the name of Sam Anderson. Do you remember that case?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sam Anderson was a lawyer in Hot Springs?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, Sam Anderson, Jr.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was tried and convicted for narcotics?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In that case, Roger Clinton testified; right?

Mr. LASATER. I believe that he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Roger Clinton testified in that case that you had loaned him $8,000 to help clear up a drug debt?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall that, but I don't dispute it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, the story behind that loan is that Roger Clinton came to you and said that someone had broken into his car and stolen about $16,000 to $20,000 worth of drugs belonging to a dealer; right?

Mr. LASATER. I don't remember the dollar amount. But someone did—I was told that someone broke into his car and stole drugs out of his car. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He asked you for money because he said he was afraid the drug dealer would hurt him or hurt his mother or his brother; right?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. His brother being the Governor?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you gave him or loaned him $8,000 to clear up that problem with the drug dealer?

Mr. LASATER. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now in your conversation with Governor Clinton, which is going on at exactly the same time you are in Federal Court being called a liar by a Federal Judge and at the same time that there's testimony in another Federal Courtroom in the same city where they are talking about how you gave or how you loaned $8,000 to Roger Clinton to clear up a drug debt, none of this comes up in the meeting?

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Mr. Chertoff, with all due respect, I think it would be—it's very unfair to this witness to be making these representations about exactly the same time without giving him some specifics on the dates.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will say substantially the same time. The testimony and the finding of the bankruptcy judge is in January 1985; the testimony in the case involving Mr. Anderson is in February 1985; and, the meeting we are talking about occurs in late January or early February 1985, shortly before this February 15th letter.

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Could I just inquire, the finding that you referred to by the Judge in the bankruptcy case, did that take the form of some written finding of fact?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will tell you where—not that I want to trade roles with you, counselor, but—

Mr. FEINSTEIN. No, I'm just—

Mr. CHERTOFF. An article in the Arkansas Gazette, which is a statewide paper, reporting publicly upon the Judge's statements, his conclusions at the close of the hearing on this bankruptcy, report that Judge Mixon also said he did not believe "most" of the testimony by Dan Lasater of Little Rock, Locke's employer and former business partner. The Judge said it appeared that Lasater and Bill McCord of Little Rock, Locke's son-in-law and former business partner in an automobile dealership, and another business employee conspired with Locke to hide his assets from creditors.

Now let me get back to my question. Mr. Lasater, did any of this come up with Governor Clinton?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did the loan to Roger Clinton come up with Governor Clinton?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, it was, in fact, Governor Clinton who asked you to employ Roger Clinton originally.

Mr. LASATER. I believe it was either he or his mother, and it could have been either one. I don't dispute that it was Governor Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I don't want to leave it ambiguous. I think we have your report of interview with the FBI that occurred in October 1986, in your package. You might want to take a look at it.

Mr. LASATER. What page?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Page 20, the last paragraph. This is their report of their interview with you where they say that—

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Mr. Chertoff, I don't believe that's in our package, I don't have any 20-page documents other than the deposition transcript.

[Document provided.]

Mr. FEINSTEIN. If he could have a moment to get to the page?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The last paragraph:

Regarding Roger Clinton, Mr. Lasater advised he met Clinton through Mitchell Wood some time around 1981 or 1982 during the time Clinton played in a band in the Hot Springs area. Clinton was employed by him at one time in which Governor Bill Clinton requested Lasater to hire him.

Do you deny that's what you told the FBI in 1986?

Mr. LASATER. No. I would think this in 1986 would be closer to my—my memory would be better then than now.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now getting back to this February 15th letter, in this letter, you summarize the various discussions that you had with Governor Clinton. To go through them one by one, you indicate: "To begin, let me suggest that Lasater & Company be advised of all financial proposals affecting the State of Arkansas." Do you see that one?

Mr. LASATER. I'm sorry. Would you repeat that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. The third paragraph: "To begin, let me suggest that Lasater & Company be advised of all financing proposals affecting the State of Arkansas." Do you see that one?

Mr. LASATER. No, I don't. What—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Third paragraph of your letter of February 15th.

Mr. LASATER. Is it the first paragraph?

Mr. CHERTOFF. The third.

Mr. LASATER. The third? OK. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says: "Secondly, we have discussed the appointment of Donnie Spears to the Arkansas Housing Board and I have confirmed our understanding regarding the appointment in my letter of January 23, 1985, and I want to again reaffirm our interest and desire in seeing Mr. Spears in this position." Do you remember that? That was discussed, wasn't it?

Mr. LASATER. At the meeting?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. LASATER. No. I don't recall it being discussed, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You remember making the recommendation?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You confirmed the understanding regarding the appointment; right?

Mr. LASATER. Mr. Chertoff, I didn't write this letter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You signed it?

Mr. LASATER. I signed it, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The letter you signed and sent says, "I have confirmed our understanding regarding the appointment." Right?

Mr. LASATER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, hold your place there because I want to put up on the Elmo DKS 26466, which is in your package, 5/23. It's a memorandum to the Governor from Cathy. "Subject: Recommendations by Dan Lasater."

Mr. LASATER. OK. I have it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This appears to be a kind of a tally to the Governor of how they are handling your recommendations. It's like a separate category—The Lasater Recommendations. It says, "Reappoint: George Wright, James Branigan." Do you know or did you know George Wright?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't know George Wright?

Mr. LASATER. Well, I knew—I had met George Wright.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you recommend him?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. James Branigan, did you recommend him?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall recommending—

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know or did you know a James Branigan?
Mr. LASATER. No. If he walked in this room, I wouldn't know him.

The CHAIRMAN. You didn't know him?

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you didn't recommend James Branigan?

Mr. LASATER. I'm not saying that I didn't recommend him.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh. Why did you recommend him?

Mr. LASATER. Well, probably because of my staff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Someone asked you to do it as a favor and you recommended him?

Mr. FEINSTEIN. That's not what he said, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your staff recommended him?

Mr. LASATER. That's what I would believe.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew Bill Mathis?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you recommend him for?

Mr. LASATER. He was a very bright young man.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What position did you recommend him for?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it ADFA?

Mr. LASATER. It could have been.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What about Mort Hardwicke? Did you recommend him?

Mr. LASATER. I met Mort back here a little bit ago. I think I have met him, but I certainly don't know him well enough to recommend him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you recommend him?

Mr. LASATER. I could possibly have, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was on the Board of ADFA; right? That's the Agency that gave you all the contracts; right?

Mr. LASATER. I'm not sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You are not sure you got contracts from ADFA?

Mr. LASATER. No. We got contracts from ADFA. I am not sure what Board he was on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. We will establish that later. But I will represent to you he was on ADFA.

Mr. LASATER. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Margaret Davenport-Jacks, do you know her?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you recommend her?

Mr. LASATER. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. For what?

Mr. LASATER. One of the Board positions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it ADFA?

Mr. LASATER. It was either ADFA or the Board that came before ADFA.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK. But a Board that gives out bond contracts?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then Jim Louis Bell. Did you recommend him?

Mr. LASATER. Jim Tom Bell?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Jim Tom Bell. I'm sorry.

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then Don Spears, who we see right here; right?

Mr. LASATER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ed Willis, it says, "Actually Patsy recommended him." And I guess—of course, Patsy Thomasson was working for you in 1983?

Mr. LASATER. She was, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that is the same Patsy Thomasson who now works in the White House?

Mr. LASATER. It is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now this goes to the Governor. And we've established through Betsey Wright that when you see this little reverse checkmark, that is the Governor characteristic checkmark. He writes, "OK." So now is it still your position that you had less influence with the Governor and you were treated less fairly than anybody else in Arkansas on these kinds of issues?

Mr. LASATER. Repeat the question, please.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it still your position that you had less influence with the Governor and you were treated less fairly than anybody else in Arkansas?

Mr. LASATER. No. It is not my position that I was treated less fairly than everybody else in Arkansas.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that—

Mr. LASATER. It is my position that we had the second largest capitalized firm in the State of Arkansas and we didn't receive the pro rata share of the bond business that I thought we were entitled to because of the size.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You thought you were entitled to a third; right?

Mr. LASATER. I'm sorry?

Mr. CHERTOFF. You thought you were entitled to a third; right?

Mr. LASATER. A third?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. LASATER. Now where did you come with that number?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I'm asking you. Did you think you were entitled to a third of the business?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that the Governor's office kept a separate category, kind of a running list, as to the Lasater recommendations?

Mr. LASATER. I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why would they do this?

Mr. LASATER. You will have to ask someone else other than I.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I mean, if your view is that you were kind of like, you did not really know the Governor, you are really kind of an outsider, and you are just kept at arms-length, why would they keep a separate list or a separate tally that the Governor personally reviews of your recommendations to various boards that award contracts that you have an interest in obtaining? Can you think of any reason?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's finish up with the letter of February 15th. You also requested an opportunity to be let in on an upcoming AHDA/FHA financing; is that right? That's at the bottom, fourth paragraph.

Mr. LASATER. I see that, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you also asked for other contracts and other business directly from the Governor. Do you remember, there was something called the Mount Hood Pension Fund, a National Investor's Life Insurance, a National Investor's Pension Fund?

Mr. LASATER. What was the name of it?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mount Hood Pension Fund, National Investor's Life Insurance, and National Investor's Pension Fund.

Mr. LASATER. I remember National Investor's, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. In 1983, that was in liquidation?

Mr. LASATER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You wanted an opportunity to participate in the sale of securities; right?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You felt you had been cut out of that; right?

Mr. LASATER. I'm not sure at that point we had been cut out of it. I'm not sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, there was a woman named Linda Garner, who was the regulator responsible for handling this matter.

Mr. LASATER. Yes, appointed by Frank White, the Republican Governor, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. Then Bill Clinton became Governor and you wrote directly to the Governor to ask him to get you into position on this deal; right?

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Which deal are we now referring to?

Mr. CHERTOFF. This has to do with the dispersal of the National Investor's Securities.

Mr. FEINSTEIN. We are no longer on the February 15th letter?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes; right.

Mr. LASATER. Do we have a letter referring to that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. We do, indeed, December 14, 1983, in your package. We will put it up and I won't insist that we go through the entire letter. I just want to direct your attention to two elements of the letter. One is the last paragraph on the first page, and the next is the first paragraph on the second page.

Mr. LASATER. What paragraphs again?

Mr. CHERTOFF. The last paragraph on the first page.

Mr. LASATER. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is signed by you; right? Do you see your signature on the second page?

Mr. LASATER. It's signed by me, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says,

Faced with that reality, we hope that you will be able to take the initiative in strongly suggesting that Lasater & Company may be included with First Boston and Stephens, Inc. as a third co-manager. This would mean that a majority of the business would stay in Arkansas.

And then it continues to the next page.

With regard to the Board of the Arkansas Housing and Development Agency, it is our understanding that the chairmanship rotates annually. Based on this understanding, we would like to recommend our mutual friend, George Wright, for the chairmanship.

Does that refresh your memory about your recommendation of George Wright for initial appointment to the Agency and then for reappointment to the Agency?

Mr. LASATER. I think I testified that I recommended him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you wrote this letter and, of course, it was up to the regulator, Ms. Garner, to make the final decision. But did you know that the Governor, in fact, intervened and put in a good word, shall we say, with Ms. Garner? Did you know that?

Mr. LASATER. No, I don't think I know that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, at the top there in the Governor's writing, this is directed to somebody and it says, "Keep after Garner until you talk to her. We must give him follow up."

Mr. FEINSTEIN. That's the handwriting on the top of this?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, that's right. That's the handwriting the Governor put on your letter.

Mr. LASATER. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he tell you that the Governor was following up on your request, that he was responding by saying, "Keep after the regulator"?

Mr. LASATER. No. I was not told that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't know that?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't pursue it with him?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You saw Governor Clinton on a number of occasions, didn't you, on a social basis?

Mr. LASATER. I saw him on a few occasions on a social basis, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I know I am not going to have time to cover it all in this round, but I will begin at the beginning. After the 1980 election in which Mr. Clinton was turned out of office by Governor White, you had a sit-down with him; right? You met with him?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And tell us about——

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall that meeting. But I have been told by people that I have confidence in that that meeting happened. But I still don't recall it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he jog by your office?

Mr. LASATER. Jog by?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. Was he running and he came by your office?

Mr. LASATER. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me see if I can refresh your memory. Was Mr. Locke there, do you know——

Mr. LASATER. Yes, he was there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —at this meeting?

Mr. LASATER. He's the one that refreshed my memory on it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did he refresh your memory on this?

Mr. LASATER. In the last few months.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you all have been talking about this?

Mr. LASATER. Well, he's a friend of mine and I talk to him every week or so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. In his deposition at page 28, line 7:

Question: This was in 1980 after Frank White took office?

Answer: A day or two after the election, like in November. I mean, I figure Bill would be somewhere vacationing; he was running. I was shocked he wanted to have this meeting but he wanted to know what he did wrong, in taking advice more than anything else and trying to gather support.

So that's how it took place. The reason I remember it so well—it was late in the afternoon, like 5:00, something like that, we got together after work—was that after about an hour, Bill kept—he was concerned he had to call Hillary and tell her he would be right on home; every 15 minutes he would say, "I will be right on home." That was about the most notable thing about the meeting.

Then, it goes on a couple of lines later.

Question: Do you recall how long the meeting took?

Answer: I would say a couple of hours, like from 5 to 7.

Now do you remember the meeting?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know why he came to you and Mr. Locke?

Mr. LASATER. For political support.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But why? I mean, had you been big supporters of him back in the late 1970's?

Mr. LASATER. No, but he had been defeated and he was looking for additional support.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you agreed to give him some support; right?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall if we agreed at that time to support him or not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, during that 2-hour period, what did you all talk about?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall the meeting, as I've mentioned to you. But I don't dispute the meeting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think my time is up.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Lasater, you regard what you did with respect to the cocaine as wrong, don't you?

Mr. LASATER. I certainly do.

Senator SARBANES. In fact, you pled guilty to charges, didn't you, because of it?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. And went to jail?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. For how long?

Mr. LASATER. I was in actual prison for 6 months. I was in a halfway house for 4 months and under house arrest for 2 months.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chertoff went at you very hard about the distinction between giving away drugs and selling drugs. But you don't, for a moment, contend that giving away drugs isn't wrong, do you?

Mr. LASATER. No, I certainly do not. I know that it was wrong.

Senator SARBANES. OK. Now have you been drug free since then?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir, I have.

Senator SARBANES. I'm just curious, because it's a problem in our society. How were you able to do that? How were you able to break off the drug habit?

Mr. LASATER. The only way that I could do it was through the power of Jesus Christ and accepting him into my life.

Senator SARBANES. Was that a development that took place in prison or subsequent to prison?

Mr. LASATER. In prison.

Senator SARBANES. In prison? Through counseling by the prison authorities?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir. It was through a personal relationship.

Senator SARBANES. OK. I yield to Mr. Kravitz.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Thank you, Senator Sarbanes.

Good morning, Mr. Lasater.

Mr. LASATER. Good morning.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Good morning, Mr. Drake.

Mr. DRAKE. Good morning.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Lasater, I know this is difficult for you this morning. There have been a lot of harsh allegations and tough questioning about some subjects that I'm sure you would prefer not to talk about. What I would like to do is ask you some questions about what our Resolution directly authorizes this Committee to investigate; and, that is the bond underwriting contracts between Lasater & Company and the Arkansas Development Finance Authority. And I would like to start by putting up on the screen a document marked DKS N 26102.

I don't know whether you have a copy of that in your packet. If not, I think one will be brought down to you. Actually, if one could be given to Mr. Drake as well.

My understanding is that this is a document that was prepared by the Arkansas Development Finance Authority during the 1992 Presidential Campaign summarizing the awards of bond underwriting contracts by the Arkansas Housing Development Authority and the Arkansas Development Finance Authority between 1978 and 1991.

Mr. Drake, let me start by asking you a question, just going back a little bit for a little history. Before 1983, is it correct that the State bond business was limited to a very small number of firms in Arkansas?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes, that's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. How small was that number?

Mr. DRAKE. Two.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Which were the two firms?

Mr. DRAKE. Stephens, Inc., which is where I was employed at the time; and T.J. Raney and Sons.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Who was the Governor of the State of Arkansas in 1981 and 1982?

Mr. DRAKE. Frank White.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Was he a Democrat or a Republican?

Mr. DRAKE. He was Republican.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Was Stephens, Inc., where you were employed at the time, known to be a supporter of Governor White?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. KRAVITZ. And Stephens did receive a large percentage of the State bond business during Governor White's term?

Mr. DRAKE. We received a lot and we tried to get as much more as we could.

Mr. KRAVITZ. When Governor Clinton came back into office in January 1983, did you become aware that he had a different policy than Governor White had had and specifically that the new policy would be to involve as many Arkansas bond firms as possible or, at least, as were qualified in the bond underwriting process so as to increase competition in the bond underwriting process and to bring in new ideas for the State in raising money?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes, that's the case.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Lasater, are you familiar with this new policy or change in policy that came in with Governor Clinton in 1983?

Mr. LASATER. I am.

Mr. KRAVITZ. By the way, before 1983, was Lasater & Company or was Collins, Locke & Lasater one of the very small number of firms who were allowed to share in the State bond business?

Mr. DRAKE. My recollection is that prior to 1983, while I was at Stephens, we did our best to keep everybody out of the deals that we could keep out of the deals, to keep most of the fees, of course, in our end of the arena. When Bill Clinton was re-elected, his policy was to make the pie larger instead of the various pieces larger. The idea was to, in a typical capitalistic approach, the more competition we have, the better ideas we have, the better the ideas, the better the performance, et cetera. And it worked.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Well, that was actually my next question. If I could direct your attention to this document that's up on the screen, how many firms are listed as recipients of State bond business from the Housing Development Authority in the 1981/82 period, Mr. Drake?

Mr. DRAKE. Three.

Mr. KRAVITZ. And those are?

Mr. DRAKE. T.J. Raney, Stephens, Inc., and George, which is short for George K. Baum, I'm reasonably sure.

Mr. KRAVITZ. In the 1983/84 period, how many firms are listed?

Mr. DRAKE. Eleven.

Mr. KRAVITZ. So that would be consistent with your memory of the implementation of Governor Clinton's new policy to involve a greater number of qualified Arkansas bond firms in State bond underwriting business?

Mr. DRAKE. That's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Lasater, you testified earlier that, in your view, your company did not get any more than its fair share of the State's bond business once this broadening of opportunity began in 1983. And I wonder if you, now having had a chance to review this document that's up on the screen which shows exactly how much bond business your companies received in the 1983/84 time period, that refreshes your memory or actually corroborates your memory in any way?

Mr. LASATER. It just verifies it, yes.

Mr. KRAVITZ. What is it about this document that, in your view, verifies your testimony?

Mr. LASATER. Basically there were only three firms in 1981 and 1982; there were 11 in 1983 and 1984; and in 1985 to 1991, there has been 26.

Mr. KRAVITZ. According to this document, the two firms which each received the largest amount of business in the 1983/84 period were George Baum and T.J. Raney; is that correct?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Each receiving $327,500,000 worth of bonds to sell; is that correct?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. And just so we are clear, that's not the amount of money that either of those firms earned; that was the value of the bonds that they were to sell?

Mr. LASATER. That's money they raised, yes.

Mr. DRAKE. May I interrupt and just make a statement about this? Those are deals that they participated in, not that they solely were responsible for selling. And there's a lot of—

Mr. KRAVITZ. I think that's an important point.

Mr. DRAKE. It's a very important point.

Mr. KRAVITZ. And then Stephens, Inc. is third on the list at $251 million; is that correct?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. DRAKE. Lasater at the same level, just after Stephens, Inc., $251 million?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Then also further down the list, Collins, which presumably refers to Collins, Locke & Lasater, at $76 million?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Now, my math shows me that the total for Lasater & Company, $251 million, plus Collins, Locke & Lasater, $76 million, actually equals exactly the same that George Baum and T.J. Raney—exactly the same value of the bond offerings that those two firms were involved in during that 2-year period, $327 million; is that correct?

Mr. LASATER. In the 1983/84 period, there were two different firms. Initially, it was Collins, Locke & Lasater. That firm was separated and Collins went his way and I went my way. He had his own firm that participated and I had my firm that participated.

Mr. KRAVITZ. So in fact, we really shouldn't add those two figures together?

Mr. LASATER. Not in my opinion, no.

Mr. KRAVITZ. In your opinion, your firm received less business in the 1983/84 period than George Baum and T.J. Raney?

Mr. LASATER. Right. We did a small percentage of this business, too, because our customer base was mostly national. We did not have a big Arkansas customer base. So we did not sell a lot of these bonds.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Now just—

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Drake, I want to make sure I understand your point. Was your point that these figures are the total amount of the bond issues in which these various companies participated; is that correct?

Mr. DRAKE. That's correct, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. But the allocation to the particular company would be relevant in determining how much the company itself was getting; is that correct?

Mr. DRAKE. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. So for instance, if Lasater participated with Stephens or with T.J., you would have to figure out how much each got; is that correct?

Mr. DRAKE. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Now it's my understanding, I think, from reading through some of the material that one of your complaints, Mr. Lasater, was you were getting lesser percentages, as a rule, than some of the others; is that correct?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. OK.

Mr. KRAVITZ. And just to close the loop on this one document and the subject of a fair division among the various firms in Arkansas during the Clinton administrations, did Stephens, Inc. continue to receive State bond business even after Governor Clinton got back into the Governor's office in 1983?

Mr. LASATER. He did.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Was that even though it was well known that the Stephens firm had supported Frank White for re-election in 1982?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Indeed, Mr. Drake, do you know where Governor White went to work after he left the Governor's office in January of—

Mr. DRAKE. He went to work at Stephens, Inc. as head of the Municipal Finance Department.

Mr. KRAVITZ. And that was in January 1983?

Mr. DRAKE. It was in 1983. I can't tell you exactly when it was.

Mr. KRAVITZ. It was January 1983, when he left office?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes. He took his Administrative Assistant, Preston Bynum with him, as well. I might point out that Linda Garner, when she left the administration, went to work at Stephens, Inc.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Drake, Mr. Chertoff asked several questions earlier about various letters of recommendation that Mr. Lasater signed recommending that the Governor appoint various persons to the Housing Development Authority Board or the Arkansas Development Finance Authority Board later. I want to ask you: While you were at Stephens, Inc., did anyone in that firm ever make recommendations to anyone in the Governor's office as to persons that Stephens wished to have appointed to State Boards?

Mr. DRAKE. Routinely.

Mr. KRAVITZ. What Board or Boards did officials from Stephens, Inc. make recommendations relating to?

Mr. DRAKE. Boards that had vacancies.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Did it include the Housing Development Authority Board?

Mr. DRAKE. It most assuredly did.

Mr. KRAVITZ. And to your knowledge, did Stephens subsequently make recommendations to the Governor's office relating to appointments to the Arkansas Development Finance Authority Board?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. KRAVITZ. You said, "routinely." Is it your understanding that many of these firms, including Lasater and Stephens, routinely made recommendations to the Governor's office for appointments?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes. May I elaborate on that just for a moment?

Mr. KRAVITZ. Please.

Mr. DRAKE. At the three investment firms that I have professional experience, the firms are divided typically into corporate finance or public finance. And the professionals in the public finance department that were responsible for dealing with issuers of securities such as ADFA or AHDA at the time would routinely report to the president of the firm on appointments that were coming up or rotating officers of Boards and Commissions.

Our responsibility to the firm, as individuals who were assigned to those Boards and Commissions, was to make sure that our firm's interests were represented to the persons in the government that were making the appointments. It was very routine. That's what we did with Dan. That's what we did with Jack Stephens. And during my short tenure at Morgan, Keegan, that's what we did with Allen Morgan.

Mr. KRAVITZ. So this Committee's record should be very clear that there was nothing unique about the fact that Mr. Lasater wrote such letters; is that correct?

Mr. DRAKE. I would like to point out that Mr. Lasater did not write these letters. I did.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Fair enough. There's nothing unique about the fact that he signed the letters and that they were sent over——

Mr. DRAKE. Well, he was the President, he owned the firm. And I would expect that the owner would sign those letters.

Mr. KRAVITZ. To your knowledge, was every single recommendation that the Lasater firm made to the Governor's office relating to a position on the Housing Development Authority or the ADFA Board followed by the Governor?

Mr. DRAKE. No.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Were some of those recommendations not followed?

Mr. DRAKE. Some of them were not followed.

Mr. KRAVITZ. If we could put on the Elmo DKS 26484, which is a memo from Bob Nash to Governor Clinton and Betsey Wright, dated May 2, 1985? Do you know if you have that?

Mr. FEINSTEIN. I don't believe we have that one.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Lasater, Mr. Chertoff asked you earlier about a recommendation that you made for the ADFA Board to Governor Clinton regarding a man named Jim Tom Bell.

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Do you remember making that recommendation?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. All right. I think we have the document down at the table now. Do you have a copy, Mr. Lasater?

Mr. LASATER. I can see the monitor.

Mr. KRAVITZ. OK. As we can see, we have had testimony about this document previously from other witnesses. Mr. Nash writes to Governor Clinton and Betsey Wright on May 2, 1985: "Dan Lasater gave me Tom's letter when I met with him on Wednesday for lunch. Bell is not my kind of person. Has always caused the Agency (AHDA) problems." To your understanding, Mr. Lasater, was Mr. Bell appointed to the ADFA Board?

Mr. LASATER. He was not.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Drake, do you know whether Mr. Bell was appointed to the ADFA Board?

Mr. DRAKE. He was not, and I did everything I could to make sure he wasn't.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Just so we are clear, I think this certainly is consistent with the testimony of Mr. Drake, that not all of the recommendations that Mr. Lasater made were followed by the Governor. I take it from your testimony, Mr. Drake, that there were other recommendations in addition to this recommendation relating to Mr. Bell that were not followed by the Governor's office. Is that correct?

Mr. DRAKE. That's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. So the notion that somehow because of political contributions or a friendship between Mr. Lasater and Governor Clinton, Mr. Lasater was permitted to, as it were, write the list of Board members for the ADFA Board and for the Housing Development Authority Board. Is that consistent with the facts or with reality, Mr. Drake?

Mr. DRAKE. No.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Lasater.

Mr. LASATER. I'm sorry, I didn't understand the question.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Were you given free reign to name all of the members of the ADFA Board?

Mr. LASATER. Certainly not.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Chertoff asked you, Mr. Lasater, several questions about a meeting that you had with Governor Clinton and Betsey Wright at some point, presumably in early 1985. Let me ask you, Mr. Drake, in your experience, working both at Lasater & Company and at other firms, was it at all unusual for officials of bond underwriting companies to pitch their own business with State officials?

Mr. DRAKE. No. It was the norm, not the exception.

Mr. KRAVITZ. When you were at Stephens, Inc., did people from your company meet with members of the Governor's office to seek additional business?

Mr. DRAKE. Routinely.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Did the same thing happen when you were at Morgan, Keegan?

Mr. DRAKE. Routinely.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Lasater, as you recall, Mr. Chertoff asked you some questions about a letter from you to Governor Clinton, dated February 15, 1985.

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. That was DKSJ 27573 and 74, in which you suggested to Governor Clinton, or at least the letter that you signed suggested to Governor Clinton, a number of things, including that you would like advance notice of upcoming bond offerings or upcoming development matters in the State, and also if possible, you would like to have regular meetings with the Governor. Let me just ask you: Did you ever, after writing this letter, have regular meetings with Governor Clinton?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Did you start receiving heads-up regarding development issues that were about to come up in the State of Arkansas as a result of this letter?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Who wrote the letter; do you know?

Mr. LASATER. I think Michael wrote it. I'm not sure.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Is that correct, Mr. Drake?

Mr. LASATER. Or, it could have been Rick Knox.

Mr. DRAKE. Well, I wrote the letter. In my deposition, I stated that I didn't. I now recall that I did. It was a letter that was a compilation of recommendations from staff that I then took to Dan for signature.

Mr. KRAVITZ. And as far as you are aware, Mr. Drake, the recommendations or the suggestions to the Governor's office were not followed?

Mr. DRAKE. They weren't followed as long as I was employed by Dan. I would have been very surprised if they had been followed.

Mr. KRAVITZ. OK. And I should say that another document in the Committee's possession, DKS~~N~~ 27572, again a document that we have received testimony on, indicates that Betsey Wright, upon receipt of the letter, wrote, "outrageous" on it. Then Governor Clinton wrote, "Not the time to go this far." To paraphrase, Ms. Wright's testimony about Mr. Clinton's note, she said it was his polite manner of saying no, we were not going to be giving heads-up to one firm and we were not going to be having regular meetings with that firm.

Mr. Lasater, I wanted to ask you a few more questions about the meeting that you had with Governor Clinton and Betsey Wright at the Governor's—

Mr. LASATER. Excuse me. But that was just Governor Clinton. I don't recall Betsey Wright being there.

Mr. KRAVITZ. I apologize. That was the meeting at the Governor's office?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. What was Governor Clinton's response when you suggested to him that you thought your company should receive a larger share of the State's bond business?

Mr. LASATER. Cordial, non-committal.

Mr. KRAVITZ. After that meeting, did you receive any increase? Did your company receive any increase in its share of the State's bond business?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Chertoff asked you several questions about what he alleged were failures on your part to disclose certain information to Governor Clinton during that meeting. And I want to show you another document that Mr. Chertoff did not show you. I may be wrong about that, he may have. I just wanted to show you this document, because it may assist the Committee in clearing up any misperceptions that were created by the earlier questioning. The document I'm referring to is DKS~~N~~ 26479, which is a January 23, 1985 letter, signed by you to the Honorable Bill Clinton, Governor. Do you have that in front of you, sir?

Mr. LASATER. I do.

Mr. KRAVITZ. The first line of this letter says: "Since our January 4, 1985 meeting," and then it goes on. Now, you've already testified that you only remember one such meeting with Governor Clinton. Does this refresh your memory as to when this meeting occurred?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, that had to be the meeting.

Mr. KRAVITZ. So after seeing this letter, your memory is that the one meeting you were testifying about with Governor Clinton most likely occurred on January 4, 1985?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Chertoff asked you whether during your meeting with Governor Clinton you informed the Governor that you had made a loan to the Governor's brother, Roger. Do you remember those questions?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I do.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Now, correct me if I'm wrong, but my understanding is that the loan that you made to Roger Clinton was in February 1985; is that correct?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Do you remember whether it was before or after January 4, 1985?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir, I don't.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Chertoff also asked you whether you, in your meeting with Governor Clinton, told the Governor about the statements of the Federal Bankruptcy Court Judge relating to your testimony. The article that Mr. Chertoff showed you was undated, as far as we know, but it says January 1985. And 1985, it certainly seems like it's more likely than not that it was after January 4, 1985, that the Bankruptcy Court Judge said whatever he said. So I think that may put it into context as to why you may not have told Governor Clinton about that. Is that fair to say?

Mr. LASATER. That's fair to say.

Mr. KRAVITZ. OK, Mr. Cole.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Drake, if I could ask you to return for a moment to the February 15, 1985 letter that Mr. Kravitz asked you about previously, perhaps we could put that up on the display.

There has been some attention during these hearings focused on the third paragraph of that letter where it says, "To begin, let me suggest that Lasater & Company be advised of all financing proposals affecting the State of Arkansas." And I must confess, to me, that does seem to be something of an unusual request. Can you tell me what prompted you to include that request in your letter? I understand you drafted this letter for Mr. Lasater's signature; is that correct?

Mr. DRAKE. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Can you enlighten the Committee as to why you might have included this request in the letter?

Mr. DRAKE. Sure. Late 1984 and 1985 was the period of time that Governor Clinton introduced his economic development initiative in the Arkansas Legislature, effectively converting the Arkansas Housing Development Agency which was a very narrow—had very narrow authority to issue securities into the Arkansas Development Finance Authority, which had broad issuance authority.

Mr. COLE. If I could interrupt you on that point for one moment, the distinction being important because the Housing Authority could issue bonds to finance only certain kinds of activities. And I take it the Governor's legislative program was for a broader range of economic development in the State, so you needed broader—

Mr. DRAKE. That's right.

Mr. COLE. —legislative authority?

Mr. DRAKE. That's right. Just to elaborate on that point a little bit, AHDA was permitted to issue two types of securities—multi-family housing securities or single-family housing securities.

In 1984, the Governor and Bob Nash, specifically, and Betsey Wright, and others in the administration and many outside of the administration, including a very bright lawyer named Jack Williams at Williams & Anderson in Little Rock, began a national search to determine the best possible legislation that could be introduced in the Arkansas Legislature that would enable the State to compete in: (a) soliciting plant relocation into the State of Arkansas; (b) assist in financing plant, property, equipment, et cetera; and, (c) basically to launch the State into the 1990's and into the next century.

Mr. COLE. So this was an effort to bring industry into the State and——

Mr. DRAKE. Among others.

Mr. COLE. —spur economic development?

Mr. DRAKE. And we felt we had been shut out of that process. We weren't solicited.

Mr. COLE. "We," being Lasater & Company?

Mr. DRAKE. Our firm, yes.

Mr. COLE. You felt you had not been consulted as much?

Mr. DRAKE. That was the conclusion we reached.

Mr. COLE. Was that a problem? Did you feel that put you at a disadvantage in comparison to the firms that had participated more directly in that procedure?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes, it did.

Mr. COLE. And that's what prompted you to include the language in this letter?

Mr. DRAKE. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. So if I understand your testimony, what you intended with this letter was not to ask that your firm be given any kind of special treatment but rather that your firm be given the same consideration that other investment advisers and finance firms were in the State.

Mr. DRAKE. There were two purposes for the letter: No. 1, to request access; and, No. 2, to suggest that the other firms that were provided with access not be permitted to have access. I mean, it's one thing to get the business. It's quite another to knock somebody else out of getting the business.

Mr. COLE. I understand. Well, I would like to cover some other matters that occurred in 1985 with you, but I see the yellow light is on. So I certainly will defer to the Majority and will come back.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bennett.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR ROBERT F. BENNETT

Senator BENNETT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I apologize that I was not able to be here earlier because of other committee meetings simultaneously. So if I go over some ground that has already been covered, I apologize for that.

Mr. Lasater, I have read your statement with interest. I was here yesterday when you were discussed. I trust you were paying some attention.

Mr. LASATER. No, I was traveling yesterday.

Senator BENNETT. You were traveling yesterday? I'm sure it will come as no surprise to you that a good part of the conversation about you yesterday centered around your unfortunate experience with cocaine. And you talk about that very frankly in your opening statement.

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Senator BENNETT. It is unfortunate in terms of your personal circumstances that you and your family can't put this behind you. I've had the personal experience of being tied to people who have public office and having the spotlight that is on them then to a degree that I did not find comfortable shift to me. It's the way we live in a free press kind of society and there is little or nothing we can do about it.

But I would like to just get a better handle on understanding what went on. I accept at full face value your statement that you've put this behind you and this is no longer a problem in your life. And I salute you and congratulate you for that.

Mr. LASATER. Thank you, Senator.

Senator BENNETT. The comments that came out yesterday indicated that while you did not sell cocaine for money that you nonetheless used it as a tool in your business activities and in your personal pursuits, so that it became almost as if it were a form of currency for you and you could use cocaine to get people to do things that you wanted them to do, you would reward people for things that they had done for you by giving them cocaine. It became, as I say, a form of currency. Is that a fair description of the way it was used?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Senator BENNETT. Would you want to give me your version, then, to try to make the record clear, because that's the clear impression we got yesterday?

Mr. LASATER. I certainly do not recall ever using cocaine as a reward for anyone in our company that had achievements.

Senator BENNETT. So the distribution to your employees was entirely for recreational uses and not in any attempt to try to manipulate their behavior?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Senator BENNETT. Mr. Drake, I have read your memo. Would you agree with that characterization?

Mr. DRAKE. Well, Senator, I am not going to dispute Dan's motives. As someone who had an abuse problem at the time, it was my impression at the time that that's a good way of explaining my abuse problem is to blame it on someone else.

Senator BENNETT. I would refer specifically to a sentence in your "Memo to File, dated October 14, 1986." I'm quoting and correct me if I'm not quoting accurately at any point: "It became obvious to him," that is, to you, "that Dan Lasater was using cocaine as a tool to manipulate his peers and force them to serve as a buffer between the authorities and his cocaine abuse."

Mr. DRAKE. Well, I would point out—

Senator BENNETT. Do you want to alter that now? That is the statement.

Mr. DRAKE. That's not my statement, Senator. That's the statement of a State Police investigator. That's his impression of what I told him.

Senator BENNETT. I see. Do you want to elaborate on that?

Mr. DRAKE. I would say, as I said earlier, that I think this statement was—the impression that this man had was that I was explaining away my substance abuse by blaming it on Dan. It wasn't Dan's responsibility for what I was doing. It was my own. And at the time, there was a lot of denial. I think that anybody who has had an abuse problem would admit that that's part of the recovery process. So you would have to ask Doc DeLaughter whether or not this was an accurate statement. He wrote it. I didn't write it.

Senator BENNETT. He lists a number of people, quoting you, that were used in the manner described in the first sentence, and then this sentence: "Lasater also considered these people loyal to him because he used cocaine to control them for his benefit. Drake also noticed Dan Lasater using George Locke, Clarence Stromm, Jay Dehaven, and Chuck Berry to carry his cocaine for him." Do you want to give us an explanation of those sentences as well?

Mr. DRAKE. Well, I think that they speak for themselves. I mean, what would you like me to elaborate on?

Senator BENNETT. They paint a somewhat different picture than the picture you gave us in response to the first question I quoted. And I wonder if you want to try to change that picture as well; or, do you think in this case the picture—

Mr. DRAKE. I would say that was my impression.

Senator BENNETT. —they paint is accurate?

Mr. DRAKE. I would say that was my impression at the time.

Senator BENNETT. I see. OK. Well, I won't pursue this further. But this was one of the major concerns we talked about yesterday with respect to the reputation of the firm as it was competing for the business. It was brought out that there were people who voted against giving the firm the radio contract. And the reason, we were told, why they voted against the firm was because they were concerned about the reputation of E.F. Hutton, E.F. Hutton having had some very negative national publicity because of a check kiting scheme in which a number of E.F. Hutton executives lost their jobs. I think some of them went to prison. I am not sure on that latter case. I know there was significant penalty connected with the E.F. Hutton activity.

The question was raised: You were concerned about E.F. Hutton's reputation, did anybody discuss Mr. Lasater's reputation? The answer, as I recall it, Mr. Chairman, was yes, there was a discussion in open meeting of the degree of cocaine use that went on in the Lasater firm; and that's why I'm pursuing it.

Frankly, I was a little surprised that people would say, "We are not going to give this contract because we don't want to be tainted with a connection to E.F. Hutton;" but nobody was particularly interested about being tainted with a connection to Mr. Lasater and apparently fairly widespread recognition of the cocaine circumstance. That's why I'm trying to find out how widespread was the understanding in Arkansas of the fact that in the Lasater firm cocaine use was the common practice throughout the firm.

Mr. Drake, you looked as if you wanted to respond to that?

Mr. DRAKE. I would like to—

Senator SARBANES. Senator Bennett, before he responds, in fairness to E.F. Hutton, since you just made the statement, it is my understanding that no individuals were charged in the Hutton case and that nobody went to jail.

Senator BENNETT. I appreciate the correction.

Senator SARBANES. I mean, it was just out there on the record.

Senator BENNETT. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. I think it's important.

Senator BENNETT. It was my memory to the contrary, but I am glad to be corrected.

Mr. DRAKE. I think, Senator, the principal difference between the situation at Lasater and the situation with Hutton is that Hutton's indictments were public. Hutton had admitted to check kiting. They had been or were in the process of being sanctioned by the SEC and/or the NASD at the time. To my knowledge, there were no indictments or public accusations either in the media or by law enforcement officials when we solicited the business in the Arkansas State Police Commission.

Senator BENNETT. It is my memory from yesterday's testimony that it was discussed in open meeting.

Mr. DRAKE. I wasn't present at that discussion.

Senator BENNETT. Well, I can understand that. Do you have any knowledge, Mr. Lasater, of whether, indeed, it was discussed in an open meeting of the Commission?

Mr. LASATER. No, I would have no knowledge of that.

Senator BENNETT. Mr. Lasater, you've made a great point in your opening statement about your relationship with Bill Clinton and the fact that the relationship was correct in all aspects.

You make the point with which I fully agree, that certainly no Member of this Committee can complain if a citizen decides to give him or her a campaign contribution. To a degree that none of us particularly like, we are almost in the business of soliciting those on a fairly regular basis. Can you give me an indication of how large your campaign contributions to Bill Clinton were?

Mr. LASATER. The best I recall, in the 1984 campaign, I contributed—me and my family contributed $8,000.

Senator BENNETT. Eight thousand dollars and was this a check, cash, money order?

Mr. LASATER. Checks.

Senator BENNETT. Checks? Did you ever give him any cash; do you know?

Mr. LASATER. No, I did not ever give him any cash.

Senator BENNETT. I see. What are the disclosure laws in Arkansas? Are you required to disclose these amounts?

Mr. LASATER. I think so. Whatever the national laws are, I think is what the Arkansas laws are.

Senator BENNETT. Well, this is a Gubernatorial race, not a national race.

Mr. LASATER. OK. I don't know. I don't know.

Senator BENNETT. Is there any restriction on corporate funds in a Gubernatorial race in Arkansas; do you know?

Mr. LASATER. I don't know.

Senator BENNETT. Were these corporate funds or private funds?

Mr. LASATER. They were private funds, the $8,000. Besides that, one of my companies, and it could have been Lasater & Company, purchased some—it was a fundraiser dinner and I think we purchased some tickets to that.

Senator BENNETT. I see. Thank you. My time has expired.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I just want to try to clarify one thing that Senator Bennett made reference to. He said, when he was questioning Mr. Drake, this was discussed in an open meeting. Is that the Hutton problem that you are making reference to?

Senator BENNETT. My memory of the testimony yesterday, when it was raised by Counsel for the Minority, that there had been votes against the granting of the contract to the Lasater, Hutton, Raney group, and that the reason the votes against were cast was the Hutton concern.

Senator SARBANES. Right.

Senator BENNETT. Then the question, was there any discussion of Lasater? The answer, yes, there was some discussion of Lasater. At one point, and I've forgotten which witness said he discussed it with the Chairman of the Commission and that it was discussed in a meeting of the Commission. Now, I guess I'm reaching when I say an open meeting, because I assume that all the meetings were open. But that was my memory of the testimony yesterday.

I'm sorry, Mr. Drake?

Mr. DRAKE. Well, I have the State Police Commission Minutes here from the—that are in the public domain and the Minutes reflect that there were two votes. Two Commissioners voted against our proposal—Gene Raff and a gentleman named Nashburne.

I personally talked to Gene, lobbied him to vote for us. And he told me he couldn't, because he was married to Jack Stephens' administrative assistant's sister and he would be run out of Arkansas if he voted for us.

I can't tell you why Mr. Nashburne voted against us. I was at this meeting. There was no discussion of drug use. There was a discussion of——

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Drake, we have a memorandum where the question was raised about the Lasater firm and street talk being used. Certainly, you know, I find it interesting it was street talk about Lasater low bidding, et cetera.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER J. DODD

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, could we see that memo? Was there a memo?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, there was a memo about the street talk and the Lasater firm low bidding. I find it interesting that you seem to know what was or wasn't discussed with some of these members.

Now, obviously, if you had a discussion with a particular member, that's very relevant. But we had testimony in which the head of the police was asked to do a background check and to look into the question of whether there were any problems with Lasater. And we can read into the record explicitly what was said with respect to that.

There were questions about the newspaper accounts as it related to the question of drugs. But you know, obviously there was some concern and the Commissioner or the head of the police looked into the matter. He said he didn't come up with anything. But he was asked to look into it.

I think that's what the Senator was referring to.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, I just—because the implication here is that the memo—and somehow I got——

The CHAIRMAN. No. The memo was——

Senator DODD. There was no reference.

The CHAIRMAN. The memo was as it reflected to street talk that Dan Lasater was low balling the bid.

Senator DODD. Well, that's not drugs.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand. There was other testimony yesterday, Senator, and there was a question raised to the head of the State Police to check to see if there was any problem with——

Senator DODD. Yes, and there the answer was no. The answer from the State Police.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, it shows you there wasn't a very good investigation.

[Laughter.]

Senator DODD. That's not the issue.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I mean—

Senator DODD. The issue is whether or not anyone knew. I mean, here you go and you ask the State Police, is there a problem. Someone might have said it shouldn't have gone that far. And the answer back is no.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, you know, there was a Federal trial. It was talked about in the press. The drug use was talked about, et cetera. I find it rather interesting that when they have a report and the Chief says, "Oh, no, there was nothing," but yet a year later we find out it was followed by an indictment—

Senator DODD. Well, Mr. Chairman, in fairness, they went and asked the question of the State Police. The State Police says no. A year later, something else happens. In fairness to the people, you cannot then assert that they somehow knew. They went out of their way. They asked the question. The answer was no. And in this memo here, there is no reference. Street talk about low balling a bid is not about drugs.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me tell you something. In January or February of that particular year, it's the State's second largest newspaper. There is public testimony given with respect to Dan Lasater, an Arkansas native, who owns a race horse farm and who once gave young Clinton $8,000 to help settle drug debts, also used cocaine.

Senator DODD. All right. Mr. Chairman, you seize the story—

The CHAIRMAN. No, let me tell you something. It was a heck of a great police investigation—

Senator DODD. Well, wait a minute.

The CHAIRMAN. —that must have gone on.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, in fairness, the story appears. The Governor then contacts the State Police and says, "Is there a problem?" The State Police say, "No." Now, if anyone of us sitting at this table here went to that extent, no one would then question whether or not you hadn't gone and asked the question. I mean, that's in fairness, just simple fairness.

The story appears in the press. How many stories appear about us in the press? Huh? How many stories have we had written about us? And then how many people then went to the State Police and asked the question, "Would you look into this and give me an answer?" I mean—

The CHAIRMAN. I don't see why the Senator is so upset. The record speaks for itself.

Senator DODD. Well, of course, it does.

The CHAIRMAN. The question, as it relates to whether there was a question of drugs and the propriety of awarding the contract was raised. Was it raised in exact context as it relates to official meetings? It was raised to the point that apparently the Governor or someone on behalf of the Governor contacted the head of the police to check this out.

Now one of the interesting things is that when we asked the Commissioner of Police or the former head of the State Police, he didn't even recall this trial, which was publicly commented on, as it related to the allegations of drug use, which were testified to. So obviously there were people and there were news accounts about this, later substantiated. I don't see the big fuss. I mean, the Senator raised the question and I don't understand what the point is.

Senator DODD. The point is that there is an allegation. There is an implication.

The CHAIRMAN. What's the implication?

Senator DODD. That the Governor or others were aware that there was drug use and that there is testimony——

The CHAIRMAN. Well, if the Governor didn't read that his brother had gotten $8,000 from Dan Lasater and wasn't aware of that when that appeared in one of the State's largest newspapers, I would eat my hat. Now that's nonsense, let's not kid ourselves.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I think we ought to be very careful——

Senator DODD. Very, very careful.

Senator SARBANES. —about what actions ought to be taken on the basis——

The CHAIRMAN. Well, who said what actions should be taken?

Senator SARBANES. —of allegations——

The CHAIRMAN. I didn't say that any action should be taken. I'm just suggesting that——

Senator SARBANES. Well, on the basis of allegations about one's brother.

The CHAIRMAN. Wait. It is absolutely not conceivable that the administration was not aware.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, the Governor asked the State Police——

The CHAIRMAN. Let me read the deposition of Thomas L. Goodwin, who was the head of the State Police at that time. He says, "Governor Clinton, myself, and a lot of other people knew that Dan Lasater was a user of cocaine." That's on page 31 of his testimony that he has given to this Committee in deposition on February 26, 1996.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Now, the whole question is whether or not——

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, if you talk about hearsay, here's a witness saying, "I knew and everybody else knew." The Governor asked the State Police whether or not there was an investigation.

The CHAIRMAN. No, here's the question.

Senator DODD. That was an appropriate and proper step for him to take.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm not suggesting it wasn't.

Senator DODD. The answer comes back no.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, here on page 31:

Question: In any of the conversations that you had with Governor Clinton with regard to the financing of the systems, did he ever mention that Lasater & Company had an interest in doing the underwriting for the system?

Answer: Yes.

I'm reading from page 31, 2/26/96, the deposition of Thomas L. Goodwin, who was the State Police Commissioner at this time. Is that right, Mr. Drake?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You had talked to him and he said, "When did he mention that? I remember at least one of those meetings was after the legislation had passed." That's the legislation with respect to the bond. Now, you know, I didn't raise this——

Senator DODD. Well, Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. I didn't raise this. Now understand——

Senator DODD. Isn't page 57, though, the same testimony? Look at page 57, the same testimony.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, let me finish. "Governor Clinton, myself, and a lot of other people knew that Dan Lasater was a user of cocaine. The conversation with Governor Clinton to that effect was we sure don't want any firm involved in financing this that is about to be arrested for selling cocaine. I think he directed the statement to me in particular."

So I will read any other statement. But are we now going to say that no one knew that Mr. Lasater was involved in at least the use of drugs?

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, in fairness here. Obviously, we are trying—this is a very successful——

The CHAIRMAN. I did not bring this up, Senator. I mean, you opened the door by suggesting that somehow when Senator Bennett raised the question about——

Senator DODD. No.

The CHAIRMAN. —drug use that it was why and where and how did it appear. Here is the Police Commissioner——

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, can I be heard? I mean, the clock is running here.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, we will give you all the time you want.

Senator DODD. The implication is clear, look, this is a very titillating subject. But in fairness to people here, if you look on pages 31 and 35 of that same deposition of Mr. Goodwin:

Question: Those are concerns he expressed at the time?

Answer: Yes.

Question: How was the Lasater cocaine issue first brought up? In what context?

Answer: If I'm not mistaken, the Governor brought it up. I don't think I'm wrong there. I believe he brought it up.

It's the Governor and the rumors around, bring it up, saying, "Is there an investigation of Lasater?" The answer is no, there is not.

Now rumors fly all over the place all the time. And the suggestion somehow that on the basis of rumors that everyone should have been aware and reacted accordingly. The Governor does the appropriate and proper thing. He asks the proper authorities, "Is there an investigation?" Not is there a rumor, but is there an investigation. That is not something everybody does in public life. He did it. And I think that's worth noting here, Mr. Chairman, if you look back on its history.

The CHAIRMAN. You know what, Senator Dodd? If you had indicated that it is important to recognize that the Governor raised this, you wouldn't have heard a peep from me or from anybody else. But to suggest that there was no reason to even think about this——

Senator DODD. He did think about that.

The CHAIRMAN. So fine. You put it in a proper context. But the fact of the matter was that the State Police Commissioner says replete, from page 31 right through the end, that it was rumored, that it was talked about, that it was rather well known, if you read the end, he says it was well known in the Little Rock area.

Senator DODD. It's rumors.

The CHAIRMAN. Or at least it was pretty well talked about.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, you and I don't react on rumors.

The CHAIRMAN. Look, I understand what you are saying. I think you have made a lot more of this—and I don't understand why—than Senator Bennett ever even intended.

Senator BENNETT. I was unaware I was going to trigger this kind of an exchange.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, really, I don't understand this.

Senator BENNETT. If I may have the time to say, Mr. Chairman, yesterday we were told that the negative votes against this proposal came solely because of concern of E.F. Hutton and the reputation of E.F. Hutton. It seems to me a logical question, given this circumstance, was then asked: "Was there any concern about the reputation of Mr. Lasater?" The answer I got was that they were aware of the reputation Mr. Lasater had for drug use and drug use in his firm but, no, that didn't play any role in the decision to give the contract to Lasater. And it didn't play any role in the decision of the two people who voted against giving the contract to Mr. Lasater. They focused entirely on the reputation of E.F. Hutton.

And now, you've given us a different view, Mr. Drake, which does not surprise me. You've said the vote against giving the contract to Mr. Lasater was based on something entirely different and that you were close to the man that cast the vote and he cast the vote because of his relationship with the brother-in-law or whatever.

That happens all the time, that one person can say the vote turned on this issue and another person will say the vote turned on this issue. That happens in our body all the time. Why did Senator So and So vote against this? Well, I'm close to him. I think he did it because of this reason and somebody else says, "No, I think he did it for that reason." This does not concern me.

I was just interested in finding out whether or not concern about drug use in the Lasater firm had any impact on the decision to vote against the contract. So now we have had the exchange and I will step back and watch the sparks fly a little more.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm going to ask that another 5 minutes be put on the clock so that you can—

Senator SARBANES. I yield 5 minutes to Mr. Cole.

Mr. COLE. Thank you, Senator.

Mr. Drake, since we are on the subject of this police radio financing that took place in 1985, I take it that you had significant involvement in those events.

Mr. DRAKE. Yes, sir, I did.

Mr. COLE. You were the head of the public finance group at Lasater & Company at that time?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes, sir, I was.

Mr. COLE. Can you begin by telling us how your firm first became involved in that matter?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes, sir, I will. It is my recollection that in mid-1984—and it may have been in the spring or in the summer—I was approached by two gentlemen from T.J. Raney & Sons, Bob Snyder, who is Managing Director of the Public Finance Department, and a colleague of his, Paul Young, who is also employed at Raney, seeking our assistance in pursuing the creation of legislation that would enable a State Police radio system to be acquired by the Arkansas State Police. One, to structuring a transaction that would enable us to underwrite the securities; and, two, to participate in a transaction that involved E.F. Hutton as the national distributor of the securities.

It was my understanding at the time that Raney would “run the books,” which means they would manage the transaction from Arkansas; E.F. Hutton would be responsible for the leasing entity. We decided to use a lease approach because of a constitutional prohibition in Arkansas of issuing securities by a State Agency without a referendum. And E.F. Hutton at the time was the preeminent securities dealer in the United States in public finance.

Mr. COLE. If I could interrupt you just for a moment on the point you previously made about the use of the lease arrangement.

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. COLE. If I'm understanding you correctly, there would have been a problem with issuing the bonds for an outright purchase without a referendum vote. Is that what you are saying?

Mr. DRAKE. Bonds in Arkansas were constitutionally prohibited from being issued at that time by an Agency that did not have direct authorization to issue bonds without a vote of the people.

Mr. COLE. The State Police Commission did not have that authority at that time?

Mr. DRAKE. They did not.

Mr. COLE. So there was a problem—and we had a great deal of testimony about this yesterday—of a critical need for a new police radio system. A State Trooper had been killed, we were told, and there was a need to finance that. And your group developed a solution that would permit that to be done under the laws that existed at that time?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes. At the time, there had been much discussion. Keep in mind, the Legislature was not in session at that time in 1984. And there was much discussion about either a pay-as-you-go, which is typically a financing or an outright purchase, which would be an appropriation. A particular problem of municipal finance is that because of the biannual appropriation, there is no guarantee that one Legislature can bind a future Legislature to a contract.

Mr. COLE. And presumably, the supplier of the equipment, if they put in $30 million worth of equipment, they would want some assurance that they would be paid in the future if it was to be on a pay-as-you-go basis?

Mr. DRAKE. Right.

Mr. COLE. So that was a problem you—the State needed to solve?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes. The other approach would be an outright appropriation. The State didn't have the funds.

Mr. COLE. When you say an outright appropriation, you mean the State Legislature would have had to have taken whatever funds were needed, $30 million, taken that out of the State's general revenues so that money that otherwise would have gone to schools or other State highway construction would have been used that year to purchase the State Police radio facilities?

Mr. DRAKE. Someone would have to give up something in order for the State Police to be able to acquire this with cash, yes.

Mr. COLE. Did your group retain a law firm at that time to help you in preparing the legislation?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. COLE. A lot of attention was focused on that yesterday. And I have very little time left, but was that an unusual thing in your experience at the firms that you had been employed, to retain a law firm to draft legislation?

Mr. DRAKE. No. Heavens, no. I mean, this is very typical in all levels of my experience in government—at local, county, State. No experience here, but very typical for private interests to hire firms to advance legislation.

Mr. COLE. Was this a secret? Was there any effort made to cover this up or hide it from the State officials that the law firm was working with your group?

Mr. DRAKE. None at all.

Mr. COLE. So is it your recollection—and I realize this is 11 years ago—that people understood that the Mitchell, Williams firm was working with the Hutton/Raney/Lasater group?

Mr. DRAKE. I don't know if it was broadly known, but there was no effort to hide it. So you can draw your own conclusions from that.

Mr. COLE. We will come back. My time has expired.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Drake, I want to put up the chart that the Democratic side had put up about half an hour ago, DKS 26102, which is the listing of the bond issues in which your firm and other firms were involved in at various times, because I actually think it's very interesting. And this was a campaign document that was put out, Mr. Drake, or a document that was put out during the campaign?

Mr. DRAKE. I have it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right.

Mr. DRAKE. Excuse me?

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is a document that you were just told by the other side was—

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —put out during the campaign.

Mr. DRAKE. That's what I was told.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now what we see here is that in 1983 and 1984, there was an expansion of the number of firms that are doing bond work. And two of the firms that are doing the work are firms—one is the George firm. The George firm was Dabbs Sullivan; right?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes, sir. If I—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right?

Mr. DRAKE. I'm not real clear on that. I think it was the George K. Baum, Dabbs Sullivan division.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. So it was—

Mr. DRAKE. It was Dubby Sullivan; right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. Now the big change that we have been told went on here was an expansion of the number of firms that are involved. And we see all along for years, Stephens and Raney did the work. Then all of a sudden, we see the next two firms that joined that top group of four underwriters are this firm with Dabbs Sullivan and this firm with Dan Lasater. That is not a coincidence, is it, because you know that those two firms were firms in which, in the case of George, it was Mr. Sullivan, and in the case of Lasater, it was Mr. Lasater, you had two friends of the Governor Bill Clinton, who were principals in the firm; right?

Mr. DRAKE. That was my perception, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So the big change in opening up the process here is that the two firms that now joined the top group were two firms that had as principals two friends of the Governor; right?

Mr. DRAKE. There is another reason——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well——

Mr. DRAKE. —that I want to address.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We will get to your other reason.

Mr. DRAKE. I don't want to just come to a conclusion that just because Dan and George and Dubby knew Bill that that was the reason.

The CHAIRMAN. Counsel.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's first answer my question and then you can give your other reason.

Mr. DRAKE. Yes, sir. That's part of the reason, in my judgment.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK. What's the other reason?

Mr. DRAKE. Well, at the time that Lasater & Company began to increase its volume of business in secondary mortgage-backed trading, we went from about $500 million in quarterly trades to over $1 billion a month. The capital of the firm grew enormously. The employees of the firm grew enormously. It was my judgment—also, I had come to the firm and I'm going to take a little bit of credit for us getting more business.

Also, there is the point that there is more securities being issued because of the visibility to issue securities and also the fact that Dubby Sullivan was instrumental in pulling AHDA's $100 million floating rate bond issue out of almost bankruptcy. Dubby and Paine Weber were instrumental in saving Arkansas from probably the first default since the Depression.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Without the benefit of this hindsight now, Mr. Drake, I want to take you back to one of these contracts. And I want to demonstrate to you that, in your mind at the time, you very well understood the pivotal difference here that moved Sullivan and moved Lasater into the top rank was friendship with Bill Clinton.

Mr. DRAKE. I don't deny that that existed at all.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And in truth and in fact, when this police radio contract was issued, Raney and Hutton came to Lasater for the reason that Lasater was seen as a friend of Governor Clinton.

Mr. DRAKE. I don't deny that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That is exactly the reason why it happened.

Mr. DRAKE. Exactly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You told it to Dan Lasater?

Mr. DRAKE. Excuse me?

Mr. CHERTOFF. You told that to Dan Lasater?

Mr. DRAKE. I'm sure I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You said to him, "Raney has come to us because of your relationship with Bill." Is that right?

Mr. DRAKE. I'm sure I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As a matter of fact, these people were very frank. When the people from Raney came to you, they said to you there were only a couple of places they could go in hooking up with some connected people for this contract. They could go to Sullivan or they could go to Stephens or they could go to you. And you said to the people at Raney, "Why don't you come to us? We are just a little company." Right?

Mr. DRAKE. I did say that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were a little company, then; right? That's what you said to Raney. You said, "Why don't you come to us?"

Mr. DRAKE. Well, in the context of other firms that they could have gone to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right.

Mr. DRAKE. Like Stephens.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right, like Stephens.

Mr. DRAKE. Sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you said, "Why don't you come to us? We are a little company." Is that right?

Mr. DRAKE. Right, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They said to you, "We know you. We understand your ability. We understand that Dan has a friendship with Bill." Is that right?

Mr. DRAKE. That's what they said.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that Bill being Bill Clinton; right?

Mr. DRAKE. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, you knew that Dan Lasater had a friendship with Bill Clinton?

Mr. DRAKE. I knew Dan had a relationship with Bill.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew he was a friend of Bill Clinton?

Mr. DRAKE. I did know that, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did know that?

Mr. DRAKE. I did know that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now is it also a fact that you understood that the Governor had specifically told the Arkansas Housing Authority that they had to cut in Lasater for 15 percent of the deals?

Mr. DRAKE. I don't know if I—did I say that in my deposition?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, no, you didn't say it in your deposition.

Mr. DRAKE. If I did—

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am going to read you from the sworn testimony of Charles Stout. Do you remember Charles Stout?

Mr. DRAKE. I do know Charlie Stout.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was the Chairman of the Housing Authority between 1983 and 1985; right?

Mr. DRAKE. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was originally appointed by Frank White and then he continued under Bill Clinton; right?

Mr. DRAKE. I know he was appointed by Frank. I don't know if he continued with Bill or not. But I concede that he may have, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. Here at page 13, he relates the following answer in response to this:

Question: While you were a member of the HDA Board, did you have any interaction with anyone in the Governor's office?

Answer: Yes, I did.

Question: Who in the Governor's office did you have interaction with?

Answer: Bob Nash.

Question: Who is Bob Nash? We had Mr. Nash here yesterday, by the way.

Answer: He was on the Governor's staff over there. We had selected underwriters for an issue, and he called over and asked me to cut in Lasater for 15 percent. I said, "Bob, that's not right. The Governor's office is not to interfere with this Agency." And he said, "Well, that's the way we want it anyway."

You never had any wind that the Governor's office was calling over to the Agency and saying, "We want to cut this guy in on the business?"

Mr. DRAKE. I may have known about it, but I don't recall knowing about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to ask you about something else, because you raised the issue of lawyers.

Mr. DRAKE. Of what?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Lawyers. You came up with the issue of lawyers.

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I understand that the Mitchell, Williams firm, that was Jim Guy Tucker's firm; right?

Mr. DRAKE. Jim Guy was a partner there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. Betsey Wright testified she thought they were doing work on behalf of the Governor's office. And we established through the bills that, in fact, your firm and the Raney firm and the Hutton firm among you were picking up the tab for that work.

Mr. DRAKE. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to show you a letter, dated August 21, 1985, to Paul Young, signed by you.

Mr. FEINSTEIN. What date?

Mr. CHERTOFF. August 21, 1985.

The CHAIRMAN. At the top of it, it has Lasater & Company. You might want to look at the monitor just as a point of reference.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says, "Dear Paul: Lasater & Company submits the following expenses for reimbursement on the referenced transaction: Travel, entertainment, and miscellaneous, $750; Legal, organizational, and miscellaneous, $26,500." Now, we had testimony from Mr. Raney yesterday that unlike the normal bills for legal work, which were itemized, this was un-itemized and they refused to pay the $26,500. Do you remember that?

Mr. DRAKE. I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why wasn't this bill itemized?

Mr. DRAKE. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it because there really wasn't any legal, organizational, or miscellaneous work and you just wanted an additional $26,500 to use for other purposes?

Mr. DRAKE. No. There were legal, organizational, and miscellaneous charges; and that's why we submitted it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why didn't you submit backup?

Mr. DRAKE. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, now you know, I mean, you just told us a moment ago that one of the things that made the Lasater firm a better, more attractive firm in this period was that you came with all your experience. You know in your experience that on these kinds of issues, the underwriter and the people who are going to pay the bills are going to want to see backup. They are just not going to roll 25 grand out on a say-so; right?

Mr. DRAKE. Probably not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, in your earlier bills, you had provided backup. You had provided the underlying legal bill for which you were seeking a reimbursement; right?

Mr. DRAKE. I may have. I don't—

Mr. CHERTOFF. But on this bill, you didn't put one single iota of detail; right?

Mr. DRAKE. I don't see anything other than this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you had to understand that if you didn't provide the detail there was a risk that someone might bounce the bill back; is that right?

Mr. DRAKE. Probably.

The CHAIRMAN. They did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's right. The bill was bounced back. Did you go back to them and say, "All right, here's the detail. Give us the money now?"

Mr. DRAKE. No, I didn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You—

Mr. DRAKE. Paul told me it was too late, that they had closed the books.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, that's not what he told us. What he told us yesterday was that they assumed you were trying to pad the bill and get some extra profit, extra money for yourselves. Is that true?

Mr. DRAKE. It could have been his impression, but it was not my recollection.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, what was the mystery $26,500 for?

Mr. DRAKE. Travel, entertainment, miscellaneous, legal, and organizational.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You couldn't find one record, one receipt, one travel voucher, or one legal bill to support this?

Mr. DRAKE. If there is none attached, I didn't try.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think before I move on to the next subject, my time is just about up.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. We are going to go to Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Kravitz.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Thank you, Senator.

Mr. Chairman, as you know, Mr. Stout is scheduled to testify on this afternoon's panel. We certainly are looking forward to his testimony and an opportunity to question him about the testimony that he gave in his deposition just last night. But just for present purposes, I think it's helpful to put in the record some additional testimony that Mr. Stout provided during his deposition last night and then some related testimony from another witness who also will be appearing this afternoon on the second panel today.

Late in Mr. Stout's deposition last night, beginning at page 14, line 19, again referring to the telephone conversation that he testified about having with Mr. Nash, Mr. Stout stated the following:

Answer: Yes, sir. He [meaning Mr. Nash] called over there about 30 minutes before a board meeting, and I had to go in and tell the rest of the board members what happened.

Question: Who were the other board members at the time?

Answer: Well, let's see, Mort Hardwicke. I put Mort Hardwicke on the line when he called over there and I let Mort listen to him. Tommy Edwards, George Wright, Betty Walker, and Mr. Mallard Martin.

Presumably, those were other Board members who were present but not on the phone.

Question: OK. You were in the office when he called.

Answer: I was in the office with the Arkansas Housing Development Agency about 30 minutes before the scheduled time for a regular board meeting to pass it on to the other underwriters.

Question: And Mr. Hardwicke was in the room with you?

Answer: Yeah. I think I told Mort to pick up the phone and hear this, because it really surprised me when Bob called over.

Now it's interesting to note that Mr. Hardwicke, who, as I mentioned, is going to be a witness on this afternoon's panel along with Mr. Stout, also has given deposition testimony to this Committee. And beginning on page 79 of the transcript of Mr. Hardwicke's testimony, he gave the following testimony that is directly inconsistent with Mr. Stout's testimony that was read previously:

Question: Did the Governor's office ever identify a specific firm that they wanted to see get a certain amount of the underwriting business?

Answer: No, sir, not to me.

Question: Do you know if they did to anybody?

Answer: Not that I know anything about.

Question: So you never heard that?

Answer: I never heard of it, no.

Actually, I apologize. I gave an incorrect page cite before. That was from page 44 from Mr. Hardwicke's deposition transcript. And again, Mr. Hardwicke will be testifying later today. At that time, we will all have a chance to ask questions, both of Mr. Hardwicke and of Mr. Stout about these allegations which, at least as far as we are aware, came forth last night for the first time after more than 10 years.

Mr. Cole.

Mr. COLE. Thank you.

Mr. Drake, going back to the police radio financing, when I was discussing that with you a moment ago, you were describing the retention of the firm and then going forward with the law firm and then the drafting of the legislation. I have a question for you. I think the suggestion that has been made here clearly is that your firm, because of whatever relationship Mr. Lasater had with Governor Clinton, felt that they might have had this work sewn up.

I would like to show you a memorandum if I could, dated April 30, 1985. And just to put this in context, the records that we have indicate that the finalists for the police radio financing were selected on May 3rd and then the final contract was awarded to the Hutton/Raney/Lasater group on May 10th. Is that consistent with your recollection, sir?

Mr. DRAKE. I'm sorry. Would you ask the question again? I was busy looking at this.

Mr. COLE. Certainly, I would be glad to. This memorandum is dated April 30, 1985.

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. COLE. And before we get into the content of the memorandum, I wanted to place it in context in terms of time and what else was going on at that time. The documents and other information that have been provided to the Committee indicate that the finalists among the firms bidding for this business, the four finalists, were selected on May 3rd and that the final award to the Hutton/Raney/Lasater group took place on May 10th. I realize you may not recall the exact dates, but is that generally consistent with your recollection of what occurred?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. COLE. The reason I focus on those dates is because, as I read this April 30th memorandum—and take a moment to review it if you would like, sir. First, did you prepare this memorandum?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes, I did.

Mr. COLE. Do you think you prepared it at or about the date and the time that's indicated here?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. COLE. April 30, 1985?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. COLE. As I read this memorandum, it seems to be addressed to Mr. Lasater, Mr. Locke, and Mr. Moudy from you discussing how to make your presentation to the State Police Commission at their Friday, May 3rd meeting, which, for the Committee's information, indicates is the meeting at which the four finalists were selected. Is that correct?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. COLE. It seems to me that what this memorandum does is lay out in some detail how you will make your presentation or, I guess, what might loosely be called a sales pitch of your firm to try to sell the State Police Commission on why your firm or your group should be awarded the contract. Is that the case?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. COLE. So basically, this shows that you were working and consulting with Mr. Lasater on how to try to convince the State Police Commission that your group should get the final contract?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes. I think this was a heads-up to Dan and George and to Dan Moudy.

Mr. COLE. I take it that you are familiar not only with the proposal that was submitted by the Hutton/Raney/Lasater group but also with the proposals that were submitted by your competitors?

Mr. DRAKE. I don't recall if I was. I may have been. I don't know.

Mr. COLE. Do you have a view or an opinion as to whether your proposal, in fact, was the best proposal for the State of Arkansas in economic terms?

Mr. DRAKE. I believed it was.

Mr. COLE. What do you base that conclusion on?

Mr. DRAKE. My evaluation of where we were in the marketplace at the time and the structure we had put in place in our proposal.

Mr. COLE. Was there something different about the structure that you had put in place in comparison to the other proposals?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes. The fact that we had come up with an insured transaction which lowered the effective rate, without regard to the marketplace of the securities, was very instrumental in my assessment that this was a superior proposal.

The fact that we had come up through the good offices of our attorneys and the folks at Hutton and others with an approach that was able to permit us to acquire this system quickly without going through a referendum and without having to go through the competing interests of departments trying to get a direct allocation, to me, was meritorious.

Mr. COLE. Were those factors considered by the State Police Commission at the meetings where the bids were considered? I believe you testified you attended the May 3rd meeting.

Mr. DRAKE. Yes. But I want to make a clarification. Please don't use "bid." This was not a bid. This was a proposal.

Mr. COLE. A proposal, yes. I understand. And are you familiar with the work that the members of the Commission did in reviewing the proposals and the comparisons they made, particularly Commissioner Mitchum?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. COLE. Do you recall what he did?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes.

Mr. COLE. What did he do?

Mr. DRAKE. He told me that he was engaging the services of an independent actuary or he had an independent actuary or access to an independent actuary or someone who worked for him or he's closely associated with who was going to evaluate the economics, the structure, the overall merits of each proposal, of each of the four finalists.

Mr. COLE. Well, let me focus on what I think are perhaps the two most important issues that we are facing here and ask you two questions. The first question would be: Do you have any doubt, sitting here today and based on your years of professional experience, that the Hutton/Raney/Lasater bid was selected because on the merits it was the best bid?

Mr. DRAKE. It's my belief that it was selected because it was the best overall proposal.

Mr. COLE. Let's take it the next step forward in time in terms of after your group was awarded that bid. Did the Lasater group make a lot of money on this transaction?

Mr. DRAKE. No, we didn't.

Mr. COLE. Why is that?

Mr. DRAKE. Well, our area of expertise in securities was mortgage-backed securities and government securities primarily in the secondary market. The deal was priced very aggressively relative to the market.

Mr. COLE. And when you say, "priced very aggressively relative to the market," do you mean in presenting your proposal, in putting together your proposal, you made certain assumptions about interest rates and other factors and priced accordingly in hopes of winning the business?

Mr. DRAKE. Well, no. The proposal we made to the State Police Commission was hedged with this caveat: This is where we believe the transaction would come if we sold it in today's market.

Now it's important to differentiate between a sealed bid where I say, "Here is my proposal. If I'm low, I own the securities," and another in which we must draw documents, get a rating, get insurance, and do an official statement. No one can predict where the market may go. So we gave the best estimate.

When we brought the deal to the marketplace, it was priced in terms of yield and maturity very, very aggressively in an attempt to give the State Police Commission the best possible net interest cost. And we did not deviate, in my recollection, from our initial offering price.

And while we were offering the securities at this level, the rate for competitive securities went to this level. As the rate went up, it became more and more apparent to us that we were going to have to buy the bonds from the Commission at its original offering price and we would probably lose money.

Mr. COLE. I have no more time. But if I'm understanding what you are saying the bottom line is, you priced the bid aggressively to try to get the lowest borrowing cost for the State; and, actually, then, you did not make money on this deal or did not make a great deal of money?

Mr. DRAKE. If we made any money, it was less than $25,000 or $30,000.

Mr. COLE. Thank you.

Senator BENNETT. Mr. Chairman, may I ask one quick question on this before we leave it?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Senator BENNETT. I apologize. But Mr. Drake, yesterday we had the memo written by Mike Gaines to Governor Clinton. And when you said this was priced very, very aggressively, you struck a cord in my memory.

Betsey Wright wrote on the bottom of that memo, "Governor, we have a real problem here. Since street talk is that Lasater put in," I don't read her word—"unreasonably low bid hoping that it could be raised." Then the Governor has written, "Lasater should be told," underlined, "bid must be priced."

My question is, Mr. Lasater or Mr. Drake, either one of you, were you, in fact, told by anybody that you could not have any thought of raising the price once the business had come your way?

Mr. DRAKE. Senator Bennett, in all deference to Betsey, whom I admire as a wonderful public servant, she doesn't know beans about investment banking. She may have heard that we had "low balled." But there was no bid. There was no bid to low ball. It was a proposal.

Her concern, in my mind, was a concern of perception rather than reality. We submitted a proposal. We were not asked to submit a bid nor were our competitors asked to submit a bid.

Our proposal contained a provision for interest rates if the securities were sold at the moment of our submission. And if you will look at my memo of April 30th to Dan, George, and Dan Moudy, which appears to be in reaction to an assertion that we had low balled our proposal, I make it real clear that the proposals, underscored, were submitted well in advance of the financing date. It's a mystery to me why Betsey would be concerned about a low-ball "bid" when there was no bid.

The CHAIRMAN. Now look, don't split the hairs. Whether it's a bid or a proposal, her concern was that there was talk on the street. That's not a mystery to you, because obviously you wrote a letter then as it related to the proposal coming in on the low end and, thereafter, it would be raised. So let's not split hairs with respect to whether it was a bid or a proposal, all right?

Mr. DRAKE. Mr. Chairman, I—

The CHAIRMAN. That's not the essence of the Senator's question.

Senator BENNETT. Governor Clinton has written on this memo, "Lasater should be told," underlined, "bid must be priced." My first question is: Was anybody told anything on this issue?

Mr. DRAKE. I don't recall ever being told by anyone that we had to do anything other than what we had done.

Senator BENNETT. My second observation is that while you may well be right, and probably are, in your description of the technical details of the proposal, to this layman's mind there is a connection between your statement here that this was priced very aggressively and Betsey Wright's concern about street talk—

Mr. DRAKE. Senator, my statement—

Mr. BENNETT. —being too low.

Mr. DRAKE. My statement of pricing was during the offering, not at the submission level. Pricing only occurs—aggressive pricing only occurs by definition when securities are offered, not when a proposal is made. And I apologize to you if you feel like I mislead you on that.

Senator BENNETT. No. I'm not saying you mislead me. I'm just making the observation that, in my mind, when you are asked the question, "Was this the best proposal?"—and I will use your vocabulary, because I think it's the correct one—and the answer was, "Yes, we priced it very aggressively." I don't find that inconsistent with another layman—in this case, Betsey Wright—saying we have a real problem here with regard to street talk.

Mr. DRAKE. May I respond?

Senator BENNETT. Now it may be the specifics are different, but to me there is a connection between the two.

Mr. DRAKE. Senator, if I am not mistaken, I responded to Mr. Cole's question on did we make money on the financing. And I said, we priced it very aggressively.

Senator BENNETT. We could have it read back to us. But my impression was the reason—one of the reasons you thought it was accepted was that it was priced very aggressively. If I am mistaken, I will stand corrected. I am often mistaken, and my friends don't hesitate to correct me.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Drake, you ought to clarify when you said aggressive pricing, did you mean the proposal you submitted or did you mean the price at which you subsequently sold the bonds to investors?

Mr. DRAKE. The latter and not the former.

Senator BENNETT. All right. I have nothing further, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Faircloth.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR LAUCH FAIRCLOTH

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Well, a question just occurs to me that we've danced all around. And Mr. Drake kept talking—

The CHAIRMAN. We are going to take a break right after this. Go ahead, Senator. Excuse me.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Lasater, did Governor Clinton ever tell you that it had to be priced where it had been listed in the proposal as—

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. —that it couldn't be raised?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. The Governor didn't tell you that?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. OK. Mr. Lasater, as you know, the Committee has been concerned about documents that might have been in Vince Foster's office the night of his death. Did Mr. Foster ever do legal work for you?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you know Mr. Foster?

Mr. LASATER. I had met him. I didn't know him.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. He did perform work for the FDIC when they sued you in the Home Federal case and the First American case in Illinois; is that right?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Lasater, in the First American case, the FDIC sued you for $3.3 million. The Rose Law Firm, acting on behalf of the FDIC, settled it for $200,000. Ms. Clinton reviewed the settlement agreement. Did you think that it was unusual that Ms. Clinton would be hired by the government to sue you in view of your long relationship and close relationship with the Clintons?

Mr. LASATER. I didn't realize until these hearings started or possibly during the election that Ms. Clinton had anything to do with the lawsuit.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you ever discuss the case with her or Vince Foster?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. As far as you know, did Patsy Thomasson ever discuss the case with Vince Foster?

Mr. LASATER. As far as I know, she did not.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you have any system by which the Governor's office contacted you about bond business? Was there any system where the Governor's office would contact you when bond business was going to be available?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You never did have a person stationed in the Governor's office?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. All right. You testified here today that you did not receive a pardon from Governor Clinton. Did this State application of pardon, as it could be characterized, allow you, for example, to get a license to sell securities or real estate?

Mr. LASATER. I'm sorry. Repeat your question.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You stated that you did not receive a pardon from Governor Clinton. But yet, did this application or pardon, whatever it was characterized as, that you did get—I believe to buy a gun.

Mr. LASATER. As a personal pardon, yes, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did it allow you to get a license to sell securities, insurance, or real estate? Did it not allow you to do that?

Mr. LASATER. I don't think so. The best that I recall is a felon in the State of Arkansas has a 10-year moratorium on selling securities. And real estate, I'm not—I don't know.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Well, did you later get a State license to get back into regulated businesses, insurance, real estate? You did get a license to get back in, didn't you?

Mr. LASATER. In what?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Into the real estate and securities business.

Mr. LASATER. I don't remember or recall ever having any personal license to sell real estate or securities after my license was revoked.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Patsy Thomasson was a top aide of yours for a long time; is that right?

Mr. LASATER. She was.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. She had your power of attorney when you were in prison?

Mr. LASATER. She did.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Ms. Thomasson was one of the persons who went into Vince Foster's office the night of his death. And this has been a great concern to the Committee. In view of the previous testimony here, did you ever witness Ms. Thomasson doing drugs while she was in your company?

Mr. LASATER. Absolutely not.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did she ever see other people doing them?

Mr. LASATER. Not that I'm aware of.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Drake, did you leave the Lasater firm because of its reputation for drug dealings and use?

Mr. DRAKE. Partially.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you use drugs while you were there?

Mr. DRAKE. I did.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. This is an important question. Did you ever see or have knowledge that drugs were used in the presence of Patsy Thomasson?

Mr. DRAKE. Never.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Drake, did you know that in 1994, Mr. Lasater and Patsy Thomasson travelled to Belize, a South American country. Did you know that they went?

Mr. DRAKE. When, Senator?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Well, in 1994.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, how——

Senator FAIRCLOTH. In 1984.

Senator SARBANES. Now let me——

Senator FAIRCLOTH. 1984.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, how far afield are we going to go here in this question?

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to let the Senator have some latitude.

Senator SARBANES. He's taking an awful lot of latitude, I think.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't think so.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I don't think so either.

The CHAIRMAN. No.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Drake, did you know that in 1984 that Mr. Lasater and Patsy Thomasson travelled to Belize?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you tell the police in Arkansas that you heard that this trip was to buy drugs?

Mr. DRAKE. No, sir, I don't believe I did.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. On page 2 of the testimony you have before you, it says: "In 1984, Jim Alexander, Chuck Berry, Patsy Thomasson and Dan Lasater flew in Dan's jet to Belize to allegedly buy a cattle ranch. Michael Drake says he later heard around the office that it was also a trip to buy cocaine."

Mr. DRAKE. Senator, this is someone else's memo. This is not mine. I don't recall ever saying that to anybody.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You did not say that?

Mr. DRAKE. I don't recall saying that, no.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Well, on a lot of things we ask. But here is a question that has been to my office a number of times. An anonymous caller alleged that you had given Governor Clinton $50,000 presumably after the radio contract. Did you ever give him the money, $50,000 or close to? And could there possibly be any connection that you were trying to collect the other $26,000 back in this bill we looked at here awhile ago?

Mr. DRAKE. No and no.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, is this hearing going to deteriorate to the point where we are going to present questions on the basis of anonymous callers?

The CHAIRMAN. The Senator raised the question. The witness answered it.

Senator SARBANES. I know. I allowed the witness to answer because it seemed to me a preposterous question. I make my point after the fact.

The CHAIRMAN. Sure.

Senator SARBANES. Are we going to run a set of hearings here where just an anonymous phone call into an office is going to lead to a line of questions?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Several anonymous calls into the office.

Senator SARBANES. Well——

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But I'm going back to Mr. Lasater.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Why did you hire Roger Clinton, the Governor's brother?

Mr. LASATER. I'm sorry. Repeat your question.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Why did you hire Roger Clinton, the Governor's brother?

Mr. LASATER. Because I was asked to.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. By whom?

Mr. LASATER. By Governor Clinton.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. The Governor asked you to hire his brother. What did he do for you?

Mr. LASATER. He was a stable hand at my farm in Florida.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. In 3 years, from 1983 to 1986, you received $664 million in State bond contracts. Did you not think and believe that your connection to Roger Clinton and him being the brother of Governor Clinton, do you think that had anything to do with you getting the bond business?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. No connection? You didn't think that hiring the Governor's brother would help you to curry favor and friendship with the Governor and get bond business?

Mr. LASATER. I don't think hiring the Governor's brother for $3 an hour to muck stalls at a farm in Florida would get me any business, no.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Lasater, how many airplanes did you at one time own? At any one given time, what number did you own?

Mr. LASATER. Do you mean the most I ever owned at any one time?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Yes.

Mr. LASATER. I think it was three.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. How many times would you estimate that the Governor flew on planes that you or your company owned or you had control of?

Mr. LASATER. I would guess two or three, four maybe.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you think that this kind of favor for the Governor, helped the bond business?

Mr. LASATER. I never really considered it. No, I don't think it did.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Why would you be hauling the Governor around if it wasn't going to?

Mr. LASATER. It was the thing to do. I mean, other corporate—

Senator FAIRCLOTH. What do you mean, it was the thing to do?

Mr. LASATER. Other corporate citizens in Arkansas provided aircraft for the Governor.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Just everybody that had jets in Arkansas let the Governor fly?

Mr. LASATER. I didn't say that.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. What other companies provided jets to the Governor?

Mr. LASATER. Stephens provided airplanes. I'm not sure who else did, but I heard Arkla and other corporate citizens of Arkansas.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. That was pretty much a standard pattern in Arkansas, to provide a jet for the Governor?

Mr. LASATER. If the Governor called and wanted to use our airplane, you know, we let him use it.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did the State not have one?

Mr. LASATER. I don't think so. But we also used our airplane for other activities. We let the University of Arkansas use it. We used it for the benefit of the City of Little Rock. It wasn't just Governor Clinton that took advantage of the airplanes.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. That's all, Mr. Chairman. But it sounds like a bad way to do business.

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Mr. Chairman, with your permission.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Mr. Drake would like to—

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. We are going to take a 5-minute break. OK?

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Mr. Drake wanted to add something on the last line of questions about the airplane.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, certainly. Go ahead, Mr. Drake.

Mr. DRAKE. Thank you, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Now remember, when you start talking about this, you know, you invite the joiner. Do you want to talk about the airplane? I suggest you take a break and think about it. When you come back, you can say whatever you want.

Let's take a 5-minute break.

[Recess.]

The CHAIRMAN. Now, Mr. Drake, before we start, if you want to add something about the airplane, I don't want to cut you off. So it's up to you.

Mr. DRAKE. Well, I just wanted to make a point, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Sure.

Mr. DRAKE. In Arkansas, we have something called the Razor-back Air Force.

The CHAIRMAN. Yeah.

Mr. DRAKE. When I was at Stephens, I noted that the corporate planes owned by various corporations around Arkansas were made available to the Athlete Department, to the Governor——

The CHAIRMAN. It is not uncommon, let the record note, for the use of airplanes to accommodate officials, et cetera. And in those cases where they have to be reimbursed, they are reimbursed, and to be used for other institutions, educational, et cetera. So we note that for the record. We understand that.

Mr. DRAKE. Thank you.

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Thank you, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Let me ask you, Mr. Drake, was there a practice at Lasater & Company to deduct on a mandatory basis money from the commissions that salesmen got as compulsory campaign contributions?

Mr. DRAKE. As what, sir?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Compulsory campaign contributions.

Mr. DRAKE. I don't recall compulsory, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, let me take the word "compulsory" out. Was there a practice of deducting from sales commission checks an amount for campaign contributions?

Mr. DRAKE. If the employee wished to make a contribution in the midst of a business day, it was not uncommon for that to occur.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So was it something that the employee initiated or was it something that was initiated for the employee unless the employee raised an objection?

Mr. DRAKE. I can only speak from my experience. And it was—— it was at the employee's discretion.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, Mr. Lasater, let me ask you, since it was your firm. Did they take money out of sales commissions for contributions?

Mr. LASATER. We have, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were sales people told that they were expected to kick in because they were getting benefits from the bond issues?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were people told that they didn't have a choice about giving the contributions?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir, they were not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were people told that they had to raise money for Clinton and that's why the deductions were being made?

Mr. LASATER. Repeat that question.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were people told that the firm had to raise money for Governor Clinton and that's why deductions were being made from the commission checks?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me that compelling people to make campaign contributions or pressuring them to make campaign contributions is inappropriate?

Mr. LASATER. I don't know that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't. You think it's OK——

Mr. LASATER. I didn't say that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —to compel people to give campaign contributions if they are employed by you?

Mr. LASATER. Repeat the question, the first question.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. Is it right or wrong to require employees to make political contributions, whether they want to or not?

Mr. LASATER. I don't have an opinion on that. I don't think it would be right, though.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it right or wrong to make somebody who is an employee give a mandatory political contribution?

Mr. LASATER. I think that would be wrong.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever do that?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did anyone in your firm ever do that?

Mr. LASATER. Not that I'm aware of.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And just to make sure that we are clear on the record from you, Mr. Drake, are you aware of any cash for any purpose being given directly or indirectly to anybody in the Governor's office?

Mr. DRAKE. No, sir, I'm not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to go back to a little bit of this testimony to kind of make sure we are clear on the record concerning this statement you made that when you left the Lasater firm you did so, in part, because of the reputation the firm had for cocaine abuse. When did you leave the Lasater firm?

Mr. DRAKE. I don't recall exactly. In the mid-1980's.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What year?

Mr. DRAKE. 1986, 1987, it could be. I don't recall exactly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And at the time you left, one of the considerations you have indicated was that there was a reputation in the community that the firm had for abusing cocaine?

Mr. DRAKE. Yes, as well as my own abuse.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now going back again to February 1985, Mr. Lasater, which is right in the middle of this activity where you have your meeting with the Governor, there's the February 15th letter written, there's the police radio contract coming upon the horizon, questions were raised about the extent to which it was known or understood that you and your firm had a cocaine issue. There was a trial going on of Mr. Anderson in February; correct?

Mr. LASATER. I don't know the date of that trial.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will tell you.

Mr. LASATER. I will take your word for it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You remember the trial?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your name came up in the trial.

Mr. LASATER. I seem to sort of remember that, but I—you know, I don't know for sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I imagine it would be a matter of concern to a person who is a bond dealer, whose reputation for integrity presumably is of some importance in terms of your work, to be aware whether in Federal Court people are making accusations of connections with narcotics activity; right? It would be a matter of some interest to you?

Mr. LASATER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you recall testimony by Mr. Anderson, who was a defendant in the case, that he had been told by Roger Clinton that the State Police were interested in having Mr. Anderson target three people in an undercover operation—Mr. Clinton's drug supplier, Anderson and Lasater, that being you?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall that, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me refresh your memory. It is from an Arkansas Gazette article, dated February 28, 1985. This is Mr. Anderson's testimony being cited here. It's DKSX 17635. "Anderson said Clinton told him"—that's Roger Clinton—"that he had been approached by State Police investigators and that he was 'very, very frightened—totally frightened to death.' He said Clinton informed him that the investigators wanted to 'set up' three people—Clinton's drug supplier, Anderson and Lasater." Now that was testimony in the trial. Is it your testimony that this did not come to your attention?

Mr. FEINSTEIN. We just need a moment to catch up with you. We are looking for the article.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sure. It has got a headline——

Mr. FEINSTEIN. We have it. He just needs to read it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK.

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Thank you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will read it with you again: "Anderson said Clinton told him that he had been approached by State Police investigators and that he was 'very, very frightened—totally frightened to death.' He said Clinton informed him that the investigators wanted to 'set up' three people—Clinton's drug supplier, Anderson and Lasater."

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I see that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember that testimony?

Mr. LASATER. No, I really don't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you—I mean, because obviously you had some degree of involvement in certainly facilitating Roger Clinton's problem with drugs in the early 1980's. Did you ever wonder if the Governor was going to take it out on you, that he was going to get angry at you for it?

Mr. LASATER. You know, I had a serious drug problem at the time. And you know, I wasn't really making good judgment calls at that time or I wouldn't have been using cocaine in the first place. So——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, that goes without saying. But you were capable of exercising enough judgment to be the principal in a bond underwriting business; right?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And do you have any question in your mind about whether on a day-to-day basis you were behaving so erratically that people could tell that you were somehow not functioning properly?

Mr. LASATER. No, I don't think that I was behaving out of line too bad.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Certainly when you met with Governor Clinton on however many occasions, do you recall any times he said to you, Dan, you have a problem of some kind. You're acting strangely?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you were asked, Mr. Drake, about this trip to Belize. I take it, Mr. Lasater, there was a trip to Belize; right?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you were on the trip?

Mr. LASATER. I was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Thomasson was on the trip?

Mr. LASATER. She was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were read a portion of a Report of Interview that an Arkansas investigator recorded in 1986, Mr. Drake. Why don't you get that in front of you?

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Do you want Mr. Lasater to look at it or Mr. Drake?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Drake. Mr. Lasater can look at it, too.

Mr. DRAKE. I have it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Drake, on page 2, you were—the investigator recorded his interview—I don't mean recorded on a tape. I mean, he made a record—

Mr. DRAKE. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —of his interview with you, which attributes to you, "Michael Drake says he later heard around the office that it was also a trip to buy cocaine." Now, my question to you, Mr. Drake, is you previously testified that you are not denying the accuracy of the investigator's report as it was prepared in 1986, you know, roughly contemporaneously with the interview. You said you didn't recall it. Now is it your testimony here that you deny saying this to the investigator?

Mr. DRAKE. No, I don't deny it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So again, you are in the same position. I mean, you don't remember it, but you are not in a position to deny that the investigator was accurately recording the information you were giving him at the time?

Mr. DRAKE. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, we know from you, Mr. Lasater, that you, in fact, did take this trip to Belize.

Mr. LASATER. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the reason for this trip?

Mr. LASATER. There was a 12,000 acre cattle ranch that was shown to us by a man by the name of Carver, I think it was, or Garver or something, out of Oklahoma. And we went—that was at a point in time I had just sold out of the horse business and I had a lot of cash and I was looking at different investments.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK. You went down with a guy named Jim Alexander?

Mr. LASATER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And he was walking around with a night scope or something, one of these things you can use to see in the dark at night?

Mr. LASATER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I mean, that really happened. You are acknowledging that?

Mr. LASATER. Well, that's what I was told happened. I know in—it was either in New Orleans or in Little Rock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have a problem with customs on your way back?

Mr. LASATER. Well, that's what I was just talking about. Either in Little Rock or New Orleans, I think it was, that they asked Mr. Alexander to step outside and they visited with him. And he had something like night vision or I don't know what he had.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have any idea why customs would have been interested in talking to one of the passengers on your plane?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And did they search your plane?

Mr. LASATER. I'm sorry?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did they search your plane?

Mr. LASATER. I can't recall if they did or not. I really don't think they did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you try to get some kind of a special permit or something from the FAA at one point that allows you to kind of fly in and out of the country without stopping at a designated, you know, border or entry point?

Mr. LASATER. Yes. When we were flying to Canada alot, we asked for special permission to go through customs at Little Rock rather than wherever the stop over would have been, maybe Chicago or Detroit or something.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you get that?

Mr. LASATER. I don't think so. I don't recall ever getting it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am going to ask you for the record, is it your testimony that contrary to what Mr. Drake evidently told the investigator was the talk in the office in 1986, is it your testimony that in 1984 this trip down to Belize with the guy with the night goggles to look at property had nothing to do with drugs?

Mr. LASATER. That's absolutely correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you guys using drugs on the plane when you went down?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir, we were not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, did this fellow, Jim Alexander, also make some comment about taking the local land commissioner out or killing him or something like that?

Mr. LASATER. Do what now?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did this guy, Jim Alexander, you flew down with, did he make some kind of a comment that it might be a good idea to take one of the local land commissioners out to get rid of him in some way?

Mr. LASATER. There was the statement, something like that, made at dinner.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Dinner with who?

Mr. LASATER. We were with a group of local government people and my people.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did Mr. Alexander say?

Mr. LASATER. He said something to the effect that we just need to take him out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "Him" being some local official?

Mr. LASATER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Take him out, you understood, to be to kill him?

Mr. LASATER. That was my interpretation. I got up and left the table immediately.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Alexander fly back with you on the——

Mr. LASATER. He did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, was this FAA permit, you said it was for Canada? Didn't you also try to get a permit to allow you to make your entry at Little Rock for trips south of the 30th parallel?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That would be Latin America?

Mr. LASATER. But I am not going to dispute it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That would be for Latin America?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you make——

Mr. LASATER. I can't—I think that was the only time that I took my plane out of the country south.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To Belize?

Mr. LASATER. I think so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't make any other trips in the plane to Latin America?

Mr. LASATER. I can't recall any right now.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had a fair amount of contact with Governor Clinton during the early 1980's; isn't that correct?

Mr. LASATER. A fair amount.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were out at the Mansion a number of times?

Mr. LASATER. I can recall being at the Mansion once, maybe twice.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you dispute that you were—putting aside how many times you specifically recall being at the Mansion, do you dispute being at the Mansion on a number of occasions?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It didn't happen?

Mr. LASATER. It didn't happen.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever come to the Mansion and go in through the back door, through the kitchen?

Mr. LASATER. I can't ever recall going through the back door.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Clinton come visit you at the office?

Mr. LASATER. Possibly one time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just one time?

Mr. LASATER. Possibly two.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, let we ask——

Mr. LASATER. He certainly wasn't a frequent visitor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you, by the way, take a trip with the Governor to the Kentucky Derby in 1983?

Mr. LASATER. I don't think so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the airplane?

Mr. LASATER. I'm sorry?

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the airplane?

Mr. LASATER. I don't think so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Getting back to the Mansion, would you agree with me that you, in fact, were probably at the Mansion about a half a dozen times?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. If there were testimony—well, let me see if I can—you are positively denying it or you are simply saying you don't remember?

Mr. LASATER. And I do not remember ever being there that many times.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am going to read to you from the deposition of a man named Barry Spivey. Do you know who Barry Spivey is?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He is a trooper, I guess, who was on the Governor's Security Detail for a period of time in the 1980's. And I think there is a copy of an excerpt of that in front of you, starting at page 23.

Senator SARBANES. Is this a deposition that the Committee took?

Mr. CHERTOFF. No. It's a deposition from a civil case.

Senator SARBANES. Do we have a copy of it?

Mr. CHERTOFF. We have given a copy of the deposition. I know there was a copy given at a deposition that we gave to the Democrats in a deposition yesterday, because I know Mr. O'Callaghan turned it over.

Mr. COLE. In fact, Mr. Chertoff, I've never seen the document that's on the screen there. And I notice it doesn't have the Committee code on it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm talking about a different document.

Mr. COLE. I know. But I'm curious about the one on the screen that I have never seen before either. It doesn't have the Committee's code.

Senator SARBANES. Yes, I want to ask about that one. But I will do it when we get our time here.

Mr. CHERTOFF. If I could just have a minute to kind of get—

Mr. FEINSTEIN. For the record, Mr. Chairman, we don't have a copy of the document.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Lasater, I take it you do remember that the Governor had troopers in the Security Detail?

Mr. LASATER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to read you a portion—I see my time is up, so we will go through it more at length. I am simply going to ask you whether you accept or you deny this sworn testimony of this trooper? Page 23, line 13:

Question: Do you remember Dan Lasater coming to the Mansion?

Answer: Yes. And I remember going to Dan's a lot. We went down there more than Dan came down there, I would say.

Senator SARBANES. Who is this testifying?

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is Barry Spivey, a trooper, I guess he is a corporal in the troopers in Arkansas. He was in the Security Detail in the mid-1980's to the Governor.

Question: Let's take it separate. How many times did Dan Lasater, to the best of your recollection, come to the Mansion while Governor Clinton was in the Mansion?

Answer: I was out there a lot of time. I didn't live out there.

Question: OK. On your shift, on your watch.

Answer: I probably took Bill down there by Dan's office. See, Butch Locke, ex-representative, I think, got in some legal problems and had to serve a little stint in the joint. Let's see—Locke, Lasater and, Butch Locke, Dan Lasater and then Lasater bought them all out.

Is that correct, by the way? Did Butch Locke go to jail?

Mr. LASATER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK. So that's part is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is this fellow, Butch Locke?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's the partner with Collins, Locke & Lasater.

Mr. LASATER. Are you asking me that, Senator?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, I wanted to get a frame of reference. I don't know this fellow, Butch Locke.

Mr. LASATER. He's a past State Senator and he was also a partner in Collins, Locke & Lasater. And he was also indicted at the same time I was.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. Go ahead.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And he is the fellow at whose bankruptcy the Judge made the negative finding about your credibility?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You testified on his behalf in the bankruptcy.

Mr. LASATER. I'm sorry.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You testified on his behalf in the bankruptcy; is that right?

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead.

Mr. LASATER. I must have. You know, I must have lost my mind, but I—

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. OK. At page 24, line 1:

Question: Is Collins—

Answer: Yeah. And right here close was their office. We're just almost in the same area. I would have to drive around to find it, but it was right here close somewhere. I remember a lot of times.

I am repeating this—

I remember a lot of times taking Bill down to Dan's office and he would jump out and I'd circle and wait until he come back and, or I would go inside and stay in the lobby. I never went up behind the closed doors.

Do you disagree with that?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you deny that he came up to see you a lot of times?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Maybe I should stop now, because—

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I'm going to—

Senator SARBANES. Go ahead.

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't we try to finish this? Go ahead.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says:

Question: Let's take the Mansion first. How many occasions did you—

Answer: Did I know personally that Dan came to the Mansion?

Question: Yes.

Answer: During the—Question: During the Clinton Administration.

Answer: I probably saw him, just like you said—on my watch and up until 1984, I probably saw Dan half a dozen times at least. And I'm going to say that I took him by his office even more than that, just me personally.

Do you agree or disagree with that statement?

Mr. LASATER. I disagree with that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. [Continuing:]

Question: When he came—

Answer: I'm going to say maybe half a dozen times, and it could have been anywhere from two to ten. We're just kind of splitting the difference. I know it was more than once and it could have been considerably more than even one and I don't know how much more. You know, I didn't pay any attention to that sort of thing then. You know, it was 10, 12, 15 years ago and Dan was just Dan.

I remember his car and I remember his face. I knew him personally.

Did you know Barry Spivey personally?

Mr. LASATER. No. I don't recall who he is at all.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever make chit-chat with the Governor's troopers, be polite, be pleasant?

Mr. LASATER. Anytime I would see anyone like that, I would always say hello whether I knew them or not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now:

I knew who he was because of his horse racing. I went to Oaklawn a lot. That's how I got to know Dan, was through the thoroughbred stuff over there. Even before Clinton was Governor, I knew of Dan Lasater. We weren't acquaintances. I knew him—he didn't know me—

He admits that you didn't know him.

—through his horse racing.

Question: What kind of car did he drive into the Mansion?

Answer: It seemed to me like he would come in in a vehicle similar to what we would drive the Governor in—a leased vehicle, either a Lincoln-type vehicle—you know, a luxury car.

Is that what you used to drive back then, a Lincoln or a luxury-type of car?

Mr. LASATER. For a short period of time, I had a Lincoln limousine, maybe for 6 months or 8 months or so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What else did you drive?

Mr. LASATER. A Mercedes most of the time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK.

Question: Would you happen to remember the license plate?

Answer: Oh, Lord, no.

Question: And was Dan Lasater logged in when he came in?

Answer: You know, some of us—there was a big turnover here, during Bill's administration, in security and I'd rather not go into why. It gets into personalities and stuff. There was a big turnover and a lot of the guys got to stay there longer. I was there 5 years, which is considered a long time. You burn out or get run off before then.

A lot of us knew some people and just didn't pay as much attention to them as some of the guys. I probably personally wouldn't log Dan in because I knew that he and Bill were friends, that they visited socially. I had flown on his plane.

Did troopers ever fly on your plane with Governor Clinton?

Mr. LASATER. I don't know. I have never been on the plane with Governor Clinton, so I don't know who was on the plane with him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You have never been on the plane with Governor Clinton?

Mr. LASATER. No. I have been on the plane with Roger Clinton but not Governor Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. [Continuing:]

I had flown on his plane. I knew that Bill spent a lot of time at Dan's office, and that Dan spent time at the Mansion.

Again, you dispute that sworn testimony?

Mr. LASATER. I'm sorry. I wasn't paying attention.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "I knew that Bill spent a lot of time at Dan's office, and that Dan spent time at the Mansion."

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I dispute—

Mr. CHERTOFF. You dispute that?

Mr. LASATER. I dispute that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. [Continuing:]

So I personally wouldn't log him in because it wasn't significant. It had no bearing on anything other than maybe it was just a personal, personal visit.

Question: Let me ask you this: On what sort of occasions would Dan Lasater come? Would there be official functions, scheduled appointments, or casual visits?

Answer: There would be drop-ins, drop, you know, Bill had, we could monitor—sitting out in the guard shack, we could monitor.

I think I will go another page. I am not going to go on indefinitely, just so we get it clear that, you know, we have this and you are going to give us your version.

There would be drop-ins, drop, you know, Bill had, we could monitor—sitting out in the guard shack, we could monitor. We monitored every phone call with the exception Bill had a private line that wouldn't light up out there. On our phone, we had six numbers and if anybody on the Mansion grounds was talking, a light would be lit up for—but Bill had a private line that we had, did not have access to, did not know the number, did not want to know it.

He could have been up there talking all day long to someone, and we wouldn't have knowledge about it.

OK. I will skip over the phone stuff unless anyone thinks that I'm being—

The CHAIRMAN. No, go ahead.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And move to page 27, line 10:

Question: All right. Can you tell me what sort of occasions Dan Lasater came to the Mansion for?

Answer: Well, he dropped in, but now I'm not saying Bill didn't call him on his private line or have maybe us to call him and have him come by where it would be just him by himself. And he would also come for public functions, not public but official functions. And he would also come by himself and he would, where it appeared to me, the best I recall, would be just kind of off-the-cuff, drop-in things or in and out, you know."

Is that true or false?

Mr. LASATER. That's false.

Mr. CHERTOFF. [Continuing:]

I don't recall any overnight stays or anything particularly outstanding about any of Dan's visits. You know, he was, he—I didn't pay much attention because he, there wasn't any reason to.

Question: And would he come at random times during the day and night or were they just day visits?

Answer: I can't say. You know, it could have been both.

Question: Uh-huh.

Answer: Day, night, weekends, all day. It didn't, he came when he wanted to.

Question: OK.

Answer: We didn't stop him. We knew better. I knew better. Some of the guys, like I said, they were new, you know. There were people that were there very long, you learned who to intercept and who not to intercept.

And then I will just close with the following passage at the bottom of page 28, line 18:

Question: So Dan Lasater, in your view, or at least on your watch, was one of the ones that just got waved on?

Answer: He did on my, like you said, on my watch, because I knew Dan. I knew his face, what he drove. I knew his relationship with the Governor was personal and professional and private or whatever it was, on every level. And he—I don't know—I can't speak for anybody but myself.

Mr. LASATER. The Lincoln Mercury or Lincoln that he talked about—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yeah.

Mr. LASATER. —I have never driven that car in my life. That was a limousine, and I had a driver at the time that drove that car.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, but you do acknowledge that he's correct in identifying you had been either personally driving or being driven in a Lincoln-type car?

Mr. LASATER. I have been, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you deny his testimony about the quality and nature of your relationship with the Governor?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On these issues of recommendations for particular appointments, did you have personal conversations or did the Governor call you up and check with you on recommendations?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I'm going to put up for my last portion of this segment DK—

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall—I don't recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I will stimulate your memory.

Mr. LASATER. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. DKSJ 27453. It is a message pad from the Governor's Mansion. It says: "Message for," and it begins for BC. And you can see the handwriting in the "Message" and the "BC" is the same pen and the same handwriting. It says: "For BC from Dan Lasater, Number 376-0069." Was that your number at the time?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, it was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says: "Linda Trent appointment to Arkansas Housing Development Agency. Please call Dan this a.m." Then we see, again, the Governor's characteristic checkmark. The handwriting is the same ink as the checkmark. It says and there are initials of people that he is passing the message on to. Then it says, in the Governor's own hand, a note: "He's for her." Now remember the Governor calling you to verify that you were for Linda Trent?

Mr. LASATER. No, I don't recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you have reason to believe that when the Governor wrote, "He's for her," in response to this message that he call you back, do you have reason to doubt that he, in fact, called you back and asked you for your opinion?

Mr. LASATER. No, I don't dispute that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Pardon?

Mr. LASATER. I do not dispute that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. Do you know whether Linda Trent got appointed to the Housing Development Agency?

Mr. LASATER. No, I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think this is a good time to stop, Mr. Chairman. The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. How much more time does he need?

The CHAIRMAN. You mean, in terms of—

Senator SARBANES. To finish up here?

The CHAIRMAN. About 45 minutes. Why don't I suggest—

Senator SARBANES. There is going to be a vote at 2:00 p.m. Why don't we continue—

The CHAIRMAN. Is there really going to be a vote at 2:00 p.m.?

Senator SARBANES. Apparently.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, then why don't I—

Senator SARBANES. Why don't we finish up this panel before the votes? Then, we can do the others after the votes.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, if you want to try.

Senator SARBANES. Yes. Could I ask a question about this? I'm not clear whose statement this is that is being quoted from.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's a deposition, Mr. Chairman, in the case called Reed vs. Young.

Senator SARBANES. No, no. I have that. The other statement.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's Barry Spivey.

Senator SARBANES. The other statement, the other statement.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Oh, I think Mr. Drake testified that he had given an interview to an investigator in Arkansas. This is the Arkansas investigator's report.

Senator SARBANES. Who is that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. A man by the name of DeLaughter, D-e-L-a-u-g-h-t-e-r. Is that right, Mr. Drake?

Mr. DRAKE. That's correct, yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Now, I am not quite clear where this came from. If I could ask, I mean, we don't have a copy of this and it's not Committee marked.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I thought, Mr. Chairman, we had given copies.

Senator SARBANES. Just now. But it's not part of the Committee's records and I'm curious as to where it came from.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I received it from a staff member who got it from I know not where. In preparing for the hearing today, it seemed to me it was relevant and worth asking the witness about.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, let's ask—

Mr. CHERTOFF. And the witness has authenticated it.

Senator SARBANES. Well, let's ask where it came from.

The CHAIRMAN. If I could, let us ascertain for the record when and where the investigator was sworn and at what time. And we will do that.

Senator SARBANES. And how it came to the Committee.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't think it's a sworn statement. I think it appears to be similar to the way the FBI does reports of interviews and they put it in the file. It appears to be a report of interview that's in an investigative file. And I guess, Mr. Drake, you can bear out that you remember being interviewed as part of a State Law Enforcement Investigation?

Mr. DRAKE. Right.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm going to ask that we not waste a great deal of time at this point but that we attempt to ascertain from where that interview took place. And if Counsel agrees, we will depose the witness, the trooper, if they feel that's necessary.

Senator SARBANES. Well, Mr. Chairman, I am interested in this, because it seems to run very counter to our procedures. And I would like to know what the sequence was here. So I appreciate the Chairman's indication that we will find out that information. We will yield our turn and await Mr. Chertoff's next turn.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now are you familiar with a place called Coxper Farms, Mr. Lasater?

Mr. LASATER. I'm sorry, what was the name?

Mr. CHERTOFF. A Coxper Farms.

Mr. LASATER. Coxper?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. LASATER. Coxper property, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you own a piece of that?

Mr. LASATER. No, I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever live down there on that premises?

Mr. LASATER. I'm sorry?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you ever lived on that property?

Mr. LASATER. No. I have had an office there. And we have had a hunting lodge there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And——

Mr. LASATER. But it was both one in the same.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you still have that?

Mr. LASATER. That property is owned by Southeast Investments, which is Ken Sheeman, and my children's trusts have an option to purchase a portion of that property.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now it is owned by Ken Sheeman. Who is Ken Sheeman?

Mr. LASATER. He is an attorney.

Mr. CHERTOFF. With what firm?

Mr. LASATER. Everett, something, Sheeman and Mars in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How long has he been with that firm?

Mr. LASATER. Three or four months.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is he a friend of yours?

Mr. LASATER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where was Mr. Sheeman before 3 or 4 months ago when he went to this new firm?

Mr. LASATER. He was at the Rose Law Firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How long had he been at the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. LASATER. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Years?

Mr. LASATER. I met Mr. Sheeman in 1987 or 1988. So he was at the Rose Law Firm at that time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever have any dealings with Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What were the dealings you had with Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. LASATER. Lasater & Company had an account with them and sold them some securities. Also there was a time-share project that I owned within the holding company that sold Madison Guaranty $7 million in time-share paper.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now would you explain what that is, that transaction?

Mr. LASATER. It's receivables. You know, if you sell a unit of time share, they get—there's a mortgage.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right.

Mr. LASATER. And you have a receivable. That's what I'm talking about, those receivables.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So in plain English—I mean——

The CHAIRMAN. In layman's language.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In layman's language, a receivable is basically a second IOU?

Mr. LASATER. It's a note, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. So you had these IOU's or these notes for the time shares and you sold $7 million to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was that?

Mr. LASATER. Where was what?

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was that? When did you do that?

Mr. LASATER. I don't know—1983, 1984, 1985. No, it had been later than that. I would have had to have—I didn't buy the project, I don't think, until 1983. So it had to have been 1984 or 1985.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was while Jim McDougal owned the bank?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the name of the project?

Mr. LASATER. Emerald Isle.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there someone in particular in your holding company that had responsibility for that project?

Mr. LASATER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who was that?

Mr. LASATER. Dan Moudy.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And was Patsy Thomasson involved with that project at all?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, she was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was her degree of involvement?

Mr. LASATER. Well, later she ran the project. But that was after I was incarcerated and that was after the notes were sold.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you come to sell $7 million of notes to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. LASATER. We did it through the investment banking firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Which one?

Mr. LASATER. Lasater & Company.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I mean, did you solicit them to buy them or did they solicit you to make the purchase?

Mr. LASATER. Lasater & Company solicited them to buy them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now did they also open up a trading account with Lasater & Company?

Mr. LASATER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was that?

Mr. LASATER. When?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. LASATER. I'm guessing 1983, 1984, somewhere in there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did that come about? How did Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan come to open up an account with—

Mr. LASATER. A salesman just called him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just an accident?

Mr. LASATER. Right. Well, it's not an accident. It was intentional.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But it's a happenstance. There is no connection between that and the sale of the—

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —time shares?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you seek to get assistance from Governor Clinton in your dealings with political figures in other States?

Mr. LASATER. Yes. I contacted—or someone contacted Governor Clinton to introduce us to the Governor of New Mexico after we bought the real estate development, Angel Fire, in 1984.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Angel Fire was a development in New Mexico?

Mr. LASATER. It was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it you personally who sought to have Governor Clinton make the introduction or did you send someone else to do that?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall doing it personally. It would probably have been Patsy.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did the Governor make the introduction?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Governor Clinton make the introduction?

Mr. LASATER. Over the phone, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Tell us about that.

Mr. LASATER. That's about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, he made——

Mr. LASATER. Toney Anaya was the Governor's name. He came to Angel Fire. We had some—at the—we had a celebration after I purchased the resort and had an outdoor party. And he came up for that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And tell us, how did the introduction get made?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall. I didn't do it myself.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How do you know that Governor Clinton made an introduction over the phone to the Governor of New Mexico?

Mr. LASATER. That's just what I recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you present when Governor Clinton made the call?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did the Governor of New Mexico tell you that he had been called by Governor Clinton?

Mr. LASATER. I think he did, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he tell you what Governor Clinton had said?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall that, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he indicate to you that Governor Clinton had invested in New Mexico?

Mr. LASATER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So we have that introduction to the Governor of New Mexico. Any other introductions through Governor Clinton?

Mr. LASATER. You mean to political figures?

Mr. CHERTOFF. To political figures, first to political figures.

Mr. LASATER. I can't recall any right now.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were there any other introductions to business figures through Governor Clinton?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. None at all?

Mr. LASATER. Not that I can recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you open Angel Fire?

Mr. LASATER. I'm sorry?

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you open Angel Fire?

Mr. LASATER. Well, I purchased it in I think it was August 1984.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Describe what was there when you purchased it?

Mr. LASATER. It was an existing resort, ski resort, 28,000-acre real estate development.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was their an airstrip?

Mr. LASATER. There was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you use the airstrip?

Mr. LASATER. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. With your airplanes?

Mr. LASATER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where did you keep your airplanes, by the way, hangared, or were they typically kept in Arkansas?

Mr. LASATER. Central Flying Service.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Which is where?

Mr. LASATER. Little Rock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you use any other airports for your airplanes in Arkansas?

Mr. LASATER. You mean did I ever fly into any other airports?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. LASATER. I have been to Monticello, Arkansas. Thank God, I was never in Mina.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Never flew into Mina.

[Laughter.]

Did your airplanes ever make their way to Mina?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir, they did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you're going to tell us you had no connection with any activities there?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir, I have none.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever have any connection with any activities involving the flying or the transportation of drugs by air from one point to another?

Mr. LASATER. Are you asking me if I have ever had drugs on an airplane?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm not limiting it to if you were personally, well, all right, let's—

Mr. LASATER. For my own personal use is the only time I've ever transported drugs.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What quantity would that be?

Mr. LASATER. An ounce, maybe two ounces at the most.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And other than that, have you had drugs transported on airplanes when you were not on the airplane?

Mr. LASATER. Not that I'm aware of.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, you mentioned I think earlier a in response to one of the questions, that you had an employee or perhaps your driver carry drugs for you or hold drugs for you?

Mr. LASATER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why would you direct someone else to hold the drugs for you?

Mr. LASATER. It was against the law to carry drugs.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you would have someone else hold them so that they would get in trouble?

Mr. LASATER. I just didn't want to carry them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I can't argue with the logic of that. So your testimony is you didn't have any, you never directed or requested anybody to transport drugs from one point to another by air?

Mr. LASATER. Yes sir, that's my testimony.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you become aware of an investigation into narcotics trafficking that involved your resort in New Mexico?

Mr. LASATER. There was an article in the Albuquerque paper that someone sent me a copy of recently that brought that up. And I know there was an article in The Wall Street Journal or local paper up here that Representative Leach was looking into that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Put aside articles. From your own knowledge or from what people told you who were at the resort, or people that you had employed or had social relationships with, did you ever hear that investigators were asking questions concerning narcotics trafficking in that resort, that affected that resort in New Mexico?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall that, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Never remember hearing anything about that?

Mr. LASATER. I don't recall it, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Lasater, I want to go back to this question of your visits to the Mansion and the question of the Governor visiting you. Do you know of a reason why a trooper would make up a story about visits that you had with Governor Clinton either at your office or at the Mansion?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir, I don't, but, you know, there's been another trooper that's made up a lot of stories too, that L.D. Brown. You know, I don't understand him, and I'm not putting Mr. Spivey in that category. But you know, Terry Reed made a lot of accusations which were unfounded and untrue. I don't, you know, this is my first experience in politics.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, the troopers, I mean, because you must have encountered the troopers from time to time in dealing with Governor Clinton, even if they were just on the scene. My question to you is, I mean, maybe there's something you had with the troopers on a personal level or institutionally that would give them a motive to lie about you. So I want to ask you straight out, is there anything you know about Trooper Spivey or any other trooper that you could give us as a reason why they would make up stories about your having more visits with Governor Clinton than you actually had?

Mr. LASATER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is there any reason—

Senator SARBANES. Actually, Spivey said two to ten, didn't he? And Lasater said two.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I think what he said was, and I'm happy to go back into it, this is page 26, line 2: "I knew that Bill spent a lot of time at Dan's office and that Dan spent time at the Mansion." And the Trooper goes on to say that you were such a regular figure that you didn't even get logged in. They kind of waved you through.

Senator SARBANES. Yes, but earlier he said, when he was asked how many occasions did he come to the Mansion, he says, half a dozen. Then he says, I'm going to say maybe half a dozen times, and it could have been anywhere from two to ten.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, fine. Do you accept that, that you were there from two to ten times?

Mr. LASATER. No, I wasn't—I can recall being at the Governor's Mansion possibly twice, and those were social events. I think one time was when Bob Hope was in town and they had some kind of a party over there for him, and some other social function. I have never been to the Mansion on a personal basis.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. So you're saying now to the Committee that you went to the Mansion on two occasions, it was social. One was Bob Hope, one was another, but that you never went there on a personal visit to see the Governor. Is that correct?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct. And I have no reason to lie about that, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. I just wanted to get it. Let's move this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I just wanted to make sure there's no ambiguity because he also goes on to say, and I'll go back here, I'll move on to page 30, at line 8, if you want to find it and follow along.

Question: Now, would you say that Governor Clinton went to Lasater's once a month, twice a month? Could you characterize the frequency of the times they saw each other, either at Lasater's office or at the Mansion?

Answer: Well, he could have went a lot more than I was aware of. He could have went 2 days in a row and not again for a month, but I wouldn't have had access to a—I know he went a lot more times than he went when I was with him. If he went as much as when the other guys were driving as he did with me, he went a lot because like I said, we were very seldom—

Well, I'll delete the expletives.

Senator SARBANES. No, go ahead and put it in. We don't have this guy before us. I mean, I think this is rather irregular, frankly. You drag in here 10 pages out of an oral deposition of Spivey in an action in the U.S. District Court in the Eastern District of Arkansas on a case of—who is this guy Terry K. Reed who brought this case?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Chairman, I have no idea what the underlying case is about. I am only concerned about, you know, we have sworn testimony that someone has seen fit—

The CHAIRMAN. Did you go to the Governor or did the Governor come to your office on a regular basis? How many occasions do you recall, if any, that the Governor came to visit you?

Mr. LASATER. One or two times in my office. He was at my home one time. We rebuilt an older home there in 1984, and we invited 50 or 60 people, and he stopped by, by himself, for 10, 15, or 20 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. So you are saying the Governor came to your home on one occasion where you had 50 or 60 people, and he came to your office on no more than two occasions?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. And you're sure about that?

Mr. LASATER. I'm—well, yes, I mean, I am sure.

The CHAIRMAN. OK, fine.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Lasater, this is the last question. I'm going to ask you to listen carefully to what the trooper says, and then tell me whether you accept it or reject it. The trooper says, under oath, again, page 30, line 19:

But we very seldom were in the area when he had any time on his hands that he didn't run in. He went by there a lot, by his office a lot.

Mr. LASATER. That's just absolutely not true.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you can't think of a reason why the trooper would make it up?

Mr. LASATER. I have no earthly idea.

Senator SARBANES. You all finished?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, all done. Go ahead.

Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Lasater just lest anyone put too much significance on your answer to the last question you were asked about whether you had any reason to believe, or you have any reason to believe that Mr. Spivey would have a motive for testifying untruthfully, you testified earlier that you don't know Mr. Spivey. Correct?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. So whether Mr. Spivey has been terminated unfairly by the State or might have gotten into some other trouble or had some reason why he might want to testify untruthfully against Governor Clinton, you would have no way of knowing; correct?

Mr. LASATER. That's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. The fact that you don't know that is meaningless?

Mr. LASATER. That's right. I do not know that.

Mr. KRAVITZ. That's all we have. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. I want to thank the panel.

We stand in recess until 2:15 p.m., unless votes start thereafter, we'll wait until the termination of whatever votes. Otherwise, we'll take a recess until 2:15 p.m.

[Whereupon, at 1:40 p.m., the Committee was recessed, to reconvene at 2:15 p.m. the same day.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

The CHAIRMAN. Can I ask the witnesses to stand for the oath.
[Witnesses were sworn.]

The CHAIRMAN. I want to start on the left and ask each of you, Mr. Hardwicke, Mr. Wright, Ms. Chandler, Mr. Stout, and Mr. Epes, if you have any statement that you would like to give to the Committee.

Mr. Hardwicke.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF MORT G. HARDWICKE ARKANSAS DEVELOPMENT FINANCE AUTHORITY [ADFA]

Mr. HARDWICKE. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Wright.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF GEORGE H. WRIGHT, JR. ARKANSAS DEVELOPMENT FINANCE AUTHORITY [ADFA]

Mr. WRIGHT. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Chandler.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF LINDA D. CHANDLER FORMER ACTING PRESIDENT ARKANSAS DEVELOPMENT FINANCE AUTHORITY [ADFA]

Ms. CHANDLER. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Stout.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF CHARLES STOUT ARKANSAS HOUSING DEVELOPMENT AGENCY BOARD MEMBER 1980-85 AND CHAIRMAN 1983

Mr. STOUT. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Epes.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF S. WOOTEN EPES FORMER PRESIDENT ARKANSAS DEVELOPMENT FINANCE AUTHORITY [ADFA]

Mr. EPES. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

[No response.]

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bennett.

[No response.]

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

[No response.]

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Good afternoon, panel.

If we could put up on the Elmo the April 12, 1983 Board Minutes. On April 12, 1983, if I could reacquaint everyone with this, the Arkansas Housing Development Authority Executive Board met to consider eight proposals for underwriters for AHDA bond offerings for multifamily housing.

Do we have that? We seem to be missing a document.

Mr. Stout, why don't I begin with you. You were on the Board of the Arkansas Housing Development Authority between 1980 and 1985; am I right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What did the Arkansas Housing Development Authority do?

Mr. STOUT. Well, we approved selling bonds to the underwriters.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Stout, would you pull that microphone up closer to you. That's it.

Mr. STOUT. To provide low-interest loans to the first-time home-buyers.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were the Chairman of the Board in 1983; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Governor Clinton was then the Governor of the State of Arkansas?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That was his sort of second go round. He had just defeated Mr. White so it was the very beginning of his second term as Governor of Arkansas; right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And how did the Arkansas Housing Development Authority normally go about selecting underwriters for its bond offerings?

Mr. STOUT. Well, they would submit proposals and the Committee would review the proposals and present them to the full board and the full board would make the selection.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you normally select underwriters based on merit, try to get the best underwriter for the offering?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, we did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you considered facts such as the underwriter's experience.

Mr. STOUT. Experience, stability.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ability to do the issue at a low cost for the State. Those were the factors you took into account?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Epes, you ran the ADFA Board at a later time. You were the President of ADFA; right?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. When you ran ADFA, the criteria that you took into account were based on merit; am I right?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You considered stability, experience, reputation of the underwriters; isn't that right?

Mr. EPES. Actually we had a scoring grid which had a list of criteria which we relied upon.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But those were merit-based criteria; am I right?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Chandler, you were the Executive Director of AHDA for a period in 1993; am I right?

Ms. CHANDLER. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You also in selecting underwriters based it on merit; is that right?

Ms. CHANDLER. That was part of it; right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And political considerations were not taken into account?

Ms. CHANDLER. Not at all.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Stout, in 1983, while you were the Chairman of the Board of AHDA, were you contacted by the Governor's office?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who contacted you from the Governor's office?

Mr. STOUT. Bob Nash.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who was Bob Nash?

Mr. STOUT. He was on the Governor's staff.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was he Senior Assistant to the Governor for Economic Affairs?

Mr. STOUT. I have no idea.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you knew Mr. Nash; right?

Mr. STOUT. Knew him well.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You knew his voice?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you are quite certain you spoke to Bob Nash?

Mr. STOUT. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you consider him a top aide to the Governor?

Mr. STOUT. I suppose, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He had formerly been a member of your board; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now what did Mr. Nash say to you?

Mr. STOUT. He called me and recommended that we start using the Lasater firm.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did he recommend that you use the Lasater firm or indicate to you that you should use the Lasater firm?

Mr. STOUT. I'm not sure if it was a recommendation or what, but I got the gist of the conversation.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And the gist of the conversation was that AHDA should begin to use the Lasater firm for its bond underwritings?

Mr. STOUT. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you say anything to Mr. Nash?

Mr. STOUT. I said this is a little unusual. This is the first time that you have ever recommended a usage here, and I do not think it's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why did you not think it was right for Mr. Nash to be telling you that you should be using the Lasater firm for AHDA bond offerings?

Mr. STOUT. Heretofore, they had always been selected by the Directors and here he was suggesting a certain underwriter that we start using. It could have been any underwriter, I guess.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you did not believe it was right for the Governor's office to tell the AHDA Directors what underwriters they should use; right?

Mr. STOUT. Or Bob Nash.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Bob Nash in particular. Were you under the impression that Mr. Nash was delivering an important message to you? Do you recall saying that at your deposition?

Mr. STOUT. I guess I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. When the Governor's aide calls you up and gives you an important message, you feel you have to take some action, don't you?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now when you told Mr. Nash that you didn't think it was the right thing to do, what did Mr. Nash say to you?

Mr. STOUT. I think he said that's still my suggestion. I think that's what he said.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did Mr. Nash indicate to you that that was the way we wanted it anyway?

Mr. STOUT. I don't know whether it was "we" or "I."

Mr. GIUFFRA. But he said that's the way it should be, that Mr. Lasater should get some of the bond underwriting business of AHDA? Is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did Mr. Nash indicate to you a specific percentage of the bond underwriting business that Lasater should get?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What was that specific percentage?

Mr. STOUT. Fifteen percent.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you are quite certain that this conversation occurred?

Mr. STOUT. I'm positive.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did Mr. Nash indicate to you why he believed that Lasater should be included in future AHDA bond offerings?

Mr. STOUT. I don't think he did. I got the gist that we should start using Lasater though.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did he say anything to you about the experience of the Lasater firm?

Mr. STOUT. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you familiar with the Lasater firm?

Mr. STOUT. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This was the first you'd ever heard of the Lasater firm?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. After you said it was wrong for Mr. Nash to tell you who AHDA should use, did Nash say anything more other than that's the way we want it?

Mr. STOUT. I don't remember. I really don't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But he definitely indicated that you should use Mr. Lasater and Lasater should get 15 percent of the business?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. During the 5 years when you were a Director of AHDA and the 1 year when you were Chairman, are you aware of any other instance in which the Governor's office or a Governor's aide gave you a directive to use a specific underwriter?

Mr. STOUT. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Are you aware of any other instance when the Governor or someone on his staff told you that a specific underwriter should get a certain percentage of the business?

Mr. STOUT. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This was very unusual, wasn't it?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were very surprised by Mr. Nash's request; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You thought that it threatened the independence of the AHDA; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Because the Directors of the HDA are supposed to pick the underwriters, not the Governor?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The Governor does appoint the members of the HDA but this was an independent agency; right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. During the conversation you had with Mr. Nash, did he mention any other underwriting firms?

Mr. STOUT. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He didn't direct you to use any other underwriting firms besides the Lasater firm; right?

Mr. STOUT. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Just Lasater. Am I right that the call from Mr. Nash came about 30 minutes before an HDA Board meeting?

Mr. STOUT. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The call lasted about 4 minutes; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now when Mr. Nash called you, did you indicate to anyone who was present, Mr. Hardwicke, that Mr. Hardwicke should get on the phone because this was an important call?

Mr. STOUT. I asked one Board member, I think it was Mr. Hardwicke, to get on and listen to the conversation.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you wanted him to listen because you thought this was an important conversation. Just so everyone knows, HDA was the housing agency for the State of Arkansas; right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. To provide mortgages to people to buy homes; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It ultimately was replaced by ADFA, the Arkansas Development Finance Authority?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That had a broader mandate to do bond underwritings; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Hardwicke did not participate in the conversation, as best you recall?

Mr. STOUT. That's the way I recall it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He just listened to what Mr. Nash was saying.

Now prior to this Nash phone call, had the Lasater firm ever participated in an HDA bond offering as an underwriter?

Mr. STOUT. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You had been on the Board for 3 years before that; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall anything more about the conversation that you had with Mr. Nash?

Mr. STOUT. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. After the conversation was concluded, did you discuss the call with Mr. Hardwicke?

Mr. STOUT. I think we did, the best I recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you indicate to Mr. Hardwicke that you believed it was wrong for the Governor's office to call you and tell you, the HDA Board members, how to run the Agency?

Mr. STOUT. I don't remember. I really don't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You understood that Mr. Hardwicke was a friend of Governor Clinton's; right?

Mr. STOUT. He was an appointee of Governor Clinton.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did he indicate to you that he thought there was anything wrong with Mr. Nash's request?

Mr. STOUT. I don't remember.

Mr. GIUFFRA. After the phone call, did you and Mr. Hardwicke make a decision as to whether he should speak to the other HDA Board members about Mr. Nash's request that Lasater get 15 percent of the business?

Mr. STOUT. I thought that Mort talked to the other Board members. I don't know. It's been a long time ago, and I've had a stroke and my memory's not good.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But the conversation with Mr. Nash is clear in your mind; right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You're certain that conversation happened?

Mr. STOUT. Absolutely.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That was an important event and you remember it, even though it's more than 10 years ago. Now after the conversation with Mr. Nash, am I correct that the Lasater firm was included as an underwriter in future HDA bond offerings?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So they were made part of the team; right? After you spoke to Mr. Nash, you followed Mr. Nash's directive; right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In effect, what had happened was the Governor's office had picked one of the underwriters for future HDA offerings; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. I suppose.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That's what happened, wasn't it, not the normal procedure; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Normally the Board picks the underwriters; right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That had been your prior experience during the time you had been an HDA Board member?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up on the Elmo the February 17th Board Minutes. I believe you testified a few minutes ago that the call came just before a Board meeting, about a half hour before. Was that your recollection?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This is the first time that we have looked back through the minutes of the HDA. There was a Subcommittee Meeting, and I'll just read it into the record. It says, quote:

Chairman Stout called the meeting to order, and stated that the purpose of the meeting was to discuss a proposed solution to the problems with the current Single-Family Bond Program. After discussion, it was determined that the composition and breakdown of underwriters in this proposal be as directed below.

Then it's got Dabbs Sullivan, G.K. Baum, Blyth Eastman Paine Webber, they get 60 percent of the offering. T.J. Raney gets 13⅓rd percent; Stephens gets 13⅓rd percent, and Collins, Locke & Lasater get 13⅓rd percent. So right after this conversation with you and Mr. Nash, Lasater gets just under 15 percent, just under what Mr. Nash had requested.

Ms. CHANDLER, if I could just direct some questions at you. You had been working at HDA for about 5 years as of this point?

Ms. CHANDLER. Four.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Prior to this February 17th meeting at which they were given a portion of the single-family bond offering, had the Lasater firm ever participated in an HDA offering that you are aware of?

Ms. CHANDLER. Not that I'm aware of.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The single-family bond offering, that was a troubled bond offering, wasn't it?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes, it was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. There had been sort of problems with regard to the financing?

Ms. CHANDLER. It was actually a funding of a previous issue. There was no problem with this issue.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The prior issue there'd been a problem?

Ms. CHANDLER. We were refunding a portion of the previous single-family issue that we had not been able to get out. The interest rates had dropped close to the interest rate on this issue, and I think they're about $23 or $24 million still left out of I think a $75 million or $100 million issue.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Prior to the inclusion of Lasater in this deal, had you even heard of the Lasater firm?

Ms. CHANDLER. Not that I recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The other underwriters are all underwriters that you were aware of; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes. T.J. Raney and Stephens had participated in every issue since I came to the Board.

Mr. GIUFFRA. They were considered top-flight underwriters in Arkansas; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. I would think so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up the April 12th Board Minutes on the Elmo. The first bond offering you were focusing on was the single family. Let's turn to multiple family bond offerings. Ms. Chandler, your Agency did single- and then multiple-family bond offerings, didn't you?

Ms. CHANDLER. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. On April 12th, there was consideration given to a new multiple-family bond offering proposal. You recall that; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. At that meeting, the Board made a decision that Merrill Lynch, a New York firm, would be the lead underwriter. Do you recall that?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That would be the normal procedure, to get a big New York firm to be the lead underwriter?

Ms. CHANDLER. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then the two Arkansas firms that were selected were Stephens and T.J. Raney; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The Rose Law Firm was the bond counsel; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's turn to the April 19th meeting which would be about a week later. Now that meeting, Ms. Chandler, was called in order to approve a decision that had been made on February 17th with regard to the single-family bond offering; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. At that meeting, something somewhat out of the ordinary happened; am I right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What was it that happened?

Ms. CHANDLER. At the end of the Board meeting, one of the Board members recommended adding Collins, Locke & Lasater to the single-family, to the multifamily account.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So what was happening was a decision was being made to change a decision that had been made the previous week to just limit the multifamily to Stephens and T.J. Raney, and another firm, the Lasater firm, was going to be added. Is that right?

Ms. CHANDLER. That's correct, Collins, Locke & Lasater.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What happened was Mr. Hardwicke made a request for further business. We have that on the screen. Then Mr. Wright made a motion that the Lasater firm be included as part of the underwriting syndicate; right? And were you very surprised by this decision to include the Lasater firm?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes. It had not happened since I had been at the Agency to add an additional underwriter after the issue had been approved.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Of course, the Board had already acted and the deal was done.

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Prior to the meeting, you were the Executive Director; is that right?

Ms. CHANDLER. I was either the Acting Director or Executive Director at the time; right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were the senior staff person at the Agency?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware that this was going to happen, that there would be a motion made to add the Lasater firm to the multifamily bond offering?

Ms. CHANDLER. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This came as a surprise to you?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you concerned about this decision to add the Lasater firm?

Ms. CHANDLER. I don't know that I was concerned. I had only been the Acting Director for a few months. It had not happened on previous issues that I'd been involved in. I don't know that I was surprised that it hadn't happened before.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But it had never happened on a prior issue before; is that right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Not that I'm aware of.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Following the inclusion of Lasater on the team of underwriters for the multifamily bond offerings of HDA, did anything happen with regard to the other members of the underwriting syndicate?

Ms. CHANDLER. Such as?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did the Stephens firm send you a letter? Let's put the Stephens letter up on April 28th. Mr. Stout actually received the letter and you got a copy of this letter; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes, I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This was a letter dated April 28, 1983. This would be 9 days after the meeting in which Lasater was added to the underwriting team. It was from a man named Gene Wilbourn. Did you know Mr. Wilbourn?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes, I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He was a Vice President at Stephens?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes, he was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This letter is cc'd to Governor Clinton on the second page. Why don't I just read the third paragraph of the letter. The first paragraph, Stephens is indicating they are going to withdraw from participating in this multifamily bond offering; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You recall that, don't you?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Stout, do you recall getting this letter?

Mr. STOUT. I don't recall getting it. I saw it yesterday.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall Stephens wanting to leave and no longer wanting to be an underwriter for this particular HDA offering; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The letter says:

It has been our belief that the chief reasons for the splendid success which has been enjoyed by the Agency's bond offerings in the marketplace have been: (1) conservatively structured programs; (2) competent professional staff; and (3) a strong, independent board of directors which functioned without outside interference by political or other interests.

Then it goes on to say in the fourth paragraph:

With exception of the most recent single-family issue, the Agency has seen fit to select only those underwriters who had the most superior combination of credentials which would benefit the Agency, namely, sufficient capital to underwrite, strong sales capability, in-house technical expertise, and the ability to continue to make a market in the Agency's securities in the secondary market.

In the fifth paragraph of the letter, Mr. Wilbourn goes on to say, keeping in mind these criteria of the prior offerings, Stephens agreed to participate as an underwriter and responded to the RFP. But then it goes on to say:

In the meantime, subsequent to our selection, the Board decided, without discussion, to add to the underwriting group a firm which did not submit a proposal under the Agency proposal procedures which invited individual firm proposals.

Do you recall that Lasater had not submitted a proposal?

Ms. CHANDLER. Are you asking me?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Yes, you, Ms. Chandler.

Ms. CHANDLER. No. I think they did submit a proposal.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You think they did submit a proposal?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He says:

Although it is certainly Agency's privilege to appoint any firm, we would invite you to investigate more carefully whether the added company meets the standards of capital, experience, sales capability, staff service and market support which have been the preference of the Board in all previous issues.

Do you see that?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall taking any action after you got this letter?

Ms. CHANDLER. I took no action.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you discuss the letter with any members of the HDA Board?

Ms. CHANDLER. I'm sure I discussed it with Charlie at the time.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Stout, do you recall discussing it with anyone, the fact that Stephens had decided to get off the offering?

Mr. STOUT. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Hardwicke, do you remember this letter from Stephens?

Mr. HARDWICKE. Really, I don't.

The CHAIRMAN. Could you pull that microphone up close to you, Mr. Hardwicke, so that we can hear you.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You don't recall taking any action?

Mr. HARDWICKE. I don't recall taking any action, no.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Stout, how did you first become familiar with a man named Dan Lasater, from reading newspaper accounts?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. From reading those newspaper accounts, do you recall learning that Mr. Lasater was a cocaine user?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall reading in newspaper accounts that Mr. Lasater had lent $8,000 to Roger Clinton to help him pay off some drug debts?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Roger Clinton was the Governor's brother; right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you on the HDA Board at that time?

Mr. STOUT. I'm not sure whether I was or not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you recall, while you were a member of the HDA Board, being concerned about the reputation of Mr. Lasater?

Mr. STOUT. I don't think I was concerned.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Epes, you were the President of ADFA and the Lasater firm did some underwriting work for ADFA; correct?

Mr. EPES. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall seeing some news accounts of cocaine use by Mr. Lasater?

Mr. EPES. I recall news accounts around the time of his conviction or when he pled guilty to a crime of distribution of cocaine I believe it was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall news accounts in February 1985, in which Mr. Roger Clinton testified at the trial of a man named Sam Anderson?

Mr. EPES. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Stout, when Governor Clinton came back into office in 1983, after defeating Mr. White, did the Clinton administration have a policy in place that the State had to use a greater number of underwriters?

Mr. STOUT. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Chandler, were you aware of such a policy?

Ms. CHANDLER. I don't think I was aware of a policy, but I know it was discussed that we wanted to get more competitive bidding so we were going to be possibly using other firms.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, Mr. Wright, you were also a Board member. Did anyone from the Governor's office ever call you and say there was a policy that you should use more underwriters?

Mr. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I just want to make sure, Ms. Chandler, because I think it's really extraordinary what you just said a moment ago, that the policy, as you understood it, was to have more competitive bidding. Just so it's clear, on this last set of transactions involving this particular multifamily bond issue, first again for lay people, for a firm to be included as an underwriter is a big benefit to the firm because the firm makes money off of participating in the underwriting of the bonds; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So firms want to be part of that underwriting group; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In this instance, I gather from the minutes of April 12th, that in keeping with the normal policy, there had been a submission of proposals to the Board, they had been discussed and carefully considered, and at the end of the day's meeting, it was decided that the Board or the Subcommittee considering it would recommend Merrill Lynch to be the lead underwriter, then there were two other firms to be included in the group, Stephens and T.J. Raney, both of which were local Arkansas firms; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So at the close of business on April 12th, the recommendation of the Subcommittee carefully considering this in the normal way was to have Merrill Lynch, the New York firm, be the lead underwriter and then to have two local firms, Stephens and Raney, participate in the syndicate?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. A week later, all of a sudden, without regard to this proposal that had been made, kind of at the last minute, Mr. Wright makes a motion that Collins, Locke & Lasater be added to the underwriting team; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That means now they get cut in on the benefit of participating in the issue; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That circumvents the normal process, you know, and the careful debate that had taken place the week before; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it that, both in your experience before and since, you are not aware of any other circumstance where, at the last minute, after the recommending committee had made up a list of participants, someone all of a sudden threw another name into the mix?

Ms. CHANDLER. I'm not aware of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's the only time it happened?

Ms. CHANDLER. That I'm aware of, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Lest we wonder about the reason for this lucky, big stroke of luck for the Collins, Locke & Lasater firm, we turn to you, Mr. Stout. And we learn that earlier in the same year, 1983, you had had a conversation with Mr. Nash in which Mr. Nash told you that he, and I presume speaking on behalf of the Governor's office, wanted to give Collins, Locke & Lasater 15 percent of these deals going forward.

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So the message came from the Governor's office in the person of Mr. Nash and the message was evidently listened to, Ms. Chandler, because we have immediately thereafter a 15 percent participating by Collins, Locke & Lasater in a single-family housing deal; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then when the multifamily housing deal is recommended without Collins, Locke & Lasater participation, Collins, Locke & Lasater are added at the last moment; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Which is highly unusual?

Ms. CHANDLER. It had not happened since I had been with the Agency.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Again, just to put it in perspective, lest there be some question about the necessity of adding Collins, Locke & Lasater to have local participation, in these other deals, Stephens and T.J. Raney were local firms; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So before Collins, Locke & Lasater was added at the last moment on this multifamily housing bond issue, the Board had already carefully considered and approved local firm participation in this matter; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So the addition of Collins, Locke & Lasater was not necessary in order to put locals in the deal because you already had local firms in the deal?

Ms. CHANDLER. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, after Collins, Locke & Lasater was voted in at the last minute, Stephens got so annoyed that they withdrew; is that correct?

Ms. CHANDLER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you had that experience before, where one of the participants in the deal was so annoyed by a breach of the normal process that they actually withdrew from the deal?

Ms. CHANDLER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that was highly unusual too; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. It hadn't happened since I was with the Agency.

The CHAIRMAN. Could I just touch on something? Mr. Wright, obviously at this April meeting, after the initial selection process, we have minutes which indicate that you made the motion to add this firm, Collins, Locke & Lasater; is that correct?

Mr. WRIGHT. That's what it says in the minutes, sir. Yes, sir, I suppose that's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. You did make that motion?

Mr. WRIGHT. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Why did you do that? And can you pull that microphone up to you?

Mr. WRIGHT. I think some of the conversation among the Board members, I also was on that Subcommittee that selected the underwriters.

The CHAIRMAN. Did anybody call you?

Mr. WRIGHT. Pardon?

The CHAIRMAN. Did anybody call you?

Mr. WRIGHT. No. Are you talking about did Mr. Nash call me?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. WRIGHT. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did anybody speak to you?

Mr. WRIGHT. We had conversation among the Board members.

The CHAIRMAN. The week before you had made a selection; right?

Mr. WRIGHT. Right. We made a recommendation. The Subcommittee made a recommendation.

The CHAIRMAN. You were on that Subcommittee?

Mr. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You had recommended three bond underwriters, two locals and the lead Merrill Lynch; is that right?

Mr. WRIGHT. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Now you didn't talk to the professional, the full-time employee, Ms. Chandler, did you? She says you didn't talk to her about——

Mr. WRIGHT. Didn't talk to her about?

The CHAIRMAN. About adding this new company that you had just added Collins, Locke & Lasater. You made the motion.

Mr. WRIGHT. I don't remember the specific conversations and with who as far as the Board members, but I think it was several Board members. Our thinking was to add more local firms to bond issues.

The CHAIRMAN. This is just dropped out of the blue? I mean, you have a meeting a week before; right?

Mr. WRIGHT. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. A week before, you had selected your three underwriters; is that correct?

Mr. WRIGHT. Our senior underwriter and two locals.

The CHAIRMAN. So now that selection was made?

Mr. WRIGHT. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. So the following week; right, Lasater had lost the week before?

Mr. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Right?

Mr. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And just out of the blue, you made a motion to add Collins, Locke & Lasater?

Mr. WRIGHT. Like I said, sir, there was conversations among the Board members that we thought we needed to add some more local firms to bond issues.

The CHAIRMAN. Who did you have your conversation with?

Mr. WRIGHT. I would assume that it was all the Board.

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Chandler, she's the Executive Director of the Agency. You didn't consult with her?

Mr. WRIGHT. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You didn't even tell her you were thinking of adding somebody else?

Mr. WRIGHT. I don't think that I probably had to, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You just made the motion?

Mr. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you discuss it with Mr. Stout before?

Mr. WRIGHT. I'm sure that that conversation with Mr. Stout and Mr. Hardwicke and the rest of the Board members.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Stout, were you aware that they were just going to move this?

Mr. STOUT. I was in Europe at the time.

The CHAIRMAN. Pardon me?

Mr. STOUT. I was in Europe at the time.

The CHAIRMAN. So you didn't discuss it with Mr. Stout?

Mr. WRIGHT. I don't know that I did.

The CHAIRMAN. Did anybody in the Governor's office call you?

Mr. WRIGHT. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You didn't discuss it with him. He says he was in Europe.

Mr. WRIGHT. Nobody from the Governor's office called me, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. So you just dreamt this up?

Mr. WRIGHT. No, sir. I don't remember the specifics but what I'm saying is that the Board members had obviously discussed this. I made the motion and the motion passed unanimously.

The CHAIRMAN. Who decided that you would make the motion?

Mr. WRIGHT. It was among the Board members.

The CHAIRMAN. Among the Board members?

Mr. WRIGHT. Yes, sir. I mean, and there again, I don't remember specifically but the Governor's office or Bob Nash did not call me and ask me to do this.

The CHAIRMAN. You've heard the testimony for the past half hour now, huh?

Mr. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Put yourself up here. What would you think happened? You're us. How does it sound?

Mr. WRIGHT. I don't know when the conversation with Mr. Stout and Mr. Nash happened.

The CHAIRMAN. February 17th, the month before he gets this call from Mr. Nash. Mr. Hardwicke, you got on the phone; right? Mr. Stout called you and he said, listen to this. He's very specific over here, very specific when he says he asked you to get on the phone because he was shocked. You were friends; right? So he asked you to listen in. Do you remember listening?

Mr. HARDWICKE. I don't recall listening.

The CHAIRMAN. You're not going to doubt Mr. Stout?

Mr. HARDWICKE. I don't doubt his words, no. But I don't recall the incident you're talking about.

The CHAIRMAN. But he'd have no reason to make that story up.

Mr. HARDWICKE. No.

The CHAIRMAN. So if he tells you that he remembers that he was so shocked he called and said, listen to this, you believe him?

Mr. HARDWICKE. I think he said he asked some Board member to get on the other phone.

The CHAIRMAN. Specifically you.

Mr. HARDWICKE. And I don't recall it.

The CHAIRMAN. What's your first name, Charlie?

Mr. HARDWICKE. Mort.

The CHAIRMAN. He said Mort, get on here, Mort. He wouldn't make that up, would he?

Mr. HARDWICKE. No, sir, I don't think he would.

The CHAIRMAN. My time is almost over. Here at page 15 he says:

Answer: Yes, sir. He called over there about 30 minutes before a Board meeting, and I had to go in and tell the rest of the Board members what happened.

Question: Who were the other Board members at the time?

Answer: Well, let's see. Mort Hardwicke. I put Mort Hardwicke on the line when he called over there and let Mort listen to him. Tommy Edwards, George Wright, Betty Walker, and Mahlon Martin.

Question: OK, you were in the office when he called.

Answer: I was in the office of the Arkansas Housing Development Agency about 30 minutes before the scheduled time of the regular Board meeting to pass on the underwriters.

Question: And Mr. Hardwicke was in the room with you?

Answer: Yeah. I think I told Mort to pick up the phone and hear this, because it really surprised me when Bob called over.

Question: And did Mr. Hardwicke pick up the other phone?

Answer: I think he did. Don't quote me on this, but as I remember, I think he did.

Question: But unfortunately, Mr. Stout, because this is a deposition, you're being sworn.

See he wants to be a good guy. He didn't want to throw you in and it's not easy.

We do quote you. So if you could just give me the best recollection that you have.

Answer: The best recollection I have is that I had asked him to pick up the phone and he did.

Question: Did he participate in the conversation?

Answer: No, I think he just listened.

Question: OK. Now when you told Mr. Nash that it wasn't right to do this, what reaction did he have?

Answer: He said, well, that's the way we want it anyway.

Mr. Stout wouldn't have any reason to just throw you in, being an honorable person?

Mr. HARDWICKE. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Wright, you made this recommendation. You had a discussion. What prompted the discussion? You had already picked the underwriters the week before.

Mr. WRIGHT. Maybe that conversation could have. I don't know. That's what you're leading to. I think that prompted the discussion from what it sounds like, that's what prompted the discussion.

The CHAIRMAN. You heard that the Governor's office had called?

Mr. WRIGHT. I don't recall hearing that Bob Nash called over here and said do this.

The CHAIRMAN. But you'd heard about this call. Did you hear something about the fact that the Governor's office wanted some other participation, Lasater in particular?

Mr. WRIGHT. I don't recall that specifically.

The CHAIRMAN. That could have been, huh?

Mr. WRIGHT. I suppose it could.

The CHAIRMAN. You wouldn't have just picked them out of the air, you see. That's the thing.

Mr. WRIGHT. Without the discussion of the Board members.

The CHAIRMAN. You just wouldn't have picked them out unless there was some reason; right?

Mr. WRIGHT. Unless the majority of the Board members felt like that was the thing to do.

The CHAIRMAN. I'll stop at this point and we'll proceed.

Senator Murkowski.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR FRANK H. MURKOWSKI

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I wonder just as a follow-up, was Mr. Stout at that Board meeting when this was discussed, or was he in Europe?

The CHAIRMAN. He was in Europe at the time that this name was added. Is that right, Mr. Stout?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, I was on vacation.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You were part and party in the deposition when you acknowledge, and I quote, "I didn't consider it a choice. He made a suggestion"—talking about Nash—"and I usually go along with suggestions when it's made in the Governor's office."

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That's your statement?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So this was before, this conversation took place before you went to Europe?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir. I don't really remember.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Sir, you know you had an opportunity to discuss this with the other Board members prior to your departure for Europe?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir. Either me or Mr. Hardwicke did. I don't remember the exact date that Bob Nash called me.

Senator MURKOWSKI. But it's conceivable then, Mr. Wright, that this information came in from the Governor's office through Mr. Stout and was brought to your attention in the general discussion and that was the rationale under which the selection of the additional underwriter was made?

Mr. WRIGHT. I guess so, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So that may have been the manner in which this information—but you have no recollection of how or what motivated you to make that motion to include the other underwriter?

Mr. WRIGHT. The only thing that I vaguely remember about it is the Board members discussed adding other local underwriters to the deal.

Senator MURKOWSKI. There's no minutes to that meeting?

Mr. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Why?

Mr. WRIGHT. I would imagine that was done prior to a Board meeting. I'm not for sure.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I thought you said it was done at a Board meeting?

Mr. WRIGHT. That's when I made the motion.

Senator MURKOWSKI. In other words, it would have been discussed, you think, prior to a Board meeting in an informal discussion? You just don't recall whether or not there was a directive down from the Governor's office through Mr. Stout from Mr. Nash that you had better do this or else you're going to fall out of favor with the Governor's office?

Mr. WRIGHT. That's correct. I don't recall it being a directive.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That certainly seems to be the conclusion I would come to.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I'm going to yield here, but let me be clear. We are mixing two meetings up here, correct? Ms. Chandler?

Ms. CHANDLER. Sounds like it. It sounds like we are.

The CHAIRMAN. There are two meetings, no doubt about that.

Senator SARBANES. I don't think we're being very clear about it.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Stout first got a call in February.

Senator SARBANES. I'll develop it, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. As I recall, turn that light off because that certainly shouldn't be on their time.

Mr. Stout, you first got a call before a Board meeting, that's the one from Mr. Nash. You were surprised. You'd never gotten this. You turned to your friend, Mort. Mort, listen to this. This wasn't a pleasant experience, was it?

Mr. STOUT. No.

The CHAIRMAN. You even raised the question of the propriety of this. This had never taken place before; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. You remember with specificity that Nash said that they wanted 15 percent. You didn't just drag that number out someplace; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Thereafter, at another Board meeting, after the award had been made with respect to the housing, the three brokers, the lead broker being Merrill Lynch, at a subsequent meeting, Ms. Chandler, without it being on the agenda, you were not advised that there would be a motion to add another underwriter to that selection, were you?

Ms. CHANDLER. No, I wasn't.

The CHAIRMAN. Heretofore that had never taken place; correct?

Ms. CHANDLER. Not to my knowledge.

The CHAIRMAN. Did it ever take place while you were at the Agency thereafter, the same kind of thing, after a selection had been made, without notice, somebody made a motion to add another underwriter?

Ms. CHANDLER. This is the last issue that I was involved in before I left the Agency.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes, thank you for your patience.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Stout, when did you go on the Board?

Mr. STOUT. 1980.

Senator SARBANES. Was that by Gubernatorial appointment?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Who made that appointment?

Mr. STOUT. Governor Frank White.

Senator SARBANES. Was it for a fixed term of office?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. How long was that?

Mr. STOUT. Five years.

Senator SARBANES. Five years. How long did this conversation, by your account, that you said you had with Mr. Nash take place? How long did it last?

Mr. STOUT. Approximately 4 minutes.

Senator SARBANES. Now, Mr. Hardwicke, you do not remember this conversation?

Mr. HARDWICKE. I don't recall. I don't doubt Mr. Stout's word but I do not recall listening to Mr. Nash telling the Board that Lasater should get 15 percent.

Senator SARBANES. When did you put Mr. Hardwicke on the phone, by your account?

Mr. STOUT. After Bob and I talked a few minutes and he related this to me, I asked Mort to pick up the phone to hear this. I asked him to repeat it.

Senator SARBANES. Was that the extent then of the conversation?

Mr. STOUT. I don't recall. I don't know whether we discussed anything else or not.

Senator SARBANES. So you heard this from Nash, then you said to Mr. Hardwicke, get on the phone. Then you said to Nash, repeat what you said. Is that it? Is that what happened?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Did you then recount this occurrence to the members of the Board?

Mr. STOUT. I don't think I did.

Senator SARBANES. You didn't say anything to any of the other members?

Mr. STOUT. I don't think I did. I left that up to Mort.

Senator SARBANES. Why did you do that?

Mr. STOUT. I don't know.

Senator SARBANES. Did you tell Mort you didn't think this was right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, I did.

Senator SARBANES. Did you tell the other Board members that?

Mr. STOUT. I don't remember.

Senator SARBANES. You didn't think it was right. Is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. No, I didn't.

Senator SARBANES. But you didn't take any action to act on your beliefs that it wasn't right?

Mr. STOUT. No, I didn't.

Senator SARBANES. Then what happened at the Board meeting?

Mr. STOUT. I think we selected Lasater.

Senator SARBANES. Did you participate in that selection?

Mr. STOUT. I'm sure I did.

Senator SARBANES. Did you approve it?

Mr. STOUT. I was Chairman. I took the motions. And it was voted on. I didn't vote.

Senator SARBANES. And as Chairman, you didn't feel any responsibility to indicate to the Board members you didn't think this was the right thing to do?

Mr. STOUT. No, I didn't.

Senator SARBANES. Now have you recounted this to anyone else?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir. I related this to Frank White and Fallon Conway.

Senator SARBANES. Who is Fallon Conway and why did you tell him that?

Mr. STOUT. I was out at his house at a dinner at Frank White's to tell him that.

Senator SARBANES. What was Frank White's position at the time?

Mr. STOUT. I think he was with Commercial National Bank. I don't really know.

Senator SARBANES. Was he with Stephens & Company?

Mr. STOUT. I don't remember, I really don't.

Senator SARBANES. Do you remember when this was?

Mr. STOUT. In 1983, I think.

Senator SARBANES. Did Mr. White subsequently run against Governor Clinton?

Mr. STOUT. I think he did.

Senator SARBANES. When was that?

Mr. STOUT. Maybe 1984. I don't really remember.

Senator SARBANES. Did this issue come up in that campaign?

Mr. STOUT. No.

Senator SARBANES. I'm told that it was in 1986.

Mr. STOUT. I don't really remember.

Senator SARBANES. But you had this conversation with him ahead of that, I take it, from what you're telling me?

Mr. STOUT. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Kravitz.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Thank you, Senator Sarbanes.

Now, Mr. Stout, actually information available to this Committee indicates that in 1986, when Frank White ran against Governor Clinton again, actually former Governor White did raise alleged irregularities in bond underwriting contracts relating to Lasater & Company as a campaign issue. Do you have any recollection as to whether or not, at that time in 1986, Mr. White contacted you and said, Mr. Stout, can you remind me again what you told me back in 1983?

Mr. STOUT. I don't recall. 1986 is the year I had my stroke.

Mr. KRAVITZ. So you recall this one conversation in 1983 with Mr. White, and then no further conversations with Mr. White?

Sir, you have to answer for the reporter.

Mr. STOUT. No, I really don't.

Mr. KRAVITZ. And you have no recollection of the issue of Lasater & Company's bond underwriting contracts with the State arising during the 1986 Gubernatorial Campaign?

Mr. STOUT. No, I don't.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Other than your one conversation with former Governor White in 1983, and your conversation that you told us about just a moment ago with another man in Conway, I take it that's Conway, Arkansas?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. That your home town?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Other than those two conversations, have you spoken with anyone about this telephone conversation you say you had with Mr. Nash back in 1983 until the time you gave your deposition before this Committee last evening?

Mr. STOUT. I don't recall that I did.

Senator SARBANES. Since 1983 until last night, you didn't speak to anyone else about this?

Mr. STOUT. Not that I recall.

Mr. KRAVITZ. You indicated—well, let me back up for a moment. When Senator Sarbanes was asking you questions, you indicated that you were appointed to the Housing Development Authority Board in 1980; is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. That was for a 5-year fixed term?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Does the Governor's office or the Governor himself have the authority under Arkansas law to direct the Housing Authority to give a certain bond contract or a certain percentage of bond contracts to a particular firm?

Mr. STOUT. I have no idea.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Did you understand that the Housing Authority was an independent agency?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. You certainly understood that you served for a fixed term and could not be fired by the Governor. Is that right?

Mr. STOUT. I don't know that that's true but I suppose it was.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Ms. Chandler, do you know the answer to that?

Ms. CHANDLER. I don't know the answer to that.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Epes.

Mr. EPES. I think we serve at the Governor's pleasure.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Do you know the answer to that, Mr. Epes?

Mr. EPES. Yes. The Board members are appointed for a term. The Executive Director of the Agency served at the will of the Governor once the Board hired them.

Mr. KRAVITZ. So Mr. Stout, as a member of the Board, could not be fired by the Governor; is that correct?

Mr. EPES. Yes.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Stout, I assume you would agree this all happened a long time ago, 13 years ago?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. I certainly don't mean to embarrass you but I think you already mentioned that you have yourself had a stroke since that time in 1986?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. The reason he says you have to answer, Mr. Stout, is that the reporter can't pick up the nods. You have to say.

Mr. STOUT. I understand.

Mr. KRAVITZ. I appreciate that, Senator.

Is it fair to say, Mr. Stout, that you don't recall the exact words that you or Mr. Nash may or may not have said during that conversation that you now recall having with him back in 1983?

Mr. STOUT. No, I really don't.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Just to be clear, and I think you mentioned this in your deposition last night. Your memory of this conversation with Mr. Nash was that Mr. Nash simply made a suggestion to you as to what he thought the Board should do in relation to Lasater & Company. Is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. That's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. This was in the nature of a suggestion rather than a directive on the part of Mr. Nash?

Mr. STOUT. That's correct, yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. So in other words, regardless of the fact that you can't remember the exact words, you're perfectly clear that this was a suggestion, not a directive?

Mr. STOUT. I think that's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Just to build on that point, we now have had the opportunity to receive Mr. Nash's testimony here at these hearings twice and form our own opinions of his personality. But you told us that you knew Mr. Nash. Is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir, knew him well.

Mr. KRAVITZ. What was he like? Was he a forceful man? Was he a quiet man? Gentle?

Mr. STOUT. He was easygoing, not a demanding man.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Not a demanding man. Did you perceive, during this conversation that you remember having with Mr. Nash, that you were being threatened in any way?

Mr. STOUT. No, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Did you perceive that something would happen to you if, for example, you did not vote to include Lasater & Company in a particular percentage of the Board's bonds?

Mr. STOUT. No, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. You understood that this was still a decision to be made by the independent members of this independent board; is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Just to be clear, didn't you testify to this last night? I believe during this conversation you recall having with Mr. Nash, there was no mention of Governor Clinton's name, was there?

Mr. STOUT. No, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. It was Mr. Nash calling you, as you recall it?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Just one more question on the point of your memory. Do you recall telling a member of the staff of this Committee within the past several days, over the telephone—well, let me back up. Did you speak with a member of the staff of this Committee to set up your deposition for last night?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, I did.

Mr. KRAVITZ. When was that?

Mr. STOUT. Monday afternoon, I think.

Mr. KRAVITZ. It was Monday afternoon of this week, 2 days ago?

Mr. STOUT. Yes.

Mr. KRAVITZ. And was that Mr. O'Callaghan of the Majority staff that you spoke with?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, it was.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Now during that conversation, you agreed with Mr. O'Callaghan that your deposition would be taken by telephone last night?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. That's what happened last night, Tuesday night?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. During your conversation with Mr. O'Callaghan on Monday afternoon, did you tell Mr. O'Callaghan that your recollection of your conversation with Mr. Nash was that he asked you or suggested to you that Lasater & Company should be given 30 percent, not 15 percent but 30 percent of the Housing Authority's bond business?

Mr. STOUT. I don't think so. I don't recall even talking about it.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Now, Mr. Hardwicke, if I could ask you a few questions. I know Senator Sarbanes already touched on this. You have absolutely no recollection of being brought into a telephone conversation between Mr. Stout and Mr. Nash. Is that correct?

Mr. HARDWICKE. Mr. Stout stated that some Board member got on the phone and thought it might have been me. I don't recollect it but it's possible that I did. I'm not saying that I didn't, but I have no recollection of talking to Bob Nash of the Governor's office.

Mr. KRAVITZ. I just want to read to you an excerpt from your deposition before the Committee because I think it corroborates the testimony that you just gave. And I just want to ask you if it refreshes your memory any further. This is at page 44 of your deposition before this Committee. You were asked:

Question: Did the Governor's office ever identify a specific firm that they wanted to see get a certain amount of the underwriting business?

Answer: No, sir, not to me.

Question: Do you know if they did to anybody?

Answer: Not that I know anything about.

Question: So you never heard that?

Answer: I never heard it, no.

Was that your testimony at your deposition on page 44?

Mr. HARDWICKE. That's what it says, yes.

Mr. KRAVITZ. So would you agree that your testimony is certainly inconsistent with the notion that you were put on the telephone to listen to the conversation that Mr. Stout has testified having had with Mr. Nash?

Mr. HARDWICKE. Will you state that question again?

Mr. KRAVITZ. I'll try to do it a little bit better. Let me just actually sum it up this way. You have no recollection not only of hearing the conversation between Mr. Stout and Mr. Nash but you have no recollection of ever hearing that anyone in the Governor's office sought to influence the awarding of the Housing Authority's bonds. Is that correct?

Mr. HARDWICKE. After Bill Clinton was re-elected for the second time, I had an appointment with him. I said, what are you going to do about Stephens. And he said, "Well, Jack was against me, Whit was for me. Give them a fair shake." That was the end of the conversation.

Mr. KRAVITZ. So your only knowledge of the view of Governor Clinton after 1983 regarding the awarding of bond contracts was that Stephens, Inc. should get its fair share even though it had opposed Governor Clinton?

Mr. HARDWICKE. He said, "Whit was for me, Jack was against me." And they fought him pretty hard, the Stephens group. Whit was kind of out of it back then. I don't mean out of it. He was still the top dog but he was getting older.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Governor Clinton told you that both firms should get their fair share?

Mr. HARDWICKE. That's right. "Give them a fair shake," he said.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Feuer.

Mr. FEUER. Why don't we pursue this issue of whether or not the Stephens firm got a fair shake? In fact, whether all the local underwriting firms in Arkansas got a fair shake. Let's take a look at the Housing Agency Board Minutes of February 17, 1983. I think you all have those down there at the table.

Mr. Stout, you recall that Mr. Nash called you shortly before a Board meeting?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. FEUER. The Board meeting was to decide which underwriters would participate in the Housing Agency's single-family bonds?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. FEUER. Is it your recollection that after that phone call, that you or Mr. Hardwicke conveyed what Mr. Nash had told you to the other members of the Board?

Mr. STOUT. I think so, I'm not sure.

Mr. FEUER. Do you recall that the Board then voted to include the Lasater firm as one of the Agency's underwriters?

Mr. STOUT. I think that's correct.

Mr. FEUER. Mr. Stout, I'd like to direct your attention to page 4 of these Board Minutes of February 17th. At the top of the page there, the paragraph that carries over from page 3, the first sentence that begins on page 4 reads:

After allowing time for questions and discussion, Chairman Stout recommended that the Board allow the Housing Subcommittee to have final approval of the composition and breakdown of underwriters in the proposal.

Do you recall that? Do you recall recommending to the Board to allow a Subcommittee to decide which underwriters would participate in the single-family bonds?

Mr. STOUT. I really don't.

Mr. FEUER. You were Chairman of the Housing Agency at that time; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. FEUER. As Chairman of the Agency, you signed the copies of the Agency's Board Minutes; is that right? That's your signature on page 5?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir; right before the following meeting.

Mr. FEUER. You have no reason to think that the minutes aren't accurate when they report what happened at the Board meeting?

Mr. STOUT. No.

Mr. FEUER. You should have there minutes of another meeting that same day, a 1-page document, and it reads at the top, Minutes Arkansas Housing Development Agency Subcommittee Meeting.

The second paragraph there reads:

Chairman Stout called the meeting to order and stated that the purpose of the meeting was to discuss a proposed solution to the problems with the current Single-Family Bond Program. After discussion, it was determined that the composition and breakdown of underwriters in this proposal be as directed below. Dabbs Sullivan, Division of G.K. Baum Company and Blyth Eastman Paine Webber—60 percent. T.J. Raney & Sons, Stephens, Inc., Collins, Locke & Lasater Inc.—40 percent (13⅓rd percent each).

Mr. Stout, do you remember this?

Mr. STOUT. Not really. I really don't.

Mr. FEUER. You do not recall chairing a Subcommittee that selected the underwriters that would participate in the Agency's single-family bonds?

Mr. STOUT. No, I don't.

Mr. FEUER. In the first paragraph on that page, the second sentence reads: "The Subcommittee consisted of Chairman Charles Stout, Vice Chairman Mort Hardwicke, and Fred Dacus." Who is Fred Dacus?

Mr. STOUT. He was a realtor from Jonesboro, Arkansas.

Mr. FEUER. He was a member of the Housing Agency Board?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. FEUER. Who appointed him to the Board?

Mr. STOUT. I believe Governor White did.

Mr. FEUER. So the Subcommittee that selected the underwriters for the Agency's single-family bonds in February 1983, which included the Lasater firm for the first time, was composed of two appointees of Governor White and one appointee of Governor Clinton. Is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. It looks that way.

Mr. FEUER. Ms. Chandler, do you recall that the Agency was experiencing problems with the single-family bonds that had been underwritten previously at that time?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes, we were.

Mr. FEUER. Who had been the underwriter of those bonds?

Ms. CHANDLER. E.F. Hutton was the lead and Stephens, Inc. and T.J. Raney were the locals.

Mr. FEUER. Did Mr. Sullivan of the G.K. Baum Company and Paine Webber together come up with a proposal to restructure those bonds that had already been issued?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes, they did.

Mr. FEUER. Is that why the G.K. Baum Company and the Paine Webber firm were chosen as lead underwriters for the restructured single-family bonds?

Ms. CHANDLER. That's correct.

Mr. FEUER. Were the T.J. Raney & Sons, Stephens, Inc. and the Lasater firm included as local underwriters or co-managers for that issue?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes, they were.

Mr. FEUER. These minutes state that these three local firms—Raney, Stephens, Inc., and the Lasater firm shared equally in this issue. They each got the same share of those bonds. Is that right?

Ms. CHANDLER. That's correct.

Mr. FEUER. Do you have any reason to think that the Lasater firm received any larger share than is reflected in these minutes?

Ms. CHANDLER. No.

Mr. FEUER. Do you have any reason to think they had a special deal that was different from the underwriters?

Ms. CHANDLER. No.

Mr. FEUER. Do you have any reason to think that they didn't have to find purchasers for the bonds that they were allocated the same as the other underwriters did?

Ms. CHANDLER. No.

Mr. FEUER. What about the other members of the panel? Is anyone aware of the Lasater firm receiving a larger share than the other local firms?

Mr. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. FEUER. As far as the members of the panel are aware, these minutes are correct and the Lasater firm received the same share as the other local firms, the Raney firm and the Stephens firm? Is that right?

VOICES. Yes, sir.

Mr. FEUER. You should also have down at the table the minutes of an August 31, 1983 meeting of the Housing Agency Board.

Ms. CHANDLER. Excuse me, August what?

Mr. FEUER. August 31st. The sixth paragraph reads:

Mr. George Wright, Chairman of the Review & Recommendation Subcommittee, handed Chairman Stout the following recommendations and fee percentages.

This is for a subsequent issue of single-family bonds, I believe.

The following recommendations and fee percentages:

Senior Underwriters are Blyth Eastman Paine Webber—25 percent. Co-Senior are the First Boston Corporation—20 percent; and Prudential-Bache Securities—15 percent. Co-Managers are Collins, Locke & Lasater—10 percent; Dabbs Sullivan, Division of George K. Baum & Company, 10 percent; T.J. Raney & Sons, Inc.—10 percent; and Stephens, Inc.—10 percent. Chairman Stout called for a motion to accept the Subcommittee recommendations. Mr. Tommy Edwards made such a motion; Mr. James Branyan seconded; and the Board approved.

Mr. Stout, you remember this?

Mr. STOUT. No.

Mr. FEUER. Mr. Wright, do you have any reason to believe that the minutes are incorrect and that the Lasater firm received some larger share of the bonds that were being underwritten?

Mr. WRIGHT. No, sir, I believe this is correct.

Mr. FEUER. It is your recollection that all the local firms in Arkansas shared equally when it came to underwriting Housing Agency's bonds?

Mr. WRIGHT. I believe that's correct, sir.

Mr. FEUER. Mr. Hardwicke, you were on the Housing Agency Board in 1983. Did you think at that time it would be a good idea for the Housing Agency to use a greater number of underwriters, more underwriters?

Mr. HARDWICKE. That's always been my feeling that the more participation of local underwriters, the better off we would be, yes.

Mr. FEUER. Why did you have that belief? Why did you think you would be better off?

Mr. HARDWICKE. I figured they could make some money out of it and spend it in Arkansas.

Mr. FEUER. Mr. Wright, do you remember Board members discussing at that time that the Agency should use more local underwriters?

Mr. WRIGHT. Yes, sir, I do.

Mr. FEUER. Why did you think it would be a good idea for the Board to use more local underwriters?

Mr. WRIGHT. We thought it was a good idea to include more local underwriters or as many as we could on the issues to kind of spread the business around.

Mr. FEUER. Ms. Chandler, do you recall the Housing Agency Board members discussing using a greater number of underwriters for the Agency's bond offering?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes, I do.

Mr. FEUER. What were those discussions?

Ms. CHANDLER. Just that the bidding would be more competitive if we included other bond underwriters.

Mr. FEUER. Did you think it would be a good idea for the Agency to use more bond underwriters?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes.

Mr. FEUER. Why was that?

Ms. CHANDLER. The same reason. We'd had the same local underwriters for 3 years and the same elite underwriter for 4 years. If underwriters know that they are going to get the next bond issue that we decide to sell, then how competitive are they going to be. So if you include other underwriting firms, you get lower bids.

Mr. FEUER. Which were the lead underwriters and the other underwriters that the Agency had been using for 4 years?

Ms. CHANDLER. E.F. Hutton, Stephens, Inc., and T.J. Raney.

Mr. FEUER. Mr. Epes, you joined the Housing Agency as Executive Director in 1983; is that right?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. FEUER. Is it your impression that in the course of 1983, the Housing Agency began to use a greater number of underwriters?

Mr. EPES. It's more than an impression, it's a fact, yes, sir.

Mr. FEUER. Why was that?

Mr. EPES. Whenever I began my appointment on there, everyone I talked to about the interest that they had and the involvement of underwriters was that they felt that we needed to involve as many underwriters as possible because we would get better ideas and better pricing on bonds and better ideas about new structures of bonds and keep up with what's going on in the marketplace.

Mr. FEUER. You served at the Housing Agency until it became the Development Finance Authority in 1985; is that right?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir. And then continued on through 1988, yes, sir.

Mr. FEUER. Through 1988. Did the Development Finance Authority continue to use a greater number of underwriters in their bond offerings?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir, we did.

Mr. FEUER. Was the Lasater firm the only underwriter that the Agency added to its list of underwriters after 1983?

Mr. EPES. No. There were occasions when we added co-managers for various reasons throughout that period of time. We normally did not select a senior manager in that manner, but for co-managers, it was not a big deal basically because they were not the ones that did most of the work on the financing. The main expertise we asked them to have was the ability to market the bonds itself, and not help us structure and work up the financing and do all of the work in preparation of issuing bonds.

Mr. FEUER. Our time is up, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Murkowski.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I am going to refer back to something that we have gone over to some extent that I think needs further evaluation.

Mr. Stout, relative to your deposition where you said this was when Mr. Nash called you to tell you to include Lasater in the underwriting group, and you said it was the first time he ever called you that day that you recall, I gather that's correct?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir, I think that's correct.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So it had a lasting impression, obviously, and the question was asked, "Was it your impression that this was a pretty important message?" And you said, "Yes." Then the question was asked, "That's why you and the other Board members decided to put Lasater & Company in underwriting groups with the AHDA bond yields; is that right?" You answered, "Yes, sir."

Now, Mr. Feuer was saying that you weren't threatened or that you weren't forced into putting anything in including Lasater's firm in underwritings, but that was the practical effect of Mr. Nash's request. And when you were asked, "Did you really have a choice?" You responded, "I didn't consider it a choice. He made a suggestion, and I usually go by suggestions when it's in the Governor's office." From that, I would assume that your interpretation was that Mr. Nash had the authority to deliver that message from the Governor's office?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. And you assumed that was the message of course Mr. Nash was carrying from the Governor since it was in the name of the Governor's office?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. There was no doubt about that?

Mr. STOUT. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. The next question was, "So when the Governor's office says do something, you do it; is that right?" And your response was, "Yes, sir."

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You indicated here in my presence that you felt uncomfortable about that kind of process but nevertheless you were aware that it was a direct message and it should be carried out; otherwise there would be consequences or the implication of that. Is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I am a little concerned with the fact that, at some point in time, you shared that information with Mort Hardwicke and he was on the same call with you, or he was asked to listen to this. Is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, that's what I recall. I think it was Mort.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You think it was Mort. He was there with you, or your recollection is that he was there with you?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. This was when the call came in?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. In listening, did you have a phone, did you press a button?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So you had a conference call. Was anybody else present at that time or just the two of you?

Mr. STOUT. I don't recall anybody else being present.

Senator MURKOWSKI. No secretary or anyone else?

Mr. STOUT. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Did you converse after the conclusion, after Mort Hardwicke allegedly listened to the call, after you were completed, did you discuss it?

Mr. STOUT. I don't really recall.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You don't recall. Now this was a pretty significant call.

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. It was in effect an order from the Governor. There's no question about the intent of Mr. Nash's message. It was take care of this. I find it extraordinary that Mort Hardwicke wouldn't remember or have any recollection. It might have occurred, Mr. Hardwicke, but you don't know?

Mr. HARDWICKE. No, I don't recollect it. But you're talking about 14 years ago.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, yes, but it's pretty significant. We have one witness who recalls sharing a call with you and I gather you have no recollection?

Mr. HARDWICKE. I have no recollection of it.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Yet this was discussed at some point in time among the Board members because this somehow resulted in Mr. Wright suggesting or initiating by a process of introducing an additional underwriter in the form of a motion to the Board. Correct, Mr. Wright? Basically along those lines you saw fit to do this?

Mr. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You didn't do it on your own volition?

Mr. WRIGHT. I didn't just pull that out of the blue sky. There had been some discussion about adding more underwriters. I made the motion and the Board voted to pass that.

Senator MURKOWSKI. But you don't recall any minutes of a Board meeting where it was discussed?

Mr. WRIGHT. No, sir, I do not.

Senator MURKOWSKI. We have one, two, three, four members of the Board, five members of the Board here with us, four former members, whatever, three?

You didn't keep minutes of your discussion before a formal action? Did somebody propose or the discussion suggested that? Or that there was a communication from the Governor's office suggesting we add another underwriter?

Mr. WRIGHT. I don't recall any.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I would like to get back, Mr. Wright, to your explanation of just how you came up with this motion because it sounds to me like there's some effort here to not try and remember a process that ordinarily is done by committee action, and it was initiated by you. One member, I believe, you were what, out of the country at the time of that meeting, Mr. Stout?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So you remember clearly you were out of the country. Mort Hardwicke you were there?

Mr. HARDWICKE. Probably yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You don't recall a Board meeting either?

Mr. HARDWICKE. No, I don't recall it.

Senator MURKOWSKI. But you recall Mr. Wright, vividly, introducing this motion?

Mr. WRIGHT. I recall it by looking at these minutes. It says that I made the motion. I remember there was some discussion about adding more local underwriters to all our issues. I did make the motion. I mean, it's in the record.

Senator MURKOWSKI. According to Mr. Stout's deposition, pages 30 and 31, Mr. Hardwicke casually discussed Mr. Nash's request with each Board member. Is that right?

Mr. HARDWICKE. Repeat that question.

Senator MURKOWSKI. According to Mr. Stout's deposition, Mr. Hardwicke casually discussed Mr. Nash's request with each Board member. Is that right?

Mr. HARDWICKE. I don't recall that.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You don't recall that. I find it hard to believe that you don't remember anything but I suppose those things can happen.

Explain for me, Mr. Stout, the reaction that you had when you received the letter from Stephens indicating their withdrawal of their willingness to underwrite? That must have sent a few waves through the Board and I noted that all the Board members were copied, including Linda Trent and a copy went to then-Governor Bill Clinton. When an underwriter drops off an underwriting, and puts in the letter, with outside interferences by political and other interests as one of their concerns over the actions contemplated by the Arkansas Board, that also suggests you investigate more carefully whether the added company meets the standards of capital and experience.

Then in the last paragraph, it says, "With reluctance, we are withdrawing from this issue. Hopefully, this action will not preclude us"—and so forth. That's a pretty strong message to a Board expressing concern, and you have lost an underwriter here. What was the attitude of the Board relative to this? Was there disappointment? Was there any action? Was it shared that we ought to consider the recommendations of this firm, Stephens, Inc., one of the bigger, better, and larger firms? Mr. Stout, do you have any reflection on what kind of waves this sent to the Board when it came through?

Mr. STOUT. I don't distinctly remember getting this letter. I remember it surprised me, and I think we discussed it with Linda, didn't we?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I wonder, Ms. Chandler, what was the reaction? You said you discussed it. Maybe you and Mr. Stout can explain what your discussion covered.

Ms. CHANDLER. I knew that the letter was coming and I called Mr. Stout and told him that that was what Stephens was planning to do.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Why did you know it was coming?

Ms. CHANDLER. I was told by a representative from Stephens.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Ms. Chandler, did you communicate that to any other member?

Ms. CHANDLER. No, I did not. I called Charlie Stout and no one else.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Hardwicke.

Ms. CHANDLER. No, I did not.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Did you communicate that information, Mr. Stout, with any other members of the Board?

Mr. STOUT. Not to my knowledge.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Any explanation as to why you wouldn't?

Mr. STOUT. I think I met with Gene Wilbourn over this letter and we discussed it.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Ms. Chandler, you felt your action was adequate in just mentioning it to Mr. Stout?

Ms. CHANDLER. I didn't just mention it to him. I called him and told him.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Do you recall calling or talking to any other members?

Ms. CHANDLER. I did not.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You have no recollection of that?

Ms. CHANDLER. I did not talk to any other members. I talked to Charles Stout as the the Chairman and that's all.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Isn't it in the ordinary course of events that something of this sort would come to the attention of all the Board since all the Board were copied by this letter?

Ms. CHANDLER. Ask that again, please.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Wouldn't it be anticipated that the other Board members would be advised or that this would be a subject on the agenda for a meeting so that it could be discussed because it is a pretty significant thing. Here is an underwriter that's been around with a good reputation, decides to drop off and leave some interesting innuendoes about political influence dominating a process that an independent board has set up to ensure that those kinds of influences don't persist. But nothing was done.

Ms. CHANDLER. To my knowledge, I was not included in any meetings, but if they are copied, wouldn't you assume they got the copy at the same time as we did?

Senator MURKOWSKI. I would assume so.

Mr. Hardwicke, do you recall getting a copy of this letter?

Mr. HARDWICKE. No, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You do not recall?

Mr. HARDWICKE. No, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Even though you could have got the copy and just not had a recollection of it?

Mr. HARDWICKE. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Wright.

Mr. WRIGHT. I remember them resigning off of the issue but as far as getting that specific letter, I'm sure I did if it was carbon copied to me.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Now just one more time, Mr. Wright. If you would take me through the process that caused you to initiate your recommendation that the Board take action to include the Lasater firm?

Mr. WRIGHT. I made the motion to the Board.

Senator MURKOWSKI. But let's go back. Was it on the agenda?

Mr. WRIGHT. No, sir. In the end, I don't know that it has to be on the agenda.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, it probably doesn't, but oftentimes those are on approved agendas, but this particular time, as far as you know, it wasn't. You made the motion. What caused you to make the motion?

Mr. WRIGHT. I believe that the Board members had discussed a desire to increase the number of local underwriters on our issues.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Wright, let me ask you something, if I might. Wouldn't it be more accurate to suggest that the Board members had discussed not just adding more local members but adding the firm of Collins, Locke & Lasater?

Mr. WRIGHT. That very well could be, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You see—

Mr. WRIGHT. That's a local firm, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand that, but it wasn't a generic thing. It wasn't that we're going to add all of the local firms. Here you had a call. And you don't doubt Mr. Stout's veracity, do you, Mr. Wright? You worked with Mr. Stout for a number of years on that Board, didn't you?

Mr. WRIGHT. A few years.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't doubt him as a man of integrity and veracity, his truthfulness, do you?

Mr. WRIGHT. I'm not doubting that.

The CHAIRMAN. So when he recounts to the Board that he got a call from the Governor's office and he put his friend Mort on the phone, and then you discussed this, it didn't just drop in out of the air, as you said before. You added the firm of Collins, Locke & Lasater because that was what had come down. The Board members didn't just dream this up themselves, hey, we want to add extra members. You got a call with respect to this firm.

Mr. WRIGHT. There again, I am not for sure when it came, whether it came, what the date was.

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Chandler, you've been there before. This has never happened where you added somebody after the initial award; is that correct?

Ms. CHANDLER. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Stout, with specificity, you got the request to give them 15 percent. Is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You remember this. By the way, I understand how it is that no one could remember a specific meeting on August 31st or on July 7th, or whenever it is. Who could remember a specific meeting? But you remember incidences of some significance. Isn't that correct? You wouldn't remember the date but you'd remember, yes, at this time, I got a call from the Governor's office. Isn't that why you remember that, Mr. Stout?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Because you never really did get calls from the Governor's office heretofore as it related to picking a particular firm. Is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. That's why it made an impression.

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Otherwise, you would not have remembered, would you?

Mr. STOUT. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't remember any of those meetings really in actuality. If you see a thing that says you were at a meeting and you made a motion, you will say, well, if it says I was there and I made a motion, then I wouldn't dispute it; correct?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Isn't that the way you are all really testifying?

Mr. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You can't remember with actual specificity. One more time, Mr. Hardwicke, you have known Mr. Stout, and you have worked with him for a number of years. There was something about—I'll come back to you.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Let me just make a chronology very briefly because I think it'll help where we are, and I won't be more than 1 minute.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't believe that.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, try me.

[Laughter.]

On February 17th, Nash calls Mr. Stout. February 17th, Lasater is included. April 12th, the underwriters were chosen for another issue. Lasater loses the bid. April 19th, Lasater added by the back door on a motion by Mr. Wright. April 28th, Stephens, Inc. pulls out in outrage, a Little Rock firm. Then the consequences of Nash's call on behalf, at the direction of the Governor results in Lasater getting a 13 percent portion guaranteed, which was not something that didn't happen. That really happened. That was an actuality.

So the sequence of events from the Governor ordering it to be done to the consequences are evident, and as far as influence peddling is concerned, this is a classic case.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me, if I might, and the red light is on, but I think we can wrap this up, and I will yield obviously to Senator Sarbanes, so he can make his observations or ask any questions before we wrap this up. A lot has been made about who appointed you, who didn't appoint you, what happened, you'd lose your job. I mean, you didn't get paid for any of this, did you? Mr. Hardwicke, you didn't get paid?

Mr. HARDWICKE. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. This was an honor, it was a responsibility but you didn't get paid anything, did you?

Mr. HARDWICKE. Never.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Wright.

Mr. WRIGHT. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Stout.

Mr. STOUT. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. So your positions were such that you gave of your own time to your community and to your State, and obviously there was a recognition as it accorded you some stature in the community; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. So it isn't a question that you were going to lose a job if you do or if you don't do. You were appointed by Governor White; is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. Right.

The CHAIRMAN. But you had a sense and an obligation to whoever the next Governor was; is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that why you eventually went along? You were not happy but you went along? You felt it was coming from the Governor's office; right?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that a fair interpretation?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Chandler, when did you become the Executive Director, first the Acting Executive Director?

Ms. CHANDLER. I think it was the early part of 1983.

Senator SARBANES. 1983?

Ms. CHANDLER. Correct.

Senator SARBANES. When did you become the Director?

Ms. CHANDLER. A couple months after that.

Senator SARBANES. You went to see Governor Clinton about becoming Director; is that correct?

Ms. CHANDLER. I did.

Senator SARBANES. It was an appointment by him to be made by him or by the Board or what?

Ms. CHANDLER. No, it was not. The Executive Director's position was hired by the Board of Directors, but as a courtesy, they would always run the name by the Governor's office.

Senator SARBANES. What did you indicate to the Governor when you went to see him?

Ms. CHANDLER. I'm sorry, I didn't hear the question.

Senator SARBANES. What did you indicate to the Governor when you sent to see him? That was Governor Clinton; right?

Ms. CHANDLER. Clinton. I indicated to him my qualifications for the position in the hope that the Board of Directors did run my name by him, he would know who I was and that I was capable of handling that position.

Senator SARBANES. What did he say to you?

Ms. CHANDLER. He thanked me for coming over and shook my hand, and I did not have any indication when I left the office whether or not this would happen. I didn't know if I would become the Executive Director or not.

Senator SARBANES. Did you tell him you had run the Agency in a very business like fashion without any favoritism on a straight merit basis?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes, I did.

Senator SARBANES. Then you were named a couple of weeks thereafter to become the Executive Director?

Ms. CHANDLER. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Then when did you step down as Executive Director?

Ms. CHANDLER. I believe I left the Agency in June or July 1983.

Senator SARBANES. Why did you do that?

Ms. CHANDLER. I was offered a position with Lomas & Nettleton Mortgage Company.

Senator SARBANES. A more attractive position I take it?

Ms. CHANDLER. I think it was to me.

Senator SARBANES. Is that when you came in, Mr. Epes?

Mr. EPES. Yes. I think there was an interim period. Mr. C. E. Anderson, I believe, served as Acting Director for some period of time. And I began work on the 15th of September, 1983, yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Stout, Chairman D'Amato said that you recounted to the Board this phone call that you had with Bob Nash. But as I understood your testimony earlier, you didn't recount it to the Board. Is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. Would you repeat the question?

Senator SARBANES. Chairman D'Amato said that you had recounted the phone call from Nash to the Board, and I understood your testimony earlier to be that you had not told them.

Mr. STOUT. I don't think I did. I don't think I recounted it to the Board members.

Senator SARBANES. You didn't tell anyone about it; is that right?

Mr. STOUT. I don't recall.

Senator SARBANES. Now did you say earlier you're from Conway?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Is Judge Johnson from Conway, the former member of the Arkansas Supreme Court?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Do you know one another?

Mr. STOUT. Vaguely.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Hardwicke, you don't recollect being put on the phone and listening in on the conversation that Mr. Stout reported with Mr. Nash; is that correct?

Mr. HARDWICKE. I don't recall it. I don't doubt Mr. Stout's word but I do not recall.

Senator SARBANES. You don't have any independent recollection of it?

Mr. HARDWICKE. No, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Do you recall his statement that you then went around and talked to the other Board members? Is that your statement, Mr. Stout, that he went around and talked to the other Board members?

Mr. STOUT. Probably.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, I'm going to ask that we give to Mr. Stout, and ask one of our people to refer him to page 30 where his testimony starts. This is the deposition that you gave. Would somebody assist him please? I want to make sure that he has it and it's pointed out to him. The bottom of the page where the whole question came up, page 30, where it's Mr. O'Callaghan and Mr. Stout, and then it goes: "OK, Mr. Stout, after you approached each of the Board members about including Lasater's firm in the offer, didn't you have any further conversation?"

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, let me finish my question.

The CHAIRMAN. Let him take a look at his deposition. We want to be fair. Let him go over it. We have done that with all of the witnesses, so that they can go over it. And I will insist upon that so that he can go through it, instead of people indicating what he said or what he didn't say. Let him read it over because it can get confusing.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Stout, once you have had a chance to, in effect, educate yourself from your deposition, I'll come back with some questions. The Chairman is very anxious that you do that obviously before we have a question and answer, instead of depending on your recollection here today at this hearing.

The CHAIRMAN. I suggest that you read that starting at the bottom of line 12, "After you approached each of the Board members about including Lasater's firm, did you have any further conversations on any other subject?"

I want you to see what you said there. "I don't think so. Mort was Vice Chairman. I think I approached him or them. I think he approached them. I don't think I approached them. I don't remember." Read what you go on to say for the next 7 or 8 lines on the next page.

Senator SARBANES. OK, Mr. Stout. How did it happen?

[Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. If I were you, I'd read it right back.

Mr. STOUT. Just like it's written.

Senator SARBANES. How is that, because it's written in a lot of different ways here. Some of it isn't consistent with some of the rest of it. Why don't you just tell us how it happened?

Mr. STOUT. Just like it's written.

Senator SARBANES. Which means what?

Mr. STOUT. You tell me.

Senator SARBANES. Did you tell Mr. Hardwicke about it?

Mr. STOUT. Just like it's written.

Senator SARBANES. That's not an answer, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, I think if we go through it with him.

Senator SARBANES. He has the deposition in front of him, let him answer the question. Did you tell Mr. Hardwicke or not?

The CHAIRMAN. Did you tell Mr. Hardwicke about it?

Mr. STOUT. Sure I told him about it.

The CHAIRMAN. Was it your impression that he advised—

Senator SARBANES. It's my time. Did you tell other members of the Board about it?

Mr. STOUT. No, sir.

Senator SARBANES. You didn't tell any of the other members?

Mr. STOUT. Not to my memory, I didn't.

Senator SARBANES. Is it your testimony that Mr. Hardwicke went around and told all the other members?

Mr. STOUT. It's my recollection that he did.

Senator SARBANES. That he then went and told all the other members?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Is that your recollection, Mr. Hardwicke?

Mr. HARDWICKE. Sir, speak a little louder.

Senator SARBANES. Is that your recollection? Mr. Stout is telling us that you went around and told all the other members? Do you recall that?

Mr. HARDWICKE. No, sir, I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. Could it have been the case, not that you don't remember?

Mr. HARDWICKE. Yes, it's possible certainly. We are talking about 13, 14 years ago.

The CHAIRMAN. When Mr. Stout says that he advised you, and it was his impression that you advised the other members because Mr. Wright did make the eventual motion, you would have no reason not to believe that to be the case, do you?

Mr. HARDWICKE. No, I don't.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Wright, do you recall being told this at this February meeting?

Mr. WRIGHT. I just recall in general terms that we had conversations about adding additional ones and, as the Chairman says, this particular one. And I made the motion.

Senator SARBANES. No, that was at a later meeting. I want to separate out these two meetings because these two meetings get continually confused here today.

There was one meeting in February, there was a later meeting in April. The questioning has come along as though the two meetings are one meeting, and we have to separate out the two meetings. The April meeting is the one where Lasater was added to, as I understand it, an already existing proposition. The February meeting, that dealt with an entirely different bond issue, as I understand it. Is that correct, Ms. Chandler?

Ms. CHANDLER. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. The February meeting dealt with an entirely different bond issue than the April meeting. Is that correct?

Ms. CHANDLER. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. What did the February meeting deal with?

Ms. CHANDLER. Single-family housing issue.

Senator SARBANES. What did the April meeting deal with?

Ms. CHANDLER. The multifamily housing.

Senator SARBANES. In the February meeting, Mr. Wright, do you recall Mr. Hardwicke coming around and telling you about this phone call from the Governor's office?

Mr. WRIGHT. Specifically, no, sir. I don't recall him coming and talking to me about it.

Senator SARBANES. Pardon?

Mr. WRIGHT. I do not recall Mr. Hardwicke coming and talking to me about that specifically.

Senator SARBANES. So you don't remember?

Mr. WRIGHT. I don't recall, no, sir.

Senator SARBANES. And you don't recall, Mr. Hardwicke?

Mr. HARDWICKE. No, sir. I saw a document this morning that indicated that Lasater & Company had only received 1 percent of the bond proceeds business and that the Arkansas Finance and Development—

Senator SARBANES. I don't think we had a document like that.

Mr. HARDWICKE. I read it somewhere this morning.

Senator SARBANES. The percentage was higher than that.

Mr. HARDWICKE. Over the period of years, up until I guess the Arkansas Finance and Development Authority, after they changed the name of it, their percent of the business was 1 percent.

Senator SARBANES. You mean through Frank White's term?

Mr. HARDWICKE. From the time of the inception of the Agency until I guess right now. I don't know whether they are doing business with Arkansas Finance and Development, or not.

Senator SARBANES. I don't know. Isn't it the case that this bond business, before Governor Clinton's second term, was very tightly controlled in Arkansas, and went to only a couple of local firms? Is that the case?

Mr. HARDWICKE. Correct.

Senator SARBANES. The Governor made it clear that he wanted to open it up and include additional bond houses; is that correct?

Mr. HARDWICKE. I suppose that's correct. I don't know. He never mentioned it to me but he may have to somebody. I always had the feeling it needed to be spread around.

Senator SARBANES. I think Betsey Wright testified here that they wanted more competition. In fact, Ms. Chandler, you indicated it was a very non-competitive situation since the work was going to a small number of houses over and over again. Is that correct?

Ms. CHANDLER. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. So the inclusion of more houses would increase the competition and might well lead to a better deal for the State. Would that be correct?

Ms. CHANDLER. That would be correct.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Kravitz.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Thank you, Senator Sarbanes.

I just wanted to clarify one point. It was stated during the Majority's time, Mr. Stout, that the call you received was the Governor ordering the Housing Authority Board to do something, and I just wanted to make sure that your testimony is clear on that point.

You testified earlier that at least as far as you can recall your conversation with Mr. Nash back in 1983, there was no mention of Mr. Clinton's name during that conversation; correct?

Mr. STOUT. That's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. You, to the extent you can remember this conversation at all, viewed it as a call from Mr. Nash, not from the Governor; correct?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Just one other point. You testified, when I was asking you questions before, and you also testified at your deposition last night at page 78, that you understood that there would be no consequences, nothing would happen to you or to the Board if you rejected the suggestion of Bob Nash as far as you recall it; is that correct?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. We just did an analysis of a document that I believe Mr. Epes may have prepared bearing Bates Number DKSND 26126 through 26128. It is bond issues between 1983 and 1986. These are the ones when Mr. Lasater first got involved with that first single-family issue, and there were 15 issues between 1983 and 1986 involving single- or multifamily housing. Lasater was included in 14 of the issues. George Baum in 15, T.J. Raney in 14, Stephens in 9, Paine Webber in 9, Merrill Lynch in 5, and Pru Bache in 2, First Boston in 2.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. I want to thank all of the witnesses. It is not easy to attempt to recall. I believe all of the witnesses testified as truthfully as they possibly could given the circumstances. You cannot recall with particularity an exact meeting at an exact time or when you made a motion for something. And I don't think any of this is easy on those of you, particularly the people who served on Boards and now find themselves dragged in through no consequences of their own actions.

So I thank you for taking the time and for the imposition and the difficulties that you are having to be here and give depositions required. We are deeply appreciative of the fact that you have tried to do the best that you can in reconstructing the events that took place 13-plus years ago.

So you have the thanks of the Committee.

We stand in recess until next Tuesday.

[Whereupon, at 4:10 p.m., the Committee was recessed, to reconvene on Tuesday, May 7, 1996, at a time specified.]

Memo to File

David Collins Inv.

October 14, 1986

Michael Jerome Drake is willing to give a statement about his use and distribution of cocaine.

He went to work for Collins, Locke, & Lasater in the middle of September in 1982 and left the firm in the fall of 1983. He left because of the availability of cocaine and also the bad reputation the Collins, Locke, & Lasater firm had with the abuse of cocaine in the community. Prior to going to work for the firm he told David Collins about the bad reputation Collins, Locke, & Lasater had for its cocaine abuse and David Collins said, "This firm is cocaine free and we just fired a man for cocaine use".

The first time he remembers snorting cocaine was at Tommy Tullies' house, located on Evergreen in Little Rock, Arkansas. After he went to work for Collins, Locke, & Lasater he saw both Tommy Tullies and George Locke in possession of a two-gram vial of cocaine each. He can't remember whether Tommy Tullies or George Locke gave him some cocaine but he took 1 or 2 bumps of the cocaine that was offered to him at this same party. He also saw Walter West, David Collins, and Paula Collins in possession of cocaine.

The next time he remembers using cocaine was at the Collins, Locke & Lasater Christmas party, held at the Capitol Club on December 11, 1982. When he walked into the classroom at the Capitol Club he saw both Dan Lasater and George Locke in possession of a two-gram vial of cocaine. He received several bumps of the cocaine from both men.

According to Drake Chuck Berry came to work for Dan Lasater in the spring of 1983. Shortly afterwards Chuck started supplying cocaine to anyone who wanted it.

Drake stated that in the fall of 1983 he started using cocaine on a daily basis. His sources of cocaine during this time period were Chuck Berry and Herbie Douglas.

It became obvious to him that Dan Lasater was using cocaine as a tool to manipulate his peers and force them to serve as a buffer between the authorities and his cocaine abuse. The people that Michael Drake noticed that Dan Lasater used as buffers were George Locke, Tommy Tullies, Jay DeHaven, Tommy Carter, Chuck Berry and himself. Lasater also considered these people loyal to him because he used cocaine to control them for his benefit. Drake also noticed Dan Lasater using George Locke, Clarence Strahan, Jay DeHaven, and Chuck Berry to carry his cocaine for him. Dan Lasater discussed on several occasions with Michael Drake about the decision to surround himself with police officers in order to make himself look like he is a good citizen. Another way he used to project this image was getting his wife, Linda, and himself involved in community projects, such as the Florence Crittenden Home Services for unwed mothers and the Arthritis Foundation. Drake said it was a joke around the office that Dan was instrumental in putting several of the young unwed mothers in Florence Crittenden Home. In 1984 Jim Alexander, Chuck Berry, Patsy Thomas, and Dan Lasater flew in Dan's jet to Belize, Honduras to allegedly buy a cattle ranch. Michael Drake says he later heard around the office that it was also a trip to buy cocaine. Jim Alexander is a farmer from Scott, Arkansas and is in business with Clarois Crisp. They formed a company called "Laser Systems". He has since found out that Jim Alexander is a follower of Soldier of Fortune magazine. On this particular trip Lasater was having trouble purchasing land in Honduras. The main problem in the transaction was the Honduras Land Commissioner. Drake was told that while the above mentioned people were having dinner with the United States Ambassador to Honduras, Jim Alexander allegedly made the statement, "Why don't we take the Land Commissioner out". He understood this statement by Jim Alexander to mean "Why don't we kill the Land Commissioner".

Michael Drake bought cocaine or marijuana from the following people:

1. Chuck Berry, a minimum of 11 times from the first part to the latter part of 1984. Each of the purchases would range from 1 to 2 grams of cocaine at a time.
2. Berole Douglas, a minimum of 12 times from the fall of 1984 until the spring of 1985. Each of the purchases were one gram at a time.
3. Nathan Calhoun, from 3 to 3 times. Each of the purchases were one ounce of marijuana at a time. All of the above mentioned purchases were all done in the fall of 1984. Drake and Calhoun also did cocaine together 3 to 4 times around this same time span.
4. Bucky Clayton, more than 12 times in 1 to 6-gram purchases of cocaine at a time. The purchases were from November of 1984 to the winter of 1985. Drake remembers one of the purchases was done on the day prior to the opening day of duck season in 1985. This 2-gram purchase was made on Friday, November 22, 1985. Lynn Kemper and Drake would split the purchases of cocaine most of the time. Lynn Kemper made 3 or 6 purchases around the same time from Bucky Clayton and he and Drake split these purchases.
5. Dan Lasater gave Drake 2 grams of cocaine around Christmas of 1983. A few days later Drake wrote Dan Lasater a check for $133 for the two grams of cocaine. The note in the left bottom corner of the check "Loan".

Dan Lasater bragged to Drake that Larry Rosenfield was a man who was bringing large quantities of cocaine from Aspen to Arkansas. Larry Rosenfield and Drake did cocaine together on 3 or 4 different occasions. In the early summer of 1983 Larry Rosenfield approached Drake about buying 1/2 pound of cocaine from him. Drake told him that he was crazy and told him he wasn't interested.

Tommy Carter and Drake were returning to Little Rock after Frank Broyles was inducted into the Sports Hall of Fame when they ran into Chuck Berry at the Atlanta Airport. The date was around December 6, 1983. When they got to the airport in Little Rock, Arkansas Chuck Berry asked Tommy Carter and Drake if they wanted some good cocaine. They followed Chuck Berry to his van where he took his money belt off and produced 4 clear plastic bags of cocaine. Chuck Berry had enough cocaine to fill approximately 4 coffee cups. Chuck got his cocaine grinder out and ground them some cocaine up to a snort. All three did several bumps of Chuck Berry's cocaine.

On Derry Day of 1984, Drake saw Reggie Taylor selling cocaine in the men's restroom at the Arlington Hotel in Hot Springs, Arkansas. This date was April 21, 1984. Prior to entering the bathroom Drake heard from a source that Reggie was selling the cocaine in the bathroom. When he entered the door he saw Reggie Taylor handing a folded piece of paper to an individual and the individual handed Reggie Taylor some money. Taylor told Drake he had 7 or 8 grams of cocaine left. For $100 a gram. Drake told him he wasn't interested in any of his cocaine. Reggie and Drake have done cocaine together on 7 or 8 different occasions.

Drake remembers on Derry Day of 1983 after eating dinner at the Captain's Walk in Hot Springs Dan Lasater asked him if he wanted some cocaine. As they were walking out the door Dan Lasater instructed Chuck Berry to give Drake 2 grams of cocaine.

David Collins provided Drake with cocaine on 4 or 5 different occasions. On each of these occasions they did 2 or 3 bumps of cocaine together. On one of the occasions mentioned above they were at David Collins' Christmas party which was held at his house. The party was held on the twenty-first of December, 1984. David Collins provided Drake with several bumps of cocaine while they were in the upstairs bedroom. Other people Drake remembers being in the bedroom were Tommy Tilles, Bill Martindale, Paula Collins, Tommy Carter, Lynn Kempner, and Jay DeEaven.

Drake also heard around the office that the Governor of New Mexico, who is Tony Anaya, is to get a job running Angel Fire when he leaves office. It was stated that Tony Anaya put an airstrip at Angel Fire at no expense to Dan Lasater.

Drake remembers when the Governor of Kentucky, who was John Y. Brown, was having an investigation conducted on him by the IRS and Justice Department, in 1963 when monies were missing from his accounts. During this time Dan Lasater came by Drake and said, "I just took care of John Y's money problems".

Dan Lasater used the term "putting one in the boot", when he was referring to fixing horse races. Dan told Drake about the time that John Fernung, who was Lasater's trainer, paid the judges off on a photo finish. Lasater stated that the judge tore the photo finish up in order that Lasater's horse could win the race. Lasater also talked about his trips to Las Vegas where he would gamble at the dice tables. Lasater would use the term "wasting money". Lasater would reportedly lose the money and later win the money back, plus more.

Drake was present when Billy McCord purchased two grams of cocaine from the Boat Captain of the Bar Vail in 1984 at Ft. Lauderdale, Florida.

Drake snorted cocaine with Teresa Davis on 7 or 8 different occasions. Some of the time he would provide it and some of the time she would provide it. One of the times Drake remembers being sitting with Teresa Davis was at the Lasater and company birthday party held at the Whispering Pines Country Club in southwest Little Rock in the fall of 1984.

Lasater & Company

INVESTMENT BANKERS

February 15, 1983

The Honorable
 Bill Clinton
 Governor
 State Capitol
 Little Rock, AR 72201

Dear Governor:

Thank you very much for the opportunity to sit down and visit with you regarding the many issues facing Arkansas and relative to areas in which Lasater & Company can assist you in your efforts to promote and develop Arkansas.

In order to maximize our relationship, I believe that it is essential that we take some positive steps to set up specific lines of communication to enable both our understanding and to make sure that those lines are kept open and functioning.

To begin, let me suggest that Lasater & Company be advised of all financial proposals affecting the state of Arkansas and suggest that your chief person in our company on matters in order is Joe Morfoglio, Michael Drake and Dan Houdy.

Secondly, we have discussed the appointment of Donnie Spears to the Arkansas Housing Board and I have confirmed our understanding regarding the appointment in my letter of January 23, 1983, and I want to again reaffirm our interest and desire in seeing Mr. Spears in this position.

Next, let me suggest that we believe it would be in your best interest to send a representative of your staff to each Arkansas Housing and Development study meeting which usually precedes the regular meeting of the agency. Normally, the study meeting occurs on the third Wednesday of each month.

Fourth, we would recommend to you that competitive proposals be required on the up-coming AHDA FHA/VA financing to permit Hutton to submit a proposal. It is important for us to know that because ~~we have made commitments to Hutton and unless competitive proposals are accepted, it would leave us, Lasater & Company, in an untenable position.~~

Dan Maudy, who is very familiar with state government and who serves on the Constitutional Convention is a lobbyist and he is available on strategy or any other matters in which you believe his input would be effective. Let me encourage you to call on Dan; his experience and knowledge is valuable.

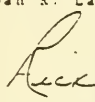

In addition, we would be more comfortable if you would take the opportunity or ask someone on your staff to take the opportunity to appraise me or my staff of any actions by you or your staff prior to any public announcements so that we will not be surprised or in some instances embarrassed because of the announcement.

Finally, I believe it would serve us both well to have regular monthly meetings between the two of us to discuss the affairs of the economy on Arkansas. I do not ask for this to have undue influence or to try to bring undue pressure to you or your Administration but because of my background in business I believe that I can make a positive contribution to your efforts to produce a better climate in the state of Arkansas.

Again, thank you for the opportunity to sit down and discuss with you these points and I hope you will act favorably on my suggestion for a regular meeting.

Sincerely,

 Dan A. Lasater

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Date of transcription

DANNY RAY LASATER, #4 Edgehill, Little Rock, Arkansas, was interviewed at the RIVERFRONT HILTON MOTEL, North Little Rock, Arkansas, by EUGENE L. CROUCH, who identified himself as a Special Agent (SA) of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). Also present during the interview were Detective TOM JAMES, Little Rock Police Department; Mr. GEORGE W. PROCTOR, United States Attorney, Eastern District of Arkansas, Little Rock, Arkansas; and Messieurs BILL WILSON and DICK MOORE, attorneys representing Mr. LASATER.

Prior to any questioning, Mr. LASATER was advised that he was to be questioned concerning his involvement in the distribution of cocaine as well as all illegal activities regarding associates and business transactions. Mr. LASATER was interviewed under an agreement of use immunity granted by the United States Attorney's Office, Eastern District of Arkansas, Little Rock, Arkansas.

Mr. LASATER provided the following information:

Mr. LASATER stated that he was born in Letona, White County, Arkansas, and at the age of 11 moved to Kokomo, Indiana, the year being 1954. He attended Taylor Township Elementary and Junior High Schools and graduated from Sharpville, Indiana, High School. One of his earliest employments was with the MC DONALD'S Restaurant chain. After a short while, he was promoted to assistant manager for MC DONALD'S, which position he maintained for eight or nine months. At the age of 19, he was promoted to manager after JOHN CRUM, the manager at the time, left the restaurant to open his own chain of eating establishments in Frankfort, Indiana, under the name of "BIG MAC'S." He remained manager for approximately two years, having established the business as a very profitable operation.

On December 2, 1962, he; NORM WEASEY (phonetic), owner of the local Oldsmobile car dealership; and GEORGE TEX SCOTT, father-in-law and former Howard County, Indiana,

Sheriff, formed a partnership in establishing a fast food restaurant by the name of SCOTTY'S. After approximately six to nine months, Mr. LASATER advised that he was responsible for changing a marketing concept which enabled the business to prosper financially. As a result, he opened three more SCOTTY'S Restaurants within the Kokomo, Indiana, area.

Sometime during the early 1960's, he and his wife at the time, along with his business partner, NORM WEASEY (phonetic), traveled to Fort Lauderdale, Florida, to familiarize themselves with a steak house operating under the name of the BLACK ANGUS. Utilizing a similar concept as a BLACK ANGUS Restaurant, he and his partners opened a steak house under the name of the PONDEROSA on December 28, 1965. He advised that this time period was about the same as the time that the BONANZA chain of steak houses opened in the Dallas, Texas, area. He stated that the PONDEROSA Restaurant in Kokomo, Indiana, was very successful, and as a result it led him to open an additional eight or ten restaurants in surrounding states. His partners at the time were CHARLES KLEPTZ, Dayton, Ohio, and NORM WEASEY, whom he believes presently resides in Coral Gables, Florida.

In 1968, 48% of the stock was sold to two men from Ohio by the names of JAMES KIRSH and JACK RAUSHMAN (phonetic). In 1969, the PONDEROSA Company went public and offered seven shares of stock in the company to anyone who loaned $1,000 to the company. KIRSH and RAUSHMAN (phonetic) used their income to purchase property and to construct the actual PONDEROSA buildings. As a result, there was very little profit during this period of time, and he eventually bought both individuals out and "ran them off."

He then employed an individual by the name of GERALD OFFICE, JR., a young attorney who had the responsibility of taking care of the financial and marketing end of the business, who did an excellent job. In June 1972, Mr. LASATER estimated that his stock in the PONDEROSA Restaurant was worth $20 million, and at that time he sold approximately $10 million worth of the company but ended up with approximately $15 million at the conclusion of the sale.

In the latter part of this business venture, he became interested in the thoroughbred racing horse business and entered into a venture with JOHN FERNUNG with an investment of $1,500. He and FERNUNG purchased a yearling for $3,000 that turned out to be a good horse that made quite a bit of money. More of his time was devoted to developing thoroughbred racing horse stables, with DAVID VANCE becoming his trainer. Mr. LASATER stated that he was very successful in the thoroughbred racing horse business and made many visits at the time to the OAKLAWN RACE TRACK in Hot Springs, Arkansas. In 1972, he and his stables stayed at the OAKLAWN RACE TRACK, Hot Springs, Arkansas, the entire season.

In 1974, 1975, and 1976, his stables were the leading money stables in the world and as a result were the recipient of the Eclipse Award.

In 1977 and 1978, he began to lose interest in the racing aspect of the thoroughbred horse business and cut back to one stable, which was operated by DAVID VANCE. His first stables were housed in Goshen, Kentucky, in 1972, and in 1976 he bought a 1,400-acre ranch in Ocala, Florida, and started raising brood mares, entering into the breeding aspect of the thoroughbred horse business. His business prospered, and he made the top ten list of breeders in the United States.

In 1975 or 1976, he became acquainted with GEORGE LOCKE during his visit to the OAKLAWN RACE TRACK in Hot Springs, Arkansas. He eventually moved to the Little Rock, Arkansas, area in 1978 or 1979.

In August 1983, he made a decision to get out of the horse breeding business after an unsuccessful horse sale in Saratoga, New York.

His initial reason to move to the Little Rock, Arkansas, area was to open a chain of restaurants under the name of ANDY'S OF AMERICA, which was patterned after the WENDY'S chain. He advised that the ANDY'S concept was not completely successful, and in 1981, he sold the ANDY'S Restaurants to GARLAND STREET, who turned the business around, making it a successful operation today.

In January 1980, he became associated with DAVID COLLINS, a friend of GEORGE LOCKE who resided in Memphis, Tennessee, and at the time worked for a bond company in Memphis by the name of UMIC.

Through DAVID COLLINS' experience, assurance, and insistence, a decision was made to form a bond and security business under the name of COLLINS, LOCKE, AND LASATER. The initial investment was $68,000 each invested by COLLINS, LOCKE, and LASATER. Because they had no securities license, the business initially operated in the trade of equities until August 1980 when they established FIRST BANKERS CORPORATION in order to get their license.

JOHN SELIG, Attorney, was instrumental in acquiring a securities license from both the Securities Exchange Commission and the state of Arkansas.

Prior to this event, COLLINS, LOCKE, and LASATER COMPANY was dissolved, and the remaining $25,000 was put into the establishment of the FIRST BANKERS CORPORATION. Soon after, FIRST BANKERS CORPORATION (FBC) was changed back to COLLINS, LOCKE, AND LASATER. Additional working capital was needed, so the three of them put an additional $100,000 back into the company. FIRST NATIONAL BANK of Little Rock carried the note on this money with the stipulation that the money had to go directly to the COLLINS, LOCKE, AND LASATER COMPANY. Mr. LASATER stated that he personally placed an additional $100,000 into what he described as a subordinated debenture which left them with $225,000 for the operation. He described the business during the fiscal year 1981 as less than successful, but with the urging of DAVID COLLINS, Mr. LASATER stated he placed an additional $500,000 into a subordinated debenture for COLLINS, LOCKE, AND LASATER in August 1981.

In August 1982, COLLINS, LOCKE, AND LASATER made $1 million in profits, but in the following months, the company started losing money, causing him a risk of nearly $1 million.

Compounded by a loss of profits and being told on May 13, 1982, that there were possible tax violations, COLLINS, LOCKE, AND LASATER was established as a holding company in December 1982.

It was determined during this time period that the Securities Exchange Commission (SEC) and other regulatory agencies had to be notified regarding the possible tax violations.

In August 1983, COLLINS, LOCKE, AND LASATER (CL&L) was dissolved. However, GEORGE LOCKE had not been part of the company as of November 1982.

Mr. LASATER advised that his first contact with cocaine was in the late 1970's possibly 1978 or 1979 in Lexington, Kentucky. He recalls during this period of time he was possibly given cocaine by JIMMY LAMBERT, whom he described as a personal friend at the time and who operated a nightclub in Cincinnati, Ohio.

During his early association with DAVID COLLINS and during the time that he was partners with DAVID COLLINS in the COLLINS, LOCKE, AND LASATER COMPANY, DAVID COLLINS gave him cocaine a minimum of fifty (50) times, usually in bump amounts, over a period of two or three years. He does not recall ever pooling an amount of money with GEORGE LOCKE or DAVID COLLINS in which the pool of money was to go for the sole purpose of purchasing cocaine.

As he recalls, GEORGE LOCKE's first experience with cocaine was the same time as his at JIMMY LAMBERT's restaurant in Cincinnati, Ohio.

During the early part of his time in Little Rock, he recalls snorting cocaine at the residence of BARRETT HAMILTON and the residence of JAY DE HAVEN.

FBI-00003573

LR 245F-2

Continuation of FD-302 of DANNY RAY LASATER On 10/14/86 Page 6

He does not specifically recall if BARRETT HAMILTON gave him cocaine but recalls that cocaine was present and was being used during this occasion.

He met JAY DE HAVEN through GEORGE LOCKE sometime in late 1978 or early 1979 and has snorted cocaine in DE HAVEN's presence. He has given DE HAVEN cocaine a minimum of twenty-five (25) times, ranging from bumps to half-gram amounts. DE HAVEN has given him cocaine on numerous occasions also. He described JAY DE HAVEN as a former employee of his company who was dismissed from the company in October 1984 following the purchase of the ANGEL FIRE RESORT in New Mexico.

Mr. LASATER recalls that during his visit at BARRETT HAMILTON's residence CURTIS MC CLENDON and GEORGE LOCKE were present and using cocaine.

Even though GEORGE LOCKE would have his own supply of cocaine, he would estimate that he has personally supplied LOCKE with cocaine a minimum of seventy-five (75) times, usually in bump amounts. He has also snorted cocaine which had been provided by LOCKE.

During his early use of cocaine, he maintained his supply in his pockets and even snorted cocaine at his office.

After the employment of CHUCK BERRY, BERRY usually kept up with his supply of cocaine, and he was aware that as much as one ounce of cocaine was on hand. However, he stated that he was unaware that CHUCK BERRY was selling cocaine on his own.

He recalls confronting BERRY about selling cocaine and advised BERRY that if he were selling cocaine on his own he wanted his ass away from him because it would appear that if BERRY was selling cocaine he (LASATER) was selling cocaine also.

Mr. LASATER stated that he was aware that CHUCK BERRY obtained nearly all of the cocaine from GLENN BRADLEY but that BERRY also obtained cocaine from HERBIE DOUGLAS.

Mr. LASATER admitted that he had purchased approximately one but not more than two ounces of cocaine from GLENN BRADLEY after being introduced to BRADLEY by a mutual friend of GEORGE LOCKE and GLENN BRADLEY. As he recalls, the young girl was from Dallas, Texas, but had grown up in GEORGE LOCKE's hometown of Hamburg, Arkansas. He stated that this purchase occurred at Apartment 12B, QUAPAW TOWERS, Little Rock. To the best of his recollection, he paid approximately $2,200 per ounce.

He stated that he made a subsequent purchase of cocaine from GLENN BRADLEY in which he and GEORGE LOCKE drove to BRADLEY's residence, and he purchased approximately one-quarter (1/4) to one-half (1/2) ounce. Mr. LASATER stated that he personally made the purchase.

After these initial purchases of cocaine from BRADLEY, it was CHUCK BERRY's responsibility for buying the cocaine from BRADLEY, and he always made sure that BERRY had money on hand to purchase the cocaine. BERRY would come to him for the money, and he would usually give him approximately $5,000. However, he never instructed BERRY to purchase in excess of one ounce.

Within this time frame, he recalls that BRADLEY contacted him and advised that CHUCK BERRY owed BRADLEY approximately $11,000 for past due cocaine debts. BRADLEY was wanting him to make good on the amount of money owed by BERRY. Mr. LASATER stated that he never paid BRADLEY for CHUCK BERRY's cocaine debt.

He explained that CHUCK BERRY and HERBIE DOUGLAS were initially hired by DAVID COLLINS and that BERRY ended up being the driver for the company limousine and what Mr. LASATER described as a gofer for the company. He described BERRY as always having a gun but that he never told BERRY to have it in his possession or wear it. He recalls that efforts were made by GEORGE LOCKE to acquire a pardon for CHUCK BERRY and another employee by the name of GARY TIPPET. He does not recall specifically but thinks that TIPPET was granted a pardon by the state of Arkansas.

He related that BERRY was employed at a salary of $20,000 per year plus all expenses. He cannot recall ever seeing CHUCK BERRY drink alcohol or snort cocaine.

Mr. LASATER stated he was aware that CHUCK BERRY had traveled to the state of Florida and purchased cocaine from an unknown individual. He recalls giving CHUCK BERRY $5,000 after BERRY came to him and stated that he would be in Florida as things were getting hot, and while he was down there, he would get an ounce of cocaine. As he recalls, CHUCK BERRY has both flown and driven to the state of Florida, and his suspicions are that CHUCK BERRY's connection for cocaine was the brother of FRANK (Last Name Unknown) (LNU), the boat pilot for the company boat, PAR VALU.

Mr. LASATER stated that he is familiar with AL WELLS, that on one occasion approximately three or four years ago, he purchased one ounce of cocaine from WELLS, and that this purchase occurred at Apartment 12B, QUAPAW TOWERS, Little Rock.

In October 1982 and at the insistence of DAVID COLLINS, a boat was purchased for the company with DAVID COLLINS putting up one-half ($\frac{1}{2}$) of the amount of the purchase price and CL&L putting up the additional one-half ($\frac{1}{2}$) of the purchase price.

Eventually, the boat was purchased by LFI CORPORATION, which is a corporation set up for LASATER's children, and the boat was leased back to CL&L.

The boat was eventually sold to an individual by the name of DON WALKER, former governor of the state of Illinois. DAVID COLLINS handled the sale of the boat, and money was lost in the deal.

In regard to DON WALKER, Mr. LASATER advised that he had loaned WALKER $200,000, and since WALKER was a customer, there were no improprieties surrounding the loan. WALKER was the owner of a JIFFY LUBE Company and a savings and loan and was in financial straits at the time. Stock for the savings and loan company owned by WALKER was held as collateral on the loan, which was eventually paid in full.

With regard to a trip to Belize, Central America, Mr. LASATER stated that he; PATSY THOMPSON; JIM ALEXANDER; ED CUMMINGS, an attorney from Washington, D.C.; CHUCK BERRY; and an individual from the state of Oklahoma whose name he does not recall traveled with the purpose of purchasing a 24,000-acre farm or ranch. The transaction included having to deal with the governor of Belize, who, for some unknown reason, was hard to deal with. He recalls that for this reason JIM ALEXANDER made some type of off-the-wall statement that the governor should be wasted. Mr. LASATER recalls becoming very perturbed over this statement and proceeded to leave the meeting, and the purchase transaction never occurred.

On their return trip to the United States, he did not recall any unusual circumstances which occurred with United States Customs agents in New Orleans, Louisiana, or in Little Rock, Arkansas, other than the fact that JIM ALEXANDER had been confronted by the agents regarding night vision goggles which he had in his possession.

When questioned about a particular trip to South America, Mr. LASATER related that in 1977 or 1978 he, JOHN KEENAN, and GEORGE LOCKE purchased a Learjet aircraft with each sharing one-third (1/3) of the expenses. Due to the lack of use of the aircraft, all three agreed to lease the aircraft, and KEENAN arranged for someone to lease the aircraft in Las Vegas, Nevada. He recalls that GEORGE LOCKE traveled to Las Vegas where the plane was leased to an ambulance service which had been hired to travel to Bogota, Colombia, in order to bring back to the United States a young individual who had crashed an aircraft with drugs onboard. As he recalls, the individual had been badly burned, and the individual was to be flown to the Burn Center in Houston, Texas. He recalls that upon landing in Bogota, Colombia, South America, officials of that government seized the aircraft. Mr. LASATER stated he was not aware of what eventually happened to the aircraft, but since it was insured by LLOYD'S OF LONDON, he did not experience a loss.

Mr. LASATER stated that he is familiar with MITCHELL WOOD and that he met WOOD through GEORGE LOCKE sometime in 1979 or 1980 and started using cocaine with MITCHELL WOOD sometime in 1980 or 1981. He advised that he gave MITCHELL WOOD cocaine a minimum of twenty-five (25) times in bump amounts. He related that MITCHELL WOOD has given him cocaine a minimum of three or four times, also in bump amounts. He is not aware if CHUCK BERRY ever sold MITCHELL WOOD cocaine. He is aware that MITCHELL WOOD is employed by the ARKANSAS INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION (AIDC) in some type of teaching capacity. He described MITCHELL WOOD as a friend, and when MITCHELL WOOD traveled with him or attended parties with him, he (Mr. LASATER) usually took care of the expenses.

He has loaned MITCHELL WOOD money, usually in $200 to $400 amounts, on several occasions in which WOOD would come to him for a loan in order to meet personal bills. He advised that MITCHELL WOOD presently owes him approximately $2,000.

Mr. LASATER advised that when he placed bets with bookies, it was always with EDDIE STAFFORD or JIMMY NEWBERRY and that he never placed a bet with AL WELLS.

Mr. LASATER described DAWN SIMS as a former employee who was hired by his wife, LINDA LASATER, to work as a babysitter and to perform housecleaning duties. He admitted giving cocaine to DAWN SIMS approximately two times and always in bump amounts. He denied ever giving cocaine to the daughter of DAWN SIMS. DAWN SIMS' employment was terminated by LINDA LASATER after LINDA suspected SIMS of making advances to him (LASATER). He recalls hearing a rumor that DAWN SIMS was selling cocaine after her dismissal by LINDA LASATER. As he recalls, DAWN SIMS resided in an apartment somewhere near the intersection of Fair Park and Kavanaugh.

Mr. LASATER advised that TOMMY TULLOS was one of the first salesmen hired by DAVID COLLINS for CL&M. He has furnished TULLOS cocaine on four to six occasions in bump amounts. TULLOS has given him cocaine four to six times in bump amounts. These occasions usually occurred during social events or at the office.

He stated that his first association with REGGIE TAYLOR occurred at BENNIGAN'S Restaurant during a time when a number of the employees from his office were together. DAVID COLLINS was present with his wife, and REGGIE TAYLOR wanted to dance with her, which caused DAVID COLLINS to almost go berserk. His next meeting came one month later in 1982 when DAVID COLLINS brought REGGIE TAYLOR to his office and advised him that REGGIE TAYLOR had been hired as a salesman by CL&M. REGGIE TAYLOR was an instant success as a salesman, but as his continued use of cocaine grew, his work habits deteriorated.

Mr. LASATER stated that REGGIE TAYLOR furnished him one gram of cocaine on one occasion but that he has given him bump amounts four or five times when at REGGIE TAYLOR's apartment at the BRIGHTWATER Complex. He stated he has never seen large quantities of cocaine at TAYLOR's apartment, but he socialized with TAYLOR on a limited basis. Housing for TAYLOR was not furnished to him by the company.

Mr. LASATER said that he was responsible for introducing REGGIE TAYLOR to JAY CAMPBELL, who is a deputy for the Pulaski County Sheriff's Office. He recalls that REGGIE TAYLOR bought a car from JAY CAMPBELL, but apparently REGGIE did not make the payments, and JAY CAMPBELL repossessed the car. He has never told REGGIE TAYLOR to buy a car from JAY CAMPBELL and knows nothing further surrounding the circumstances concerning CAMPBELL's selling TAYLOR the vehicle.

Mr. LASATER advised he has known JAY CAMPBELL since he was 13 or 14 years old as CAMPBELL was a friend of TOMMY VANCE, the son of DAVID VANCE, who was an employee of his. VANCE was his trainer during the time that he was in the thoroughbred racing business.

JAY CAMPBELL has never furnished LASATER any information regarding any investigation in which CAMPBELL was involved, either with the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) Task Force or the Pulaski County Sheriff's Office. CAMPBELL has commented that he thought the investigation surrounding him (LASATER) was "chicken shit."

CAMPBELL has flown on his plane on two occasions which he can recall, the first being the Arkansas Razorback game against the University of Mississippi at Jackson, Mississippi, and the second being the World Series game in St. Louis, Missouri, between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Kansas City Royals in October 1985.

Mr. LASATER stated that regarding any information pertaining to investigations surrounding himself he had been advised by GARY TIPPIT, DICK MOORE, GEORGE LOCKE, and JAY DE HAVEN to watch out, slow down the parties, and that most of it was just rumors. He stated that he slowed down on attending parties and hired a private investigator to conduct sweeps for listening bugs at his home, his office, and especially at Apartment 12B, QUAPAW TOWERS.

He first learned that JAY CAMPBELL was associated with the DEA on the plane trip to the Arkansas/Ole Miss football game at Jackson, Mississippi, in 1985 when it was mentioned by CAMPBELL himself.

However, CAMPBELL had told him that as an officer with the Pulaski County Sheriff's Office he had been watching him (LASATER) in connection with his official duties but that he found that there was not enough there to make a case.

FBI-00001580

Other individuals who had flown with him on the previous two plane trips mentioned herein were TOMMY MITCHUM; LARRY DILL; Mr. CHAMBERS, Arkansas State Police; JAY CAMPBELL; and KERRY THOMAS, Pulaski County Sheriff's Office. Mr. LASATER identified TOMMY MITCHUM as a state representative who had been introduced to him by GEORGE LOCKE several years ago and that MITCHUM would stay at the company's BRIGHTWATER APARTMENTS when MITCHUM was in town. He denied ever loaning JAY CAMPBELL or LARRY DILL any money in the past.

Regarding other law enforcement personnel, Mr. LASATER stated that he was familiar with MIKE MAHONE, Arkansas State Police, and that on the weekend of July 4, 1985, MAHONE and his wife SHIRLEY stayed in a condominium at the ANGEL FIRE RESORT, New Mexico. The condominium in which MAHONE and his wife resided belongs to LEI CORPORATION, which is a corporation set up for his (LASATER's) children, and that MAHONE did not have to pay for staying in this condominium. He does not recall who paid MAHONE and his wife's flight fares to the ANGEL FIRE RESORT that LASATER AND COMPANY may have paid for the flight.

He first met MAHONE when MIKE MAHONE him during the SAM ANDERSON investigation. The took place at the office of SKIP DAVIDSON, Attorney represented him at the time.

Since that time, MAHONE has been in frequent contact with him. On one occasion, MAHONE requested assistance in trying to find someone to purchase a home which belonged to MAHONE. MAHONE told him that the home was appraised at $70,000. As a result, he requested BILL MC CORD, an employee of LASATER AND COMPANY, to look at the house. Mr. LASATER stated that he requested MC CORD to buy the house, and the house was purchased for $60,000, but a lot of repairs had to be done. MC CORD did the repairs and eventually sold the house, but MC CORD lost approximately $6,000. Mr. LASATER said that he promised MC CORD that he would make good on MC CORD's loss, but, to date, he has not repaid MC CORD.

As he recalls, MIKE and SHIRLEY MAHONE then moved into a house in Jacksonville, Arkansas.

MAHONE would be a frequent caller at the LASATER AND COMPANY office and seemed to push to ingratiate himself to LASATER. On one occasion, MAHONE met him at the LASATER AND COMPANY office and asked questions about former employees by the names of GEORGE IRWIN, WES MOODY, and ERICK WESTERMAN, but he did not recall at this meeting if MAHONE mentioned anything concerning the present ongoing investigation.

However, during subsequent meetings with MAHONE, MAHONE would indicate to him that everything was okay.

Sometime during the summer of 1986, MAHONE indicated to him that he would be in Chicago, Illinois, and he met with MAHONE and GEORGE LOCKE for breakfast in Chicago. Even though he cannot recall specifics, the investigation that is currently being conducted concerning himself was discussed. He recalls that MAHONE advised that it was a task force investigation and that when questions were asked of MAHONE he would reply, "Looks like it," "Might be." He does not recall if MAHONE mentioned J. N. "DOC" DE LAUGHTER specifically.

Mr. LASATER advised that during the occasions when MAHONE had interviewed him concerning the SAM ANDERSON cocaine investigation he admitted to MAHONE that he had done cocaine with ANDERSON. There were no other law enforcement officers present during the interview, and he was never called as a witness during the SAM ANDERSON trial.

Mr. LASATER stated that MIKE MAHONE arranged through him to obtain a loan in the amount of $25,000 in which MAHONE indicated that the money would go for renovation of his mother's residence in Chicago, Illinois. MAHONE did not personally make the loan but arranged to have the loan made in his sister's name. At the time, his sister resided in Atlanta, Georgia, and the renovation was to be done on a house in Chicago. Mr. LASATER said that he arranged to make the loan to MAHONE in a roundabout way and that he approached a friend of his by the name of JOHN FURNUNG to make a $25,000 loan on a 90- to 120-day note. Mr. LASATER said that payment on the note was made by the sister on only approximately two-thirds (2/3) of the interest and that efforts to get MAHONE or his sister to pay the note met with negative results. Mr. LASATER advised that he personally loaned FURNUNG $7,500 to make a payment on the principal of the note, but later, he personally paid off the note which had been arranged by and drawn up by an attorney friend by the name of LARRY COLLINS in Ocala, Florida.

Mr. LASATER advised that as recently as eight months to one year ago, MIKE MAHONE has shown him papers or reports of official state police documents regarding the state police investigation of this matter, but he does not recall the specifics at this time.

He recalls MAHONE being very persistent about the loan but that MAHONE never threatened him in any way. Mr. LASATER said he felt that MAHONE had contacted him about the loan as a friend but he (LASATER) was afraid that a personal loan from him would reflect unfavorably on himself (LASATER).

It was MAHONE who suggested that the loan be made to his sister because he (LASATER) refused to make it directly to MIKE MAHONE. During the period of the note, efforts were made to have MIKE MAHONE contact his sister to see if there could be some type of payment made, but this was unsuccessful.

Mr. LASATER said he initially tried to obtain the loan through JERRY CONDLIK, a Chicago customer, but after Mr. CONDLIK had someone to look at the house, he refused to make the loan.

Mr. LASATER advised that in a meeting with MAHONE in the summer of 1986 in Chicago, Illinois, MAHONE furnished him information on how to protect himself from the investigation. He stated that MAHONE said to be careful who you are with and do not use cocaine. He advised LASATER to keep a diary regarding hour-by-hour contacts and made a suggestion that it would be a good idea to contribute to the GYST HOUSE. Mr. LASATER said that GEORGE LOCKE was present during this meeting and that LOCKE met with MAHONE later that same day.

Mr. LASATER said he recalls in other meetings with MAHONE that MAHONE had displayed to him a ledger sheet which reflected checks that had been paid to HERBIE DOUGLAS and PAULA COLLINS. He surmised that it was a ledger sheet reflecting personal transactions by DAVID COLLINS. There were two or three copies of the list, and they were handwritten with the name, the check number, and the amount on the ledger sheet.

He recalls that during one of the meetings in Chicago with MAHONE, MAHONE made available to him a beeper to use in case he had to get in touch with MAHONE. The beeper was never used and was eventually packaged and given to Attorney DICK MOORE.

Mr. LASATER reiterated that BILL MC CORD purchased MIKE MAHONE's house at his insistence, and it was just to help out MIKE MAHONE.

In relation to MIKE MAHONE, Mr. LASATER said he had recently received a letter from MAHONE in which MAHONE wished him good luck and told him to "hang in there" and that he (MAHONE) was not too proud of law enforcement during this time.

Mr. LASATER stated that there were no improprieties regarding his association with TOMMY ROBINSON, U.S. Congressman, and that he was a contributor to Mr. ROBINSON's campaign for Congress. He also contributed to Mr. ROBINSON's campaign for Pulaski County sheriff. He explained it was always the legal amount that was allowed by law.

Mr. LASATER denies any improprieties surrounding his association with Judge ALAN DISHONGH, Municipal Court Judge, Little Rock, and to his knowledge, Judge DISHONGH has never visited the ANGEL FIRE RESORT in New Mexico as he is aware that DISHONGH has his own place at Taos, New Mexico.

The only favor he has asked DISHONGH to do for him was to marry JAY DE HAVEN and his wife.

He is unaware of any activities or associations which CHUCK BERRY has with Judge ALAN DISHONGH but indicated that most of the employees in the Municipal Court Building are black females and that Mr. BERRY may have some association with someone there. He has contributed to Judge DISHONGH's political campaigns in the past but always within the legal amount allowed by law.

Mr. LASATER denied that there were any payoffs made to Judge DISHONGH surrounding an incident which occurred with HOLLY HORNIBROOK, who is the daughter of a probation officer for the city of Little Rock.

Mr. LASATER stated he is familiar with LARRY ROSENFELD, whom he met for the first time at a New Year's Eve party four years in Aspen, Colorado. Mr. ROSENFELD was the bartender, and he was also a salesman who worked in a ski shop in Aspen. Mr. ROSENFELD is presently an employee of LASATER AND COMPANY but was previously employed with CL&L. He advised that Mr. ROSENFELD has furnished him cocaine in the past but does not recall ever purchasing cocaine from ROSENFELD. ROSENFELD has given him cocaine on three or four occasions in bump amounts. During one of the parties in Aspen, Colorado, there was cocaine in the house, and the party was attended by approximately eighty (80) to one hundred (100) people. During this period of time, he (LASATER) had in his possession one to two grams of cocaine. He stated the cocaine was especially for DAVID COLLINS, GEORGE LOCKE, and himself.

He has seen ROSENFELD in possession of as much as one-half (1/2) gram of cocaine.

Mr. LASATER identified WALTER WEST as a former salesman for CL&L who always had cocaine in his possession. He has purchased cocaine from WALTER WEST a minimum of three to four times and usually in gram amounts ranging in the neighborhood of $100 per gram. Mr. WEST has given him cocaine in bump amounts approximately ten times during parties at Mr. WEST's house and at parties conducted at Apartment 12B, QUAPAW TOWERS. He is a close friend of LYNN KEMPNER and CURTIS MC CLENDON. Mr. WEST left the employment of CL&L in the early fall of 1983 or January 1984.

Mr. LASATER identified MICHAEL STANDRIDGE as an individual who was employed by CL&L and transferred to the Florida office and who stayed one year after DAVID COLLINS left the company. He stated he bought cocaine in small amounts approximately three times. It was usually in gram amounts for which he had to pay $100 to $125 for each gram. Mr. STANDRIDGE has given him cocaine two or three times in bump amounts. He denies ever pooling money with GEORGE LOCKE and DAVID COLLINS in which the money was given to MICHAEL STANDRIDGE in order to purchase a large quantity of cocaine.

Mr. LASATER denied ever knowing DAVID GINGRASS and denied ever purchasing cocaine from GINGRASS.

Mr. LASATER said that one of the largest amounts of cocaine he has personally ever seen on someone was approximately two years ago during the summer of 1984 in which TONY ALADINE attended a party at Mr. LASATER's house and had a bag of cocaine stuffed in the top of his boot and which he would estimate was approximately three to four ounces. Mr. LASATER recalls telling ALADINE to leave the party, and as he recalls, ALADINE was eventually prosecuted for something unrecalled within the recent past.

Mr. LASATER advised that he is a personal friend of JOHN Y. BROWN, former governor of the state of Kentucky, and the owner of the KENTUCKY FRIED CHICKEN franchise. He first met BROWN through his association with the PONDEROSA Steak House, and their mutual friendship with JIMMY LAMBERT, Lexington, Kentucky.

Sometime after 1982 and possibly before August 1983, Mr. LASATER said he was contacted by JIMMY LAMBERT who told him that JOHN Y. BROWN had taken $1 million in cash out of a bank in Florida and that no cash transient report had been filed on the amount. As a result, BROWN needed $300,000 in cash. Mr. LASATER said he made efforts to help BROWN and contacted BENNY RYBURN, SR., in Warren, Arkansas, who owns a bank. He was advised by RYBURN to go to UNION NATIONAL BANK in Little Rock and obtain the $300,000 from BOB CONNER. Mr. LASATER advised that he signed a personal note for the amount but that when he went to pick up the cash he was requested to sign a cash transient report, which he refused. He stated Mr. RYBURN had the cash sent by BENNY CALHOUN, and he (LASATER) signed a note for the amount with the bank in Warren, Arkansas.

FBI-00002586

Continuation of FD-302 of DANNY RAY LASATER On 10/14/86 Page 19

After obtaining the $300,000, he flew to Lexington, Kentucky, and turned over the money to JIMMY LAMBERT at the airport. The money was carried in a paper sack, and the $300,000 amount was paid back within six months without any payment on the interest. Mr. LASATER said he paid the interest on the amount himself when he paid off the $300,000 note.

When the note was due, the money was wired to him in care of his bank account at what was then FIRST NATIONAL BANK in Little Rock.

Mr. LASATER advised he first met TONY ANAYA in October 1984 when Mr. ANAYA was governor of New Mexico and was a guest speaker at a barbecue during the inaugural opening of ANGEL FIRE RESORT in New Mexico. Mr. ANAYA has never done him any personal favors even though he may have been responsible for blacktopping a road between More and Black Lake, New Mexico. It was not done as a favor to him. The road was paved sometime during the summer of 1985, and even though it benefited employees of ANGEL FIRE, there were no improprieties on his part or the governor's part.

He explained that the 8,900-foot runway at the ANGEL FIRE RESORT, New Mexico, was already under construction when he purchased the resort. There were 110 acres donated to the county during the construction of the runway, but there were no improprieties on his part or the governor's part regarding this transaction.

Mr. LASATER says he does recall that ODIS ECKLES has talked to Governor ANAYA about a consultant job upon the governor's leaving office sometime at the end of the year 1986. Mr. LASATER identified ECKLES as a consultant for the ANGEL FIRE RESORT Company but that nothing improper surrounded his offer to the governor.

Mr. LASATER stated CLARENCE STRAHAN was an employee who formerly worked for GEORGE HALL at the CAPITAL CLUB in Little Rock, and he became familiar with STRAHAN who worked as a bartender and waiter at several of the company parties. He personally hired STRAHAN as a personal valet on his aircraft, THE CHALLENGER, which he sold in December 1985. STRAHAN started his employment in July 1984. He is presently employed as a salesman for LASATER AND COMPANY. Mr. LASATER stated that he has seen CLARENCE STRAHAN use cocaine approximately five times and that STRAHAN has had the responsibility of holding his (LASATER's) cocaine on numerous occasions. He stated that CLARENCE STRAHAN has bought cocaine for him approximately three or four times but that the money used for the purchase always came from himself.

LR 245F-2

Continuation of FD-302 of DANNY RAY LASATER On 10/14/86 Page 20

Mr. LASATER admitted doing cocaine with GEORGOE HALL and HERBIE DOUGLAS in the past, with one of the occasions occurring at the KING ARTHUR'S CLUB on Markham in 1982 or early 1983. He did not recall to whom the cocaine belonged at the time.

He is familiar with LARRY KELLY, but he has never done cocaine with KELLY, and he has never given KELLY any cocaine.

He is unfamiliar with an individual by the name of BUD GUY. Mr. LASATER advised that he has snorted cocaine with DON BUZANOWSKI, who worked in the Fort Lauderdale, Florida, office. He snorted cocaine with him on one or two occasions and has given him cocaine in bump amounts.

He is only slightly familiar with OMAR BUTTARI as BUTTARI worked in the Fort Lauderdale, Florida, office. He had no drug dealings with BUTTARI.

He is familiar with TOM CARTER, with whom he has snorted cocaine on several occasions in which the cocaine would be both his and TOM CARTER's at the time.

Mr. LASATER related that he has given PAULA COLLINS cocaine ranging from fifteen (15) to twenty-five (25) times in small amounts. He denied ever ordering CHUCK BERRY to give PAULA COLLINS cocaine but was aware that BERRY had given her cocaine in the past. He knows PAULA COLLINS as being the former wife of DAVID COLLINS.

Regarding ROGER CLINTON, Mr. LASATER advised he met CLINTON through MITCHELL WOOD sometime around 1981 or 1982 during the time CLINTON played in a band in the Hot Springs area. CLINTON was employed by him at one time in which Governor BILL CLINTON requested LASATER to hire him. ROGER CLINTON was employed as a stable hand at his Ocala, Florida, horse farm. Mr. LASATER stated he has done cocaine with ROGER CLINTON, and they have shared their personal supplies of cocaine as each of them always had it with them.

In regard to the $8,000 loan made to ROGER CLINTON, Mr. LASATER advised that ROGER CLINTON approached him about borrowing $18,000 or $20,000 as Mr. CLINTON explained that someone had stolen his stash of cocaine which belonged to SAM ANDERSON at the time. The cocaine, as he recalls, was supposed to have been in a car that was broken into. He advised CLINTON came to him and said that someone was putting the heat on him and something might happen to his brother and his mother. The loan was not for that large amount, but he consented to loan CLINTON $8,000. He did not handle the transaction personally but thinks that it was taken care of by one of his employees in the company. The transaction was done with a check, and it was requested that CLINTON turn over his car title for collateral. He denied ever buying cocaine from ROGER CLINTON.

LASATER may have met MAURICE RODRIGUEZ on one occasion at the end of the race season in Hot Springs, Arkansas. It was possibly during the spring of 1983.

Mr. LASATER related that he would estimate that his company has contracted with the state of Arkansas less than one-tenth (1/10) of 1% of the bond business. He denied any allegation of improprieties regarding himself or his company with the governor of Arkansas, BILL CLINTON.

He advised that BILL CLINTON had been at his house on one occasion for a Christmas party and was there only thirty (30) minutes. He also attended a Christmas party at the LITTLE ROCK COUNTRY CLUB and was there approximately thirty (30) minutes. He was present for the opening of PULLEYBONE'S, a local restaurant, and was there approximately thirty (30) minutes also.

Concerning the contract surrounding the bond issue pertaining to the communication system for the Arkansas State Police, Mr. LASATER advised that representatives of the E. F. HUTTON COMPANY represented LASATER AND COMPANY during meetings with the CLINTON staff. There were no improprieties surrounding these meetings, and very few people associated with LASATER AND COMPANY had any dealings with Mr. CLINTON's personnel.

Mr. LASATER advised he is familiar with CINDY TIPPIT who is employed by LASATER AND COMPANY as a sales assistant to BILL MC CORD and what he described as a gofer. He has snorted cocaine furnished to him by CINDY TIPPIT, and she has snorted cocaine furnished by him. He advised that he has done this approximately twelve (12) times and that on one occasion CINDY TIPPIT picked up cocaine for him in North Little Rock in a one-gram amount. Mr. LASATER stated he always furnished the money and that she personally brought the cocaine to him. He did not know her source of cocaine.

The Honorable Bill Clinton
Governor of Arkansas
State Capitol Building
Little Rock, Arkansas 72201

Dear Bill:

It was a pleasure to see you yesterday at the Hot Springs "Christmas to Share" Program and to visit with you by telephone last night.

We wanted to follow up with the details of our conversation in this correspondence. With regard to the dispersal of the securities owned by Mount Hood Pension Fund, National Investors Life Insurance and National Investors Pension Fund, we have been working hand-in-hand with their personnel toward an orderly sale of their holdings and, in fact, we handled the first stage of the dispersal in November when we participated in the liquidation of $30 million of Illinois bonds. The Companies have been our clients for quite some time and our account representatives are very familiar with the portfolios which is extremely important in the sales process.

It is our belief that an orderly dispersal of these securities will benefit the policy holders and the shareholders of these Companies; thereby, benefiting Arkansas citizens the most. To date, the dispersal has been handled within the State; therefore, any gains or losses have remained in Arkansas.

As we discussed, rumor has it that co-managers of First Boston and Stannens Inc. will be appointed the first of the year to consummate any future transactions in the portfolio. It is estimated that there is approximately $1.9 billion of debt securities which it is expected will be sold, and if First Boston is appointed, it will mean that a larger percentage of the proceeds will be leaving Arkansas.

Knowing that we have the same dedication to the State of Arkansas, I do not believe that you will want this to happen. However, we do understand the problems which you face at the Insurance Commission and are cognizant that you may have difficulty in maintaining the status quo as far as the dispersal is concerned.

Faced with that reality, we hope that you will be able to take the initiative in strongly suggesting that Lasater & Company may be included with First Boston and Stannens Inc. as a third co-manager. This would mean that a majority of the business would stay in Arkansas.

The Honorable Bill Clinton

With regard to the Board of the Arkansas Housing and Development Agency, it is our understanding that the chairmanship rotates annually. Based on this understanding, we would like to recommend our mutual friend George Wright for the chairmanship. George has expressed an interest in the chairmanship and we believe that he would take the time and devote the energy necessary to do a good job.

In addition, it is our understanding that there will be vacancies in January on the AHDA Board and we would like to strongly recommend Dale Taylor, an attorney with First Commercial Mortgage Company. His background and professional capabilities make him particularly suited for service on this Agency Board.

During the recent Special Session, legislation passed creating a commission to study the possibility of creating an agency similar to the AHDA to do public school financing. We would like to recommend Michael Drake, Vice President of Public Finance at Lasater & Company to serve on the Commission. Michael was born at Jackson, Arkansas and his undergraduate degree is from Harding College. Michael did his graduate work at Wayne State University in Urban Planning and Fiscal Affairs and post graduate work at the Harvard-MIT Joint Center for Urban Studies. With his educational background and his knowledge of Arkansas and fiscal matters, we believe he is perfectly suited for the Commission and that he will make a significant contribution.

Finally, let me again say that the Insurance Companies' dispersal of its holdings is very important to us and we sincerely hope that there is some way to make certain that we do not lose our position.

Again, we appreciate your able assistance.

Sincerely,

Dan R. Lasater

Dear Governor:

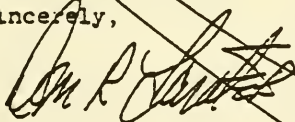

Since our January 4, 1985 meeting I have been to Angel Fire for the Special Winter Olympics. I am sorry to have missed your inaugural activities and want to take this opportunity to again wish you well in this term.

To confirm our conversation of January 4, it is my understanding that you will be appointing Donald M. Spears, an attorney in Malvern, to the Arkansas Housing Board and his appointment will endure any change in structure of the agency.

Members of my staff have been working with Bill Woodyard and others in that firm in an effort to help workout financing details to assist to you in your efforts to advance economic development in the State. If they have failed in furnishing the information you need or if you need additional information please do not hesitate to call me or have Maurice call Patsy.

With the legislature now in town, I know your schedule is full, but I always enjoy the opportunity to visit with you and would invite you to come by for lunch or a drink any time. Too, let me offer our offices, our staff or our resources to you for the entertainment of any guests from the State of Arkansas or outside of the State.

Didn't have large cocaine dealings with Roger Clinton, lawyer testifies

By PHILIP L. ALTMAN
GAZETTE STAFF

NOT SPRINGS — Sam Anderson Jr., a Hot Springs lawyer charged with distributing cocaine and conspiracy to distribute cocaine, took the stand in his own defense Wednesday and denied allegations he had purchased thousands of dollars' worth of cocaine from Roger Clinton.

Both sides have now rested and the case will go to the jury today. Federal Judge Oran Harrie kept court in session Wednesday until after 8 p.m. to allow the defense to complete its presentation.

The government has charged that between November 1983 and June 1984, Anderson paid $32,000 for cocaine to Roger Clinton, who is the younger brother of Governor Bill Clinton, and Maurice Rodriguez, a Colombian national living in New York City. Clinton has testified he was the go-between for a majority of the purchases. Clinton and Rodriguez have pleaded guilty to drug charges and have been sentenced to federal prison terms.

Says witnesses lying

Anderson admitted that he used cocaine and gave it to friends, but said he did not sell the drug to several witnesses named in the indictment. When United States Attorney W. Asa Hutchinson asked Anderson about some specific allegations by witnesses, Anderson said they were lying.

He said his cocaine purchases from Clinton were far below the figures used by the government and that the drug was intended only for his personal use. Anderson was asked by Hutchinson if he had other sources for cocaine and he said he had made small purchases from Curtie (Chuck) Berry, who said in testimony Tuesday that he was a chauffeur for Dan Laister, a Little Rock businessman. Hutchinson asked Anderson if he had other sources and he said "none other came to mind."

Anderson said he began using cocaine in 1981 or 1982 and he said it was Roger Clinton who had first offered him the drug. He said he and Clinton were long time friends and often met in night clubs in Hot Springs and that the offer of cocaine "would usually happen late in the evening, after we had been drinking for some time."

Anderson said his consumption of the drug increased and he noticed it was having an effect on his health. "I was trying to go non-stop, around the clock, and it began to catch up with me," he testified.

Anderson said he had met Rodriguez through Roger Clinton and another friend, Lana Crews. He said he was told Rodriguez was a chef and that his name was Maurice West. Anderson said he had never purchased cocaine from Rodriguez and had not been aware Rodriguez sold the drug.

Meeting arranged

In the summer of 1984, Anderson said Roger Clinton contacted him and told him that he had to see him. They arranged to meet in a boat on Lake Hamilton because Clinton said he didn't want to be seen in a public place with Anderson, then a congressman.

Anderson said Clinton told him that he had been approached by State Police investigators and that he was "very, very frightened," totally frightened to death. He said Clinton informed him that the investigators wanted to "set up three peepers" — Clinton's drug supplier, Anderson and Laister. Anderson said that during the Lake Hamilton meeting he had seen "an unmarked car coming along the shoreline."

After that conversation, Anderson said Clinton called him on the phone "and talked extensively about cocaine." It was obvious to me that he had been instructed to do so," that he wanted to implicate me over the telephone."

Anderson said that Gina Canada, 23, of Hot Springs, whom he dated for a time in 1983 "had not been truthful with this jury" in her testimony. Canada testified Tuesday that she had used cocaine that Anderson had provided and had seen him sell the drug on two occasions. He said that Canada accompanied him on a trip to Europe in 1983 and that their relationship had been "strained" before their departure "and in Europe, it got worse." He said that he terminated their relationship because Canada "had a bad habit of consuming large quantities of alcohol, was abusive and violent."

Tries to show whereabouts

Using his desk calendars, credit card slips and telephone bills, Anderson attempted to establish his whereabouts on the approximate dates in which the government alleges that various drug transactions were made. He admitted the information would not account for his options "every hour of the day and night." Defense attorney Floyd Clardy of Bryant said it had been difficult to compile the information "because every time we told the government where Anderson was they changed the dates of the alleged offenses for which Anderson is charged."

The government did drop one count of the indictment that alleged Anderson distributed cocaine on June 27, 1984, after he showed that he had been in Fort Worth on that date.

Anderson was asked about a Christmas party he is alleged to have held at his home in Hot Springs December 16, 1983, during which Roger Clinton allegedly delivered cocaine he had picked up from Rodriguez in New York City. Anderson said he didn't recall the event. "I might have had a party that night, but I just can't recall," he testified.

3 Q. Okay.

4 A. He was kind of like a co-chief of staff you might say.
5 Bill placed a lot of, had a lot of confidence in Bob and, you
6 know, he was a good guy, level headed and like that.

7 Q. Do you recall an individual by the name of 8 Akihi Sarabara, a Japanese individual coming to the Mansion?

9 A. I --

10 Q. Also known as Aki?

11 A. That don't mean nothing to me right now. I can't recall 12 anything like that.

13 Q. Do you remember Dan Lassiter coming to the Mansion?

14 A. Yes. And I remember going to Dan's a lot. We went down
15 there more than Dan came down there I would say.

16 Q. Let's take it separate. How many times did Dan Lassiter,
17 to the best of your recollection, come to the Mansion while 18 Governor Clinton was in the Mansion?

19 A. I was out there a lot of time. I didn't live out there.

20 Q. Okay. On your shift, on your watch.

21 A. I probably took Bill down there by Dan's office. See,
22 Butch Lock, ex-representative, I think, got in some legal 23 problems and had to serve a little stint in the joint. Let's
24 see -- Lock, Lassiter and, Butch Lock, Dan Lassiter and then 25 Lassiter bought them all out.

1 Q. Is Collins --

2 A. Yeah. And right here close was their office. We're just
3 almost in the same area. I would have to drive around to find
4 it, but it was right here close somewhere. I remember a lot
5 of times taking Bill down to Dan's office and he would jump
6 out and I'd circle and wait until he come back and, or I would 7 go inside and stay in the lobby. I never went up behind the 8 closed doors.

9 Q. Let's take the Mansion first. How many occasions did
10 you --

11 A. Did I know personally that Dan came to the Mansion?

12 Q. Yes.

13 A. During the --

14 Q. During the Clinton administration.

15 A. I probably saw him, just like you said -- on my watch and 16 up until '84, I probably saw Dan half a dozen times at least.
17 And I'm going to say that I took him by his office even more
18 than that, just me personally.

19 Q. When he came --

20 A. I'm going to say maybe half a dozen times, and it could 21 have been anywhere from two to ten. We're just kind of 22 splitting the difference. I know it was more than once and it
23 could have been considerably more than even one and I don't 24 know how much more. You know, I didn't pay any attention to 25 that sort of thing then. You know, it was 10, 12, 15 years

1 ago and Dan was just Dan.

2 I remember his car and I remember his face. I knew him
3 personally. I knew who he was because of his horse racing. I
4 want to Oaklawn a lot. That's how I got to know Dan, was
5 through the thoroughbred stuff over there. Even before
6 Clinton was Governor, I knew of Dan Lassiter. We weren't 7 acquaintances. I knew him -- he didn't know me -- through his 8 horse racing.

9 Q. What kind of car did he drive in to the Mansion?

10 A. It seemed to me like he would come in in a vehicle
11 similar to what we would drive the Governor in -- a leased
12 vehicle, either a Lincoln-type vehicle -- you know, a luxury
13 car.

14 Q. Would you happen to remember the license plate?

15 A. Oh, lord, no.

16 Q. And was Dan Lassiter logged in when he came in?

17 A. You know, some of us -- there was a big turnover here,
18 during Bill's administration, in security and I'd rather not
19 go in to why. It gets into personalities and stuff. There
20 was a big turnover, and a lot of the guys got to stay there
21 longer. I was there five years which is considered a long
22 time. You burn out or get run off before then.

23 A lot of us knew some people and just didn't pay as much
24 attention to them as some of the guys. I probably personally
25 wouldn't log Dan in because I knew that he and Bill were

1 friends, that they visited socially. I had flown on his
2 plane. I knew that Bill spent a lot of time at Dan's office,
3 and that Dan spent time at the Mansion. So I personally
4 wouldn't log him in because it wasn't significant. It had no
5 bearing on anything other than maybe it was just a personal,
6 personal visit.

7 Q. Let me ask you this: On what sort of occasions would
8 Dan Lassiter come? Would there be official functions,
9 scheduled appointments or casual visits?

10 A. There would be drop-ins, drop, you know, Bill had, we 11 could monitor -- sitting out in the guard shack, we could 12 monitor. We monitored every phone call with the exception
13 Bill had a private line that wouldn't light up out there. On 14 our phone we had six numbers and if anybody on the Mansion
15 grounds was talking, a light would be lit up for -- but Bill
16 had a private line that we had, did not have access to, did
17 not know the number, didn't want to know it.

18 He could have been up there talking all day long to 19 someone, and we wouldn't have any knowledge of that. And if 20 we would buzz up to put a call through to him, he would have 21 to put the other line on hold because we didn't have access to 22 it. That phone was totally out of our, we never, you know --
23 those records, I don't know who paid the bill. I guess the 24 Mansion administrator. We never saw it, didn't know the 25 number and he used that phone an awful lot that we had no

1 knowledge of.

2 Q. Uh-huh.

3 A. And that was intentional, you know.

4 Q. I understand.

5 A. Because we couldn't, a lot of times people would pick up,
6 phone was lit up. Either accidentally or intentionally pick
7 up the phone and you could listen to conversations. So that
8 was, I'm sure, a provision for that was made by the private 9 line.

10 Q. All right. Can you tell me what sort of occasions
11 Dan Lassiter came to the Mansion for?

12 A. Well, he dropped in, but now I'm not saying Bill didn't 13 call him on his private line or have maybe us to call him and 14 have him come by where it would be just him by himself. And 15 he would also come for public functions, not public but maybe 16 official functions. And he would also come by himself and he 17 would, where it appeared to me, the best I recall, would be 18 just kind of off-the-cuff, drop-in things or in and out, you
19 know.

20 I don't recall any overnight stays or anything
21 particularly outstanding about any of Dan's visits. You know,
22 he was, he -- I didn't pay much attention because he, there
23 wasn't any reason to.

24 Q. And would he come at random times during the day and 25 night or were they just day visits?

1 A. I can't say. You know, it could have been both.

2 Q. Uh-huh.

3 A. Day and night, weekends, all day. It didn't, he just 4 came when he wanted to.

5 Q. Okay.

6 A. We didn't stop him. We knew better. I knew better.

7 Some of the guys, like I said, they were new, you know. There
8 were people that were there very long, you learned who to 9 intercept and who not to intercept.

10 Q. Who to wave by?

11 A. Exactly. Or who just to step out the door and wave at,
12 tell them to go on in, it's okay, or nothing. Just go out
13 and -- and a lot of times, the people that -- like the 14 close-knit group or the inner circle or whatever you call it,
15 a lot of times they would come to the guard shack and visit us
16 and talk and see what was going on even before they went 17 upstairs or would go inside, I mean.

18 Q. So Dan Lassiter, in your view or at least on your watch, 19 was one of the ones that just got waved on?

20 A. He did on my, like you said, on my watch, because I knew
21 Dan. I knew his face, what he drove. I knew his relationship
22 with the Governor was personal and professional and private or 23 whatever it was, on every level. And he -- I don't know -- I
24 can't speak for anybody but myself.

25 Dan never was shown a, shown in through the front door to

1 my knowledge, which meant -- if a person came to the Mansion
2 for the first time, if they were, especially, of any stature
3 and I'm talking about politically or in the community or from 4 out of state or whatever, they were shown into the Mansion
5 through the front door. You didn't go through Miss Liza's
6 kitchen, but now Dan went through the kitchen.

7 Q. Would you say Dan Lassiter was part of this extended
8 family group?

9 A. Well, in a different way, you know. He was, Dan kind of 10 kept, he was kind of in the shadows, kind of a gray area you
11 might say. He didn't frequent the Mansion as much as a lot of 12 the other guys I'm talking about. I personally probably took 13 Bill down there to his office more than Dan came to the 14 Mansion.

15 Q. How many times would you say you took Governor Clinton
16 down to Dan Lassiter's?

17 A. Oh, at least, again, you know, it was more than once and 18 it might have been as many as a dozen, but split the 19 difference -- six, eight, ten times over a -- and a lot of 20 times he'd say stop and he'd jump out and run in and I'd 21 circle the block and he'd jump back in. And sometimes I might 22 park and sit there for an hour and talk to Dan's pilot or 23 something and I would maybe go inside and sit and he would be 24 upstairs and behind closed doors or something.

25 I never went any further than that. A lot of times he

1 would just be in the area and he would say run by Dan's or run
2 by Lassiter's for a minute. I might sit out there double
3 parked and sit there and idle or that kind of deal.

4 MR. ROGERS: Steve, I need to take a break just 5 for a minute, please.

6 (A recess was held and proceedings resumed.)

7 BY MR. SOMERSTEIN:

8 Q. Now, would you say that Governor Clinton went to 9 Lassiter's once a month, twice a month? Could you
10 characterize the frequency of the times they saw each other,
11 either at Lassiter's office or at the Mansion?

12 A. Well, he could have went a lot more than I was aware of.
13 He could have went two days in a row and not again for a
14 month. But I wouldn't have had access to a -- I know he went 15 a lot more times than he went, than when I was with him. If 16 he went as much when the other guys were driving as he did
17 with me, he went a lot because like I said, we were very 18 seldom -- well, shit, we were running late all the time, so we 19 didn't have a lot of time to kill. But we very seldom were in 20 the area when he had any time on his hands that he didn't run
21 in. He went by there a lot, by his office a lot.

22 Q. Do you know what the purpose of his visits were?

23 A. No, no idea.

24 Q. He never discussed them with you or told you why he was 25 going up there?

1 A. No. It wasn't my business. I didn't ask.

2 Q. Okay.

3 A. You didn't, protocol and our instructions were you didn't
4 initiate a conversation with the Governor because he was, his
5 mind was always somewhere else. You didn't initiate a
6 conversation unless he asked. Otherwise, you just stayed 7 quiet.

8 Q. Okay. Did you ever see him carrying anything in or out
9 of Dan Lassiter's office?

10 A. I can't recall. I wouldn't have paid any attention to 11 it. It wouldn't have meant nothing than. Hell, he could have 12 brought a suitcase, a satchel, a paper sack, a cotton sack.
13 He could have brought anything in and out and I wouldn't have 14 any recollection of it. Bill carried a briefcase about 15 everywhere he went so probably he carried a briefcase in and 16 out most the time.

17 He had personalized, you know, nice, personalized,
18 initialed briefcase he carried in and out a lot. I can't 19 remember anything specifically that he took in or brought out
20 of Dan Lassiter's.

21 Q. Okay. And do you know if he ever went to Dan Lassiter's
22 home?

23 A. I never took him. I never was in Dan Lassiter's home. I
24 don't even know where he lived. I guess he had a house or a 25 hotel or a room or apartment or something in Little Rock, but

1 I never was in it and never took Bill to it.

2 Q. Okay. Now, was, was Buddy Young ever with 3 Governor Clinton when he went to Dan Lassiter's?

4 A. I can't answer that. I have no idea. Another, of course
5 this was a, this was violated a lot, but when you went into 6 the unit, the, you were instructed up front: You don't
7 discuss with any other member of this unit anything that you,
8 the Governor or you and the First Family do or that they do or 9 say or that you see or hear. You don't discuss that with any 10 member of the unit or with the, even your wife or -- it's 11 confidential and privileged and you, what you see and hear,
12 you forget it. Okay? That was the official position.

13 Q. Uh-huh.

14 A. I have no idea if Buddy Young ever -- Buddy had a, one of 15 the kind of standing jokes, not jokes, but one, something
16 along the lines you're talking about, though. Buddy liked
17 the -- and Buddy is a friend of mine and this is not running
18 him down I don't think. He was kind of a limelight hog. We 19 accused him of picking the plums, you know, taking the better
20 trips, which might have included some of Dan Lassiter's
21 overlapped -- you know, where Dan and Bill overlapped might 22 have included some of those trips.

23 We worked off of a rotation on major trips other than 24 just in-state jaunts or, you know, like if Bill was going 25 overseas or if he was going to New York or Washington or

1 whatever, we worked off of a rotation to where one guy
2 wouldn't catch -- and then if one guy didn't want it or wasn't
3 available, then someone else would either volunteer or you
4 would skip your turn.

5 Single guys liked to go a lot, you know, because they 6 didn't have family and they got to meet some, meet some 7 nice-looking women and stay at some nice places and drink and 8 eat the best, you know. I mean, if Governor Clinton stayed in 9 the $300 room in the Waldorf, we stayed next door in the same
10 room or in a comparable room and suite. And if he went to a 11 restaurant where there was a hundred dollars a plate, we had 12 to go in and same plate, the table next to him. We couldn't 13 go down the street to McDonald's.

14 We were on unlimited -- there was no such thing as a 15 limit or a per diem on our moneys that we had access to and 16 could spend because you just couldn't do it, you know. And a
17 lot of times all the stuff was donated and Bill didn't -- 18 hell, he didn't carry no money with him. He was always 19 bumming money from us.

20 When we got back, we would have to go to the Mansion
21 secretary and try to talk her out of it. Hell, if he had it,
22 he would lose it. We were always canceling driver's licenses
23 and credit cards because he'd lose them, leave them in 24 somebody's car. He couldn't keep up with nothing. I don't 25 remember what we was talking about now.

SUB-COMMITTEE MEETING
February 17, 1983

The Housing Sub-Committee met Thursday, February 17, 1983 at 2:00 p.m. in the office of the Agency's Executive Director. The Sub-Committee consisted of Chairman Charles Stout, Vice-Chairman Mort Hardwicke and Fred Dacus. Others attending were Robert Hammerschmidt, Executive Director; Linda Trent, Deputy Director of Housing; Vivian Pugh, Deputy Director of Finance; and Bernard Henry, Multi-Family Housing Officer.

Chairman Stout called the meeting to order and stated that the purpose of the meeting was to discuss a proposed solution to the problems with the current Single Family Bond Program. After discussion, it was determined that the composition and breakdown of underwriters in this proposal be as directed below.

Dabbs Sullivan Div., G.K. Baum Co. and Blyth Eastman Paine Webber - 60%

T. J. Raney & Sons
Stephens, Inc.
Collins, Locke & Laster, Inc. - 40% (13 1/3% each)

The meeting of the Sub-Committee was adjourned at 2:30 PM.

ARKANSAS HOUSING DEVELOPMENT AGENCY
EXECUTIVE BOARD MEETING

3:00 PM

April 12, 1983

The Arkansas Housing Development Agency's Executive Board met on Tuesday, April 12, 1983, in the AHDA Conference Room.

The Board Members present were Chairman Charles Stout, Vice-Chairman Mort Hardwicke, Mr. Tommy Edwards, Mr. George Wright, Ms. Betty Walker, and Mr. Mahlon Martin.

AHDA Staff present were Linda D. Trent, Acting Executive Director; Midge Pugh, Deputy Director; Susan Young, (Single Family Housing Officer; Bernard Henry, Multi-Family Housing Officer; Gary Arrington, Management Representative; and Randal Jones, Planning Specialist.

Others present were Mr. James R. Carroll of Block Mortgage Co., Inc.; Ms. Patt Greenlee and Mr. Ron Strother of Commercial National Mortgage Company; Mr. Gary Smith of Merrill Lynch; Mr. Charles Henderson, Mr. William Johnson, Mr. Bobby Allison, and Mr. Robert Währendorff of E. F. Hutton; Mr. Joseph Harcum of Lehman Brothers; Mr. Bob Snider of T. J. Rainey & Sons, Inc.; Mr. Michael Drake, of Collins, Locke & Lasater; Mr. Jeff Orum of Blyth Eastman Paine Webber; Mr. Dabbs Sullivan of Dabbs Sullivan Division; Ms. Suzanne Young and Ms. Darlene Caery of Firstsouth; Mr. Ron Roy and Ms. Cherry Duckett of Arkansas Energy Office; Ms. Johnnie Holcomb and Mr. Charles Crow of Stephens, Inc.; Mr. Jim Fowler of Rose Law Firm; and Mr. Dale Taylor of First National Mortgage Company.

Chairman Stout called the meeting to order at 3:00 PM. Chairman Stout stated that the previous month's Board Meeting Minutes (March 16, 1983) and Subcommittee Meeting Minutes (April, 1983) should be approved if there were not further additions or corrections, and the Board approved the minutes.

Chairman Stout called on Ms. Trent for the Executive Director's Report.

Ms. Trent informed the Board that we have approximately $1.5 million that has not been committed in our Home Improvement Program, but we have asked for an extension on this program through the end of July. We have not received word from bond counsel on this extension, but we don't foresee any problem in getting the extension.

On the 1982 Single Family Bond Issue we have purchased $10.5 million to date and are continuously purchasing approximately $150,000 per week.

All projects in Multi-Family are either running on schedule or ahead of schedule, and after being called on by Ms. Trent, Mr.

Henry informed the Board that five projects have been partially completed for a total of 245 dwelling units.

Chairman Stout called on Mr. Jeff Oram for an update on our Single Family Issue.

Mr. Oram stated that the preliminary official statements and other documents were mailed last week to the rating agencies and they are now waiting for ratings. They expect to have the ratings this afternoon and to be able to release the scale tomorrow morning. Numbers they have been running today, based on where the rates are right now, assures a mortgage rate of 10%.

Mr. Wright made a motion that the Agency adopt Simmons as Trustee. Mr. Tommy Edwards seconded; and the Board officially adopted Simmons as Trustee. The Board also officially adopted Verex as the Mortgage Pool Insurer.

Chairman Stout asked Mr. Jack Williams if he had something to offer on Single Family.

Mr. Williams stated that he had a resolution concerning the Agency borrowing $1 million from Simmons. He asked for a closing on the $1 million note from Simmons on Friday, and after discussion, the Board adopted the resolution that Mr. Williams showed them. Due to the fact that Chairman Stout will be unavailable Friday to sign the note, the Board appointed Mr. Mahlon Martin as assignee and said the resolution should indicate that Ms. Trent is Acting Director and attest his signature. Mr. Maylon

Martin was appointed Acting Chairman for that day.

Mr. Jack Williams informed the Board that if the bonds sell this week, the underwriters anticipate closing the last week in April; therefore, we would need to have the Board meet again to ratify what the committee does and to adopt the definitive documents. Chairman Stout reminded the Board that the complete Board had voted to accept the proposal from Sullivan to provide an interest 10.5% or under. He stated that he would leave his proxy with Ms. Trent as to what mortgage rate we can accept, optimistically hoping for 10% or under. After Mr. Williams informed the Board that someone would need to sign the Bond Purchase Agreement Friday or Monday, the Board asked Vice-Chairman Hardwicke, Mr. Edwards and Mr. Wright to be available for a conference call concerning this, and Mr. Martin was authorized to sign the Bond Purchase Agreement.

Chairman Stout stated that the Multi-Family Subcommittee heard oral presentations from the underwriters earlier in the day and were prepared to make recommendations to the Full Board this afternoon. He asked Vice-Chairman Hardwicke for the Subcommittee's recommendation.

Vice-Chairman Hardwicke informed the Board that all the proposals were good, and after listening to eight proposals and considering each carefully, the Subcommittee would like to recommend to the Board that Merrill Lynch be the lead underwriter with Stephens, Inc., and T. J. Rainey & Sons, Inc. as locals. The Board also recommended that the Rose Law Firm be selected as bond counsel. After motions were made and seconded, the Board unanimously approved the underwriters and bond counsel recommended by the Subcommittee.

Mr. Jones was called upon for the Planning Specialist's Report, and he informed the Board that 16 of the 33 counties submitted have been approved through the Washington Office, and those have now been sent to the Treasury. Treasury should let us know something by the end of the month. We are also awaiting reasons why the other counties were not approved by Washington. Ms. Trent stated that if we get those 16 approved through the Treasury, that will bring our total of counties with the first-time homeowners restriction lifted up to 31, and the sales price would be increased by approximately 10%.

Chairman Stout asked for questions or comments from the audience.

Mr. James Carroll expressed to the Board the lenders' appreciation to the Board for working out the difficult situation the lenders were put in formerly. He further asked the Board about the monies in addition to the first $25 million increment, and Mr Stout stated that no applications could be taken on the additional monies because information has to be submitted to the rating agencies on each increment.

Chairman Stout asked for further business, questions or comments from the Board Members, and there being none, the meeting was adjourned at 3:22 PM.

Mr. Charles Stout
Stout Realty

Dear Chairman Stout:

It is with regret that I must inform you that Stephens Inc. is withdrawing from the multi-family housing issue to which we were recently selected as co-manager, along with Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith and T. J. Raney and Sons.

Stephens Inc. has had a long and cordial relationship with the Arkansas Housing Development Agency, and it is our desire that this continue. We were among the strongest supporters of the legislation which created the Agency, and have served as managers in every one of the Agency's financings.

It has been our belief that the chief reasons for the splendid success which has been enjoyed by the Agency's bond offerings in the market place have been: (1) conservatively structured programs, (2) competent professional staff, and (3) a strong, independent board of directors which functioned without outside interference by political or other interests. As a result of these factors, the issues of the Agency have always been favorably received, at better than market rates, and the bonds continue to trade extremely well on the secondary market because of perceived Agency stability.

A guiding principle of the Agency from its inception has been the requirement that professional firms, including bond counsel and underwriters, be selected on the basis of merit through written and oral presentations. With exception of the most recent single-family issue, the Agency has seen fit to select only those underwriters who had the most superior combination of credentials which would benefit the Agency, namely, sufficient capital to underwrite, strong sales capability, in-house technical expertise, and the ability to continue to make a market in the Agency's securities in the secondary market.

With this knowledge, Stephens Inc. responded to your invitation to propose as managing underwriter to the multi-family issue. We were very pleased to have been selected as a co-manager and were looking forward to beginning work immediately. In the meantime, subsequent to our selection, the Board decided, without discussion, to add to the underwriting group a firm which did not submit a proposal under the Agency proposal procedures which invited individual firm proposals. Although it is certainly the Agency's privilege to appoint any firm, we would invite you to investigate more carefully whether the added company meets the standards of capital, experience, sales capability, staff service and market support which have been the preference of the Board in all previous issues.

We are concerned that such actions may be an indication of an erosion of the independence of the Board of Directors which, if publicly perceived, can only be received adversely in the market. It is therefore with reluctance that we withdraw from this issue. We are hopeful that this action will not preclude us from participation in future offerings of the Arkansas Housing Development Agency, assuming, the selection is made on merit and experience.

It has been a pleasure to work with you, the Board of Directors, and your excellent staff. If we may ever be of service to you, we're just down the street.

Respectfully submitted,

STEPHENS INC.

ARKANSAS HOUSING DEVELOPMENT AGENCY
SPECIAL EXECUTIVE BOARD MEETING
4:10 PM

April 19, 1983

The Arkansas Housing Development Agency's Executive Board met on Tuesday, April 19, 1983, in the AHDA Conference Room, at 4:10 PM.

The Board Members present were Mr. Mort Hardwicke, Mr. Tommy Edwards, Mr. George Wright and Mr. Mahlon Martin.

AHDA Staff present were Linda D. Trent, Acting Executive Director; and Midge Pugh, Deputy Director.

Others present were Ms. Johnnie Holcolm of Stephens, Inc.; Mr. Bob Snider of T. J. Rainey & Sons, Inc.; Mr. Jack Williams and Mr. David Menz of Wright, Lindsey & Jennings; Mr. Jim Fowle of Rose Law Firm; Mr. Tom Carter of Collins, Locke & Lasater; Mr. Dabbs Sullivan of Dabbs Sullivan - Division of George K. Baum; and Ms. Carol Matlock of the Arkansas Gazette.

Mr. Hardwicke called the meeting to order at 4:10 PM and informed the Board Members that the Special meeting was called for the Board to take action and officially approve the documentation for the 1983 Single Family Issue which was sold last week. Mr. Hardwicke then called on Mr. Williams to inform the Board of any changes made in the documentation.

Mr. Williams stated there was a proposed amendment to the Bond Purchase Agreement that the Board needed to consider, and he called on Mr. Menz to discuss that amendment.

Mr. Menz informed the Board that Special Tax Counsels asked that we add in a breakdown between the allocation of original issue discount bonds and the allocation for the other bonds in the 1983 Single Family Bond Issue. Mr. Menz stated they had added to the first page of this the contract to purchase that allocation in the form of a table showing the maturities of the bonds, rather than the original issue discount bonds and the original discount bonds with par value and purchase price. The reason for that is there is a revenue ruling which states the Agency must specifically allocate these discounted amounts so that the purchasers of the original issue discount bonds can have the discount treated properly for Federal Income Tax purposes.

After the Board was informed of the significance of the amendment to the Bond Purchase Agreement and assured that the bond counsel had reviewed it and approved the change, Mr. Hardwicke asked for a motion to approve the Bond Purchase Agreement. Mr. Edwards made a motion concerning same; Mr. Martin seconded it, and the Board approved.

Mr. Williams asked the Board for a ratification of the signing of the documents by Mr. Maylon Martin as Acting Chairman.

Mr. Wright made the motion; Mr. Edwards seconded, and the Board approved.

Mr. Hardwicke called for a motion to approve the Lander's Guide and Servicer's Guide. Mr. Martin made a motion that the aforementioned Guides be approved; Mr. Edwards seconded, and the Board approved.

Mr. Hardwicke then asked for a motion to approve the General Resolution. Mr. Martin made the motion that the General Resolution be approved; Mr. Edwards seconded, and the Board approved. Mr. Hardwicke further asked for a motion to approve the Series Resolution. Mr. Wright made the motion that the Series Resolution be approved; Mr. Edwards seconded, and the Board approved.

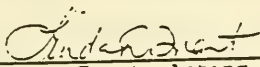

Mr. Williams informed the Board that ~~pre-closing~~ is scheduled for May 2nd in New York and closing May 3rd on the 1983 Single Family Bond Issue.

Upon Mr. Hardwicke's request for further business, Mr. Wright made a motion that Collins, Locke & Lasater be added to the underwriting team for the Agency's proposed 1983 Multi-Family Issue in order to spread it around and include more local Arkansas underwriters on this issue. Mr. Edwards seconded the motion, and the Board approved same.

Mr. Jack Williams thanked the Board members for meeting this afternoon on such short notice to take care of this business.

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned at 4:15 PM.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS MEETING

February 17, 1983

The Board of Directors of the Arkansas Housing Development Agency met for the regular monthly meeting on Thursday afternoon, February 17, 1983, in the Agency's Conference Room.

Board members present were Chairman Charles Stout, Vice-Chairman Mort Hardwicke, Secretary Robert Hammerschmidt, Tommy Edwards, Betty Walker, Fred Dacus, Mahlon Martin and George Wright.

AHDA Staff present were Linda Trent, Deputy Director of Housing; Vivian Pugh, Deputy Director of Finance; Susan Young, Single Family Housing Officer; Bernie Henry, Multi-Family Housing Officer; Gary Arrington, Multi-Family Management Specialist; Bill Wilson, Fiscal Officer; Randy Jones, Planning Specialist; and Freda Thompson, Executive Secretary.

Others present were George Campbell, Rose Law Firm; Don Christian and Dabbs Sullivan, Jr., Dabbs Sullivan Division of George K. Baum Co.; Peter Nolden and ^{Jeff} Jerry Oram, Blyth Eastman Paine Webber; Michael J. Drake and Thomas Carter Collins, Locke & Laster, Inc.; John Moore and Robert Coleman, Union Modern Mortgage; Susan Finister, Savers Federal Savings & Loan; Melinda Wolfe and Gary Smith, Merrill Lynch; Ron W. Strothers and Patt Greenlee, Commercial National Mortgage Co.;

W. J. Williams, Jr., Wright, Lindsey & Jennings Law Firm; Jewelle Bickford, Citibank; Johnnie Holcomb and Gene Wilbourn, Stephens, Inc.; Bob Snider, T. J. Raney & Sons; James Carroll, Block Mortgage Co.; Charles Henderson, William Johnston and Robert Warendorf, E.F. Hutton Co.; Jim Tom Bell, Dennis Mills and Dale M. Taylor, First National Mortgage Co.

Chairman Stout called the meeting to order at 3:10 PM, and welcomed new Board members George Wright and Mablon Martin. The minutes of the regular meeting of January 6, 1983, the Sub-Committee meeting of January 11, 1983, and the Special Board meeting of January 21, 1983, were approved as written.

Chairman Stout turned the meeting over to Robert Hammerschmidt for the Executive Director's Report. Mr. Hammerschmidt referred the Board to the Planning section of their packets, which concerns the Agency's Resolution asking our Washington Delegation to draft legislation to repeal the Mortgage Subsidy Bond Tax Act of 1980. He explained that this Act imposes certain restrictions which some Lenders believe to be AHDA restrictions. He added that the Council of State Housing Agencies has entered legislation to repeal the Sunset portion of that Act which has been fully endorsed by this Agency and all of our Congressman and Senators; however, this will not help us in our Single Family Program. Within Arkansas, our State Legislature has passed a Senate Concurrent Resolution supporting our Resolution, along with many other organizations and associations in the State. Randy Jones, AHDA Planning Specialist has contacted many other states to get support on this. Mr. Hammerschmidt stated that a Bill has been drafted in the House by Congressman John Paul Hammerschmidt calling for the repeal of this Act.

Chairman Stout distributed packets compiled by the National Home Builders Association reflecting the economic impact of new single family units financed by tax-exempt mortgage revenue bonds and requested that this study be entered into the Board minutes.

Mr. Hammerschmidt mentioned the problems we have had in the Single Family Bond Issue and the Agency's attempts to find a solution to make the program work. He called on Linda Trent to present to the Board a proposal received by the Agency. Ms. Trent stated that due to VA and FHA interest rates falling below the 12.95% rate of the AHDA bond issue the Single Family Program has become unmarketable and the Lenders cannot recover their 4% commitment fees except by making mortgage loans. Ms. Trent said that after working with our present underwriters who were unable to find a solution, other underwriters contacted the Agency with a proposal that appears to be workable. Ms. Trent then called on Mr. Dabbs Sullivan, Jr., with Dabbs Sullivan Division of George K. Baum Co., to present the proposal to the Board. Mr. Sullivan distributed written proposals to each Board member and stated that this would solve our Single Family bond issue problems and the Lenders could recoup their 4% commitment fees. He briefly outlined the proposal and said the interest rate would be approximately 10% on a fixed rate 30 year mortgage loan financed by the issuance of bonds, and the money would be available for loans around April 15th. After allowing time for questions and discussion, Chairman Stout recommended that the Board allow the Housing Sub-Committee to have final approval of the composition and breakdown of underwriters in the proposal. Mrs. Betty Walker moved that the recommendation be accepted and Tommy Edwards seconded the motion with the full Board voting aye.

Mr. Hammerschmidt noted that the 1981 Home Improvement Program was 69% complete at this time.

Mr. Hammerschmidt then called on Bernard Henry to report on the proposed Multi-Family Bond Issue. Mr. Henry advised that the Sub-Committee's research on the most attractive and viable type of program to pursue indicates that the FHA Insured Program is the best structure available at this time. Mr. Henry and the Sub-Committee requested the Board's approval to actively pursue this program and authority to accept proposals from underwriters and bond counsel. Mr. Tommy Edwards made a motion to authorize the Sub-Committee to proceed with this program. Mr. Fred Dacus seconded the motion and it was unanimously approved by the full Board.

Mr. Hammerschmidt reported that all 19 projects financed under our Multi-Family Bond Issue were progressing according to, or ahead of, completion schedule.

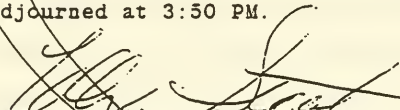

Mr. Hammerschmidt called on Vivian Pugh for a Fiscal report. Ms. Pugh directed the Board's attention to the financial information contained in the Board packet and briefly reviewed each report.

Chairman Stout called for New Business. Board member Betty Walker stated that due to family reasons it was difficult to attend Board meetings on Thursday afternoons, and requested that Board meetings be held at 3:00 PM on the third Wednesday of each month. Chairman Stout polled each Board member individually and all were in agreement.

Chairman Stout then presented a plaque to Robert Hammerschmidt, Executive Director, commending him for his outstanding leadership of the Agency from May 1, 1982, through February 28, 1983. Mr. Hammerschmidt planned to leave the Agency at the end of February.

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned at 3:50 PM.

 ARKANSAS HOUSING DEVELOPMENT AGENCY
 SPECIAL BOARD MEETING
 August 31, 1983
 3:00 P.M.

The Arkansas Housing Development Agency held a Special Board Meeting at 3:00 p.m., on August 31, 1983, in Room 1143 of the Donaghey Building, Little Rock, Arkansas.

Board Members present were Chairman Charles Stout, Mr. Tommy Edwards, Mr. Mahlon Martin, Mr. George Wright, Mr. Bill Mathis, Mr. James Branyan, Mr. Fred Dabbs, Ms. Betty Walker, Ms. Margaret Davenport, and Mr. Troy Burris.

AHDA Staff present were Mr. C. E. Anderson, Acting Director; Ms. Midge Pugh, Deputy Director; and Ms. Susan Young, Single-Family Housing Officer.

Others present were Mr. Don Christian and Mr. Dabbs Sullivan, Jr., of Dabbs Sullivan Division of George K. Baum & Co.; Mr. Tom Carter and Mr. Michael J. Drake of Collins, Locke & Lasater; Mr. Jack Williams of Wright, Lindsey & Jennings; Mr. Bobby Allison of E. F. Hutton Co., Inc; Mr. John R. Morris of Kidder, Peabody & Co.; Mr. Bob Snider of T. J. Raney & Sons; Ms. M. Susan Hamilton of Thomas McKimmon Securities; Mr. Charlie Crow, Ms. Johnnie Holcomb and Mr. Gene Wilbourn all of Stephens, Inc.; and Mr. Jeffrey J. Orum of Blyth Eastman Paine Webber, Inc.

Chairman Stout called the meeting to order at 3:01 p.m. stating the purpose of this meeting was to select Underwriters for the $125,000,000.00 Issue. He then called for recommendations of the Review & Recommendation Sub-Committee.

Mr. George Wright, Chairman of the Review & Recommendation Sub-Committee, handed Chairman Stout the following recommendations and fee percentages: Senior Underwriters are Blyth Eastman Paine Webber, Inc. - 25%; Co-Senior are the First Boston Corporation - 20%; and Prudential-Bache Securities - 15%. Co-Managers are Collins, Locke and Lasater - 10%; Dabbs Sullivan Division of George K. Baum & Co. - 10%; T. J. Raney & Sons, Inc. - 10%; and Stephens, Inc. - 10%. Chairman Stout called for a motion to accept the Sub-Committee recommendations. Mr. Tommy Edwards made such a motion; Mr. James Branyan seconded, and the Board approved.

Chairman Stout then called for recommendation of the Review & Recommendation Sub-Committee for Bond Counsel.

Mr. George Wright stated the Review and Recommendation Sub-Committee recommended that the firm of Wright, Lindsey & Jennings be appointed for this Issue. Chairman Stout called for a motion to accept the Sub-Committee recommendation. Mr. Bill Mathis made such a motion; Mr. Tommy Edwards seconded, and the Board approved. Chairman Stout asked any Senior Underwriters present to please consult with the Board as to local firms being used.

At 3:05 p.m. Chairman Stout called for an Executive Session for the Board to discuss selection of an Executive Director.

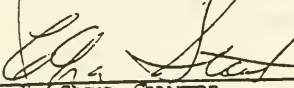

(10 MINUTES TIME LAPSE)

Chairman Stout called the meeting to order again at 3:15 p.m. and called for the Executive Director Sub-Committee recommendation on the selection of the Executive Director. Mr. George Wright presented to the Board the Sub-Committee recommendation of Mr. Wooten Epes. Chairman Stout called for a motion to accept the Sub-Committee recommendation. Ms. Margaret Davenport made such a motion; Mr. Bill Mathis seconded, and the Board approved.

Chairman Stout expressed appreciation to Mr. C. E. Anderson for his outstanding work as Acting Executive Director until such time a new Director could be named.

Chairman Stout stated that a Public Hearing would be called at a later date to structure the up-coming Issue.

There being no further business before the Board, Mr. Wright made a motion to adjourn; Mr. Tommy Edwards seconded and the meeting was adjourned at 3:25 p.m.

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

EXECUTIVE SESSION

TUESDAY, MAY 7, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:00 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato, (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING STATEMENT OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. We have a number of announcements to make. There has been a great deal of speculation with respect to the witnesses and who they will be, and what we will be doing in the next several weeks. The Committee will continue its hearings on the Arkansas phase of the investigation. We will be concentrating our efforts in terms of getting as many of those facts as we possibly can.

There are a number of outstanding questions relating to the substance of the billing records and the circumstances surrounding their disappearance and their discovery. In an effort to apprise the Committee about these unresolved questions and the Committee's efforts to find answers, I have asked Counsel to make a presentation and to attempt to answer any questions that the Senators may have concerning the issue and the Committee's answers to date with respect to these billing records.

Mr. Chertoff will make a presentation and indicate what we have done and the number of depositions or interrogatories that we have taken. As we said we were going to keep these in confidence as it relates to all of the people who were asked whether they had any knowledge, but we have gone through a whole number of them and we will make our report public at this time.

The Committee has agreed—Senator Sarbanes and myself—to the issuance of subpoenas to David Hale. These subpoenas seek deposition testimony from Mr. Hale on May 20th and hearing testimony on May 22nd.

The Committee has not reached an agreement yet on a subpoena for David Watkins' testimony, and also with respect to a subpoena for certain records of the Bank of Kingston. I believe that was the predecessor to Madison Savings & Loan, and there are some limited records that we seek there. Hopefully, Counsels will be able to come to an accord. If we can, we will announce the issuance of them tomorrow. If not, we may have to take up whatever is unresolved with respect to voting for or against the issuance of those subpoenas.

Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, first of all, I think the Bank of Kingston was not a predecessor to Madison Savings & Loan, just so we keep that clear on the record. I mean, that is an important point.

The CHAIRMAN. It was owned by Mr. McDougal, Senator.

Senator Sarbanes. Well, I understand, but—

The CHAIRMAN. If we are going to start splitting hairs, now let me say this to you, we are either going to get these records or not. If we cannot agree to it, and we have attempted to work these things out, then we will meet tomorrow for the purpose of considering issuing subpoenas. They are relevant and we are not going to be deterred. I hope we can do this in a manner in which we have worked out most of the matters, but make no mistake about it. We are going to consider it, one way or the other.

Senator SARBANES. Well, let me say, I hope we can work it out. My understanding is we are very close, but I again want to make the point that the Bank of Kingston is not a predecessor to Madison Savings & Loan.

The CHAIRMAN. We will go through this tomorrow, but the Bank of Kingston was an affiliate of Madison Guaranty. Mr. McDougal owned, wholly, this bank. He had the controlling interest in both of these banks.

Now it is not a question that we are looking to subpoena records of some institution that has no connection with Madison Guaranty, that we just dragged it out of the air. I think it is rather disingenuous to suggest that maybe we are looking for some records that have no connection. That is not the case.

I have attempted to steer us in a course that would avoid controversy, but I'll be doggoned if I am going to sit here and have you attempt to split hairs with me when we know, and we have gone through this repeatedly and have attempted to settle this thing. If we cannot, then we will take up the issue with respect to whether or not this Committee should issue a subpoena for these records.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, no one is trying to be disingenuous with you. Far be it.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Senator SARBANES. I am perfectly happy to discuss this matter. If we are going to discuss it, we are going to have to do it in a calm, rational way with some relationship to the facts.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, there is a great deal of relationship to the facts. You would have people believe that there is no connection when I said this was a predecessor. The fact is McDougal owned this bank prior to taking over Madison, and he was the majority stockholder, and the fact is that there are records that we are entitled to see. I do not know what those records will produce, but it is our attempt to get the facts and finish this.

I do not think this should have been brought out as a public issue. The fact is that the clock is ticking. We are running into one of those situations again where on the one hand we say we want to wrap this up, and on the other hand we have to have the ability to get this information so that we can get all the facts and make a determination.

Senator SARBANES. We are trying very hard, Mr. Chairman to work with you in order to wrap it up, I must say. Do we have any notion of what the hearing schedule will be for the week after next?

The CHAIRMAN. Today we were supposed to have Ms. Thomases, but her lawyers had a problem with scheduling. It was at their request and insistence and our attempt to accommodate them, and I ask that the letter be put into the record from her lawyers, that we put this matter over until next Tuesday.

We run into problems, otherwise, Susan Thomases would have been here. We are attempting to work with both the Minority and with the schedules of other people—the witnesses and their attorneys. I believe that we have a tentative schedule, and it includes Ms. Thomases who is supposed to be here Tuesday. If some exigency or problem develops and she is not able to be here, that will mean that we have an opening Tuesday.

Similarly, I point out that we have been discussing the question of Mr. Watkins and the Bank of Kingston now for at least 10 days. There comes a point in time, as the saying goes, to fish or cut bait. Either we are going to have to come to an agreement or make a determination to vote out subpoenas. I would hope that we can. But so far, notwithstanding the good efforts on both sides, we have not been able to resolve this.

Senator SARBANES. Yes, hopefully we can.

I would note that we joined in the subpoena to Ms. Thomases. While I was not involved in the decision to postpone her testimony, I understand that the Chairman was responding to an appeal from her lawyers which I have not seen, but in any event, obviously, I think the Chairman has to show some understanding of the situation in which witnesses find themselves. So I do not really quarrel with that. The present plan, I take it, is to bring her in next Tuesday, May 14th?

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct.

Senator SARBANES. Do we know what the schedule will be for the rest of next week?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, the staffs are working to accommodate that, Senator. They are trying to do as many of these by deposition so that we will save time.

Next Tuesday, we have Susan Thomases on the first panel. We have Charles Campbell, former Vice President of the Security Bank; William Fisher, the former President and CEO of the Security Bank; and Frank Oldham, the former Loan Officer of the Security Bank of Paragould, I guess that is, on the second panel.

On Wednesday, we will have two panels. On panel one, Loretta Lynch and Jim Blair; and on panel two, Bruce Erickson and Jay Stevens, Pillsbury Madison & Sutro.

On Thursday, we have John Latham, David Knight, Gary Bunch, and Bill Henley. I believe that this information has been shared with the Minority. As a matter of fact, I see a memo that may have just been written yesterday or today.

Senator SARBANES. I was just looking at it.

The CHAIRMAN. The schedules are attempting to accommodate, where we believe it is appropriate, witnesses and their attorneys.

It was Ms. Thomases' attorney who asked us, notwithstanding the fact that a subpoena had been issued, to adjourn this matter in order to accommodate them and we did. So there will be some changes as we go along. There is no doubt about it.

Senator SARBANES. But essentially we've set the hearing schedule now for this week and next week?

The CHAIRMAN. Essentially, yes. Now if there is an opportunity to advance or bring in other witnesses, or if we find that it is not necessary, obviously, we will act accordingly; and we have been advising the Minority.

Now, I will say again, I hope that we can come to an agreement as it relates to the issuance of subpoenas getting the records of a bank that we have every right to see. It is a bank that James McDougal controlled. We have discussed these records now for a period of time.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, the other point I want to—

The CHAIRMAN. These are files that Webb Hubbell took from the Rose Law Firm. If Hubbell had not taken the files, we would not have them. The relevance is that we are interested in these files that Hubbell took. I cannot understand why we cannot come to an agreement to issue these subpoenas.

Senator SARBANES. We will figure that out later today, I assume.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Senator starts to say, well, this was not the predecessor of the Madison Bank that leave us in a position where people would think that maybe there is no relevance to this. There is, and we want to wrap this up as quickly and as thoroughly as possible. We need these files and though they may prove to be nothing, it is still our job to get this information.

Senator SARBANES. Now, Mr. Chairman, I indicated to you in a conversation last week that the Minority was prepared to participate in hearings the week of May 27th, which I understand is going to be a recess week for the Senate, if the Chairman thought hearings were necessary that week in order to hold to our schedule, and I just want to repeat that here this morning.

I understand the current plan in the Senate is the week of May 27th, which is Memorial Day week, they plan to recess. I do not know whether hearings will be necessary in order to meet the June 14th date, but if so, we are prepared to hold hearings that week. I do not know what the Chairman's view of that is at this point, but I just wanted to add that to the discussion.

The CHAIRMAN. I have indicated to the Senator, if it is necessary so that we can dispose of all of our work prior to the agreed date to terminate public hearings, I would certainly think it is incumbent upon us to use that time, and if it is necessary we will hold hearings during that week.

I have stated previously, it is the intent of the Chair, to do our work thoroughly, comprehensively, fairly, and in an honest attempt to meet the deadline that the Senate has imposed. If we can finish earlier, I think it would be to our advantage in case we have additional developments, or new events turn up, so that we do not have to ask for a continuance on the time; we can do it within the time allotted.

Witnesses are being deposed and information is continuing to be gathered in an attempt to meet that schedule and deal with it in a way that leaves us sufficient time to write our report.

Senator SARBANES. Are you going to turn to Mr. Chertoff now?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. I have one final point I would like to discuss.

Mr. Giuffra informed us yesterday that he had a discussion with Mr. Olsen, Mr. Hale's counsel, who said that Mr. Hale intended to assert his Fifth Amendment right, as I understand it. That is the report we received from Mr. Giuffra. If that is the case, I think we should ask Counsel to research the appropriateness of such a claim and hopefully work could begin on that on the part of Counsel, working together both Majority and Minority Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. I will ask both Mr. Chertoff and Mr. Ben-Veniste to research whether or not a claim, an assertion that the Fifth Amendment will be interposed, if that is sufficient to thwart a subpoena, or the appearance of a witness; whether or not the witness has to come in and plead the Fifth or he can make that assertion through his attorney. I guess that is the question?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The issue really is, since Mr. Hale has testified publicly for some 9 days in Little Rock, one wonders how at this point he would successfully assert a claim of privilege against testifying before this Committee.

It is not a question of whether a witness who appropriately asserts a Fifth Amendment privilege should be brought before the Committee. I would not advocate such a position. But, whether—

The CHAIRMAN. To extend a waiver?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE —the assertion is appropriate under the circumstances here to avoid appearing before our Committee.

Senator SARBANES. Why don't we have Counsel discuss that?

The CHAIRMAN. That is a very interesting question. I think Counsel should review that and possibly even take it up with Senate Legal Counsel as it relates to any precedents that may or may not have been established so we can get a determination.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We are going only on what Mr. Giuffra reports that Mr. Olsen told him. He has not made that assertion publicly.

The CHAIRMAN. Sure.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It may be just something he was thinking of. Perhaps Mr. Giuffra could clarify it.

The CHAIRMAN. Indeed, if this is raised, I think it would be wise for us to get ahead of the curve. He may or may not choose to assert that privilege, but we will do the research on it.

Are there any other Senators who would like to be heard from at this time?

[No response.]

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, I was requested to report to the Committee on where we are with a series of questions that we have been pursuing both in public hearings and in private depositions and through private interrogatories relating to what people generally know as "the billing records."

The billing records are large computer printouts that indicate the billings that the Rose Law Firm submitted to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan for work done between April 1985 and about June 1986. We know from prior testimony before the Committee, these were under subpoena not only by this Committee but also by the Independent Counsel and the RTC.

The Committee will recall that this issue was a matter that a great deal of time was spent on last fall. I know Senator Bennett will recall, for example, that he persistently raised with Ms. Thomases and with some other witnesses the question of exactly what work was done, and were there any records of the work.

I remember Mr. Hubbell said at one point to the Committee: "You know, I wish I could answer these questions; what you really need are the billing records."

Then, after having raised the hue and cry for a couple of months, one day in January the Committee found, almost literally on its doorstep, a delivery of these billing records.

Ms. Huber was here and testified she had seen the records in the early part of August of last year on a table in the Book Room in the residence of the White House. She had taken possession of them. They were out in the open on top of the table. She described that as a very private area of the residence. She said she was under the impression she was supposed to file them. She took possession of them. She took them down to her office, and in early January when she saw them again she realized that this would be potentially something that had to be turned over pursuant to the subpoena and she called her lawyer and other lawyers, and they were then furnished to us.

Now the questions that we wanted to pursue was how did they get to the Book Room in August and who had them? This bears on two questions.

First, if someone who knew about the subpoena and was subject to the subpoena for these records was aware of where they existed, if the records were in the control of someone who was subject to subpoena and they were not turned over, that obviously would raise questions concerning whether someone had obeyed the subpoena. That is of concern to the Committee as well as to law enforcement.

Second, there were a series of questions—some of them under oath; some of them not under oath—that had been put to various individuals in connection with the work that was done by the Rose Law Firm for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan which were called into question by the billing records.

If those billing records were available to people before the time, or at the time they were answering the questions, there is a natural issue that arises about why did someone say something that the records contradicted. If they had them, or had seen them before they answered the questions, they would know the answers the records contained. Let me give you by way of some examples some of what I mean.

There were questions on a number of occasions, both in the press and more importantly, at least on one occasion, from the RTC and from the FDIC. Those are the Federal regulators who were investigating this matter about the contacts that Mrs. Clinton had as a lawyer for the Rose Law Firm on behalf of McDougal's bank, McDougal's savings and loan, with Beverly Bassett Schaffer who was then the regulator in charge of savings and loans.

The Committee will recall that as of April 1985, the Rose Law Firm began representation of McDougal's savings and loan. The very first matter they undertook was an effort to get approval to issue preferred stock. There were documents that everybody had that showed that the regulator, Ms. Bassett, had written to Hillary Clinton on this issue.

Yet, when Mrs. Clinton was asked to respond to interrogatories in early 1994 by the RTC that was investigating this, she said at page 41 of her interrogatories:

I was not involved in any meetings with State regulators on these matters. I may have made one telephone call to the Arkansas Securities Department to find out to whom Mr. Massey should direct any inquiries regarding S&L matters. I do not remember to whom I spoke.

Now when we got the records, we discovered that there was, in fact, a very clear record of a conversation between Mrs. Clinton and Beverly Bassett because she had recorded it on her time, and it had turned up on the billing records. Listed in the entry for April 29, 1985, is a 1-hour timeframe which has "telephone conference with B. Bassett, Securities Commissioner and telephone conference with R. Massey," who was, as we know, the young lawyer, the first-year associate lawyer working on this matter. This record is inconsistent with the notion that there was an inquiry simply to determine to whom this matter should be addressed.

The question is: Had these records been seen by Mrs. Clinton before the time she indicated that she did not remember to whom she spoke? Obviously if they were seen by her before, then the question is: Why didn't she remember what she had seen and what had evidently been drawn to her attention by Mr. Vincent Foster's markings on the billing records, why didn't she use that to answer the question? Why didn't she have a recollection of something that had been directed to her attention by Vincent Foster—namely, her records of that call with Beverly Bassett.

The records also turn out to be important when we evaluate the statements that Mrs. Clinton made concerning how much work and how much day-to-day supervision she had about the work for Madison Savings & Loan.

She indicated to the RTC, for example, that her knowledge of the events concerning this entire representation is largely secondhand, since her contemporaneous involvement in the representation was minimal and Mr. Massey primarily handled the matter. She said again in an affidavit to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation:

I was not involved in the day-to-day work on the project. My knowledge of the events concerning this representation has been largely derived from a review of the relevant documents—

If she had reviewed this document before she gave that answer, she would know that, in fact, she spent a little over 6 hours on the preferred stock issue; and that, in fact, her total representation of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan as reflected in her billing records was substantially more than any other lawyer in the firm.

In fact, over half of all the hours billed by all Rose Law Firm lawyers for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan work during this period were billed by Hillary Clinton. She billed 52 percent of the total hours, which is substantially more than the next lawyer who worked on these things.

So again the billing records, if they were in her possession before and she had seen these notations on the records before she gave these answers, it raises a question of why she answered as she did.

This comes up again with respect to the issue of Castle Grande. Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. As I understood it, we were going to examine where these records have been and who has handled them. I can understand Mr. Chertoff wants to lay out his various hypotheses with respect to Mrs. Clinton, but either we ought to develop these at hearings with witnesses, or he ought to put it in his final report. But I am not quite clear why we are going to spin through all of this here this morning.

As I understood it we were going to get a report on the inquiry with respect to the records. Now, we are getting sort of hypotheticals on the basis of Mr. Chertoff's interpretation of various matters in the record, which is a very different thing.

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to permit Mr. Chertoff for the next 5 minutes to move through this as it sets the groundwork for the importance and the relevance of these billing records.

It is not a question of any records at any time that appeared, but there are some relevant issues. Mr. Chertoff, I am going to ask you to move through it and then make a report as to what the Committee and the staff have done to ascertain who may have had access to these records, who we have eliminated, and what the status is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The reason I am laying out the background is because part of the analysis the Committee has to undertake in trying to decide who handled the records and who had them in their possession is to understand to whom they would have been significant.

To pick an example, someone at one point threw out the suggestion that construction workers might have had access to the records. But when you look at the records and you see what they are about and whose activities they concern, it is very unlikely that construction workers would have an interest.

Even with respect to some of the people who we have seen in the hearings who have testified, when you look at the nature of the records, what is intrinsic to the records, you understand that some of these people would really not have a particular interest or even an understanding of the significance of the records.

There is really only a limited number of people who, by virtue of their background, would have been able to interpret the records, would have understood the notations on the records, would have known what the items referred to in the records, and therefore would have had a motive to handle the records. That is something the Committee is going to have to consider.

Senator SARBANES. Are you precluding handling the records without having a motive?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think it is always possible, Senator, that someone could handle something unwittingly.

Senator SARBANES. OK. That's all I wanted to know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The likelihood of someone doing that.

It is far more likely someone would be in possession of records and handling records and looking at records they cared about than it is to someone with no conceivable interest in the records would have been pouring through them. I mean, anything is possible in life, but like anything else, whether it be this Committee or a court, we all deal with what is likely and probable.

Just to give you one last example, and I think it is particularly pertinent with respect to the Bank of Kingston issue, one of the critical questions that was raised early on was how, in fact, did this representation begin? Why was it that the Rose Law Firm was retained to handle matters for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

We heard a witness I think who testified that typically they used Jim Guy Tucker's law firm to do their work. And yet in April 1985, we turn up with work being performed by the Rose Law Firm.

I think it is public knowledge now that there is a difference of opinion about how that started.

The billing records also contain, interestingly, a copy of a bill that was for the old Bank of Kingston, or Madison Bank and Trust. That is part of these billing records that were found in the Book Room that had not been available previously. This indicates that, in fact, the bill had been paid as of the date on the bill. Then there is a notation in Vincent Foster's writing, "HRC, I believe there was a subsequent bill."

These records also bore on the question of whether, in fact, it was true that the reason Mrs. Clinton got involved was because there was a problem with an unpaid bill, or whether the bill had been paid. These billing records showed that the people who had them in their possession were very interested in exploring that question.

Bearing that in mind, let me tell you how we proceeded to analyze the questions that we have to address and who might have handled these records.

There are basically five questions in terms of handling the billing records. We have tried to work our way through each of them and narrow down the field of people who might be involved.

The first question is: Who removed the records from the Rose Law Firm in 1992? These are, after all law firm records. Mr. Clark, the head of the law firm, didn't remember. No one remembered giving permission to have the records removed, still less to have them disseminated outside of Little Rock and taken to the White House.

The question was whether anyone handled the records in Little Rock during the campaign. That is certainly an important question in order to determine how they wound up in the Book Room. Then we wanted to find out if we could determine who handled the records in Little Rock and who took them to Washington. If we could determine that, we wanted to know who stored the records in Washington, and where they were until the summer of 1995, when they reappear on the table in the Book Room.

And finally, maybe the bottom line question is who placed the records in the White House Book Room?

Let me tell you where we are with respect to each question.

First, who removed the records from the Rose Law Firm in 1992? Well, Mr. Hubbell was asked this question under oath and he indicated that he had not removed them from the Rose Law Firm. Obviously, we cannot ask Mr. Foster. Mr. Foster, though, there was testimony, had at least gone to some people in the firm and sought to obtain some records, although not billing records.

We also know, and this is part of the second question, that Vince Foster and Webb Hubbell both had the billing records at some point in time during the campaign in 1992. We know that because Mr. Hubbell testified that he had spoken to Mr. Foster about them in the campaign.

He identified, and others identified, Mr. Foster's handwriting on the records that appeared to be notes to "HRC" directing her particular attention to certain parts of the record. And we know this because we have Susan Thomases' notes of her conversation with Hubbell and the campaign where she made a reference on the side saying, "he has the billing records."

In fact, Hubbell was describing to Susan Thomases over the telephone, as she testified and as her notes bear out, the content of the records and the significance of the records. So that we have at least established, I think, that two people had those records in their possession and custody in Little Rock during the 1992 Presidential Campaign. Ms. Thomases testified under oath that she had never seen the records; she had merely heard about the records.

Now the records appear 3 years later. Who transported them to Washington? We asked this question of several people. Carolyn Huber denied seeing them before they appeared in the Book Room. We asked Susan Thomases and she denied in her testimony having seen the records or dealt with them physically in 1992, so she did not transport them. Mr. Hubbell testified under oath that, although he collected a whole series of documents in early 1993, from the Rose Law Firm which he simply removed without asking permission, the billing records were not among them. His last recollection of the billing records was that he had given them to Vincent Foster, and he swore that he had never seen them again until they were presented this year in the context of his deposition and his testimony.

Mr. Hubbell's testimony takes him off the board as someone who transported the records. Betsey Wright, when she was up here, indicated that she had not been responsible for transporting these records. She identified the records she did handle that she had filed, and she had never seen these records and had not been responsible for getting them to Washington. The last person we know who had the records, if we accept Mr. Hubbell's testimony, was Vincent Foster, and we cannot ask him.

That takes us to the question of who stored the records until they were on the Book Room table in 1995? Carolyn Huber and Susan Thomases denied having any knowledge of the records before they were produced—in the case of Ms. Thomases before they were produced here; and in the fact of Ms. Huber before she saw them in the Book Room.

Webster Hubbell denied seeing the records in Washington even among those records he kept in the basement until he saw them here in the Committee room. In fact, what Hubbell said was he had turned all the records that he had in his basement over to the President's lawyer in late 1993. The President's lawyers did not turn these records over, and Mr. Kendall and Ms. Sherburne, who were the President's lawyer and the White House lawyer, both said they had not seen the records until 1996.

Of the people who we know had some contact with these records, Mr. Foster is really left because Mr. Hubbell, Ms. Thomases, and Ms. Huber have taken themselves off the boards.

Then the question is: Who placed the records in the White House Book Room? In order to answer that question we have to answer the question of who had access to the Book Room. It is a kind of a classic process of elimination.

We knew from Carolyn Huber's testimony, and she was very firm on this under oath, that she discovered these in early August 1995, last year, which is less than a year ago. And for purposes of making an analysis, we broadened the timeframe. We started at about July 20 and we ended August 10. We asked ourselves, and we asked ultimately the White House, who were the conceivable number of people who had access to the Book Room?

Now the testimony of people like Ms. Huber is that that is not a room which is generally accessible to the public, or even to people who are in the residence for ceremonial events. It is a place where the Clinton's keep books, and gifts, and things of that sort. They have some personal files there, and it is apparently the way you get into the Exercise Room. So it would be accessible to guests.

And putting aside the question I raised earlier, which was who would logically be looking at these, we figured we would take the broadest possible approach.

The White House had put out the notion that there were people working in construction in the residence; there were all kinds of guests in the residence. These figures are statistically thrown out as if to suggest that there were hundreds of potential people who might have handled the records and put them in the Book Room.

So we proceeded to try to whittle that down. We accepted the fact that the President and Mrs. Clinton's daughter and her friends obviously had nothing to do with this. We didn't pursue that.

We went to the residence staff. We, in fact, had the Head Usher and the Assistant Head Usher here to testify. And based on their testimony and other investigation, and in particular the fact that members of the residence are under strict instruction on pain of removal that they must not disturb papers, put them down or take them up, look at them or go through them, we were satisfied that it was extremely unlikely that someone in the residence staff, meaning ushers or maids, would have been responsible for putting the records there, or looking at the records, or maintaining the records there.

Then we addressed the question of construction workers. The testimony we got on the construction workers is that all construction workers and outside contractors who work in the residence are escorted by the Secret Service or the Usher's Office at all times. They are under strict instruction that they can't touch or remove anything within the residence; and again, they would be sanctioned if they did it. Common sense probably would have led us there in the first place, but we pursued it and the facts support common sense.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you question the construction workers by interrogatories or any other way?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think we relied principally on the testimony of the Secret Service and the Ushers' Office, because they indicated that the construction workers are not allowed to be by themselves. There is always supervision by the Secret Service or by the Ushers Office. They assured us it would not be permitted to have somebody putting documents down, removing documents, or disturbing documents. I have to say, based on what I said earlier, as a matter of common sense it is hard to imagine a construction worker that would be in possession of these records or would look at them, or would leave them.

Then we looked at the question of approximately 55 public officials who visited within the residence during this period of time.

Now, I want to say that the records we got from the White House do not monitor movement within the residence, the second and the third floor. They tell us who goes into the residence, but they don't tell us who moves between the second and third floor. There are, as we understand from the White House, various rooms particularly on the second floor that are kind of ceremonial rooms. There are functions, or quasi public, or public functions there. Although it seems unlikely that people on the second floor would go up to the third floor, we thought we had to look at everybody who came into the residence because we could not narrow it further.

We did not question the public officials. We did send them interrogatories. It seemed to us unlikely, and so unlikely as to be beyond any doubt, that the mayors or the president of a foreign country would be handling the billing records any place, let alone in the Book Room. Likewise we did not question Cabinet officials or people who clearly would not have had a reason to look at them.

Then we looked at residence guests. There were various people who were guests in the residence and we wanted to proceed discretely. We did not want to disturb anyone's privacy.

We sent interrogatories out and we received negative responses from just about everybody. There were two individuals from whom we did not receive responses who are members of the President's personal family. Other than those two, we received responses from every guest indicating that they had not any knowledge of, nor had seen nor handled the records.

That left a category of what we have described as "insiders." I do not want to use that as a pejorative term, but these are people who—they are not guests in the residence, overnight guests—they are people who have a regular working relationship or dealing with the Clintons, either those who have had it in the past or who have it currently and who were in the residence area. These are people whom we either deposed or submitted interrogatories to. Of the insiders, there are only two we have not yet specifically questioned.

One is Ms. Thomases, although Ms. Thomases has previously sworn that she did not see these records before, so I think it is pretty predictable what her answer will be; and Bruce Lindsey who we are scheduled to depose in the very near future.

That indicates where we are with respect to people having access to the Book Room. Other than two members of the President's family who have not answered the interrogatories, and the two insiders—and again we are just using that term for convenience.

The CHAIRMAN. We could say, "people who had more or less regular access to the White House."

Mr. CHERTOFF. Or we can say, "people who had working relationships with the Clintons as opposed to personal relationships."

Other than two of those from whom we have not gotten formal answers, and I think from Ms. Thomases we essentially have, I think we have on the record evidence that none of the 206-odd-people who were in the residence during that period of time handled the records, saw the records, or knew anything about the records during the period we have examined. That is the current status of where we are with the billing records.

Senator SARBANES. To whom were the interrogatories sent? The residence guests? That category?

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were sent to residence guests. Some were sent to people that we described as people who have a working relationship with the Clintons; people who I think have more regular access to the residence, or who we were deposing anyway, we generally put the question by supposition. Senator, this is something both sides participated in.

Senator SARBANES. Do you know how many interrogatories were sent on this issue to how many people?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I believe a total of approximately 60 people received interrogatories. I think we generally sent a standard interrogatory with four parts or four questions.

Senator SARBANES. How many depositions on this issue?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I do not know that I can tell you off the top of my head, but I would say that the construction workers we did not depose, obviously, except for the Secret Service.

Senator SARBANES. Or interrogate; right?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Or interrogate. We relied on the—

Senator SARBANES. And the same thing with the residence staff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. We relied upon the testimony of the Secret Service and the Ushers' representative. So I think we took three depositions or four depositions that would have related to that.

Senator SARBANES. The same with dignitaries and officials?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That is correct. We did not question dignitaries and officials like mayors or guests from foreign countries.

One of the reasons I wanted to give the status report is because obviously the staffs on both sides have a complete list of who we have questioned. If there is anybody in particular that someone feels we should depose that we have not deposed, or we should send a questionnaire to that we have not, obviously we have the time to do that. That is one of the reasons why I think it is important to give the status report now. But I am satisfied that we made a reasonable judgment without pursuing questioning to the point of illogic in making what I think is a very compelling determination about who needed to be questioned.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, could we see the other chart for a moment?

[Chart shown.]

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The chart is entitled "Mrs. Clinton's Billing Records," but aren't those the Rose Law Firm billing records that we are talking about?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, they are, although they were found in the White House ultimately in the custody and control of the President and the First Lady.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So it was the Rose Law Firm billing records that was found at the White House; correct?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And Mrs. Clinton's time and participation were included in those records, so the chart really ought to be "Rose Law Firm Billing Records." Is that correct?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I believe I am satisfied with the chart, but people can disagree.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You are satisfied with your chart, but they were the Rose Law Firm billing records.

Let me ask you whether, in fact, the bills themselves were not turned over to the RTC earlier? The bills comprise the document that you have displaced earlier. Those bills were sent to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan and copies of those bills were already in the possession of the Committee prior to the time the billing records were discovered.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Actually, Richard, you know as well as I do, we had what were very fragmentary bills. In fact, the Committee will remember that we were frustrated, the Committee was frustrated when we had Mr. Hubbell up and Ms. Thomases up, and people from the firm, and they were frustrated because we did not have anything more than two or three bills.

Then we had a recap sheet, a recapitulation sheet that showed the way they were allocating dollar credit among the lawyers during this period of time. But the most important questions—How many hours were worked? And what was the actual work done?—was unknown to us and, to my knowledge, unknown to anybody else like the RTC, or anybody investigating it, until these records appeared and were presented.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In addition to having some of the actual bills, we had some of the timesheets for some of the lawyers.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think we had what I would consider to be a negligible amount of this information. We had, I think, three or four bills, and a few timesheets of lawyers other than Mrs. Clinton. Frankly, the burning question which everyone will remember we raised was: Where is there a complete set of these records?

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bond.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER S. BOND

Senator BOND. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. Ben-Veniste has talked about the information we have had, in essence. If we had the haystack, these were the needles. As I understand it, your chart does attempt to identify the chain of custody.

The records were collected at the Rose Law Firm in mid-February 1992. Do I understand it correctly that Mr. Hubbell had them and discussed them with Susan Thomases and then gave them to Vince Foster? So the last we know from direct testimony is that they were in the possession of the late-Mr. Foster. Is that correct?

Now when the subpoenas came, the subpoenas were in 1994. Was it the Independent Counsel and the RTC issued subpoenas, and anybody to whom the subpoena was directed or had knowledge of it has the responsibility, if they knew of the custody, to turn over these records? Is that fair?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's right, Senator. In fact, we had Mr. Kendall who represented the President and the First Lady, and we had Ms. Sherburne from the White House who specifically indicated that they were aware of the subpoenas and had informed their clients of their obligation to turn over documents. And these clearly were included in the subpoenas.

Senator BOND. To me this is very important because our process of investigation was seriously delayed and hampered because these records went to some of the critical questions about which we were inquiring, and without the records we did not have the knowledge that those records now give us.

There is no one who admits seeing them between the time that they were transferred to Mr. Foster's file and the time that Ms. Huber has testified she found them in July 1994, and then realized—July 1995, excuse me—

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think actually early August.

Senator BOND. August 1995, and then realized in January what they were. So that is the time period.

What you have outlined for us is, by process of elimination we have to work through to find out who had them.

Now would information such as fingerprints which have been discussed in the media be of relevance in this inquiry?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It would be. I am not a fingerprint expert. I have obviously dealt with fingerprints in the past as a lawyer and as a U.S. Attorney. My understanding is you cannot date fingerprints, but I may be wrong. Certainly the technology may have changed in the period of time since I left the Government. What I think fingerprints show is that somebody handled something.

Senator BOND. At some point. But wouldn't subsequent fingerprints be on top? Could they tell if there were fingerprints on top of other fingerprints?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That goes beyond my knowledge.

Senator BOND. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I can tell you the things that would show they were handled. Clearly if we could find out the sequence of prints, that would be helpful.

Senator BOND. As an attorney investigator, what other steps can this Committee take to help us resolve the questions of the custody, outside of identifying who might have had access, and determining whether, in fact, under sworn testimony they state they do have them and identifying the fingerprints, are there other steps that could be taken reasonably to determine that chain of custody?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think all you can do are the following things, which I think we have done or are in the process of doing: You can ask people who might have seen them, who we have reason to believe might have seen them, or who had access to them and eliminate possibilities. You can examine fingerprints or physical evidence. You can look at what is in the documents and ask yourself: Who would have wanted to keep the documents around?

Common sense is a large part of investigation, and obviously someone who is involved in national security policy at the White House and has never been at the Rose Law Firm, is extremely unlikely to want to be looking at these records or keeping them. You can use that approach. I think if you take all those together, that is the best shot you can take at answering the question. The fingerprints and physical evidence eliminating potential candidates, questioning the witnesses, and applying common sense.

The last thing I think you can do is this: We do have statements made by various witnesses, including Mrs. Clinton, about the subject matter. Some of those statements, as I said earlier, and this is why I began that presentation, some of those statements do relate to matters that are contained in the billing records.

Therefore, the question is really a two-part question. One is, if a person who made a statement had the billing records before they made the statement, and if there is an inconsistency, why did they make the statement if they had seen the records earlier?

Alternatively you could conclude that they did not see the records before they made the statement and they saw the records afterwards, and that is where the fingerprint evidence might come in.

I think one of the things that is going to be significant for the Committee at the end is to evaluate, if there is fingerprint evidence and I do not know that there is except what I read in the paper, if there is fingerprint evidence, to compare that with other statements and forms a judgment about the significance of those facts when they relate to each other.

Senator BOND. Would it bear on the credibility of that information if somebody who had access to those records were in a position, or was in need of information from those records at that time, would it be helpful for us to examine in the broader context what was going on immediately prior to the time when Ms. Huber found those records to determine whether someone potentially with access might have had reason to be reviewing those records?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think that is actually a very helpful suggestion. I think that one of the ways you try to figure out who would have had the records is you ask who would have had a reason to be handling them? Since we know that they were in the White House in early August, clearly if there are people who had a reason to be looking at them at that time, you know, and we identify those people, that advances the analysis.

Senator BOND. We should so back and look through our records and the testimony and what was going on at that time to see what questions were being raised and what the discussion was to see who, for example, might have needed access to the records and inadvertently left the files on a table. That is one possibility to complete the circumstantial chain of evidence.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, what we did do in connection with our investigation is we did consider the fact that in early August 1995, the RTC Inspector General's Office completed its analysis of the conflicts-of-interest question as regarded to the Rose Law Firm and determined that there were some conflicts of interest in terms of their having worked for Madison and having done work later for the RTC. I believe that report was published or discussed in the newspaper in early August. So there clearly was at this period of time, in addition to this Committee's own hearings which were focusing on Mr. Foster's office, that were going on almost contemporaneously.

Senator BOND. I think that information would be very helpful if we could have a time line of what was happening in their period.

Mr. Chairman, that is very helpful. I think that outlines some productive lines of inquiry for the Committee.

I thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Mack.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CONNIE MACK

Senator MACK. I would be curious if we have heard back from the Independent Counsel with respect to my request to have access to the FBI analysis?

Mr. CHERTOFF. We sent a letter out last week under the signatures of both the Majority and the Minority, and we have not gotten a formal response.

Senator MACK. I understand that there may be some raising objections as to why we should not have that. If the actual FBI report is subject to some sort of restriction, are there other avenues available to us to clear up these questions?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Senator, we have several things we could do. We could either get the report, or a witness who would summarize the report for us, or we could seek to get the underlying documents and comparison prints that were used, and then ask the FBI to perform a new analysis for us.

Senator MACK. I guess the point is that some people are saying this is restricted information because of Grand Jury rules?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I do not think it is Grand Jury or Independent Counsel. We are sensitive to the fact that they may be doing investigation based on the fingerprint analysis which involves calling people in, and this is my surmise now, but based on my experience I would assume that there would be a period of time where they would not want to publicly disclose whose prints are on and whose prints are off because they do not want witnesses to know whether they are home free or not.

You might call someone in, and you might benefit from the uncertainty in that person's mind about whether their fingerprints are there, and that might stimulate them to say something that, if they know that their fingerprints did not appear, they would not have said.

You should understand, Senator, that the existence of a print on a piece of paper clearly shows that someone handled the paper. The absence of a print does not show the contrary. I could handle this piece of paper all day and it may not show a fingerprint. But there is some value to the Independent Counsel for at least some period of time to keep this closed. What we have tried to impress on the Independent Counsel is our time limit and our desire and the very important need of the Committee to get this information.

Senator MACK. It seems to me that it is important to get the information. We do have witnesses that have told us they had nothing to do with these records. It would be helpful to them, I suspect, if we would have the ability to analyze or have someone analyze the billing records for us and say, in essence, those people who said that they had not been involved with these records, had not touched these records, it would be helpful to them if that information were to be known. Second, it could be helpful to the Committee that there may be people who said to us they had no contact with the billing records. And if their fingerprints show up on those records, I think that is helpful.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That is correct.

Senator MACK. And I assume we are going to pursue this?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I will ask that a copy of the letter be made a part of the record. This came from both the Majority and the Minority to the Special Counsel, for the information as it relates to what prints, if any, were found on these records.

I will ask both Counsel to pursue that matter, as it relates to when we will get an answer. It doesn't seem to me that it should take them an inordinate period of time. It may be that it will need the attention of both the Ranking Member and the Chairman to call personally, if need be, to get a determination as to when we are going to get that answer.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. One of the problems is to try to square providing this report with their refusal to provide information earlier. As the Chairman will recall, Independent Counsel refused to provide information relating to the handwriting, or to the fingerprints analysis that was done on Vincent Foster's note. They refused to provide, despite our repeated requests, copies of Interview Reports of Officer Henry O'Neal, a request which, as the Chairman knows, we have once again reiterated to Independent Counsel.

Senator MACK. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, Senator Mack.

Senator MACK. I suppose it would be possible that the Independent Counsel could decide that the report done by the FBI is not available to us. Would we not have a claim on the billing records themselves, and that they turn over the billing records to us, so we could then ask the FBI to make an analysis for the Committee?

The CHAIRMAN. Absolutely. I believe that is what Mr. Chertoff made mention of. I am going to ask Counsel to further explain that sooner rather than later. We need access to that information to get the facts. We should do it before we run into the time limitations.

I would hope that we would be able to define that and get an answer. If they do not want to turn over the report to us, certainly we are entitled to an independent inspection of the documents, and have our own experts then review them so that this way we do not violate any confidentiality.

Indeed, I think that they are skating on thin ice by denying this information to us, but I am going to ask Counsels, both Mr. Chertoff and Mr. Ben-Veniste, to work on this matter to see if we cannot ascertain it.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Yes, I will yield to Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now with respect to Senator Bond's observation regarding the billing records, I think he said: We have the haystack, the needles are what was recently produced. I would call the Chairman's attention to the report dated February 25, 1996, of Pillsbury Madison & Sutro working for the RTC, which, in fact, did an exhaustive analysis of the newly found billing records and came to this conclusion:

The billing records found at the White House and other newly acquired evidence add considerably to the sum of knowledge with respect to this matter. Taken as a whole, however, the new evidence does not change the conclusions stated in the Rose report.

The new evidence weakens, to some extent, the conclusion that Seth Ward was a strawman or nominee, and that the acquisition therefore was wrongful, although those remain propositions that one could reasonably advocate.

The new evidence has very little effect on the analysis of what the Rose Law Firm knew and did before the acquisition of the IDC property close.

The new evidence shows that after the acquisition closed, lawyers for the Rose Law Firm, and in particular Mrs. Clinton, had more contact with Seth Ward in performing more services for Madison than previously was known, but there remains no substantial evidence that these lawyers knew or intended to aid and abet McDougal's apparent misconduct.

Now the hypothesis that you have spun through your observations before this Committee today, Mr. Chertoff, excludes the notion that these records were transported to the White House from Little Rock and then mislaid somewhere during that period of time until they were reportedly first discovered by Ms. Huber. Is that correct?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It doesn't because the whole question of mislaying them, the question then arises where were they mislaid and how were they found? I mean, we all know from our own life, you mislay things in your house, but if you find something in your house, even after you have mislaid it, someone still put it in your house and you are still the person who found it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the question is: Who transported them to Washington? That is an open question. But the hypothesis that you have explored today, then, would include the possibility, would it not, that following their transportation to the White House they were mislaid until Ms. Huber discovered them?

Mr. CHERTOFF. No. They were not mislaid at the point that Ms. Huber discovered them because, as her testimony ran, they were, in fact, open on the table in a place that a limited number of people go back and forth, and that they had not been there before. So we know this much, at least, as a matter of common sense—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, could I interrupt just for a second?

Mr. CHERTOFF. No. Actually, if you will let me finish, Mr. Ben-Veniste—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They were not open, were they, according to Ms. Huber's testimony?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I actually believe they were. And when I say "open"—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They were folded over so that they—

Mr. CHERTOFF. When I say "open," I mean, open to view, not within something, not contained within something.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They were folded over so that the front page was not readable.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me—to complete—according—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. According to her testimony, isn't that so?

Mr. CHERTOFF. According to her testimony, having been in the room on previous occasions, they were not on the table. And then on this occasion, they were in the open, not contained in anything, and she picked them up and removed them.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Could you show us how they were, according to Ms. Huber's testimony? How they were found on the table, and what shape, folded over or open?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Richard, let me finish. The point is——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Could you just answer that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Since we are not typically in the habit of engaging in interrogation——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, you are sitting down there and that sort of gives me an opportunity to ask a question, and hopefully you would want me to correct you if you have misspoken.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think, Richard, let me be 100 percent clear. The records were folded over——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And they were in the open on the table in a place where they had not been observed previously.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No, at the time——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Wait, wait.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You've answered my question.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, but I——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have a limited amount of time, Mr. Chertoff. Let me ask you this. At the time that Ms. Huber reportedly discovered the records in the open, that was a time when there was construction going on in that area of the White House. Right?

Mr. CHERTOFF. There was construction going on in the residence. I don't believe it was actually in the Book Room. But I think that is why—let me say this for the benefit of the Committee—we explored the question of construction, but it still begs the question because no——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No, no. I am not asking you to argue with me. I am just asking to lay out these facts. Now, you do not recall, apparently, that there was construction in that area of the White House, but the log which we have received, the log of——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. —construction shows that on Wednesday, July 26, room 319A was indeed the area of construction. So let me help you with that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, there was construction out there. My point, Mr. Ben-Veniste——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That was my only question. I'm not asking to make an argument at this point, because I have very limited time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, look, I would like to be able to give——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chertoff——

The CHAIRMAN. No, no. Wait a minute. We are going to give Mr. Chertoff, like every other witness, an opportunity to answer the question.

[Laughter.]

Then if you are not satisfied with it, and if you want additional time, I will give you additional time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, Mr. Chertoff, go ahead.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think the point is——

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, we missed the opportunity at the outset, though, to get our photo opportunity with Mr. Chertoff because he didn't get sworn in. I am not suggesting that he should be, but I just want to make that observation. We had a wonderful chance here with this show to get a good photo opportunity right at the beginning, and we missed it.

The CHAIRMAN. That demonstrates that we were not interested in publicity, but rather trying the facts.

[Laughter.]

Now, I can assure you——

Senator BOXER. Just look at the part.

[Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. I can assure you that I know how to generate publicity.

[Laughter.]

Senator Simon.

OPENING COMMENT OF SENATOR PAUL SIMON

Senator SIMON. We agree with that.

Senator BOXER. Unanimous agreement.

The CHAIRMAN. Unanimous agreement. But if we want to get through with this session, let's move along.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I simply wanted to say, Richard, that one of the reasons that we went through the exercise of examining the construction workers was to eliminate this notion that a construction worker put this there. The fact of the matter is, it simply defies belief and common sense that a construction worker somehow took the records from outside the White House and brought them in.

We still are confronted——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I did not ask that question.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Please let me finish——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You have answered the question about whether there was construction.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We are still confronted with the question——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chertoff, if I asked you what time it is you are going to tell me how to build a watch here. I'm only asking whether there was construction.

The CHAIRMAN. We note for the record there was construction.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The notion that when there is construction and when things are moved around, the possibility exists in my mind that new boxes could be opened. And if there were boxes there—and I'm not saying there were or there weren't—but that when there is construction and there is movement of materials, the possibility exists that new materials might be found.

Now let me——

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think, Richard, as you know——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I haven't asked the question.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, since I am here not as——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, may I ask my question?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, let me say this to you. You may make your observations or ask your questions. The logic of your observations and your questions will stand or fall on their own. Other people will decide about that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I agree with that.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's move it now and let's stop the intramural scrimmaging.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the question exists here about how this chart was prepared and on what basis names were crossed out. You are aware, are you not, that Mrs. Clinton has made statements in various fora about these billing records? For example, on CBS before Mr. Smith and Ms. Zahn, January 19, 1996, the transcript shows that she was asked:

Ms. ZAHN. How on earth did those subpoenaed records end up there?

Mrs. CLINTON. I don't know, and I wish they'd come out in August.

Ms. ZAHN. Did you put those records there?

Mrs. CLINTON. Of course not.

She was asked by Maria Schriver of NBC on January 16, 1996:

Ms. SCHRIVER. Regarding these billing records that came about that had been subpoenaed 2 years ago, people say, gosh, how could a woman as smart and politically savvy as Hillary Clinton not know where these records were these past 2 years? Why didn't she make that a priority to find them, particularly when they were found at her own home in an assistant's desk?

Mrs. CLINTON. Well, I think I would love to know where they've been, too, because they prove what I've been saying all these years. I would have loved to have had them come out earlier.

I will not read all the public statements Mrs. Clinton has made. Obviously, she has testified in the Grand Jury on this subject. It was a very highly publicized event. Following her departure from the Grand Jury, she was quoted by the Associated Press on January 27, 1996, as having said: "I do not know how the billing records came to be found where they were found." Now, Mrs. Clinton—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me, if I may interject—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Hang on for a second.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, come on. Let—

Senator SARBANES. Let him finish.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, we had 30 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. You are going to have all the time you want.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let's try—

The CHAIRMAN. I'm not going to cut you off, Mr. Ben-Veniste. I'm going to say, let us try to be civil to each other. I know it is tough. Let's just calm down.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I hope I have been civil, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Continue.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The White House requested that this Committee send an interrogatory to Mrs. Clinton. We did not send an interrogatory to Mrs. Clinton. We have all of these public statements, interrogatories sent to 60 people, but not to Mrs. Clinton, and yet her name is not crossed off that list even in the face of the public denials, the willingness to answer interrogatories, and the refusal of this Committee to send such an interrogatory.

I suggest that, under those circumstances, it is not fair not to cross Mrs. Clinton's name off in the same way you have crossed off the names of others who have denied knowing how those records came to be where they were.

I see my time has elapsed, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Fine.

Senator Bennett, do you have any questions?

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR ROBERT F. BENNETT

Senator BENNETT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I have some observations which Mr. Chertoff may wish to comment on.

As he said in his opening statement, I pursued the issue of the billing records rather persistently with Mr. Hubbell. And I remember, although I do not have the transcript in front of me, Mr. Hubbell saying he wished he could explain to me how the billing records of the Rose Law Firm if they were available would make it clear to me that Mrs. Clinton had nothing really to do with this account.

I remember saying, very clearly, Mr. Hubbell, I have never made out a billing record, but I have paid a lot of legal bills in my lifetime and think I understand how to read a legal bill. This legal bill makes it clear to me that Mrs. Clinton was the lead attorney on this issue.

Now, Mr. Hubbell said he was sorry he could not dissuade me from that view because he did not have the records available to him. The records are now available and they make it clear to this layman that Mrs. Clinton was the lead attorney on this issue.

I find it difficult to sit here and listen to people say that these records prove that her statement that she had nothing to do with this has been accurate all along; that they have proved what I have been saying all these years.

I do not agree. Having seen these records, I think they prove the opposite. If I had wanted to sustain the Clinton position on this issue, I would have wanted to keep these records hidden.

I am satisfied that someone with that same motive did that. I am not in a position to say who. I am not in a position to say where; or in a position to say when; but I think the work that Mr. Chertoff has laid out before us here is appropriate, and I think it is a logical, proper, act on the part of the Majority Counsel and I hope we will stop trying to confuse some of the issue in an effort to obfuscate what has been done here.

Somebody somewhere took a deliberate step, in my opinion, to prevent these from coming forward; and, through some kind of happenstance, the nature of which I do not know, they did come forward and they are indeed an unsolved question which this Committee needs to pursue.

Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I am prompted to observe that obviously when we write our final reports they are going to be very differing interpretations. I do not regard 63 hours of billing over a 15-month period as being a "substantial" amount of work.

Senator BENNETT. I do not, either, Senator Sarbanes. But I do regard 52 percent of the billing of a particular client to mean that the lawyer who is handling the affairs of that client was the lead lawyer on that case. The fact that that lawyer had other cases and spent time on other cases is to me irrelevant. But as you say, we can debate this during the final report.

Senator SARBANES. Is not 52 percent of the hours. I do not think it is 52 percent of the total billings, either. The partners being billed at the highest rate, but 63 hours of work over a 15-month period I do not regard as a substantial amount of work. I think testimony that says, well, you know, I did a little bit of work on that thing is consistent with that record of performance.

Now someone can take a differing view and try to argue that 63 hours in 15 months is a "very substantial amount of billing," but I do not think most lawyers involved with billings would agree with that, frankly.

Senator BENNETT. I think most clients involved with paying the bill would agree with it.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I guess any amount of billing to a client is "significant." But from the lawyer's point of view, which is the testimony that is being assaulted, the suggestion that it was not a great amount of work, it does not seem to me that billing records showing 63 hours over a 15-month period contradicts that position.

Senator BENNETT. Well, as you say, we can deal with this in the report. Again, I think you are trying to change the universe when you go to her entire 15-month practice as opposed to the amount of time that was billed to this particular client.

The client looks at how much of his billing came as a result of one lawyer's fees. If the billing is $100 and one lawyer bills $95, it is easy to say, well, $95 out of a $100,000 practice is de minimis, but for the lawyer who is paying the $100 bill and $95 of it goes to the single lawyer for that client, $95 is 95 percent of the bill. That is the view that I have taken.

I think these records make it very clear that on this issue, on this client, on these questions, she was clearly the lead lawyer.

Senator SARBANES. But the assault on Mrs. Clinton, in all fairness to her, is that when she said she did not do "a lot of work," she was not stating the situation. So you have to look at it from her point of view in terms of the total amount of work she did and how much of her total work was related to this particular bill. I come back to the point that I made that 63 hours over a 15-month period is not a significant amount of billing from the lawyer's perspective.

Now from the client's perspective, I don't know. I mean, it would depend on how much work had been done. It could be all of the work that was done for the client. It was not, in this case, incidentally, nowhere near that. But even if that were the case, that does not change it from the perspective of the lawyer who was doing the billing.

That is the statement, or the assertion, that has been challenged and I think that is not fair to Mrs. Clinton, frankly, to try to take her view that this was not a big client for her, or a big part of her billing, and then try to take 63 hours over 15 months and turn it into a big part of her practice. I do not think that will meet the best of fairness or any reasonable scrutiny of the matter.

Senator BENNETT. Well, again, I do not want to pursue it. My memory of her statement was that she had very little to do with the issue, that Mr. Massey was the primary mover in bringing the client and the primary person dealing with the client, and all she did was review his work.

I pursued this with Mr. Hubbell who said the same kind of thing about this particular account and then decried the fact that he did not have the billing records in order to convince me that she was not the lead lawyer.

Now the billing records have come forth and they have convinced me that she was the lead lawyer. Therefore the statement that she made in what has come to be known as the "Pink Press Conference," was, in my view as a layman, misleading. In your view as a lawyer, it was an appropriate statement. Perhaps, we should leave it at that.

Senator SARBANES. Yes. I think the billing records back it up, because you find that others did much more work in terms of the number of hours and it seems to me we need to put all of this in perspective.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Dodd.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER J. DODD

Senator DODD. Well, I just want to make the point, that we are speculating back and forth. We do not have to speculate. The Pillsbury law firm did an extensive $4 million investigation over 2 years, far more than anyone of us have done individually here, and just read their conclusions on page 26 of their report. And I am quoting them now:

The suggestion that the Madison Guaranty business was economically significant to the Clintons, or for that matter the Rose Law Firm, finds no support.

I mean, we are going back and forth among ourselves. Here is an independent investigation done at great expense to the American taxpayer over a 2-year period, and they do not have a particular political axe to grind here. That is their conclusion.

It is not a question of whether or not one of us remembers certain testimony or not. There is a significant, independent investigation of the very essence of the question. In fact, I would hope, I mean, we go back and forth, just unsolved questions. Why don't we cross out Mrs. Clinton's name? She has also said that she did not place the records there, and yet, that does not happen here. I mean, that is quite obvious. We have got a chart up here and we cross out names.

Well, we have had the testimony of Mrs. Clinton in front of albeit news agencies that have asked the questions, but she has answered them, and she said no. And yet we still put up a poster board here of unsolved questions. I mean, that is not, what are we trying to do here in a sense, with all due respect, I say.

The central question is we do have the documents. They showed up. In fact the Independent Counsel received them while his investigation is ongoing. The Special Senate Committee received the records in time for our hearings. There was even an extension of the statute of limitations last winter in order to give the Pillsbury study an opportunity to go back and, in light of these things turning up, to review the matter, and then to comment further. They said: "No, we do not change our results." You know, we are glad to have the record, but they do not change our findings. I mean, that is not insignificant to me as a member of this panel.

So, you know, whose fingerprints are on them and so forth, I appreciate the titillating attraction to that particular question, but the fact of the matter is the records corroborate all the other evidence we had that says that this is not that big a deal at all. That is the conclusion of the independent study that was done that was asked for and paid for in order to look at these issues. Here we have confirmation of evidence we had earlier. Independent Counsel gets them, our Committee gets them, plenty of chance to look at them. No, nothing tampered, nothing changed here at all.

In fact the First Lady has indicated, when she has been asked a very direct question, not by this Committee, not by Counsel, but a direct question: "Did you place them there?" She said, "No." But yet we do not cross out her name here.

And so we have this sort of a TV drama here about fingerprints on things, rather than the important questions to us, what is in these documents and what is there. Have they been tampered with, have they been monkeyed with?

Do we have an opportunity to then review our findings as a result of these being turned over? Why don't we talk about that? That is an important issue, it seems to me, for this Committee. We are not trying to pretend we are Sherlock Holmes up here, you know, looking for little fingerprints and so forth around there.

I do not have any particular axe to grind. I have drawn the conclusion that there is no significant economic advantage to the Clintons or the Rose Law Firm. That is also the conclusion of the Pillsbury study.

Senator BENNETT. Mr. Chairman, I did not ever anticipate that there was a significant economic benefit to the Rose Law Firm.

If I may read the statement Mrs. Clinton made which I, on my own basis, feel that the records contradict. She said, and I quote:

While I was the billing partner on this matter, the great bulk of the work was done by Mr. Richard Massey who was then an associate at Rose and whose specialty was securities law. I was not involved in the day-to-day work on the project.

Some lawyers working in firms may say that is a correct statement. I did not feel that the bills that were submitted and paid reflected that; and having reviewed the records, I do not believe that the records reflect that.

I have an understanding of what being involved in day-to-day work on the project is. Apparently, some of the lawyers in the room have a different definition of what day-to-day work on the project is. As far as I am concerned, day-to-day work, as a client, is what I pay for. When I get billed for day-to-day work, I assume that the lawyer who billed me for day-to-day work did it. The bill was in Mrs. Clinton's name and the bill made it very clear that Mrs. Clinton was involved, from my perspective, in the day-to-day work on the project. And I think that is something that we have learned as a result of having these records, which contradicts Mr. Hubbell's testimony when I was questioning him.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I think it is clear, at least the billing practices that I understand in law firms, and from my own legal practice, is that the billing partner submits the bill but much of the work is done by associates or other partners, and that does not establish the fact that that work has been done by the partner who submits the bill. I mean, that is just a standard practice in a law firm. And that was clearly the practice, in fact, what does that show about that?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Here. This shows and I think this is a refinement of the point you were making, Senator, because what Mrs.

Clinton was talking about in the quote that you alluded to was the work that was done on the regulatory matters for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. And in that respect, the records show that she spent a grand total of 13.6 hours, not 60 hours, 13.6 hours, and that Mr. Massey spent 26 hours, double the amount that she spent on it, and that there were other individuals who brought the total up to 55 hours in total on that matter.

So in all fairness, when you look at the question that she was responding to, which was the work on the regulatory issues, the amount of time that she spent, 13 hours, would seem to be quite minimal, and certainly was only half of the time, according to these records, that Mr. Massey spent on the issue.

Senator BENNETT. Mr. Chairman, the light has just gone on and there is probably no point in pursuing this. I am sure no one is suggesting, when they talk about her as the billing partner, that she is billing at her rate for work somebody else did. I am sure they are recognizing that when they bill at her rate, they are billing for work that she did. And so it becomes a matter of what constitutes day to day, what constitutes major involvement, those kinds of judgments.

I appreciate the exchange. And I am convinced that Mrs. Clinton had more to do with this than she led us to believe.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, could I make just an additional observation and I appreciate the opportunity. Just two things.

Again, this chart is up here. We have called this Mrs. Clinton's billing records. They are the Rose Law Firm's billing records, that is number one.

Number two, I should have pointed out that on January 27th, Mrs. Clinton appeared for 4 hours before the Whitewater Grand Jury. Now, we do not have that testimony, but when asked, she said that she did not know how the billing records came to be found where they were found.

Now the basis upon which we cross people's names off here is that they have denied that they were there. She has also denied that, and I think in fairness to her, we ought to cross her name off on this chart. She has denied it. And in leaving it out there I think indicates a bias that we should not be demonstrating at this point. She has said no, just as everyone else has.

Senator DOMENICI. What did she say? What were the words you quoted?

Senator DODD. This is what she said: "I do not know how the billing records came to be found where they were found." She has also, in response to two interviews on NBC and CBS, asked directly: "Did you place them there?" She said, "No."

Now, you know, we have accepted the statements from other people and taken their names off here. I mean, they are not even her billing records, they are the law firm's billing records. This Committee has got to try and maintain some veneer of objectivity here. When we throw a chart up calling them her records, despite the fact that she has denied putting them there, we keep her name up, and call it an unsolved question. You can appreciate why we get concerned about that.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Domenici.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PETE V. DOMENICI

Senator DOMENICI. Mr. Chairman, first I was going to inquire of you, as far as the hearing today, how much longer did you expect us to proceed?

The CHAIRMAN. It would be my hope we would have been done 20 minutes ago for the day.

Ms. RIVERS. Mr. Chairman, I am going to need about 5 minutes because I have yet to make any comment.

The CHAIRMAN. Fine.

Senator Domenici.

Senator DOMENICI. Yes, Mr. Chairman, I think we have had a lot of discussion here today about the First Lady's involvement in these various legal affairs of these questionable companies, but I do not think that is the issue. I think the issues are the issues stated on this chart. You might very well change the title of it. Fine, put it up there. But the truth of the matter is, somehow or another, the mystery of all this has been created by someone. I mean, who removed the records is a very interesting question, and we cannot even get an answer to that after all these months of hearings. Who handled the records? Who transported them?

Maybe all of those are unanswerable because Vince Foster did all of those. That is possible, and he is dead.

But the reason I would not strike the First Lady's name from who stored the records and who placed them is because it defies common sense that these records are open in a room she has access to all the time. She does not know how they got there, she does not know who brought them there, it is kind of like she does not know anything about that. They sort of showed up. I mean, that is not credible, that is just not credible.

My second point is the reason the records are important, one can now go through them and argue, between the two Senators, about what is a major involvement and a minor involvement, but the reason it is important these records were a long time in being found, is because they were the best evidence upon which to build recollection of the evidence described there.

If you are testifying 8 years later, and you could be shown those, you might have a more authentic and accurate recollection than what various people stated because, well, we do not have the records, we do not know what they say.

That is why it is important, if somebody was hiding the records during this period of time that is in someway related to Mrs. Clinton or the President, it is important to know.

The question still has to be answered, whether or not you are right on a minimal play by her minimal lawyering on one of these issues, we have the responsibility to get these answers.

Senator DODD. All right, but the point is, we want to know as a Committee. Putting it all aside, the issue was we do not have the records. We got them and we are satisfied these are the records, satisfied they have not been tampered with.

Is there anything in these records that contradicts anything else? That is what the Pillsbury committee wondered and that is why they extended the statute. So, you know, whose fingerprints and so forth, I can understand the intrigue about that. The issue for us is, is there anything in these billing records that contradict any conclusions that have been drawn. And the answer is no.

Now, we can debate, between those who are lawyers and those who are not, as to what constitutes a billing partner and so forth. But my colleague, as a lawyer, understands that particular point.

Senator DOMENICI. Senator, everybody watching this knows I have not had an opportunity to be involved in these hearings. I came as one of the latest Senators added to it because of somebody leaving. I have not gone back and looked at the early information.

Senator DODD. I understand that.

Senator DOMENICI. Let me tell you. To me, it is very, very simple. Whether these records, belatedly found, contain information that is very damaging or minimally damaging or not damaging is not the point. The point is, if somebody purposely hid them while they were supposed to produce them, something is wrong.

Senator DODD. But you have got to have a motive, Peter. There is nothing in the records that contradicts what we have got. What is the point of hiding them?

Senator DOMENICI. Look, after the fact, it may be neat to say, man, I should have gone ahead and complied with the law. I should have turned them in because it turns out they are not incriminating. I never heard of that as a defense for violating a subpoena.

Well, 3 years later, you found them, you looked at them, they did not mean much. I just hid them from you.

That was just the way I was going to do things, whoever did that. I am not saying Mrs. Clinton did that. But I am saying you could not drop her name off of that one on storing the records there, when she is in there all the time and the records are there.

Senator DODD. But she said no.

Senator DOMENICI. Look, we did not strike people off only because they said no.

Senator DODD. Yes, we did. Yes, we did.

Senator DOMENICI. We struck them because there was no other evidence.

Senator DODD. Ask Counsel, he will tell you that.

Senator DOMENICI. But there was no other evidence. She is physically present in the room where they are. Ms. Carolyn Huber was around. She said no. Take her name off.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Chairman, if it helps, the people that we removed were based on their sworn testimony or their responses to sworn interrogatories. We did not remove people based on press accounts, nor would I, in any case necessarily accept that the press' way of putting a question, with all due respect to the press, necessarily nails it down.

Senator DODD. Why didn't you send her an interrogatory?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think, Mr. Chairman, it is not my decision.

Senator DODD. There was an offer to do so. So why didn't you send it?

The CHAIRMAN. Let me say that I believe that Senator Domenici and Senator Bennett have accurately put forth that which compels people to say let us examine these records to see if we can ascertain who was handling them.

I understand it is impossible to get a timeframe from the technical aspects as to when, but certainly that is something that both the Majority and the Minority have joined in together, not to be titillating, but it is to get as much in the way of facts that we can.

It is important to note that about the time that these records were found by Ms. Huber, and I do not think anyone has on this Committee, on either side, any reason to disbelieve her testimony, that there was a certain report being undertaken by the IG's office in the RTC.

I am wondering, Mr. Chertoff, if you would comment with respect to what was the significance of that report and what they were looking at, and why it might have a direct bearing on why someone would be looking at billing records of the Rose Law Firm, and being interested in it at or about the time Ms. Huber indicated she found these files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Chairman, the report was directly focused on the work that the Rose Law Firm had done for McDougal Savings & Loan, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan.

The question was whether the Rose Law Firm had been in a conflict of interest when it represented the RTC in a lawsuit against Madison's former accountants when, in fact, they had done work for Madison. And the conclusion of the Inspector General's report for the RTC was that there were conflicts.

One of the most obvious places you would want to look, if you were trying to assess or evaluate this Inspector General's report, would be to look at the actual record of the work that was done. What is significant about the billing records, as opposed to the bills, is that they are not merely dollar figures, but that they are actually hourly descriptions of the actual work that is being done by the individual lawyers involved.

One of the best pieces of evidence to look at, if you are trying to look at a report on the work that had been done by the Rose Law Firm, is to look at the underlying billing records. And that is why I think it would be significant in the context of anyone who was reviewing that report to go back to the original source material, the original underlying evidence and compare it.

Finally let me observe, Mr. Chairman, that this issue of the Rose Law Firm and the conflict of interest question raised by the RTC, had been discussed in the White House for a couple of years.

We know that in February 1994, shortly after the Independent Counsel was appointed and at the time the question of whether Roger Altman should recuse himself was being discussed with the White House, that after Mr. Altman decided to recuse himself, Mr. Ickes went up and met with the President and the First Lady and discussed specifically the question of whether there might be some liability or exposure based on this Rose Law Firm issue.

So the issue had been highlighted to them as early as February 1994, and when the report that addressed it came out in the summer 1995, this would have been, certainly if I were in a position of being at that law firm, I would want to look at these records. They would be very helpful.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Boxer.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR BARBARA BOXER

Senator BOXER. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, I am going to express my opinion. I know you are not going to agree with it, and that is——

The CHAIRMAN. How do you know I will not agree with it?

Senator BOXER. Because I am going to repeat something that was said, but do it in my own way.

I find that the title of this chart is not only disturbing but it is unprofessional. I would direct Mr. Chertoff to a letter that he sent with Mr. Ben-Veniste just 6 days ago, to Mr. John Bates of the Office of the Independent Counsel in which you asked for copies of these records, and you refer to them as the Rose Law Firm billing records. I ask that that letter be placed in the record at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. So ordered.

Senator BOXER. I think it just proves the point that this kind of a chart that gets in the papers, that gets on this expensive little TV monitor over here, and gets handed out, is a political document.

These are not Mrs. Clinton's records, these are the Rose Law Firm billing records. The request for the records, signed by Mr. Chertoff himself, does not call them Mrs. Clinton's billing records.

So I find the chart before us to be most unprofessional and disturbing. I have to say, Mr. Chairman, that in my home State, people are looking at this Committee as nothing more than an attack on the First Lady, and I think it is hurting this Committee. And I do not think it does the U.S. Senate one bit of good.

Now, I want to ask you this question, Mr. Chertoff. Who turned over the documents, the Rose Law Firm billing records?

Mr. CHERTOFF. These records, Senator?

Senator BOXER. The records, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Carolyn Huber turned them over.

Senator BOXER. She did. What was her title or is her title at the time that she turned them over?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I do not know her exact title.

Senator BOXER. Whom did she work for, Mr. Chertoff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. She works in the White House. There is no doubt, Senator, that Ms. Huber, in January, came to the realization that the records were relevant. She spoke to her own lawyer, she spoke to the White House lawyer.

Senator BOXER. I know that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And she spoke to Mr. Kendall.

Senator BOXER. I understand that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They turned the documents over.

Senator BOXER. As I understand it, Ms. Huber worked in the White House in a very confidential position, a very trusted employee. I think all of us felt, when we met her here, that she was, in fact, a very credible person.

And I think that underscores what Senator Dodd said. It is not as if someone who wanted to hurt the First Family found these records. In fact, the opposite is true. And in fact these records, in essence, show exactly what the First Lady had said. As I understand these records, in fiscal year 1985 through January 31, 1986, Madison work accounted for 3.7 percent of Mrs. Clinton's billings at the firm.

Now, Senator Bennett has decided that is wrong. I do not know on what basis. Maybe when he got bills from law firms when he was in business, he thought the senior partner was doing all the work. Anyone who knows anything about billing knows that is not the truth. In fiscal year 1986 through 1987, Madison work accounted for 1.7 percent of Mrs. Clinton's billings at the firm. The very documents help to evidence this.

So my point is, when you put up a chart like that, it undermines this Committees credibility. And further, when you talk about these documents showing up and being turned over; in fact, they underscore what the First Lady has stated. This kind of a chart would be appropriate if you were trying to market and promote a new board game; "Unresolved Questions." It is, to me, extraordinary for a bipartisan committee.

My question to you, Mr. Chertoff, is this. What are you trying to say here today? Just put it in plain English. What is your point?

The CHAIRMAN. Now wait just a moment. You asked Mr. Chertoff a question and then you continue on. You have a perfect right, as a Senator, and a Member of the Committee, to express yourself, and you go ahead and do it. And I am going to say to Mr. Chertoff, wait until she is done. Do not try to answer while the Senator is speaking.

Go ahead, Senator.

Senator BOXER. OK. My question is, what point are you trying to make here, both in your testimony and in this chart?

Senator DODD. I just wanted to ask if my colleague would yield.

The CHAIRMAN. Please—

Senator BOXER. I will be glad to yield after I am—

The CHAIRMAN. Let them finish—

Senator DODD. Just the additional question, I would like to know who paid for this chart. Was this paid for by the Republican Policy Committee or paid for by this Committee, and furthermore, are there additional charts that have been paid for by the Republican Policy Committee or by this Committee?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think the answer to the second question is that we did this one in-house, and I can ask Mr. Dinh exactly how it was prepared. I asked that it be prepared. I did not physically do it. We prepare all our charts in-house.

Senator DODD. What does that mean?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It means we use whatever technology we have available to the Committee to prepare charts.

Senator DODD. Paid for by the Committee?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was done by the Service Department of the Senate. I gather they have a department here that does charts.

Senator DODD. Who created the actual document?

Mr. CHERTOFF. You mean who blew it up?

Senator DODD. Who created it, who wrote it up?

Mr. CHERTOFF. We wrote it up. My staff wrote it up. They prepared it based on a summary of evidence that had been collected.

In response to Senator Boxer's question, my point is this. Putting to one side the question of whether this really contradicts or confirms Mrs. Clinton's statements, and I have to say that the facts are that focusing on this client which was the question that was put to the First Lady by the RTC, namely, her involvement with this client, the records do show that on the Castle Grande matter, she spent 52 percent of the hours on it.

But putting that to one side—

Senator BOXER. That was not my question. I can read what that Castle Grande shows. But, since you raised it, I can tell you what we learned about it, but my question was——

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, would you please——

Senator BOXER. He is not answering my question.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator——

Senator BOXER. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to ask that——

Senator BOXER. Mr. Chairman, is this my time or your time?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, it is not yours to put a question to someone and not give him an opportunity to respond.

Senator BOXER. He did not respond.

The CHAIRMAN. Please let me conclude. If you find the answer unresponsive, then you can pursue that, but I am going to ask him to respond. If you are not satisfied with the response, you can certainly pursue it.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to put that to one side because I think in fairness, Senator, all the Senators in the Committee have a right to draw their own judgment about the significance of the records.

The point of the chart is this. However people think the records cut, whether they think they are in favor of Mrs. Clinton or contrary to Mrs. Clinton's point of view, the Committee had a right to have this evidence when it was subpoenaed as did the RTC and as did the Independent Counsel. I mean, one of the fundamental propositions everybody in the country has to follow is when you get a subpoena or a court order, you obey it. It is not up to the recipient of the subpoena to say, well, they do not really need this one, or this is something that is helpful to me so I am going to hold it back, or harmful. They are obliged to comply with the law.

I think the damage that is done if, and I underscore if, if someone deliberately withheld documents that were under subpoena, I do not think you ever have to get to the question of whether it is pro or con in terms of who it helps. That is inappropriate. The Committee and the Senators were entitled, when they asked the questions about the work that was done, to have all the information that had been requested.

Then let people argue about whether this is good or bad, but they should certainly be in possession of the facts if there is a subpoena that requires the facts to be produced. I think apart from anything else, if someone deliberately withheld them, it was wrong.

Senator BOXER. Well, Mr. Chertoff, if I might say, you did not answer——

The CHAIRMAN. Who is going to ask the question?

Senator BOXER. I would like to finish. I want to make a point. You would make a good Senator because you are good at filibustering, but you never answered my question. What are you trying to say with this chart? Get to the point. What are you trying to say? Tell this Committee, what is the point of all this today?

There is not one thing that came out here today that we did not already know, so I would like to know what is the point of your chart and what are you trying to say? Were you the one who entitled it, "Mrs. Clinton's Billing Records"? If you did, why didn't you refer to it 6 days ago as Mrs. Clinton's Billing Records, in this official letter?

The CHAIRMAN. All right, now, Mr. Chertoff, if you would like to answer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. First of all, the point is that the Committee has a right to get answers to these questions which go to the very heart of whether there has been cooperation with the Committee's efforts to determine the facts.

Senator BOXER. Have you asked Mrs. Clinton the questions then? You are trying to condemn a person to whom you never asked any questions. I do not understand that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Second, I have not condemned anyone. And if I can respond to the question concerning the heading, for which I will take responsibility, please understand, Mrs. Clinton was the billing partner on this matter. It is not as if she was simply someone working there.

Senator BOXER. So why didn't you use that in your official letter?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because frankly, Senator, whether it was entitled Mrs. Clinton's records or the Rose records in the letter was a matter of indifference.

Senator BOXER. What about on the chart?

Mr. CHERTOFF. We all know what we are talking about, and I think a Rose by any other name would smell as sweet, so it does not much matter what I used.

Senator BOXER. But you chose to write Mrs. Clinton's Billing Records, where the media could see it and you could get it on TV, but on the official letter, when you are being more professional and not political, you refer to it as the Rose Law Firm billing records.

I think it is unprofessional of you, I dare say. You are a very bright man. I think you knew exactly what you were doing, and since you are taking the credit or the blame for the title of that chart, then I think you have to, at least it seems to me, take the criticism from this side of the aisle that it is unprofessional and it smacks of, it seems to me, more of a political witch hunt when you do that—yet in an official letter, you call it by its official name.

That is all the questions I have. I did not find the answers, either. You never said what you are trying to prove. You keep repeating that we deserve answers. We deserve answers. That is not the question I asked. I guess you do not want to say what you are hinting about today. That is your choice.

The CHAIRMAN. I would note that we are well over the time.

Senator BOXER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me make an observation. I think that the Minority has made their point. I think Mr. Chertoff was as responsive as the circumstances would permit. You cannot very well complete an answer when, in the middle of it, you are asked another question and then a third, and then a statement comes in, and then another Senator comes in and then another one.

Second, I would say that Mr. Chertoff has been most professional in all of his dealings with this Committee, and with the Members and staff of the Committee.

Third, I think that there are reasonable interpretations as it relates, because we understand what our concern has been and that has been in terms of the failure of a proper production of these documents, the billing records, which indicate Mrs. Clinton's billing pursuant to the request as it relates to work at the Rose Law Firm.

Reasonable interpretations can say a more accurate reflection would have been Rose Law Firm billing records, Mrs. Clinton's billing records as it relates to Rose Law Firm work.

But the fact is, I do not believe there was any attempt to be anything more than straightforward in attempting to indicate those areas that we have been able to resolve and those people who have not been questioned with respect to these matters will be questioned, and we still have a number of questions to pose.

And it may, at some appropriate period of time, there may be a question as to just how do we address questions, if we do, to the First Lady, and that will be something that I would take up with Senator Sarbanes and the other Members of the Committee before we make any determination as to how to do that, and what would be the most appropriate manner, if at all.

Senator BOXER. Mr. Chairman, I told you we would disagree when I started on the meaning of this.

The CHAIRMAN. I do not understand why the Senator is bent on being contentious. I am not disagreeing.

Senator BOXER. I am just making a point that we disagree. I mean, I think it is important to make that point because everything that I said, you said you disagree. You felt Mr. Chertoff is professional, and that he answered the question.

The CHAIRMAN. I think the record speaks for itself and I do not need an analysis of my comments by the Senator from California.

Senator BOXER. You analyzed mine, sir, so I was analyzing yours.

The CHAIRMAN. No, I have not. I have not in any way attempted to place any kind of interpretation on your observations. They stand for themselves. People will judge the merits of them, the sincerity of them, the accuracy of them, and the context of them as it relates to how you deliver them and what you say. I have not attempted to characterize any of your statements, nor will I.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Murkowski.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR FRANK H. MURKOWSKI

Senator MURKOWSKI. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman, I have three brief questions.

Mr. Chertoff, perhaps this is a little bit repetitious, but you are aware that Mrs. Clinton stated that she did not recall reviewing the billing records during the 1992 campaign. Can you expand a little bit on that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I have seen statements reported in the press through her lawyer indicating initially that she did not recall reviewing them, but then also indicating there was a possibility she had reviewed them. And I have to say, I have not looked recently at the accounts to know precisely what she said, what the lawyer said she said.

Senator MURKOWSKI. In your gathering of material, depositions or whatever, you cannot enlighten us any further on that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think the only people we determined during the campaign had seen the records were Mr. Hubbell and Mr. Foster, and then we knew Ms. Thomases had been told of the content of the record by Mr. Hubbell. We did not get any evidence that this was discussed with Mrs. Clinton in 1992.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Investigators have been working on this and we have subpoenaed extensive documents, but there was a time lag, a substantial time lag, in bringing some of those documents before this Committee.

Can you highlight and perhaps identify the most egregious case where the Committee made the request and then received explanations from the White House relative to submitting that material, and then time delays. What was motivating the White House into not cooperating, since they knew they had the material and they seemingly decided to make it available to the Committee only after making us wait for it.

Senator SARBANES. Which material is the Senator referring to?

Senator MURKOWSKI. I am referring to specific material included were some of the documentations on the Rose Law Firm specifically that we had asked for, and they were delayed and delayed.

For example, Mr. Chairman, what is the oldest subpoena for the billing records, and how many subpoenas for the billing records were there? Do you recall? Didn't that take an awful long time?

Mr. CHERTOFF. We did not, this Committee did not actually decide to issue subpoenas until last fall in October. For a long period of time, the Committee operated based on requests, I guess you would say on the honor system, and then ultimately the Committee went to the——

Senator MURKOWSKI. OK, so we asked for them without the subpoenas, then we did not get the cooperation, and then we proceeded with the subpoenas?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That is correct.

We did learn from Mr. Kendall and Ms. Sherburne that there had been subpoenas from the Independent Counsel and the regulators back in 1994 that would pertain to these documents.

With respect to your earlier question, we have had the experience, we certainly had the experience in January and February, of a number of documents turning up relating to Whitewater that apparently emerged only when someone was moving offices. There were a number of instances of self-described inadvertent failures to turn over documents.

We have been in the position frequently of questioning people only to find out afterward that there were more pertinent documents, and then we have to decide whether to bring them back. We do bring them back sometimes but it is frankly a hardship for the witnesses and a hardship for the Committee to have to do that.

Senator MURKOWSKI. And was there any explanation offered by the White House because this did not occur on one occasion, it occurred on several occasions?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I know we had with Mr. Lindsey and with Mr. Waldman and with Mr. Ickes, and I remember particularly with respect to Mr. Lindsey, we received documents that were responsive actually the day after the Committee had lapsed at the end of February, and the explanation we received in the letter, if I recall it correctly, was again it was somehow inadvertent and there was a description of a reason why it had not been turned over.

But then we also learned from the lawyer that he actually had discovered the documents or had found the documents earlier that week, but had been busy on a trip, so that we did not actually get them until after the Committee's jurisdiction had lapsed.

I understand that since the end of February, other documents have trickled in.

Senator DODD. Would my colleague yield, just for a——

Senator MURKOWSKI. Let me finish because I am not going to be very long.

The bottom line one could conclude is there were numerous requests for subpoenas, for the billing records, and in your opinion, are you satisfied that they have been turned over?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, we have the billing records. Senator, I have to tell you——

Senator MURKOWSKI. All of the billing records?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I cannot say all the records because there are probably original bills. We seem to have a complete set of billing printouts. What I can say to the Senator is not only was this requested and then ultimately subpoenaed, but this issue of the billing records was actually a focus of question and discussion by this Committee in the fall and early winter of last year, in November and December. It is not as if it was something that was mentioned in passing.

As Senator Bennett pointed out, the question of these records was discussed repeatedly and in particular with Mr. Hubbell who said, well, geez, you know, it would really be helpful if we could have the billing records so I could prove my point. And there were then determinations that we should try to get those records. So this was not anything that anyone could have overlooked.

Senator MURKOWSKI. My time is almost up. But you obviously have a life time of experience in your area of expertise. What line do you draw relative to withholding evidence in a case where you request, then you subpoena, then more turns up over an extended period of time, and it seems like if you ask the right questions, you might get a specific response, but you are not going to get everything.

How do you evaluate professionally in your business when clearly the line is crossed and withholding evidence is apparent, and what is the penalty for withholding evidence, if in fact it can be proven? Can you take us through that one side, we are not quite there, but how you get over it and what the penalty is?

Mr. CHERTOFF. The penalties vary. At the extreme, if there is a deliberate decision, intentional decision to withhold documents that are subject to subpoena by a Grand Jury, that is, as I say, if it is deliberate, that can be a Federal offense, punishable as an obstruction of justice, or it can be a contempt of Congress or a contempt of court, depending on who issues the subpoena.

In court cases all the time, these issues arise, and there are often sanctions, whether they be criminal or civil sanctions, visited upon parties that do not turn over documents that are requested.

As always, the issue is this: Were they covered by the subpoena, did the person who had them know about the subpoena, were they under the instruction of the subpoena, and did they, knowing that they were required to turn them over, deliberately withhold them.

And if they did so, then that is something that does get punished. Ultimately, it typically boils down to a question of knowledge and intent.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chertoff, have we passed that line in this case?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think, Senator, that the decision about how to proceed with sanctions, ultimately, of course, is probably one for the Special Counsel to make.

I think the Committee has a very strong institutional interest, however, in making its own determination about whether the Committee feels it is received proper cooperation with respect to these documents.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So what you are saying to us as Members is that it is our judgment?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is your judgment.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I thank the Chair. That is the conclusion of my statements.

Senator SARBANES. Well, Mr. Chairman, I am not going to leave that matter at that point, because it is very important. When did this Committee first issue subpoenas, in October? Not until October, correct?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think, yes, it was in the fall, correct.

Senator SARBANES. In October.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That is my recollection, yes.

Senator SARBANES. That is right. I think it is arguable whether the billing records were within the terms of the subpoena.

Pardon?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I say, respectfully, I think they were actually within the terms.

Senator SARBANES. It is an arguable matter.

Now, Mr. Chairman, we have been through this question of responsiveness to the Committee's requests and to the subpoenas, and I am frank to say I think there has been a tremendous amount of cooperation. We have gotten a tremendous amount of material.

We had an important issue that was taken to the Floor of the Senate where there was an argument that there was a privilege that could be asserted. That matter, in the end, was worked out in an acceptable way to all parties. But I do not think we ought to leave an impression here that some line has been crossed with respect to providing material. And it is very important to understand that no subpoena was issued from this Committee to the White House until October.

Subsequent to that, in my view, it was complied with in every respect. And these documents were discovered, actually they were turned over to us by Mr. Kendall after Ms. Huber found them. In fact, he sends them up with a cover letter to Mr. Giuffra. These documents were discovered yesterday by Ms. Carolyn Huber, Special Assistant to the President and Special Director of Correspondence. They were furnished promptly to our Committee. And then he indicated that the originals had been furnished to the Independent Counsel. So, you know, once discovered, they were turned over.

Now why they had not been found previously is an open question. I mean, I recognize that question, and there is been a lot of speculation about it, but the speculation we have heard from the table this morning is all about sort of a deliberate effort, and it is quite plausible to have an explanation of it which is nondeliberate. In other words, it was a not deliberate effort. But I think this line of questioning could leave an erroneous impression in terms of the responsiveness.

I think Jane Sherburne, who has engaged in an interchange with the Committee, and we have documented it previously, tried in every good faith effort to meet the demands of the Committee and I think that needs to be put on the record.

Senator DODD. As I understood it, at the time the letter and the subpoena went out, and again making the points, I think it needs to be made because there are a lot of assumptions in some of the exchanges here, there was, it is arguable as to whether or not the billing records were included. Putting that aside, the time the letter and the subpoena went out, in fact, we now know where these documents were at the time the subpoena went out, don't we?

Mr. CHERTOFF. We know from Ms. Huber that they were in her possession between August 1995 and January.

Senator DODD. Right. So there is nothing to speculate about that. No one has contradicted that. So making that point I think is an important one because the assumption here, based on just what you hear this morning is, you do not know where those were at the time of the subpoena. We now know where they were. She says she found them later. We leave these things sort of dangling around here, and yet in August, at the time the letter went out, and in October, the time the subpoena went out, in fact, we know where the documents were. The person who had them in her possession discovered them, when she did, turns them over to her lawyer, Kendall, and the lawyer turns them over to us.

What I object to is sort of rank speculation here without any evidence to corroborate it. That is what is dangerous in a Committee like this. This is rank speculation.

The Senator from Maryland has pointed out, one could easily draw the conclusion as well, given the fact that we have had 50,000 documents turned over by this White House, not to mention 15,000 documents in the personal possession, 65,000 documents over the last 2 years. The fact that something does not turn up the minute we want it is not unheard of.

Mr. Chertoff, you have been involved in hundreds of cases and that has happened, I gather, and when it has happened, it has not been because of some corruption. Documents get lost. Is that not true?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Senator, documents get lost.

Senator DODD. With no corruption involved, couldn't we speculate about that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think always in my experience, it depends upon, in large part sometimes, the nature of the document. A document that is hotly discussed and sought, and a document—putting aside whether you think it's helpful or hurtful is clearly relevant to a discussion of issues that are being considered by the Independent Counsel or the Committee. I mean, anything is possible in life but that is the kind of document you would normally expect people to be producing.

Senator DODD. You are much more experienced at this than I am but it seems to me then when you find the document, and if you find the document, that something is in there that was really incriminating, then that leaves really a lot of credibility to the notion of why it might have been withheld.

When the document in fact corroborates everything that has been said, doesn't that conversely also then sort of eliminate or at least reduce significantly the motivations about why the document might not become available when it was sought?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think, Senator, some of it depends. I have had the experience of having things discovered belatedly and then one puts the best face on them. I think in the end the Committee's going to have to judge whether it thinks the documents are hurtful or harmful.

I would say this. Usually you would expect if something was very helpful, they would produce it quickly. But I would also say that on occasion, things have been produced belatedly, and it's very common for lawyers then to argue well, it didn't very much matter anyway. And I think in the end, the critical point is the Committee has the right to have the information and I think you, as Members of the Committee, draw your conclusions.

Senator SARBANES. Senator Dodd, if you'd yield for a minute?

Mr. Chairman, I would like to put in the record at this point an article that appeared in The New York Times called "Docudrama" by Sidney Herman, a lawyer, which says:

Documents that are relevant to an investigation are found in an unexpected place 6 months after they were first sought. A shocking development?

Absolutely not. In most major pieces of litigation, files turn up late. One side or the other always thinks of making something of the late appearance, but these lawyers know the truth. It could just as easily happen to them.

Senator DODD. I thank my colleague.

Senator SARBANES. It goes on in that vein, and may I ask that that be put in the record.

The CHAIRMAN. So ordered. It will be placed in the record.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I would just like the record to note that the Committee subpoena isn't the only subpoena that's been out there. The Department of Justice first began to issue subpoenas regarding the billing records on Christmas eve, 1993. That's a long time ago, Mr. Chairman.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, I'd yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

The CHAIRMAN. I think the record adequately reflects, and I am going to ask all sides if we can't try to constrain ourselves. I know we think we have important points to make, but I will venture to say that these points have been made by both sides, not only at this hearing, but certainly in the past. So if we can try to confine ourselves.

Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chertoff, you will acknowledge, will you not, that we did not specifically request the Rose Law Firm billing records from the White House, either in our letter request or in our subpoena. Isn't that so?

Mr. CHERTOFF. As I understand the subpoena and the letter requests we sent out, they quite clearly, to me, included the billing records.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did we specifically request, did we say please give us any Rose Law Firm billing records that you have?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think the answer, as I've said, Mr. Ben-Veniste, is they were categorical broad requests that included the billing records, although they did not specifically enumerate.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So they didn't specifically ask for the billing records. Isn't it correct that as far as our subpoena and letter request is concerned, I don't know what was in anyone else's subpoena or letter request, I do know what was in ours, what we asked for was any documents which relate to the operation, the solvency, and the regulation of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan? That was the request that was made.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In part. In addition to that, there was a request for anything relating to the conflict of interest that arose with respect to the representation of the RTC in the case against the Council.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was far from clear that our request, in response to Senator Murkowski's question, identified the Rose Law Firm billing records.

I think one other point worth making, because it was included again in Senator Murkowski's question to you, and you may have misspoken about that, and that had to do with statements attributed to Mrs. Clinton about whether or not she reviewed billing records during the 1992 Presidential Campaign. I believe the record is that either Mrs. Clinton, or her attorney at the time, stated that it was possible that she had reviewed the records.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think that's correct. That's what I said.

Senator SARBANES. When did we send the subpoena? The end of October, wasn't it?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't remember the precise date. I know it was in October.

Senator SARBANES. I think it was the end of October.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff, we thank you.

The Committee stands in recess until tomorrow at 10:00 a.m.

[Whereupon, at 12:40 p.m., the Committee was recessed to reconvene the following day, Wednesday, May 8, 1966, at 10:00 a.m. in the same place.]

Re: Appearance of Susan P. Thomases

Dear Senators D'Amato and Sarbanes:

We are in receipt of Senator D'Amato's May 1, 1996 letter, faxed to our offices at 6:30 p.m., requesting that Susan Thomases travel to Washington on less than a week's notice to provide a fifth session of testimony to the Special Committee.

We are prepared to produce Ms. Thomases to testify for a fifth time under oath. We request, however, that the Special Committee provide her with a reasonable period of notice prior to the date of that testimony. As you know, Ms. Thomases' multiple appearances have generated voluminous written testimony that she must, in fairness, have an opportunity to review prior to appearing again before the Special Committee. This becomes all the more necessary because, as we understand it from the staff, there is no limitation on the subject matters that the Special Committee will cover in Ms. Thomases' fifth appearance. In addition, the date proposed, May 7, 1996, conflicts with prior commitments of her counsel.

Accordingly, we would propose that the Committee agree to schedule Ms. Thomases for an appearance on May 14, 1996.

Separately, in response to Chairman D'Amato's suggestion that Ms. Thomases might wish to be deposed in advance of the public hearing, please understand that our client has no such desire, unless that exercise might obviate the need for a further public appearance.

Finally, we are in receipt of Special Committee counsel's May 2, 1996 request to inspect the originals of documents ST132 -ST142, which were produced to the Committee earlier this year. We are willing to make these original documents available for inspection under reasonable conditions in keeping with past practice in our Washington offices on May 13, 1996. We also request that to expedite the proceedings the Special Committee make available for inspection any documents that it wishes to use in Ms. Thomases' appearance on May 13, 1996.

Thank you in advance for your cooperation with these issues.

Very truly yours,

Benito Romano

CONFIDENTIAL

In Arkansas, the same official happened to serve both as Savings and Loan Association Supervisor and Securities Commissioner. In 1985, Ms. Beverly Bassett held this dual post. A review of this entire transaction from the vantage point of 1995 makes it clear that Commissioner Bassett was cautious, fair, and firm and that she took aggressive regulatory action, which was rare on the part of federal and state S&L officials after the federal deregulation of S&L's in the early 1980's. While she recognized that Madison Guaranty, like other state corporations, could issue preferred stock, she was careful to protect the public against the sale of securities by an institution that was not adequately capitalized. Madison Guaranty was unable to meet the stringent requirements she imposed, and the Rose Law Firm was ultimately unsuccessful in its efforts on behalf of Madison Guaranty.

I was not involved in any meetings with state regulators on these matters. I may have made one telephone call to the Arkansas Securities Department to find out to whom Mr. Massey should direct any inquiries regarding an S&L matter. I do not remember to whom I spoke. Insofar as I am aware, my name appears only three times in the many documents exchanged by Rose and the state regulators. The first time is in a letter Mr. Massey wrote to state regulators expressing his view that it was permissible for Madison Guaranty to authorize and issue a class of non-voting preferred stock (DKRT11000701-11000702, attached hereto at Tab 17A). He drafted and sent a letter to Mr. Charles Handley, of

10. Describe your involvement in Madison Guaranty v Frost.

To the best of my knowledge, I was not involved in this case.

11. Identify all persons with specific knowledge of your involvement in this matter.

Please see my Answer to Question 10, supra.

12. Identify all documents relating to your involvement in this matter.

Please see my Answer to Question 10, supra.

13. Describe your involvement with Rose's representation of Madison before the Arkansas Securities Department (ASD), including but not limited to details of work you performed in 1985 for Madison regarding obtaining approval from the ASD to issue preferred stock.

In the spring of 1985, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association engaged the Rose Law Firm to represent it in an attempt to secure permission for the S&L to issue preferred stock and market it through a wholly-owned brokerage firm. While I was the billing partner on this matter, the great bulk of the work was done by Mr. Richard Massey, who was then an associate at Rose and whose specialty was securities law. I was not involved in the day-to-day work on the project. My knowledge of the events concerning this representation, as set forth in this Answer, has been largely derived from a review of the relevant documents rather than my contemporaneous involvement in the representation since Mr. Massey primarily handled the matter.

Dear Mr. Bates:

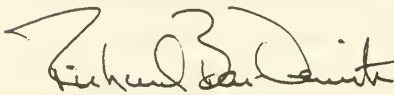

The Special Committee to Investigate Whitewater Development Corporation and Related Matters is investigating the circumstances surrounding the discovery in the White House Residence of records reflecting the Rose Law Firm's representation of Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association (the "Rose Law Firm Billing Records").

We understand that the Office of Independent Counsel has conducted a fingerprint analysis of the original billing records. On behalf of the Special Committee, we hereby request that you provide the Special Committee with a copy of the report of that analysis.

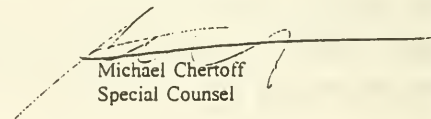

In the event that you conclude that disclosure of the report is inappropriate at this time, please advise promptly if you anticipate a change in circumstances such that you would be able to produce the report requested.

Please call us at 224-7391 with any questions. Thank you.

Very truly yours,

Richard Ben-Veniste
 Minority Special Counsel

CHICAGO

Documents that are relevant to an investigation are found in an unexpected place six months after they were first sought. A shocking development?

Absolutely not. In most major pieces of litigation, files turn up late. One side or the other always thinks of making something of the late appearance, but these lawyers know the truth: it could just as easily happen to them.

Despite diligent searches, important papers in large organizations are always turning up after the initial and follow-up searches. How many times have you looked for something on your desk and couldn't find it, only to have it appear right under your nose later? Happens all the time.

Indeed, as every litigator knows, there is nothing worse than having an important document show up late. You've only highlighted its absence for your opponent. If you know where it is, it is far better to include it in the initial delivery of relevant papers, where it gets mixed in with the rest of the morass. Why red-flag it by holding it back?

My former partner, Kenneth Starr, knows all this. As independent counsel in the Whitewater investigation, he will take it into account.

But the American people have no reason to know that this is a normal

Please. Every lawyer loses files.

occurrence; it is not part of their everyday experience. Reporters really don't have any reason to know this either. Or they may know, and simply choose to ignore it.

Last summer, notes that were critical to the celebrated libel suit brought by Jeffrey Masson against the writer Janet Malcolm appeared in her private study, years after they were first sought. I recall that discovery being treated as an interesting happenstance, nothing more.

When documents show up belatedly, even in private quarters, there is simply nothing unusual about it. ☐

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

WEDNESDAY, MAY 8, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:00 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING COMMENTS OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

When last we met, there was concern with respect to scheduling, and I am very pleased to announce that we have been able to agree to the issuance of subpoenas to Mr. David Watkins and to Mr. Webb Hubbell, requiring the production to the Committee of certain Bank of Kingston records which Mr. Hubbell had in his possession. These Bank of Kingston records were in the files of the Rose Law Firm and related to work billed by the firm to their bank which was then owned by Jim McDougal.

Again I want to commend both Counsels and staff for being able to reach an accord so that we can move forward as quickly as possible. Staff has been instructed to take depositions and to look at the quality and ascertain whether witnesses will be required to make a public testimony. Where we can avoid that we will in order to complete our work as expeditiously as possible.

We have combined the panels in order to have a more orderly presentation and also to save time. I am going to ask the witnesses to please stand for the purposes of taking the oath.

[Witnesses sworn.]

The CHAIRMAN. Let me thank all of our witnesses for coming today and ask if any of you have a statement that you would like to submit for the record in writing, or one that you would like to make before we begin?

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER S. BOND
Senator BOND. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Let me deal with this rather briefly. Yesterday after I left, some of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle decided to raise questions about a chart which my staff was largely responsible for conceiving and putting together.

I wanted to set the record straight. These are the questions that I think must be addressed by this Committee.

We know that the billing records of Mrs. Clinton's time on Madison are very important to this investigation. The fact that they did not show up after having been under subpoena for better than 2 years until they were discovered by Ms. Huber early this year, has significantly delayed out investigation and it has prevented us from getting to many of the facts that might explain the extraordinary efforts taken by the White House to get information on, interfere with, and impede Federal investigations.

We listed the major questions on this chart. Here you see where we have sworn testimony about, for example, who removed the records from the Rose Law Firm in 1992. We have drawn a line through Mr. Hubbell's name because, in sworn testimony before this Committee, he stated that he was not the one who removed the law firms records.

We have a checkmark because it has been confirmed, in sworn testimony, that Mr. Hubbell and Mr. Foster did, in fact, handle the records in Little Rock during the 1992 Presidential Campaign.

Yesterday, Mr. Chertoff outlined the process of elimination—how we came to these people about whom we are continuing to make inquiries to find out why the records were not turned over. That to me, Mr. Chairman, is essential, not only in resolving the major questions this Committee was expected to resolve, but also in resolving the question of whether there was a conscious effort by someone in possession of the records and in violation of the subpoena, to withhold those records from the Independent Counsel, from other investigatory agencies, and this Committee.

The attack on this chart yesterday, after I left the room, was on the fact that we titled the chart "Mrs. Clinton's Billing Records." Now, I would have hoped that we could devote our time to resolving the questions listed on the chart. I felt this was an important way of identifying some of the critical questions remaining in this investigation.

Since the question has been raised why the term "Mrs. Clinton's Billing Records" rather than "Rose Law Firm's Records" were used, let me be very clear. These billing records were compiled at the Rose Law Firm on the time of Mrs. Clinton. We have testimony that Mrs. Clinton was the lead billing partner, and, as pointed out by Mr. Chertoff yesterday, spent more time than any other of the lawyers at Rose Law Firm on the Madison Guaranty question.

The fact that they had left the Rose Law Firm was evident. They were taken control of by people associated with the Clinton Campaign and/or the close associates of the Clintons, or the Clintons' themselves.

We are not interested in the Rose Law Firm files in general. What we sought was the information on Mrs. Clinton's billing. Mrs. Clinton's records were in there. She was the billing partner. They were removed from the law firm because they reflected Mrs. Clinton's activities. The Newsweek story that circulated last week reportedly indicated that Mrs. Clinton's fingerprints had supposedly been found on the records. The line was used: Well, of course her fingerprints were found on the records. They are her records. That was the statement that was used. Who is the "her" they are talking about? They are talking about Mrs. Clinton.

Frankly, Mr. Chairman, we have a lot more important matters to deal with than the title of this chart. I stand by that title. They are Mrs. Clinton's billing records. Later on, I would be happy to discuss this, at length, with anybody who wants to argue with me.

Mr. Chairman, I would submit for the record excerpts from the CNN "Burden of Proof" show of April 29th, 12:30 p.m. Eastern Time, which shows that the Minority Counsel has used the term "they were her records."

We have important questions to resolve. I hope we can get on with these questions. If anybody wants to argue about the chart with me, I would be happy to do so, probably outside this room, so as not to take up further time of the Committee. But I did want to set this record straight. That is why we are interested; not because they were Rose Law Firm records, but because they were Mrs. Clinton's records.

I hope now we can get on with resolving the questions.
Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. While I appreciate Senator Bond's suggestion that we take this up later, I would like to take it up right now since he has brought it up.

The CHAIRMAN. I have asked to stop the clock at this point so that we can keep some semblance. We will complete our half hour and we will start it if you want to respond. But we will put the clock on and it will be charged to the Democratic time.

Go ahead, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. You mean this exchange will not be on our time? Then when we go to the panel we will go back to the time?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, either way. It will not be out of the time. This way you can have an opportunity—

Senator SARBANES. Well, Mr. Chairman, I just want to make the point that the title of this thing is rather important. These are the Rose Law Firm billing records with respect to work done for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. The number of hours worked by other lawyers that are reflected in these billings far exceed, by more than a factor of 2 and 3 to 1, the work done by Mrs. Clinton. I mean, I know why you put the title on there, but it is not accurate and I think the point ought to be made very strongly that it is not accurate.

Also, Mr. Chairman—I am going to yield here in a moment—we had the discussion yesterday about discovery of records. I put an insert in the record, Docudrama, about the lawyer who said it is not unusual, in litigation, to discover documents later. I want to put in today's record an article that appeared in The Washington Post on April 27, 1994. "The Judge Closes the Case of Marriott's Missing Box. Firm to pay some legal bills for bondholders group is faulted for delaying information." And let me just read briefly from this story:

The Marriott Corporation, a Federal judge has ruled, must pay some of the legal bills for a group of bondholders that is suing the company. The reason, according to the judge, Marriott shouldn't have waited 4 months to tell the bondholders that a box filled with documents crucial to the bondholders lawsuit had fallen off a Marriott Courier truck and was missing. The saga of the missing box dates back to a rainy night in January 1993, when attorneys at Marriott's headquarters in Bethesda loaded 34 boxes of documents onto a Toyota pickup truck. Somewhere, something went wrong. One box, according to Marriott, never made it to Washington. To this day, neither the box nor its contents has ever been fully accounted for.

I am not going to quote any further, but this clearly makes the point that this problem of missing documents occurs all the time in legal matters. The kind of innuendo that developed at the table yesterday by Mr. Chertoff, seems to me, unwarranted and uncalled for. I think this story just makes that point in a stronger way. I could go on at length about this, but in deference to the sensibilities of some of the people here, I do not choose to do it right now.

I yield to Senator Simon.

Senator BOND. Mr. Chairman, that is all very interesting. I think we ought to get on with the question of how the records got there. They obviously did not fall off of a Marriott truck.

[Laughter.]

I am sure that those things can happen, but the real question is: How did those records stay away from our view for critical periods of the investigation and then show up in the White House Book Room in the very private third floor quarters? So, Mr. Chairman, I agree that we ought to get on with the hearing.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Simon, do you have a comment or an observation?

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL SIMON

Senator SIMON. I just have a brief comment and then I am going to ask one question of all of the witnesses.

Senator Sarbanes used the word "innuendo." That is what is going around here all over the place. I really think we abuse the process. I understand—you know, Webb Hubbell says he did not have anything to do with it. Cross his name off. No interrogatories to Mrs. Clinton. We keep her name up there. It makes it look like we are really doing something. I am not saying that Democrats, from time to time, have not abused privileges in this body. But, I really think self-restraint is essential for a free system to work. The innuendo that is going around in these hearings day after day, and I am not picking on my friend from Missouri here, I think is not a healthy thing for the political process.

Let me just ask one question of each of the witnesses. Did Bill Clinton, as Governor, ask you to do anything unethical or illegal?

Mr. Proctor, if I can start down at that end.

Mr. PROCTOR. Not in any way.

Mr. DEWEY. No, sir.

Senator SIMON. Mr. Denton.

Mr. DENTON. Did Bill Clinton personally ask me? Is that the question, sir?

Senator SIMON. That is what I am asking you.

Mr. DENTON. For clarity, directly?

Senator SIMON. Pardon?

Mr. DENTON. For clarity, directly did Bill Clinton ask me to do anything improper?

Senator SIMON. All right.

Mr. DENTON. No.

Senator SIMON. But you are suggesting indirectly that you think things may have been improperly done?

Mr. DENTON. I would suggest that, perhaps.

Senator SIMON. Mr. Ritter.

Mr. RITTER. No, sir.

Senator SIMON. Mr. Patterson.

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir.

Senator SIMON. Mr. Burge.

Mr. BURGE. No, sir.

Senator SIMON. All right. I thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Today, we are going to explore with this panel the handling of a couple of loans that were related to an investment known as Whitewater Development Company.

Before we proceed, I want to bring to the attention of the Chairman and the panel one ground rule I think we all agreed upon, with respect to the questioning of Mr. Denton. We received a letter from the Independent Counsel requesting that we not question Mr. Denton about the banking practices of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan because of the fact that there is a trial ongoing; and that he had been instructed not to answer questions about that matter. So I think both sides have agreed to honor that, and our focus with Mr. Denton today will be with respect to the Whitewater Development loan that occurred with Union Bank before 1984.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There were two letters, and perhaps we should make them a part of the record.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think that probably makes sense.

Mr. Burge, let me start with you. You were affiliated with Citizens Bank & Trust of Flippin, Arkansas, in 1978?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir, I was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was your position?

Mr. BURGE. I was Senior Vice President.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How large was the bank?

Mr. BURGE. The bank was about $15 million.

Mr. CHERTOFF. $15 million?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Burge, I will ask you just to pull the mike a little closer so we can hear you. Now in 1978, the record reflects there was a loan in the amount of $182,000 that went to fund or finance a purchase of property called "Whitewater." I guess it was part of the Whitewater Development Corporation. Are you familiar with that loan?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And would you describe that as one of the largest loans by your bank at that time?

Mr. BURGE. One of the larger loans.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did that loan come to be made?

Mr. BURGE. The One-on-One River Development Corporation, which was a corporation made up of local individuals, purchased approximately 3,000 acres on the White River. As a part of the acquisition of that land, they sold certain parcels to a group of individuals—the number escapes me how many—but one of the individual groups that acquired the property, was Mr. McDougal and Mr. Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now actually there were four people who were involved in that acquisition, who got the loan; right? They are Mr. and Mrs. McDougal and Mr. and Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. BURGE. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember what Mr. Clinton's position in State government was at that time?

Mr. BURGE. He was the Attorney General and he was the Democratic Nominee for Governor of the State of Arkansas.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who brought that loan to the bank?

Mr. BURGE. A realtor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who was that?

Mr. BURGE. Mr. Chris Wade.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Chris Wade have a position with the bank?

Mr. BURGE. He was on our Board of Directors.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So Chris Wade was a member of the Board of Directors, he was the one who went to the bank and brought the loan and requested the loan on behalf of the McDougals and Clintons?

Mr. BURGE. That is my recollection.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was Mr. Wade also one of the participants in the underlying real estate transaction that you just described that resulted in the sale of part of the property to the McDougals and the Clintons?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. For the record, do you know if that is the same Chris Wade who has recently pled guilty as part of the Independent Counsel's investigation into various activities in Arkansas?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Burge, was there a downpayment for this loan of $182,000?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How much was that?

Mr. BURGE. Ten percent of the acquisition price.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that would be about $20,000?

Mr. BURGE. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was that the standard practice for this kind of a loan you give to somebody to buy property to develop and to sell to require some kind of a downpayment?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir, it was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And just so we are clear, this property that the McDougals and the Clintons were financing through your bank, they were not buying it for their own house, or houses, it was raw land that they were going to subdivide and try to sell?

Mr. BURGE. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was kind of a speculative real estate venture? They were essentially hoping to make money on the sale of the property; is that right?

Mr. BURGE. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And their ability to finance it, or to pay back that debt depended significantly upon how well that project was operated; is that right?

Mr. BURGE. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now did you know that the downpayment, the $20,000 downpayment, was borrowed from another bank at the time you made the $182,000 loan?

Mr. BURGE. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was not disclosed to you at all?

Mr. BURGE. I didn't know about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would that have made a difference to you?

Mr. BURGE. All factors being considered, it may have had an impact on our decision.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So, had you known the fact that the downpayment you received, the 10 percent, was itself a loan from another bank, that would have had some impact on your thinking?

Mr. BURGE. It may have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Certainly it is something you would have wanted to be told?

Mr. BURGE. I'm sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Burge, am I right that the $182,000 loan was actually too big a loan for a single project for your bank to make?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir; that's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Explain why that is.

Mr. BURGE. At that time in Arkansas, most State banks were under a legal loan limit of capitalization at 20 percent of total capital. Again, the amount of capital in the bank escapes me at the present time, but our legal loan limit was probably about $150,000 to $160,000.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you were not really in a position as a bank to make the entire value of the loan within your own bank?

Mr. BURGE. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. $182,000 was more than you were allowed to make?

Mr. BURGE. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you deal with that?

Mr. BURGE. We participated in a portion of the loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is that the same thing as saying you basically split the loan and another bank took up half the loan?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What bank took up the other half of the loan?

Mr. BURGE. Union National Bank of Little Rock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did that bank come to be the one that was invited in to take half the loan?

Mr. BURGE. They were our major correspondent.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That means a bank in Little Rock with whom you had a relationship; right?

Mr. BURGE. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Denton, you were at the Union National Bank of Little Rock in 1978?

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was your position at that point?

Mr. DENTON. Senior Vice President and Chief Lending Officer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember a time that you learned about a loan that was going to be made for a real estate venture to be handled by the McDougals and the Clintons?

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you first learn about that loan?

Mr. DENTON. I was approached by one of two individuals that were an emissary for the owner of the Bank, Herbert McAdams. I was informed that the two parties and their wives were purchasing real estate; that Union Bank was being asked to make a $20,000 unsecured loan for the equity in that purchase. At the time, I understood that the balance of the purchase price would be carried by the seller. I was not aware another bank was involved in the transaction.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were approached about the $20,000 portion of the loan? Is that right?

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You said there were two people, one of two people approached you on behalf of the owner. Who were the people you were referring to?

Mr. DENTON. It was either Gene Smith or Paul Berry.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was their function or their position at the bank?

Mr. DENTON. They were both public relations officers that functioned as lobbyists, paid lobbyists on staff at the bank.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You mentioned an individual by the name of Paul Berry, whose name actually came up earlier in the year in connection with a discussion at the White House—I think it was in January 1994—about Beverly Bassett Schaffer. There was a list of people who might be sent down to Arkansas. Can you just tell us a little bit about Mr. Berry? You said he was a lobbyist for the bank?

Mr. DENTON. Yes. The reason I am uncertain as to which of those parties approached me is because Mr. Berry was employed at just about that time in 1978 by the bank to actually take over and learn the ropes from Gene Smith. Incidentally, Mr. Smith died shortly after that period of time. Paul Berry had previously been employed as a lobbyist for, I believe, the American Medical Association, had worked some for the Tyson Foods operation in Northwest Arkansas, and as I recall was a former roommate of Bill Clinton's.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you told by this emissary from the owner of the bank why the owner of the bank wanted you to grant this loan to the McDougals and the Clintons?

Mr. DENTON. I was informed that the basis of the loan was Bill Clinton, who was described at that point as an up and coming political star, a rising star in the State of Arkansas.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were told that the owner of the bank wanted you to make the loan because it was to a group that included Mr. Clinton, and Mr. Clinton was viewed as having good political prospects. Is that right?

Mr. DENTON. That is accurate, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Had you not gotten that instruction, would you, in your capacity as a bank officer, have approved an unsecured loan to Mr. McDougal and to Mr. Clinton and their wives?

Mr. DENTON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why not?

Mr. DENTON. I had previous banking experience with Mr. Jim McDougal, all of which had been very satisfactory, but all had involved the personal involvement of former Senator Fulbright. Senator Fulbright had guaranteed all the previous loans to Mr. McDougal. McDougal had a reasonably modest net worth and was not entitled to a $20,000 unsecured credit, in my opinion.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You also indicated, Mr. Denton, you did not realize at the time you were involved in a $20,000 loan; that there was going to be other loans and participation from other banks on portions of this loan. Is that correct?

Mr. DENTON. I was not aware of that. I had understood that the other loan would be carried by the seller of the property.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you receive financial statements in connection with this $20,000 loan?

Mr. DENTON. I don't recall if I received one specifically on that loan. I had in the bank's possession current financial statements from Mr. McDougal on existing loans. I did not receive a personal financial statement from Bill Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At some point, did some of the Bank Examiners, or regulators criticize the documentation underlying this particular loan to the McDougals and the Clintons?

Mr. DENTON. As I recall, within a year, perhaps a 2-year period, that loan was listed among other loans as being one poorly documented for having the absence of financial statements.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Denton, in this period of time generally, what was the philosophy of the bank and Mr. McAdams, the owner of the bank, concerning loans to political figures. Did he have a philosophy or a policy, or was there a philosophy or a policy at the bank about how to treat applications for loans from people who were politically powerful?

Mr. DENTON. I don't know if there was a stated policy regarding political loans. I would say that there was certainly not a formal, written policy in that regard.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there a practice?

Mr. DENTON. The practice was fairly well described. McAdams was actively involved in politics and had been for a number of years, and had a number of contacts in the political arena, and frequently extended credit to political entities.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Burge, I want to come back to you. At some point in 1978 the loan is out; the property is acquired. Your bank, the Citizens Bank, has about half of the loan, about $90,000, and the other part of it is over at Union National Bank. Is that right?

Mr. BURGE. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did there come a point that you became concerned about the problem with the sale of the property that was supposed to be providing the income to pay back the loan?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was your concern?

Mr. BURGE. Well, there had been a period of time there had not been any sales at all on the property.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you take some steps to approach both the McDougals and the Clintons about requiring them to start paying off the principal of the loan because you were concerned that none of the principal was being paid?

Mr. BURGE. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Tell us about that.

Mr. BURGE. I had a conversation I believe with Mr. McDougal and established a 10 percent principal reduction stipulation at the end of the current extension period before the bank would renew the loan again. It would basically work out to a 10-year amortization of the loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he make principal payments after that?

Mr. BURGE. To my knowledge, I think they did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know what the source of those payments was? Where he got the money?

Mr. BURGE. No, sir, I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know whether the land was starting to sell at any kind of a brisk pace?

Mr. BURGE. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you leave, Mr. Burge? When did you leave the Citizens Bank?

Mr. BURGE. September 1980.

Mr. CHERTOFF. September of?

Mr. BURGE. 1980.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Ritter, you also had a relationship with the Citizens Bank at some point? Right?

Mr. RITTER. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you join that bank?

Mr. RITTER. I thought it was September 1979, so maybe I'm—

Mr. BURGE. It was 1980.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you overlap with Mr. Burge to some degree?

Mr. BURGE. No. I left in September 1980. Mr. Ritter came on, and I stayed about 2 or 3 weeks for a transition period with him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Ritter, so the torch was passed to you. What was your position at Citizens Bank after Mr. Burge left?

Mr. RITTER. CEO and President.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's Chief Executive Officer?

Mr. RITTER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you came to the bank, did you become familiar with this loan, which we will call for short-hand purposes, this "Whitewater loan"?

Mr. RITTER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And what was the condition of the loan when you came?

Mr. RITTER. To the best of my recollection, that it had been extended; but I thought that there were some documents still needed to be finished up on the extension at that time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me that there was a problem with the documentation, and that this was a loan that you felt was among those that needed some attention?

Mr. RITTER. In general, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there also a problem with the fact that there was no evidence that income from the sales of the lots was being used to reduce or pay off the loan?

Mr. RITTER. Not at that time, I didn't notice that. Later on, I think.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Tell us what you noticed about that later on.

Mr. RITTER. Well, since I'm off on the first date, I am not sure exactly when it was, but it must have been around 1982 that somewhere along the line I discovered that there were some differences that had occurred to the loan—to the ownership of the property. And the other is that there were some land sales, or I thought there were at that time. I know there were some other land sales on property close by that seemed to catch my attention that some property was being sold, and possibly there were some contracts that were in force at that time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Can you explain a little bit more clearly why that would have caught your attention. Was there a concern that property was being sold but the proceeds were not being used to pay off the bank?

Mr. RITTER. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I right in my understanding, that the original principal behind this loan was secured by a piece of property; you expect that the McDougals and the Clintons are going to develop the property and sell it; and you anticipate that the income from the sales is going to be used to pay back the bank; right?

Mr. RITTER. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That is kind of the basic principal of financing development; right?

Mr. RITTER. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I guess you became concerned about two things at some point? Number 1 was lack of documentation? Right?

Mr. RITTER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Number 2 was a concern that perhaps there was property being sold but the money was not actually getting to you?

Mr. RITTER. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you and I know it is a tough question, but in terms of dealing with this loan, at this point were you aware, or was there a point where you became aware that Mr. Clinton was the Governor?

Mr. RITTER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did that affect your dealing with this loan?

Mr. RITTER. I don't believe—well, it did in a way. Probably the way that it would any other really good customer of the bank. I considered it, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me, it kind of made you walk softly, or maybe be a little bit more sensitive on how you dealt with this loan?

Mr. RITTER. Very much so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were the loan payments frequently past due?

Mr. RITTER. There was a lot of work to be done on it. I don't recall exactly when it was past due, but it seems to me that when it was due for renewal that the renewals were not made at the time that they should have been, either due to a lack of documentation or a lack of proper monies being paid for interest.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In connection with these renewals, I guess that would be at the end of every year or so there would be a requirement to renew the loan. You have indicated that there were some difficulties with that. Did you ever have a direct contact with either of the Clintons in connection with this loan?

Mr. RITTER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. With whom?

Mr. RITTER. Both Mr. Clinton and Mrs. Clinton, at one time or another.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you tell us about those?

Mr. RITTER. The first that I recall would have been a contact with Mrs. Clinton and Mrs. McDougal early on in my career at Citizens Bank. I don't remember whether James McDougal was with them or not at that time, but I do remember the two ladies coming in, and I do remember the preparation to make sure that we looked pretty attractive as a bank to both of them. It was an event that would have been hard not to remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Tell us what happened? Did they both come in together?

Mr. RITTER. Yes, sir. However, I can honestly tell you that I don't remember exactly at that period of time—it has been quite awhile back—whether it was to renew a note, or—but I am sure it was—and I believe it would have been somewhere about 1981 or somewhere in there. I remember where I was sitting in the middle office of the bank at that time. I remember the two ladies being attractively dressed, and Mrs. McDougal was hard to miss in those days, too. Other than that, I remember renewing the note and getting the signatures and a lot of cordialities, and good-bye.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did they—

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ritter, excuse me. I didn't catch that. Did you say this was in 1981?

Mr. RITTER. I don't remember exactly, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. About 15 years ago?

Mr. RITTER. Around there.

Senator SARBANES. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Ritter, you said there was a second time or a second occasion when you saw Mrs. McDougal and Mrs. Clinton together?

Mr. RITTER. Well, I thought I had, but that's a possible mistake. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On the occasion you do remember seeing them together, did you have a discussion with them about the actual terms and conditions of the loan?

Mr. RITTER. Yes. At one time we discussed—and the one time I do remember is the time where usury had been changed. In Arkansas there was a relief from the original usury statutes which made us charge 10 percent at that time. I remember renewing the note at that time, or extending the note, or modifying it, whatever you prefer, and the rate of interest would have been higher—and I would have to see the records, but I have not referred to them—the rate of interest would have been significantly higher, going from say a 10 percent loan to a 17 or 18 percent loan.

I remember the discussion about it. There was a little bit of humor that went with it. After all the work that was done on changing the usury statute, we have to pay this higher rate of interest? But I assumed at that time it was more of an in-jest type of thing.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who said that?

Mr. RITTER. I don't remember if it was Mrs. Clinton or Mrs. McDougal, but I think it was Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it is clear to you, at least in your discussions with Mrs. Clinton, you had discussions about the amount of interest; she was aware of the terms of the loan; she was aware of the interest rate; and you had a conversation with her about it?

Mr. RITTER. I presume she was aware of all that. I believe that she signed the document in my office, along with Mrs. McDougal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mrs. Clinton appeared generally knowledgeable to you about financial matters?

Mr. RITTER. There was nothing that indicated differently.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am going to refresh your memory from your deposition at page 52:

Question: Did both ladies appear to be knowledgeable about the loan, about the real estate deal?

Answer: They seemed to be, and they seemed to be knowledgeable about the interest rate and everything else.

Mr. RITTER. That is true.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you also have telephone contact with Mrs. Clinton about the loan?

Mr. RITTER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On how many occasions?

Mr. RITTER. I don't remember how many, but at least once. And through her staff occasionally there was documents that were needed, so the follow-up would have been through there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me that you thought Mrs. Clinton and Mrs. McDougal were both pretty sharp? They were fairly knowledgeable about real estate and the transactions?

Mr. RITTER. I had that impression; yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now still focusing on this loan, what is the concept of loan-to-value?

Mr. RITTER. Well, my opinion, of course, is probably different than my predecessors simply because I viewed it as speculative land for one thing, and probably would have expected more of a downpayment than that, but be that as it may we had it and now it was time to move on with it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What you have alluded to is your assessment of this loan when you came in; that the value of the collateral was not really sufficient for the amount of money because it was based on a speculative—there was speculation involved in the underlying venture?

Mr. RITTER. As best I can remember back—it was been a long time ago—was that at that time, in my opinion, based on the sales price is what I was going on, it had nothing to do with a pure appraisal of the property or anything else—it was just 10 percent down, which was rather low for speculation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You would have wanted a bigger downpayment?

Mr. RITTER. Normally, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that the downpayment itself had been borrowed from another bank?

Mr. RITTER. Not that I remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I correct that fact would have increased your discomfort about the loan?

Mr. RITTER. Probably.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Denton, let me get back to you and the downpayment, the $20,000 unsecured loan. There came a point in 1980, that you became disturbed because the loan became due and no principal had been paid. Is that right?

Mr. DENTON. I think I became concerned before 1980. As I recall, it would have been the first annual renewal in June 1979.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Tell us about that?

Mr. DENTON. The original note was a 1-year maturity. There had been non-reduction at that maturity date. I had known that the loan was for equity in a real estate transaction. It became evident that the project was not generating sufficient cash to service the first mortgage as well as the equity loan. I then began to press Mr. McDougal for reductions in the indebtedness. I was told that funds were not available for that reduction. And as a result of that, in June 1979, I then came to place the note on shorter maturities, as I recall, 90 days, perhaps 6 months at that time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then what happened?

Mr. DENTON. Nothing happened. The loan was renewed a couple more times. Each time I began to increase the pressure on Mr. McDougal for reductions and/or a committed repayment program, none of which was forthcoming.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What happened in the end?

Mr. DENTON. As I recall, the last renewal was approximately December 1979, and the note was renewed for an additional 6-month maturity. In the interim, Mr. McDougal had become involved with another investor in an unrelated project in Little Rock, the acquisition of an apartment building and conversion to condominiums. The project was behind schedule and was not selling, so the bank found itself with two loans of Mr. McDougals' involvement that were creating problems. I increased my pressure for solutions to those loans and began asking Mr. McDougal to make other arrangements for liquidation of those loans.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he eventually use money from another source to pay off the loan? You insisted on that?

Mr. DENTON. I was under the impression that—let me backstep one other step. Mr. McDougal had become interested in acquiring the outstanding stock of the Bank of Kingston. It was a small bank up in North Central Arkansas. I, through the bank, had no interest in providing that acquisition loan because of the existing two loans, the apartment conversion and the equity loan with the Clintons.

So I indicated to Mr. McDougal that before the bank, the Union National Bank would entertain the new loan application, that those two problems had to be solved. And as a result of that, the $20,000 loan was repaid; and the loan to McDougal and the other investor was liquidated. I understand it was moved to another financial institution thereby solving our bank's problems with those two loans. We subsequently did provide the financing for the Bank of Kingston.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm sorry. Finish.

Mr. DENTON. I was trying to go back to where I had sidestepped in answering your original question. I was under the impression that the $20,000 loan that was in the name of McDougal and Clinton had been liquidated from the proceeds of a loan to the partnership that was doing the apartment complex development.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it your general impression Mr. McDougal was very good at moving money around and using loans from one institution to pay off money to another institution?

Mr. DENTON. I would restrain from describing it as "good," but he did it very frequently; yes. He was a user of—

Mr. CHERTOFF. I guess we should use "bad at it."

[Laughter.]

Let me ask you about this concept, Mr. Ritter, because we see a little bit of this already of going to different institutions and kind of taking a little here, and a little there, and moving it around. Did there come a point in 1982 that in order to pay off interest charges on the Whitewater loan at the Citizens Bank, that the Whitewater group took out a second loan from Citizens in order to pay the interest on the first loan?

Mr. RITTER. Without referring back to documents or notes, I believe that was correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now tell us about that transaction as best you can recall?

Mr. RITTER. As best I can recall, I believe either Mr. McDougal or Mr. Wade had called and requested an extension of an additional $20,000. I think the pressure might have been prior to that when we had a note due for renewal and I think I was trying to renew the note—and I am recalling back a long way at this time, Senator—

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am not a "Senator," but go ahead.

Mr. RITTER. Oh, I am sorry. The amount of money that would have been due at that time, there was a problem and I do not remember exactly what it was, but there was some reason that it could not be met. There was a request for additional money, and I was not sure that it was going to interest at that time that I recall back, if I had those notes I might be able to tell you a little bit better, but I think from what I have heard, just basically that is where it ended up going.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it an appropriate way to deal with interest on a loan, generally, to borrow money from one source, whether it be at the same bank or another bank, and use it to pay off interest due on another note?

Mr. RITTER. Probably not. Except I could go a little bit further on that. That is, there were certain things that probably occurred back in 1980 that would not occur today. The banking structure was a little bit differently then than now. I think at that time the most they required was identification of that particular event, rather than—it was just a red flag.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Our time is up.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I am going to yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste, but I just want to sort of jump to the end, if I could, for a moment. Mr. Ritter, did these loans get all repaid in the end?

Mr. RITTER. I have no knowledge of that.

Senator SARBANES. Does anyone at the table have knowledge of that?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes. They have all been repaid.

Senator SARBANES. They were all repaid?

Mr. RITTER. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Was all the interest paid on them?

Mr. RITTER. Yes. Every penny.

Senator SARBANES. Every penny was paid?

Senator SARBANES. Then there was a loan that you talked about, Mr. Denton. Did that one get repaid?

Mr. DENTON. The $20,000 loan?

Senator SARBANES. Right. I guess that is it.

Mr. DENTON. I referred to several loans, sir.

Senator SARBANES. I guess the $20,000 loan. Did that get repaid?

Mr. DENTON. I can answer the question. The $20,000 loan was repaid.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Good morning, panel.

Mr. Burge, let me start with you because, chronologically I guess you come first. The loan that you have testified about was made some 18 years ago. Is that correct?

Mr. BURGE. That is correct, 1978.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At the time, at the Bank of Flippin, what was the interest rate being charged on commercial loans of a similar nature?

Mr. BURGE. Ten percent.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was the loan which was taken out with respect to the Whitewater property made at market?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir, it was.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In that respect, Mr. McDougal and Mr. Clinton—who was not at that point Governor Clinton—were charged the same rate as other commercial borrowers?

Mr. BURGE. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What was the term of the loan?

Mr. BURGE. Well basically, it was a 6-month note with a debend feature.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was for 6 months. Was that the normal practice at the time with respect to a commercial loan?

Mr. BURGE. At our bank it was.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is that because, under the laws of Arkansas, the usury laws prevented banks from making higher-interest loans that would encompass a greater span of time? Was this short-term 6-month commercial loan a way of ensuring that if interest rates rose, the bank would be protected by increasing the rate of interest charged the next time the loan would be renewed?

Mr. BURGE. Partly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was that the normal course for commercial lending practices at that time, in Arkansas, and at your bank, for short-term loans to be made and then renewed on a more or less regular basis?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir, they were.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Your bank made loans to others who were in the real estate development business. Is that correct?

Mr. BURGE. That's correct, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So in that respect, this loan was not unusual?

Mr. BURGE. No, sir, it was not unusual.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And as we have heard, the loan was eventually paid off; correct?

Mr. BURGE. That's the way I understand it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now with respect to you, Mr. Denton, is it correct, sir, that Mr. McDougal had a prior history of borrowing from the bank at which you were then employed?

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And, Mr. McDougal had, I take it, up to that point in 1978, repaid the loans which were made to him?

Mr. DENTON. Had either repaid, was in the process of repaying, or prospects were adequate that the absence of repayment was of no concern.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was your bank that participated with Mr. Burge's bank in taking the second part of the larger loan; correct?

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That loan was put before the Bank's lending committee, I take it. Was there an executive committee that met at your bank and passed on loan applications?

Mr. DENTON. Not at that time, no.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who participated in the approval of that loan?

Mr. DENTON. That loan was handled by a department that is referred to as the "Correspondent Banking Department."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That would have been run past the president of the bank?

Mr. DENTON. That's handled through the Correspondent Banking Department. Mr. Howard Qualls was the Senior Vice President in charge of that department.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. He had the authority to sign off on that loan?

Mr. DENTON. That is accurate.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So at some point, all of this at your bank merged, the $20,000 and—what was the exact amount of the participating amount?

Mr. DENTON. Ninety-one thousand-and-some-odd dollars.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thereafter, these loans were renewed. Were they renewed at market, do you know, Mr. Burge?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is there anyone here who has reason to believe that the rates that were charged were somehow out of line with commercial loans at that time?

Mr. PROCTOR. No, sir. At this time the rates were all pretty much to the maximum because we were under the usury. So everyone had to pay in the State at that time, is I recall, gentlemen, about the maximum rate to be able to support the other type lending that we did.

[No dissent is heard.]

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Hearing no dissent, let me ask this question, Mr. Ritter. Did there come a time when interest rates rose dramatically?

Mr. RITTER. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did they, indeed, rise above 20 percent?

Mr. RITTER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This resulted, therefore, in the increase in the interest rate charged on this loan?

Mr. RITTER. It did, based on the discount rate, or the window rate, rather, than the true prime rate.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, all of the rates rose pretty much in proportion at that time.

Mr. RITTER. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So, there was a greater squeeze on all developers who had borrowed money in order to finance real estate development projects. Is that correct, sir?

Mr. RITTER. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I take it that across the board in Arkansas as well as the rest of the country that put a squeeze on businessmen who had to borrow money and then pay off loans at a higher rate than they had initially bargained for when they first took out the loans?

Mr. RITTER. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So it is not unexpected that there may have been some late repayment of loans across the board in Arkansas at the time?

Mr. RITTER. That is also correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, Mr. Denton, you are not at this time employed in banking, are you, sir?

Mr. DENTON. No, I am not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chertoff made reference to your relationship with the Independent Counsel's Office. Let me ask you, sir, whether you have been prosecuted by the Independent Counsel?

Mr. DENTON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Were you granted immunity from prosecution?

Mr. DENTON. I was granted use immunity.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was that at your request?

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That immunity provides that you will not be prosecuted for anything that you reveal to the Independent Counsel other than for perjury or obstruction of justice. Is that correct?

Mr. DENTON. That is accurate.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask you, prior to your deposition that was taken recently, whether you have had any contact with any staff member of this Committee?

Mr. DENTON. I have not, prior to yesterday.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let's go through the chronology starting in, I guess it goes all the way back to 1978. Let's start with the Union National Bank. According to the Pillsbury Madison Report, that loan was repaid on June 23, 1980. Is that correct?

Mr. DENTON. That is my understanding; yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to the Citizens Bank loan, that loan was repaid in 1992. Is that correct, Mr. Proctor?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What we have had here is a confluence of two panels, which makes it a little bit more difficult. Yesterday, we only had one witness, so that was easier to keep straight. Today, we have two panels merged into one. So we will have to deal with this as best we can. Mr. Proctor, when did you come into the picture with respect to these loans?

Mr. PROCTOR. I started at the bank in November 1981, but did not actually start working on the loan until approximately 1983 or 1984.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In your view, did this loan receive special preferential attention and treatment?

Mr. PROCTOR. I think that any time a small bank in our community has a loan outstanding to, in this case, something of a celebrity, that would receive attention from both internal officers as well as people outside of the bank, as auditors or examiners would look at that loan, as well.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With that in mind, the fact is that it would receive special attention both from auditors and the higher-ups at the bank. Can you say whether there was any favors given, whether there was any impropriety associated with the making or the monitoring of these loans?

Mr. PROCTOR. Well, of course, now, I was not there when the loan was made, but I will discuss the monitoring of it. We were forced to—not "forced," but we maintained a loan probably better than most loans in the bank because we knew of the attention that it would receive as far as file memos, attempting to keep it properly documented with financial statements—so, yes, we paid very close attention to it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So if I understand what you are saying, other borrowers might have been cut a little bit more slack because they might not have been receiving the same kind of scrutiny?

Mr. PROCTOR. I would agree.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, Mr. Denton, you are not suggesting that other unsecured loans were made at the time of this $20,000 loan 18 years ago, are you?

Mr. DENTON. To other parties, other borrowers?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes. Other borrowers.

Mr. DENTON. Oh, an unsecured loan is the easiest type of loan to make.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And $20,000 was not a huge amount of money for an unsecured loan in your banking experience?

Mr. DENTON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At the very time that the unsecured loan was being made to Mr. McDougal and Mr. Clinton, your bank was making other unsecured loans to other borrowers?

Mr. DENTON. That's accurate.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This loan was repaid in a timely way?

Mr. DENTON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It wasn't repaid in a timely fashion?

Mr. DENTON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What was the problem?

Mr. DENTON. The loan was renewed numerous times with repeated requests for reductions which were not forthcoming.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Pardon me?

Mr. DENTON. The loan was renewed a number of times. There were requests for reductions which were not forthcoming, so that certainly could not be described as repaid in an orderly fashion.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, let's break this down. First of all, was all the interest ultimately paid on the $20,000 loan?

Mr. DENTON. Yes, ultimately.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was all paid, at market rate?

Mr. DENTON. I don't know—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have reason to believe it wasn't, Mr. Denton?

Mr. DENTON. Yes. Knowing the history of rates in Arkansas, I am confident that it was not at market some of those times.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. All right, let's break it down. Which ones do you claim were made below market?

Mr. DENTON. Sir, I don't know what national rates were in the particular time. I haven't researched it. I certainly could, but I just don't have that—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Why are you using national rates? Was that the basis upon which your bank made the loans?

Mr. DENTON. Yes, sir. Basically we structured credits based on the cost of funds which were acquired in the national bank system.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If you are making an allegation here that there was favoritism, let's get chapter and verse.

Mr. DENTON. I don't recall making an "allegation." I answered your question about if it was national rates.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, I asked you whether it was made at market rates.

Mr. DENTON. Market rates.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. By "market rate," I mean, the rate your bank was charging contemporaneously with the renewal.

Mr. DENTON. I charged the legal maximum of 10 percent. The loan was granted at 10, which is the absolute greatest rate the bank can charge at the time. It was renewed at that time. Subsequently, there was Federal override legislation that permitted some greater rates. As I recall, even those overrides did not permit a rate equal to, which would have been market rate.

Senator SARBANES. Now are you setting out the market rate as something different from the legal limit rate in Arkansas?

Mr. DENTON. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. You could not charge the market rate; right?

Mr. DENTON. No, sir.

Senator SARBANES. You could not charge these people anything other than the legal limit rate; is that correct?

Mr. DENTON. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Or anyone else?

Mr. DENTON. That is accurate.

Senator SARBANES. No other borrower.

Mr. DENTON. That is accurate.

Senator SARBANES. These people were charged the legal limit rate, were they not?

Mr. DENTON. That's accurate.

Senator SARBANES. Just like any other borrower?

Mr. DENTON. Not just like any other borrower, but they were charged the legal, maximum rate permitted in Arkansas at that time.

Senator SARBANES. That is right. So your reference to "market rate," is really irrelevant because it wasn't available to you under Arkansas law to charge the national market rate; correct?

Mr. DENTON. No, sir. That's incorrect.

Senator SARBANES. Why is it?

Mr. DENTON. Many times persons were not given access to credit because of those restrictions, the Arkansas restriction. That was a big argument in the State that subsequently permitted an override of that Constitutional limitation.

Senator SARBANES. No, no. But if you made a loan, the maximum rate you could charge on that loan was set by the Arkansas law, was it not?

Mr. DENTON. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Wasn't that true in every bank?

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. In Arkansas?

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. All right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And your bank was in the business of lending money; is that correct?

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Are you suggesting you lost money every time you made a loan to someone at the maximum rate?

Mr. DENTON. Yes. Would you ask the entire panel that question?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. I will be educated. Everyone was losing money by lending money at the maximum rate?

Mr. RITTER. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson, did you have a moratorium and try to close your doors so that no one else could do business?

Mr. PATTERSON. For a certain period of time there was a position that Arkansas was at a disadvantage with the Nation, everybody in Arkansas, and probably we would not have made loans to somebody out of the State of Arkansas, and we would have only serviced loans that were people that we realistically thought were our customers.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK, and this——

Mr. PATTERSON. But this was for a window of time, which——

Senator SARBANES. That was only when the national rates moved up to very high levels. That lasted only for a limited period of time. Is that not correct?

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, I agree with the theory that you are saying. We were at risk for a far longer period of time, but this loan was the same as all other loans was what I thought we were trying to ascertain.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That is the point. Whether there was favoritism because a rate was charged below what others were paying? As this process of renewing the loans on a short-term basis went forward, and as rates eventually came down, I take it you went back into a profitable mode with respect to your lending practices.

If on the other hand, the banks in Arkansas had stopped extending credit, had called all the loans of all of their business clients on commercial loans, there would have been pandemonium.

Mr. PATTERSON. There was pandemonium.

Mr. BURGE. Our economy became very stagnant.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. All right——

Mr. PATTERSON. Let me explain that Federal funds got to 30 percent, and our customers were charged 10. But that has nothing to do with what I understanding we were discussing here.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When these loans were taken out in the first instance, the rates were more in line with your traditional rate of return. Correct?

Mr. PATTERSON. At the concept, the loans were in perfect line, in 1978.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that the increase in the national interest rates at this time was not anticipated at the time the loans were taken out, and certainly not as a way to somehow borrow money below a national rate and make some kind of a killing. Is that fair to say, Mr. Burge?

Mr. BURGE. Yes. Yes, you are correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If someone had had a crystal ball to anticipate that rates would go from 10 to 21 percent, they could have made a lot more money than blowing money on the Whitewater Development project which lost money.

Mr. PATTERSON. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ritter, I guess you have sort of underlined the problems of going back 18, 15, 17, 13 years ago. It was a pretty big deal for you to become the CEO of the bank at the time.

Mr. RITTER. It was, but the date was 1980 and not 1979.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So even with respect to an important day in your life, you were a year off, no one is faulting you on that. This, to me, sort of underlines the fact that we go after these dates with a scalpel expecting that people can have a precise recollection of events that happened so long ago. That is just not the way the world works, and not really the application of common sense to what were transactions of a far more mundane nature back 2 decades ago.

While I am with you, Mr. Ritter, is it correct that your contacts with Mrs. Clinton and Mrs. McDougal as to the way that the loans were renewed suggested nothing improper or unprofessional in terms of your understanding of the transactions, or your involvement personally?

Mr. RITTER. Right. Number 1, they were limited. Number 2, it just was not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Burge, did you understand when the loan was taken out that Mr. McDougal was the primary partner involved in this transaction?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Your dealings were primarily with McDougal, I take it?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Had you had any contact with Mr. Clinton prior to the time that this became a matter that the news media took an interest in?

Mr. BURGE. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So all the time up until then, all of the contact you had was with Mr. or Mrs. McDougal?

Mr. BURGE. Primarily Mr. McDougal.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. All information of a financial nature that you received was from Mr. McDougal? Is that correct?

Mr. BURGE. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ritter, you dealt primarily with Mr. McDougal, as well, I take it?

Mr. RITTER. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you recall whether either Mr. or Mrs. Clinton ever called you directly with respect to the status of the loan?

Mr. RITTER. I do not recall either one of them calling me directly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you recall any occasion in which you have a specific recollection of discussing a loan with Mr. Clinton?

Mr. RITTER. I do remember getting a signature from him one time that we needed on a document. To the precise time, I can't tell you when.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But other than that, you do not recall on that occasion that there was any extensive discussion or even substantive discussion about the loan itself, other than—

Mr. RITTER. Not the loan itself, because I think that all we were needing was documentation at this point.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson, do you recall ever meeting with Mr. or Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Your dealing, to the extent you had any dealings with the principals, was with Mr. McDougal?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And Mr. Denton, your dealings were solely with Mr. McDougal?

Mr. DENTON. Yes. But I had one brief meeting with Bill Clinton, however.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. According to the Pillsbury Madison Report, Mr. Chairman, at page 24 of the April 24, 1995:

So far as anyone can determine from the available documentary evidence, little Whitewater financial information was transmitted to the Clintons. However, the Clintons did sign documents in connection with various loans and loan extensions. Letters to or from the Clintons were relatively infrequent. Available documents suggest that the Clintons wrote or received less than 20 letters pertaining to Whitewater between the project's inception in 1978 and the end of 1986.

Now in terms of the approval of the initial loan, Mr. Burge, is it correct, sir, that in your view Mr. Clinton's involvement was of no material importance?

Mr. BURGE. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. As far as you were concerned, the point of contact and the individual with whom you were concerned, in connection with making this loan, was Mr. McDougal and his record?

Mr. BURGE. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At the point when the loan was made, is it correct that Mr. McDougal had enjoyed a good reputation in terms of being profitable in real estate development?

Mr. BURGE. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of his creditworthiness at the time, did you have information that led you to believe he was a good credit risk?

Mr. BURGE. Past performance.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That led you to conclude that he would be a good credit risk, I take it?

Mr. BURGE. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The confidence, in connection with the making of the loan, was borne out by the fact that the loan was ultimately repaid?

Mr. BURGE. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I take it that during this period of time there were a substantial number of business failures of commercial loans and loans which could not be repaid?

Mr. BURGE. I'm sure there was.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ritter, I take it that is the experience that you saw in Arkansas, as well?

Mr. RITTER. I guess I was not listening as closely as I should.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At the time that the Whitewater loan was being serviced and repaid, were there other commercial loans, substantial loans, which led to bank failures throughout the United States, loans that were not repaid and that caused the banks to lose substantial funds.

Mr. RITTER. I presume that is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There were all kinds of workouts, reductions, extensions during this period of time?

Mr. RITTER. There could have been. I am just not knowledgeable about the rest of the world.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson, can you comment on that?

Mr. PATTERSON. I believe the record would show that there were many failures in the Nation.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Proctor.

The CHAIRMAN. Richard, what are we doing?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir. This—

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, come on.

Mr. PROCTOR. —was typical of the time.

The CHAIRMAN. You know, this is well beyond now. Counsel, do you have more relevant questions to ask? The history of the bank failures during that period of time is well documented. Do you have a particular question as it relates to the record to ask these witnesses? We know it. It is well established. Please, let's try to stay on the issues that you want to develop. Continue.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. I am not going to permit us to continue to waste time. I will tell you, if we are going to be asking about bank failures during this period of time, let the record demonstrate you can put anything in there that you want and we will take it. You can read it publicly.

There were numerous bank failures; numerous people did not pay. If you want to address related issues as to the status of the loan, how it came about, whether or not it was kept, that is only appropriate. But, please, let us attempt to move this thing along.

Senator SARBANES. Well, Mr. Chairman, I think it is important to draw from these witnesses the important testimony that, while this loan was in the end paid in full, there were other loans that were made at the time by these respective bankers upon which there was default.

The CHAIRMAN. We take note. There were many of them.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I think it is relevant, Mr. Chairman, in this way. There has been questioning as to whether every payment was made on time; whether every dollar that was collected from the sale of property was paid to reduce the principal. It is as though we are looking in a vacuum. We are not looking in a vacuum. We are looking at very tough economic times for borrowers in Arkansas and other parts of the country. When we focus on whether there was an extension of 3 months or some such period of time before interest payments were caught up, I think we have to look at that in the context of what else was going on. And in that respect, I think it is quite relevant, most respectfully, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The point has been well made. Can we move on?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let's move to your side, if we may.

Senator SARBANES. The red light is on.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Faircloth.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR LAUCH FAIRCLOTH

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Denton, Senator Simon asked you a question earlier about whether the President asked you to do something illegal, indirectly. Could you elaborate on that, sir? What did he ask you to do, and through whom?

Mr. DENTON. Sir, I was attempting to make sure I understood the question. I did not recall that it was limited to being illegal. My thought process was that many times transactions occurred that the instructions or requests did not come directly from Bill Clinton. As an example, the $20,000 loan that Union Bank made came to me through an emissary, and perhaps through a couple of them before I received it. That was my point I was attempting to make. In my opinion, that was not an acceptable banking practice in extending that loan.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Who asked you to extend the loan?

Mr. DENTON. An emissary for the owner of the bank asked that that loan be granted.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. An emissary for the owner of the bank came to you an executive officer of the bank?

Mr. DENTON. That is correct.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Let me follow this now. The owner of the bank sent you word that you ought to extend this loan?

Mr. DENTON. That is correct; yes.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. As executive of the bank, you didn't think the loan ought to be extended?

Mr. DENTON. I'm sorry? I did not understand the last words.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You did not really think this loan should be extended?

Mr. DENTON. The point I make, in distinction, sir, is that had it been an arms' length loan by a client walking in off the street, I likely would not have granted that loan.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. In other words, if the order had not come down from the owner of the bank, you would not have extended the loan; you would have foreclosed?

Mr. DENTON. Well, a number of circumstances would have entered into that picture. The loan, with the information that I had in hand and with the financial information of the borrowers that was supplied to me, under those conditions that loan would not have been granted.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Who came to you?

Mr. DENTON. It was either Gene Smith or Paul Berry who were employed by the bank and worked directly for Herbert McAdams, the owner.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did the person that came to you, Gene Smith or the owner himself, ever tell you why he especially wanted this loan extended? The reason to make an exception here?

Mr. DENTON. On this particular loan, sir?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Yes.

Mr. DENTON. As I recall, the emissary indicated to me that the loan was to be granted because Bill Clinton was an up and rising star in the political arena in Arkansas.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Was he the Governor at that time?

Mr. DENTON. No, sir, he was the Attorney General.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. So it was granted for political reasons. Are you aware whether Mr. McDougal was promised or given anything by Bill Clinton in exchange for the fundraiser that he held?

Mr. DENTON. No, sir, I am not aware of any direct consideration that changed hands.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. How about indirectly?

Mr. DENTON. I do know that Mr. McDougal operated in that manner. It was not uncommon for favors to be passed about by the parties involved.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Bill Clinton?

Mr. DENTON. Bill Clinton's emissaries, I again had no direct contact with Bill Clinton. I had, as I recall, perhaps three very brief contacts with Bill Clinton, and certainly no extended discussions regarding any subjects.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But it was common practice for favors to be granted?

Mr. DENTON. I don't know how common it was. It certainly was not infrequent.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Do you think the leasing of the space by the Arkansas Development Finance Agency was connected to this?

Mr. DENTON. I think that it was one of those favors that was extended, yes. I have no evidence that would support that. It is simply an observation that I would make.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Are you aware of whether Mr. or Mrs. Clinton had a loan with Madison Guaranty or were a co-signer or a guarantor of any loans there?

Mr. DENTON. I think I have been asked not to address Madison-related transactions, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. By whom?

Mr. DENTON. By the Office of the Independent Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator—

Senator FAIRCLOTH. That concludes me.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bennett.

[No response.]

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Murkowski.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR FRANK H. MURKOWSKI

Senator MURKOWSKI. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate you accommodating my timeframe.

I am going to refer a question to Mr. Burge relative to an appraisal that is dated August 1978. I believe it bears your signature listing the value of 1,100 acres at $242,000. I wonder if this exhibit is available for Mr. Burge to look at and comment on?

The CHAIRMAN. Do we have a copy of that for the Minority?

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Burge, are you familiar with this?

Mr. BURGE. I don't think I have a copy of that, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Can we see if we can get them? We will get copies made and see if we can proceed along another line.

[Document distributed.]

Senator MURKOWSKI. What I am interested in, Mr. Burge, is a description of the land that was taken as collateral. As I understand it, there was an effort by the two banks involved, Union and Citizens, because of an overline. Who was the lead bank on the credit, Mr. Burge?

Mr. BURGE. Our bank was, Citizens Bank & Trust.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Citizens Bank. So you took what, $91,000 or $90,000, or something of the original loan. Then you had a participation with Union?

Mr. BURGE. That's correct.

Senator MURKOWSKI. But you are the lead bank, so you basically sold them $91,000 of the credit. Right?

Mr. BURGE. That is correct.

Senator MURKOWSKI. And you maintained the files and the documentation?

Mr. BURGE. That is correct.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You did the appraisal?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir, I did.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Describe the land you used as a basis for the loan? In other words, you took a mortgage, a deed of trust, I assume?

Mr. BURGE. There was a mortgage. The property was approximately 230 acres on the White River. It also fronted part of the Crooked Creek area.

Senator MURKOWSKI. What did it have on it?

Mr. BURGE. It was timber. Very little vacant or open——

Senator MURKOWSKI. Commercial timber?

Mr. BURGE. Not in the sense of pine. It was hardwood.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, you are a banker. Would you consider it improved or unimproved property?

Mr. BURGE. It was unimproved property.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Unimproved property. What is the policy of your bank on loans on unimproved property?

Mr. BURGE. My current bank?

Senator MURKOWSKI. No, when you were with Citizens?

Mr. BURGE. We were a rural bank, and we lent on any type of real estate around that was——

Senator MURKOWSKI. Improved or unimproved?

Mr. BURGE. Improved and unimproved.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Did you require any equity contribution?

Mr. BURGE. Yes. We always did.

Senator MURKOWSKI. And in this case, was there an equity contribution?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. From what source?

Mr. BURGE. From the principals.

Senator MURKOWSKI. The principals? You didn't question where the principals got that money?

Mr. BURGE. No, sir, we didn't.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Where did the principals get that money?

Mr. BURGE. I found out like everybody else that they borrowed the money from Union National Bank.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Now let me turn to Union National Bank.

Senator SARBANES. Just to be clear, Frank, when did you find that out? Here recently?

Mr. BURGE. I read it in the newspaper.

Senator SARBANES. You didn't know that at the time.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Let's go to Union Bank because Union took $91,000 of the loan as a participant and basically purchased that and reimbursed Citizens. Right?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Did you have a copy of the appraisal of the land? I am talking to Mr. Denton, I believe.

Mr. DENTON. Sir, I directly was not involved with that loan. It was handled by the bank in which I was employed, but I had——

Senator MURKOWSKI. Who was involved in that loan?

Mr. DENTON. The documents reflect a Morris Jackson handled the paperwork, and accepted and signed the loan participation.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Have we taken the deposition of that gentleman?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Of Marlin Jackson?

Senator MURKOWSKI. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, we have, Senator.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Do we have any—

Mr. COLE. Excuse me? Morris Jackson? I think there is a misunderstanding here.

Mr. DENTON. I think Morris Jackson is deceased.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Obviously, we did not take his deposition.

Senator SARBANES. I don't think we took his deposition.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Obviously, we didn't.

Mr. Denton, let's get back, specifically, to the loan that your bank participated in. Were you at the bank at that time?

Mr. DENTON. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You knew of the purchase of this loan from Citizens?

Mr. DENTON. The minutes reflect that it was reported in one group that I attended. I do not specifically recall it.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, you were the Senior Lending Officer at that time. I assume as a Senior Lending Officer your responsibilities were to review the loans of the bank and report to the Board of Directors. Those loans would be reflected in the minutes of the Board of Directors.

Mr. DENTON. That is accurate.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So are you suggesting you have no knowledge of the purchase?

Mr. DENTON. No, sir. I am suggesting that I was not involved in the origination of the loan, and I do not recall what documents were supplied by the other loan officer.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Your initials do not appear on the note? Is that correct?

Mr. DENTON. I am sorry, sir?

Senator MURKOWSKI. Your initials do not appear anywhere on the note?

Mr. DENTON. That is accurate.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Are you aware of the $20,000 loan that was made for the downpayment by your bank?

Mr. DENTON. Yes, sir. I was responsible for that.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You were responsible for that.

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Isn't it rather unusual that two banks would work together, and the originating bank would not know that the purchasing bank had made a $20,000 loan so that the terms and conditions of the downpayment would be met? Obviously your bank, Union, had knowledge that you were purchasing the balance of the loan for $91,000 from Citizens Bank. Then, in order for that to qualify, you made a separate $20,000 loan for a downpayment on unimproved land. We all know something about rural banking and risks and downpayment and equity, and this obviously was a way to get around that, was it not?

Mr. DENTON. I am not sure what the intent was, sir. I was not involved.

Senator MURKOWSKI. The intent was to get around the equity requirement. We all know what equity is. Somebody puts up something out of their own pocket. Between your two banks, what you folks did was 100 percent financing. Is that not correct?

Mr. DENTON. That was the end result, yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You financed the entire purchase price. So neither the Clintons nor the McDougals had a nickel in it.

Mr. DENTON. That is accurate.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Is that good banking practice?

Mr. DENTON. It could be. It happened frequently.

Senator MURKOWSKI. It happened frequently? Is it good banking practice?

Mr. DENTON. I think history would—

Senator MURKOWSKI. What would the Examiners say if they came into your institution and you said that there was $20,000 equity put in, and they found out that you had loaned that equity? What would they do to that loan? Would they classify that loan?

Mr. DENTON. Probably not, in a bank of our size and a loan of that size.

Senator MURKOWSKI. How about a bank like Citizens?

Mr. DENTON. Very likely, yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. They would classify it?

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I mean, it is no secret here, gentlemen. This was an effort to make an accommodation, to get around the equity requirement, and finance at 100 percent. The two banks split it up. You know it as well as I do. Do you deny you are suggesting that is prudent or regular banking practice you say that that is regular banking practice, appropriate banking practice? You did it all the time?

Mr. DENTON. No, sir, I did not say we did it all the time.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, when did you do it and when did you not do it?

Mr. DENTON. From 11, 12 years ago, sir, I cannot cite incidents. Frequently 100 percent financing did occur. The 20 percent loan that Union Bank made was as a result of a requirement that the Bank of Flippin had for equity. I as the handling loan officer was not aware that the Bank of Flippin was involved in that transaction at the time. I was told at the time that the balance of the purchase price would be carried by the seller. Our loan was made in June 1979, the $20,000 loan. The loan participation closed in August and sold to Union Bank some 2 months later.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, don't you—

Mr. DENTON. It is entirely possible that the plan changed and the Bank of Flippin made the loan, as opposed to the seller.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Isn't it customary when you initiate a participation that you disclose fully to the purchasing bank the circumstances surrounding the credit, including the appraisal, financial statements, and any other information? I guess I would ask, Mr. Burge, did you know that a $20,000 unsecured loan was made by Citizens Bank when you sold them the participation?

Mr. BURGE. May I correct your question for a second? The $20,000 loan was made by Union National Bank and not the Citizens Bank.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That is correct. Did you know of that loan?

Mr. BURGE. No, sir, I did not.

Senator MURKOWSKI. When did you find out that was the equity contribution and it was by a loan by Citizens?

Mr. BURGE. I read it in the periodical.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You read it again in the paper.

Last question. The appraisal, which I believe you have a copy of at this time?

Mr. BURGE. Not yet.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Not yet?

Mr. BURGE. I can see it on the screen.

Senator MURKOWSKI. OK, well, is that your signature, sir? It appears to be?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. It is dated August 7, 1978, and it lists the value of the land at $242,000 or $1,100 an acre; is that right?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir, that is correct.

Senator MURKOWSKI. What is that land and what is the value of unimproved land, $1,100 an acre? Is it relative to unimproved land or sales of similar property?

Mr. BURGE. That property, and Senator, we are talking about 18 years ago, in my mindset and how we did appraisals, if you will look at that, that is a one-page appraisal.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Yep.

Mr. BURGE. I cannot tell you how I came to the conclusion of those terms or that amount.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Did your bank have a policy of loaning a certain percent of the value on real estate loans?

Mr. BURGE. Our bank basically looked at acquisition only.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Acquisition.

Mr. BURGE. Acquisition cost.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So they were basically purchasing this for $200,000. You appraised it at $242,000, so you appraised it for more than acquisition cost?

Mr. BURGE. That is correct.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So you do not always look at acquisition cost. What percentage did you generally have in your bank relative to how much value you would loan? Obviously, you had a policy in your bank. You did not loan 100 percent. You loaned 60 percent, 80 percent. It depended on whether it was improved land or unimproved land, is that not correct?

Mr. BURGE. Just again, basically most of our real estate loans for single-family housing, for farms, for lots, we did 90 percent lending of that during that period of time.

Senator MURKOWSKI. This is unimproved property, so what was your policy?

Mr. BURGE. That was 90 percent.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So you would go 90 percent on either improved or unimproved land?

Mr. BURGE. Exactly.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Both the same.

Mr. BURGE. If my memory serves me correctly.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Boy, that is an extraordinary policy of leniency. You would not show more favoritism to improved property and loan more than on unimproved property? That just does not make sense.

Mr. BURGE. We were in a period, we were a new bank, we were trying to grow our bank. We were trying to cultivate customers. Our policies may have been a little more lenient at that time, but that is what made us grow.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So this was not something that was unusual. This was your general policy. You would loan up to 90 percent whether it was improved or unimproved?

Mr. BURGE. We did it to every customer.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, I will not go into the consequences of that, but I would like to ask Mr. Denton, what was your lending policy on unimproved and improved property? You are a senior loan officer and you had this credit and this appraisal available. Did you have the same policy regarding what you loan on improved land, vis-à-vis, unimproved land?

Mr. DENTON. As a policy, 50 percent would have been the established policy, without considerations to the net worth and repayment ability of the borrower.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Fifty percent on unimproved property?

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Then explain to me, one more time, why in this case you went far beyond that. Maybe you did not know where the $20,000 came from. Well, you knew where the $20,000 came from. You knew that the equity was borrowed, so you did not follow your standard lending practice of lending 50 percent of value. In this, it was 100 percent. It was the purchase price.

Mr. DENTON. Yes, sir. We did not apply our normal lending standards. This was a correspondent banking relationship. We had an agreement from the selling bank that our bank would be repaid first, so really we had a 50 percent loan on this transaction, actually less than 50 percent advanced against the collateral.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, if you look at the collateral, do you agree that it was worth $242,000?

Mr. DENTON. $230 per acre for river front property in that area was certainly conceivable at that time. There have been a number of projects that have been quite successful in selling off raw acreage to investors who would buy it for future retirement purposes.

The payments on an acquisition of land of this price was very modest and it was done frequently. McDougal had been very successful in prior years in doing this on other parcels. So it did not really shock me.

Senator MURKOWSKI. This was given a value of $1,100 an acre.

Mr. DENTON. I believe it was $1,100 acres valued at $230 an acre. I could be in error. I have not seen this appraisal prior to it just being handed to me.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Patterson, before we go—

Mr. PATTERSON. I believe it is $1,100.

The CHAIRMAN. Wasn't it 200 acres at $1,100 an acre?

Mr. PATTERSON. It was 230 acres at $1,100 an acre.

Mr. DENTON. I stand corrected. I had not seen the document.

The CHAIRMAN. So it was $1,100.

Senator MURKOWSKI. It is on the screen in front of you, Mr. Denton. Do you see that screen? That is what I am looking at. I guess I am just still curious——

Mr. DENTON. The lights are so bright, I can't see that screen.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I'm sorry, I'd be happy to give you this one.

Mr. DENTON. I was given one. I passed it on.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That kind of contradicts your lending policy if you are saying $200 to $300 or thereabouts an acre and this is $1,100 an acre.

Mr. DENTON. No, sir, it does not contradict my statement about our lending policy of 50 percent.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Take me through the 50 percent one more time because you had to share this collateral with the other bank?

Mr. DENTON. No, sir, we did not have to share it. Our loan was for $91,000 it was purchased, and it was a collateral value of, according to the appraisal, of $242,000, so that is something less than 50 percent.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Something less than 50 percent. But the other bank has $91,000 and you have an additional $20,000 that you are lending unsecured.

Mr. DENTON. Yes, sir. We did not have any right to the collateral on the $20,000 unsecured. That was a policy loan based on other considerations. We were discussing, as I understood your question, about our bank's policy regarding the lending.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I am trying to tie in this collateral with a $91,000 loan from your bank, another $91,000 loan from the participating bank, the availability of having $242,000 collateral, and your statement that you would loan on 50 percent, which is 120, but you have to share that with the other bank.

Mr. DENTON. No, sir. Our bank purchased that participation on the basis that we would be repaid first.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So you had first call on all the collateral and the other bank was sitting there with none; is that right?

Mr. DENTON. That was the arrangement. It is not particularly uncommon in the correspondent banking in the sale of loan participations.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Yet, your bank, by making the unsecured loan, caused the loan to conform to equity requirement and your bank loaned the equity, $20,000, unsecured, as you stated, for other policy reasons.

Mr. DENTON. I'm sorry, I did not hear the first part of your question. I was answering your last one.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, let's try it again. Your bank initiated the sale and the development of the loan because to qualify, someone had to make the equity contribution. In other words, this would not have stood the scrutiny of your examiners. There had to be an equity contribution. The other bank did not know that you had made a $20,000 unsecured loan so that the loan would qualify. Then you sold a participation to the other bank without disclosing that there had been——

Mr. DENTON. Sir, I am with the purchasing bank, Union National Bank.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You made the $20,000 unsecured loan.

Mr. DENTON. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. The $20,000 unsecured loan was the equity requirement. Both banks were under the assumption the $20,000 made the whole package qualify. It was an effort to purchase roughly $200,000 worth of land with an equity requirement of $20,000. So one bank loaned $20,000 unsecured, and then the two banks split a participation. The fact that your bank initiated that for policy reasons is perhaps your own business. But, it is extraordinary that you would have two participating banks selling and repurchasing, with a first in/first out, without full disclosure to both banks. There is certainly an obligation to since, you know, to put this package together, there had to be an unsecured loan made to the principals because they did not have the equity. That is what I find so extraordinary. I happen to know something about the banking business.

Mr. DENTON. It sounds as if you do, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I do. I know what stands the scrutiny of Federal examiners, State examiners, board of directors, and what is regular and irregular. I am just going to put it in general terms. You know, the way this loan was structured was an extraordinary convenience to the borrowers. Would you acknowledge that?

Mr. DENTON. Yes, sir, it was a policy loan from the standpoint of Union National Bank.

Senator MURKOWSKI. The fact that there was not the disclosure to Madison, no excuse me, Union, and no disclosure to Citizens or back and forth in any event, you know who you are, is disturbing to this Committee. It clearly shows in the light of day, that there was an extraordinary accommodation made to qualify it by lending $20,000 unsecured, to the McDougals and the Clintons. I assume your rate was 10 percent which was the maximum allowable at that time under the usury. You could not have a floating rate or an adjustable rate loan. Is that not correct?

Mr. DENTON. We could have had a floating rate or an adjustable rate, but it could not have exceeded—

Senator MURKOWSKI. My last question is, can you enlighten me as to why this loan was made. Why was this extraordinary accommodation made? Was it because of the borrowers?

Mr. DENTON. Yes, at least one of the borrowers.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Which one?

Mr. DENTON. Bill Clinton.

Senator MURKOWSKI. All right. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I understand your testimony, Mr. Denton, your bank was protected because you had a first out on the loan. Essentially, the securitization of the loan was more than adequate to cover the loan amount from your bank as participating bank?

Mr. DENTON. Sir, again, I was not involved in the direct negotiations of that participation transaction. Documents within Union Bank reflected that that loan participation was sold or purchased on the same basis as was standard policy, that the purchasing bank would be out first, and that statement was recorded in the loan application, as I recall. It was submitted to the Directors Loan Review Committee at Union Bank.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Your bank was how many miles away from Mr. Burge's bank?

Mr. DENTON. I am sorry, sir, I do not recall ever having been to Flippin, Arkansas. I may have passed through, however.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Over 100 miles away?

Mr. DENTON. Yes, sir, certainly over 100 miles, I believe.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The value of the real estate in that area would be more within the expertise of the Flippin Bank, would it be fair to say?

Mr. DENTON. That is certainly fair to say.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You certainly do not sit here thinking that you have a recollection of what waterfront or other undeveloped property in Northern Arkansas was valued at 18 years ago?

Mr. DENTON. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. As far as you were concerned, it was a prudent loan from your bank's point of view, and in view of the arrangements that you have testified about in terms of the securitization. Is that fair to say?

Mr. DENTON. No, sir, I do not recall saying that I thought it was a prudent loan. I did not make an issue of it. I accepted it and I based that acceptance on accommodation arrangements.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Your bank was well secured under the accommodation arrangements?

Mr. DENTON. I felt we were not unduly at risk.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let's talk about what you do not know, but are willing to offer opinions about. That is, in response to Senator Faircloth's questions regarding whether there were favors exchanged as the result of a fundraiser held at Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan back in 1985. Let me ask you whether you have any firsthand knowledge about the leasing procedures at the ADFA, the bidding process that resulted in the leasing of retail space in 1985 by an Arkansas State agency of Madison Guaranty?

Mr. DENTON. I have no knowledge.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You have no knowledge whatsoever with respect to the bidding process, the criteria that was employed, the rate that was asked, the space requirements of the agency? You know nothing about this, isn't that so?

Mr. DENTON. I had exposure in other incidents involving State leases but for the Arkansas Housing Authority I had none, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You were asked about whether there was some kind of an arrangement whereby a lease, which happened to be entered into a year before the fundraiser, had something to do with favoritism, Mr. Denton. That was the question put to you. And I want to explore, other than your relationship with the Independent Counsel's Office, your relationship with the facts as you sit here and give your opinion.

My question is whether you have any knowledge whatsoever of what the requirements were for the lease, the bidding process, the amount of space involved, the length of the lease, the amount charged for the lease?

Mr. DENTON. I have no knowledge.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson, let me ask you about some questions that have been raised with respect to loans made to developers in recent history in Arkansas, back in the late seventies.

Is it not the case that there were instances with which you are generally familiar where more than 100 percent of the purchase price of property was reflected in loans made to developers?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Can you explain why that was?

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, to explain each loan, you would have to look at each loan, but in general, there would be a lot of development costs, such as surveys, abstract work. A lot of times you would have to put in electricity. We have a misunderstanding on, you know, we have raw land, but if you have a lot in the middle of Dallas, Texas, and you make somebody a loan for a Holiday Inn on it, obviously you might lend them more than the lot's value. So I think you have asked me a very broad, open question, and I have answered it sort of. If you want to specific something, well, maybe you would come at me that way.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At the time, individuals such as Mr. Wade and Mr. McDougal had a track record in terms of development. You were familiar with the fact that these kind of developers in Northern Arkansas were able to borrow 100 percent and sometimes more of the purchase price of raw land that they were going to develop and sell out in parcels. That is all I am asking.

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that mystery, at least in terms of Northern Arkansas in 1978, loan appraisal of purchase price to the amount of the loan was not that unusual, and maybe we have covered that area now.

Mr. Proctor, because these loans were rolled over on an annual basis, or sometimes even shorter than an annual basis, we have heard that the first loan was made for a 6-month duration, but in view of that, was it the case, in your experience, that borrowers frequently did not submit updated financial statements every time the loan was rolled over, although that might have been a technical requirement?

Mr. PROCTOR. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Could you estimate the percentage of the loans back in the mid-1980's that First Ozark had in its portfolio that were undocumented to the extent of not having fully updated financials accompanying the loan portfolio?

Mr. PROCTOR. During that time, somewhere around 40 percent. Senator SARBANES. Forty percent, did you say?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I take it, you would do your best to try to keep those portfolios current but given the fact that these were all short term rollovers, it was not unusual for there not to be up-to-the-minute updating on financials. Is that correct?

Mr. PROCTOR. That is correct. And 40 percent is in dollar amount of loans, not in numbers, for the record.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now at your bank, what was the risk rate associated with what we have been calling the Whitewater Development loan?

Mr. PROCTOR. The time I worked on it, it was risk rated a three.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What period of time was that?

Mr. PROCTOR. From 1983 until the time it paid off.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Can you tell us what a three rating signified?

Mr. PROCTOR. The standard loan with normal risk.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This is three, six is the top?

Mr. PROCTOR. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And what percentage—

Senator SARBANES. Is six the worst?

Mr. PROCTOR. Six would be the worst.

Senator SARBANES. So six would be the worst, and one would be the best?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. OK.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At the relevant times, could you say, associated with your familiarity with this loan, what percentage of the bank's loan portfolio would have been in the three category, the same as the Whitewater loan?

Mr. PROCTOR. Now or then, either one, it averages around 80 percent, 85 percent.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the Whitewater loan was carried, in terms of its risk, along with the vast majority of the loans covered in the bank's portfolio?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. These would not be loans in which default was contemplated. These would be normal loans at normal risk. Is that correct?

Mr. PROCTOR. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the officers of the loan committee voted unanimously to renew the loan in 1987. Is that correct?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And at that time, is it fair to say that neither Mr. or Mrs. Clinton was involved in the process as far as dealing with your bank?

Mr. PROCTOR. At that time, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When did you first come in contact directly with Mr. or Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. PROCTOR. Well, I have never spoken to Mr. Clinton any time during the loan process. I have met Mr. Clinton a couple times, but never discussed the loan. The person that I spoke to, Mrs. Clinton, I spoke to her in early 1990 approximately.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In what connection was that?

Mr. PROCTOR. Financial statements or renewal of the loan. We had a conversation about that on the telephone about two different occasions.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me put in front of you the personal financial statement of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton that was submitted in 1987, I believe. It is in your package. Do you have it in front of you?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir. March 8, 1987.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right. There has been quite a lot of discussion, some of it highly inaccurate, in the popular press and other publications about this particular statement, so I would like to take you through it.

Mr. PROCTOR. OK.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This statement is dated March 1987; correct?

Mr. PROCTOR. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was received by your bank; correct?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, on March 26th.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It purports to be a statement of condition as of March 8, 1987.

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the total amount of assets and notes, real estate assets and notes receivable was $100,000. Is that correct? I am looking under the assets column. Within that column, you see in accounts or notes receivable of $50,000?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Real estate partial interest $50,000?

Mr. PROCTOR. Oh, OK. I see where you are looking, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now would you take that to mean combined interest, the interest in the Whitewater project, if you had made such an assessment at the time?

Mr. PROCTOR. I reviewed this statement at that time, but did not make that assessment.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. As we look at it now in terms of the Whitewater investment, as an asset on a financial statement. If we look at that combined total, as perhaps the total amount, that is either $50,000 or $50,000 plus some figure, because real estate is listed at $50, and accounts and notes receivable are listed at $50, which could mean amounts sold off or property sold off of that investment and the like.

Then we look at the other side, the second page. Do you remember, and this is not meant to trip you up, and it is not a trivia question, but was this a two-sided form or two separate pages, if you recall?

Mr. PROCTOR. I remember it being a front and back, 1-page form.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There is a pretty good indication by the fact that at the top of the second page, it says, "both sides of this statement must be completed" indicating it is a two-sided document?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now if we look at the debt due to banks, savings and loans, finance companies, or others on that second page, we see that an amount of $70,000 is indicated.

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir, I see it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If you applied that amount to the $100,000 that I predicate for a valuation of Whitewater, both in terms of the real estate and notes receivable, that would leave a net valuation in what amount?

Mr. PROCTOR. Thirty thousand dollars.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That would be the $30,000 for the Whitewater investment. How much was outstanding on your loan to the Clintons and McDougals at that time?

Mr. PROCTOR. In March 1987, I do not have that. In January 1987, it was $53,000 it looks like, no, $52,135.80.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In a sense, this $70,000, if it reflects your loan, it says First National Bank of Ozark; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You're pretty sure of what the amount was. This looks like it's a very conservative list of the amounts outstanding in terms of debits.

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. A financial statement. It would appear to you, would it not, that the valuation, both in terms of the real estate and subtracting the loans outstanding, was pretty conservative?

Mr. PROCTOR. I would agree.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It's certainly not an inaccurate representation of the situation as to the interest in the Whitewater investment.

Mr. PROCTOR. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I see my red light is on, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Denton, I just want to summarize with you or make sure I understand your point of view on this, and then move on in time. You indicated to Senator Murkowski that this initial loan, this $20,000 loan which, unbeknownst to the people at Citizens Bank, was actually the source of the downpayment, was given to the McDougals and the Clintons because the owner had passed down word through a lobbyist, a bank lobbyist, that he wanted to have Bill Clinton get the loan. That's essentially correct; right?

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were also asked, was this loan later treated like other loans. I wasn't sure I got your answer. Was this loan later treated like other loans?

Mr. DENTON. I believe Mr. Ben-Veniste asked me if the loan was performing and if it was satisfactory, and I indicated that it was not satisfactory.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was unsatisfactory about it?

Mr. DENTON. The loan matured without payment.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was the loan called at that point?

Mr. DENTON. No, it was not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why not?

Mr. DENTON. For the same reasons it was granted.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Which is what?

Mr. DENTON. A policy loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say a policy loan, you mean?

Mr. DENTON. It was an accommodation to one of the borrowers.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You mean a favor?

Mr. DENTON. Right. I'm not accustomed to using that word in the extension of credit, but one could.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then the next time the extension came due, there was another accommodation made to the borrower?

Mr. DENTON. As I recall, after the first maturity, there were serious discussions and urging by me to effect a reduction.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What happened?

Mr. DENTON. There were none for some period of time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then eventually they wound up taking money from some other source and paying out the loan; right?

Mr. DENTON. Yes, the loan was liquidated.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That happens to coincide with the point at which Mr. McDougal was coming back to your bank to ask for a loan to buy the Bank of Kingston?

Mr. DENTON. That's what I recall, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it's fair to say in kind of layman's terms that the bank was kind of strung along on this loan until Mr. McDougal finally needed to come in for more money for the next venture, and then he found some way to pay it off?

Mr. DENTON. I did not use the word strung along.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's my word, but is the concept right?

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In response to Mr. Ben-Veniste's question about the housing lease, you said that you had some exposure to other leases. What would those leases be?

Mr. DENTON. While at Union Bank, I had occasions to review leases from State agencies or Federal agencies that were located in the Union Bank Building which was owned by Union Bank. In addition, I frequently extended credit to other entities that owned buildings that negotiated State leases with various departments. I had a personal friendship at one time with an entity that was head of the buildings, I believe it was referred to as the Director of State Buildings for the State. So I had some exposure to leases. I knew it was quite lucrative to various landlords, particularly in the office building arena, to negotiate leases with agencies, State agencies, as well as Federal agencies.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's because when you get a State agency as a tenant, you know the tenant is there, can pay the rent, and isn't going to go bankrupt?

Mr. DENTON. It's a desirable tenant, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You also indicated earlier, I think in response to Senator Faircloth's question, that there were certain people that you regarded as Mr. Clinton's emissaries. I think that was your term. Who did you mean by that?

Mr. DENTON. I don't have any particular individuals identified. Most of the staff members. I know that Jim McDougal certainly served in that capacity at one time. Steve Smith served in that capacity at one time. Both of those parties I had rather extensive dealings with.

We extended the loan to another staff member. I don't recall his name. It was for the purchase of a condominium in Little Rock, when he first moved to Arkansas to serve on Clinton's first staff. So there were a number of those individuals that would run errands for, and that certainly was not unique to the Clinton administration, it was common practice in my experience.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Ritter, I want to turn to you and pick up on this notion of this interest funding loan, because this is another situation where someone raised the question earlier about whether these loans were paid off. That of course begs the question, because the real question is what were they paid off with. Was this a situation of essentially borrowing from Peter to pay Paul, a kind of endless chain which is like somebody's called it a daisy chain or something like that.

So let me ask you, Mr. Ritter, to focus your attention on one of the documents in your package. It is a loan document on Citizens Bank and Trust Company, Loan Number 10295, date November 1, 1982, for $20,000. If you look at the screen, you may see what the document is.

Mr. RITTER. I have it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says the purpose of the loan is advance of funds for the Whitewater Development Company. Is this a loan that you later learned or realized was essentially being used to pay the interest on that original note?

Mr. RITTER. I honestly am not sure at this point.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, let me refresh your memory. Let me go to your deposition at page 86. Can we get a copy of the deposition to the witness. I think you may have it there. At page 86, at the very top—do you have it?

Mr. RITTER. No. Just a second. I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At the very top, it says:

Question: What do you recall of the interest funding loan, the $20,000 loan that was made on November 1, 1982?

Answer: Well, I'm not sure how much I recall. I recall some things in general. I'm not sure that at first it was called an interest funding loan. I thought it was some additional funds they needed for something initially and then later on I think it turned into basically to pay the interest in our original note.

That's accurate?

Mr. RITTER. Yes, it is. Prior to this time, there had been a request by Jim McDougal of myself, and I can't tell you how much before that, and it was basically he was requesting some funds for something different. I turned it down very quickly, simply saying, Jim you're just really not one of our customers and you have a bank of your own and you have your own sources through your correspondent banks, and let it go at that. And it was basically for the same amount, the same, around $20,000.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then he came back and got this loan as an advance for Whitewater Development. And as you say in your deposition, essentially that was used to pay the interest on the note?

Mr. RITTER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you understood, at this time, that there was a cash flow problem here, and that Whitewater was having trouble making its payments on the note. In fact, you later learned they had actually borrowed money in order to pay off?

Mr. RITTER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Wasn't it Chris Wade, the real estate broker, who also came in? He kind of pushed you a little bit to make this loan?

Mr. RITTER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Ritter, would you agree that during the period you were at Citizens Bank, you had a recurrent problem getting financial statements from the Clintons?

Mr. RITTER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was that a matter of concern for you?

Mr. RITTER. It was always a matter of concern to finish the documentation on notes, and basically we seemed to have an ongoing problem with that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you try, did you urge them, either directly or indirectly, to provide you with that information?

Mr. RITTER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And were they responsive?

Mr. RITTER. It always took awhile. You would call and everybody would say, yes, we'll get that to you. Eventually some of the things did come, and we had the things signed and they did come in.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So there were delays and hassles getting those statements; right?

Mr. RITTER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Citizens Bank eventually became First Ozark Bank and then part of Twin Cities, Mr. Proctor?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Dewey, you worked at what originated as Mr. Burge's bank and Mr. Ritter's bank, and then you became involved with Mr. Dewey and Mr. Proctor; right?

Mr. DEWEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So we have the flow. Mr. Dewey, would you agree with me that this loan, this Whitewater loan, was a nuisance and was continually past due at the bank?

Mr. DEWEY. As I remember it, sir, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was something that was discussed at the bank?

Mr. DEWEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Proctor, you would agree with that; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. No, I would not, because I personally handled the loan and Mr. Dewey did not. So he saw it from the outside, yes, the outside looking in, and I guess he saw what I was doing, and he thought maybe that was a burden to me. But I did not see it that way. I thought it was very typical of the loans that we had at that time, during that period in the economy.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me go step by step. Mr. Dewey, there were difficulties getting the financial statements necessary to document the file?

Mr. DEWEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you agree with that, Mr. Proctor?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As a matter of fact, it was something that was discussed because there was particular sensitivity that this was a loan in which the Governor was a participant; right, Mr. Dewey?

Mr. DEWEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is that right, Mr. Proctor?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As a matter of fact, this was discussed at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the bank at one point; isn't that correct, Mr. Proctor?

Mr. PROCTOR. I do not recall any Board meetings where we discussed the loan or documentation per se. We discussed documentation on all of our loans in meetings, but this one was not singled out as a loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, was there a discussion—maybe not with the Board of Directors, but was there a discussion with Ed Penick and Susan Sisk? Who are Ed Penick and Susan Sisk?

Mr. PROCTOR. Ed Penick was President of Twin City Bank at that time, and also Chairman of the Board at First Ozark National Bank. Susan Sisk was a lender at Twin City Bank who assisted us at our bank as well. The discussion with Mr. Penick involved his help in getting a financial statement from both the Clintons and McDougals, but primarily the Clintons.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Proctor, would you agree that there was discussion with Mr. Penick about the fact that there was a problem with documentation and perhaps the need to have someone contact Hillary Clinton directly about it?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's your recollection, as well, Mr. Dewey?

Mr. DEWEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As a matter of fact, Mr. Proctor, that in 1987, there was a concern about an unwillingness to continue to extend this note if you didn't get new financials, if all proceeds were not applied to the note, and that all the contracts for sale were to be maintained at the bank?

Mr. PROCTOR. There were concerns with all of our loans lacking financial statements, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Pull that microphone up in front of you.

Mr. PROCTOR. OK. There were concerns about any loan that did not have a financial statement at that time because we were trying to improve the condition of the——

The CHAIRMAN. He didn't ask you that. He asked you about this specific loan. Go ahead and ask him again.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there a concern with respect to this loan about whether to renew the loan without having new financial statements, a requirement that all contracts be maintained at the bank, and that all proceeds be applied directly to the note?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All proceeds of sale?

Mr. PROCTOR. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And those were made conditions of renewing the loan in 1987; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Dewey, do you recall that as well?

Mr. DEWEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There came a point, Mr. Proctor, where there was particular concern because of the examiners possibly looking at the files of the loan at the bank and seeing that there was inadequate documentation, including inadequate financial statements. Is that correct?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was that?

Mr. PROCTOR. Approximately 1988, between the period of 1988 to 1990.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Wasn't it, 1988?

Mr. PROCTOR. If my memory serves me correctly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that's your recollection too, Mr. Dewey?

Mr. DEWEY. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As a consequence of that, there was specific discussion with Mr. Penick about the fact that this was the Governor's loan and you had to get some financial statements in; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who is Margaret Davenport?

Mr. PROCTOR. Margaret was at that time Executive Vice President at Twin City Bank.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She was also a State appointee to the Arkansas Development Finance Authority?

Mr. PROCTOR. I've heard that, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. A friend of Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. PROCTOR. I've heard that also.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there specific discussion in which Mr. Penick said, well, Margaret and Hillary are personal acquaintances, let me ask and see if she can help you get the financial statement?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, Mr. Penick did offer that assistance, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Dewey, do you remember that as well?

Mr. DEWEY. Yes, sir, I recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Ms. Davenport, in fact, talk to Mrs. Clinton about it?

Mr. PROCTOR. I do not know that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't follow up?

Mr. PROCTOR. We received the financial statement, and that's all I needed so no, I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You got a financial statement in 1988?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir. Well, at the time that Ms. Davenport talked with Mrs. Clinton, if she did, somehow the word got to Mrs. Clinton and we received a financial statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Now look, don't dance around. This is the second time, you know. I'll make the observation. When we ask you a specific thing about whether there was a specific conversation as it related to the documentation, you said, well there was a conversation in general. Then we had to get back. Answer it specifically. There are no trick questions here.

Obviously, we have the depositions and testimony of other people in connection with this, so be candid and forthcoming with us, and we can get done. Go ahead, Mr. Chertoff.

Thank you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The financial statement you testified about was an early 1987 statement. We are now in 1988, Mr. Proctor. I'm asking you whether in 1988—

The CHAIRMAN. Let's be fair to the witness and give him whatever it is that we are going to ask him a question about. So let's refer him to it so that he has a point to look at.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You have the financial statement that Mr. Ben-Veniste just asked you about in his time?

The CHAIRMAN. Can we identify that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is a March 1987 financial statement signed by the Clintons. You just looked at it a moment ago.

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, I had that one, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Let's see if you have it in front of you. Do you have it in front of you?

Mr. CHERTOFF. What's the date on that?

Mr. PROCTOR. March 8, 1987.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We are now in 1988, Mr. Proctor. You testified that this discussion occurred with Ms. Davenport. Did Ms. Davenport report back on her conversation with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. PROCTOR. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you guys just drop the matter of the financial statement?

Mr. PROCTOR. No, we received a financial statement. It is not in the package here, but as soon as I talked with Ms. Davenport, we did receive, or when Mr. Penick talked with Margaret Davenport, we received a financial statement shortly thereafter, within a couple of months.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't you, in fact, waive the financial statements for the McDougals first, and then for the Clintons in late 1987 and mid-1988?

Mr. PROCTOR. The McDougals, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What about the Clintons?

Mr. PROCTOR. That was later on. The dates I don't have memory of but it's in the file.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In your package, I think, there is a request for a documentation waiver for Whitewater Development, a personal financial statements of guarantors and a financial statement on Whitewater, dated July 15, 1988.

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are your initials on that?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, those are my initials, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You requested it?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And was it granted?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your testimony is you got a financial statement after the waiver?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you get it?

Mr. PROCTOR. It was approximately after this date for the waiver. It was sometime later in 1988 if my memory is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You said you had a conversation with Mrs. Clinton, in addition to the conversation that Margaret Davenport had?

Mr. PROCTOR. No, I did not say that. I did not have a conversation with Mrs. Clinton that I can recall around that time period.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At any time, did you have a conversation with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was that?

Mr. PROCTOR. The early part of 1990, latter part of 1989.

The CHAIRMAN. The red light is on.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. How much more time does he need?

The CHAIRMAN. No, no. Senator, take whatever time you need. Senator Sarbanes, it's now your time.

Senator SARBANES. Fair enough. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is there any suggestion that Mr. Clinton or Mrs. Clinton ever knew that the Union Bank loan was overdue or might not be extended, or had any problems? Is there anyone who could respond to that question?

Mr. DENTON. The question was regarding the Union Bank loan?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Mr. DENTON. I would be the appropriate one. I do not recall having any conversations regarding that delinquent status.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No suggestion, no hint, nothing you read in the papers, nothing you got from any friends of yours, emissaries or otherwise, suggested that the Clintons knew that the loan had matured without payment; correct?

Mr. DENTON. I can't respond if the Clinton's received a maturity notice or not. It was standard procedure for our bank to mail coming maturities and then later delinquent notices.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You have no personal knowledge as to whether the Clintons knew about or received any such information; isn't that so?

Mr. DENTON. I am inclined to speculate, if I might, that it's likely Mr. McDougal's address was used for those notices, and I have no knowledge that the Clintons received direct notice.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Denton, can you recall about how long a period of time that the loans were renewed and matured without payment. Let's go to the first time a loan matured without payment.

Mr. DENTON. June 1979.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. How long did it go until it was renewed?

Mr. DENTON. Without documents, sir, I certainly don't know.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was it a year?

Mr. DENTON. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was it 6 months?

Mr. DENTON. Sir, I don't know.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Could it have been a matter of weeks?

Mr. DENTON. It certainly could have been.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When was the second time that the loan matured without payment?

Mr. DENTON. The next maturity, I don't recall when that was. I do remember vaguely that I began to be concerned and shortened the maturities after that first 1-year note.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So what you are saying is you can't tell us whether a matter of weeks or days the loan matured without payment, but then it was paid; correct?

Mr. DENTON. It ultimately was paid in June 1980, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right. So all of this loan matured without payment and so forth. You have no information whatsoever that anyone other than Mr. McDougal, who was supposed to take care of this, was notified about it, or took care of it. What we do know is that the loans were extended and they were paid off?

Mr. DENTON. No, sir, I wouldn't agree with that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They weren't extended?

Mr. DENTON. Yes, sir, they were extended.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They weren't paid off?

Mr. DENTON. Both of those parties made a promise to pay that obligation when it matured, and I held both responsible for meeting that obligation.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I understand that. But at the same time, without a recollection of how long they went without being paid off, they were paid off, and whatever interest was owed was paid, as far as you know?

Mr. DENTON. That's accurate.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let's talk about this question of the financial statements, Mr. Ritter. Financial statements were required to be in the loan portfolio document when loans were renewed. That was a requirement; correct?

Mr. RITTER. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. To some extent, those financial statements were not provided on a timely basis in terms of when the renewals were made?

Mr. RITTER. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In your view, was that a function of whether or not the renewal would be made. The financial statement was there at the moment that the decision was made on whether to renew the loan?

Mr. RITTER. Not really. We already had the loan on the books. I think it was a matter of documentation at that point.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Basically it was a formality, is that so?

Mr. RITTER. We were more concerned about eventually getting them for the regulators.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When you say the regulators, or the examiners, or whoever was sent to look at the loan portfolios, one of the things they looked at was whether there was a current financial statement; right?

Mr. RITTER. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I understand your testimony, given the fact that in Arkansas these loans were constantly renewed and rolled over because they were of short duration, there was frequently a lag between the time that these financial statements were submitted, even after the loans had been rolled over?

Mr. RITTER. That's correct. But there's a little bit more to this. And that is we wanted the financial statements, it was something we need, but they weren't always there at the right time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. As you say, this was a formality and if there was a dramatic change in the financial condition, you would want to know about that. That might well affect your making a further renewal of a loan at a later time, et cetera. But if I understand what you're saying here, all this to-do about whether the financial statements were submitted exactly at the moment that the loan application was considered for renewal was not an important factor in your deciding to renew the loan?

Mr. RITTER. As far as the renewal of the loan, the answer is no. It was an important factor. It was one of those things we just didn't happen to have at that point. There were always promises that we were going to get them. But if there'd been a drastic change, would we have called the loan? Probably so.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK, you had that option. But in terms of the decision that you made to renew the loan back 12 years ago or whenever the heck it was, the fact of having an updated financial statement in hand was not critical to you?

Mr. RITTER. Not critical, no.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You made the loan renewal without it.

Mr. RITTER. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. As you have testified, the decision was made to complete the loan file later, but you would renew the loan?

Mr. RITTER. That's also correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Cole.

Mr. COLE. Thank you, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

I would like to turn to Mr. Burge and Mr. Patterson, if I could. Since this is the first hearing that we've had at this Committee on the Whitewater investment after, by my count, over 50 days of hearings, I would like to get a little more background about the Whitewater investment itself. A great deal has been written about it, but here in our record, this is the first hearing we have had on the subject.

I'd like to start with a little geography, which I think is relevant, and I'll get to why in a moment. The bank that we've been discussing here was in Flippin, Arkansas in Marion County in North Central Arkansas. Is that correct, Mr. Burge?

Mr. BURGE. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Flippin, Arkansas is about 130 or 135 miles north of Little Rock; is that correct?

Mr. BURGE. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Different part of the State?

Mr. BURGE. Totally.

Mr. COLE. Mr. McDougal and Mr. Clinton, at that time, lived in the Little Rock area; is that correct?

Mr. BURGE. To my knowledge.

Mr. COLE. The property that you made the loan on, the Whitewater property itself, was near Flippin?

Mr. BURGE. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Patterson, you were one of the group of sellers of the Whitewater property; is that correct?

Mr. PATTERSON. This is true.

Mr. COLE. If I recall correctly, that was a corporation called 101 River Development Corporation?

Mr. PATTERSON. That is correct. And I need to, for the record, point out that this morning, somebody said that Mr. Wade was in that group. He was not.

Mr. COLE. I want to get to Mr. Wade's role in a moment. But what would you like to say to clarify the record?

Mr. PATTERSON. That he was not in the group.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Wade was not one of the sellers of the property.

Before we get to the actual sales transaction, though, if you two gentlemen, or Mr. Proctor and Mr. Dewey, have knowledge about this, feel free to contribute. At the time we're talking about, which is the late 1970's, and going back to the mid-1970's, had people been making money buying pieces of land in this area along the White River, cutting it up into lots, and then reselling it?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir, they had.

Mr. COLE. In fact, there had been something of a mini-land boom in that part of the State; is that correct?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. A number of people, and Mr. Wade among them, had bought large tracts of land, cut them up into lots and then sold them at substantial profit and made money?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir, that's correct.

Mr. COLE. Your financial institution made other loans for similar kinds of projects with the expectation that the developers would make money and be able to repay the loans?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Patterson, did you deal with Mr. McDougal as far as the sale of this particular parcel, the Whitewater parcel was concerned? Or did you deal only with Mr. Wade?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't for sure a hundred percent remember.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Wade was the agent for the seller on this transaction. He was the real estate agent who handled the transaction?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. COLE. In that capacity, he would have been representing you and the other sellers, the 101 River Development Corporation?

Mr. PATTERSON. It was co-broker to brokerage deal. I believe he would have been, under today's law, representing the buyer. He would not have been in any way really representing the seller.

Mr. COLE. He earned a commission on the sale, did he not?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't know.

Mr. COLE. Let me ask you this. The 101 River Development Corporation owned a large tract of land along the White River that they had purchased shortly before the Whitewater parcel was sold. Is that correct?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. COLE. The Whitewater parcel was one of the tracts that came out of the larger property your corporation had purchased?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. COLE. Did you sell tracts other than the Whitewater parcel?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. COLE. How did the price per acre paid for the Whitewater property compare to the other parcels that your corporation sold?

Mr. PATTERSON. To my memory, it was one of the higher ones.

Mr. COLE. Wasn't it, in fact, the highest price per acre?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't know for sure, but to my memory, it was one of the very best pieces of property. I would assume it would be one of the very highest prices.

Mr. COLE. Do you have any knowledge as to whether Mr. Clinton or Mrs. Clinton ever personally inspected that property before they purchased it with Mr. McDougal and his wife?

Mr. PATTERSON. To my knowledge, they did not.

Mr. COLE. Did it appear to you that Mr. McDougal was taking the lead role for the buyers in the transaction and was working with Mr. Wade?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. COLE. And your group, I take it, was happy to sell the property for the price that they got for it?

Mr. PATTERSON. It was listed for that for all real estate companies in that area, region.

Mr. COLE. Do you recall if Mr. McDougal had other real estate developments in that area, or that part of the State, at the time?

Mr. PATTERSON. I am of the opinion he did. I'm not of the opinion that I knew that at the time, but things have blurred over the last 18 years. I knew he was a developer of real estate.

Mr. COLE. Did other buyers of the other parcels that 101 River Development Corporation sold pay the list price as well, or did they negotiate for a lower price?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't believe that there was any other prices negotiated.

Mr. COLE. So all the parcels sold at the list price to the best of your recollection?

Mr. PATTERSON. I think that's true.

Mr. COLE. Let me ask both of you gentlemen this question. Either or both of you can respond. Was it your understanding, at the time this transaction took place, that the McDougals and Clintons were entering into this investment expecting to make money on the property?

Mr. BURGE. Yes.

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes. And I want to clarify the last question you had. I want to be very careful to make sure that I say exactly what I remember.

Mr. COLE. Certainly.

Mr. PATTERSON. It is very hard to remember those many years ago, and I wouldn't say that there was not some parcel out of all the many parcels that might have had a percent taken off. I don't know of it, but I wasn't in charge of that.

Senator SARBANES. You're talking about, what, 18 years ago?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir. In other words, there were many pieces of property sold. To my knowledge, it sold extremely well and also for what it was listed with all the various realtors.

Mr. COLE. That's helpful. My time is about to expire, but the point that I was trying to get to was that first, based on prior experience in that particular area, that part of the State, developments of this kind had been successful, the developers had made money on them. Am I correct about that?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, at least the ones that did business with us.

Mr. COLE. So this particular investment by the Clintons and the McDougals was not out of the ordinary. The price they paid was the list price that you had for any buyer that might have come along to buy it, and that it was your impression, Mr. Burge the banker, and Mr. Patterson both the seller and as the banker, that this was a moneymaking venture that the Clintons and the McDougals were entering into, or they believed so at the time?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. No one knew at that time, that in the following years interest rates would go up dramatically, land prices in that area would drop dramatically, and developments like that would not enjoy the success that they had in prior years; am I correct?

Mr. BURGE. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Thank you, Mr. Burge. My time has expired.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Proctor, tell us about this 1990 conversation with Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. PROCTOR. Can I clear up something? During my review of our discussion earlier, I was somewhat confused on the dates on those financial statements. The conversation that we had with Mr. Penick and Ms. Davenport, I believe, was 1987 or early 1988, before we received the financial statement. The financial statement that we received, that was dated March—

Mr. CHERTOFF. March 1987.

Mr. PROCTOR. Our meeting was prior to that date, whatever that date was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So after Ms. Davenport intervened, you got the financial statement in March; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And the next time, as we discussed, in July 1988, the next year, when there was a request for a financial statement, you obtained a waiver of that requirement; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes. Let me find that document and go along and try to get back in the position where I can keep up here.

Mr. CHERTOFF. July 15, 1988, there's a waiver of documentation; is that right?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, I have it in front of me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. After that, you didn't get a financial statement; is that right?

Mr. PROCTOR. Excuse me a second. There was a documentation waiver of December 7, 1987. Is that the one you're referring to?

Mr. CHERTOFF. No. We're talking about July 15, 1988.

Mr. PROCTOR. Let me move on to that one. Now, I have it, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. These are your initials; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You requested it?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you got it?

Mr. PROCTOR. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You waived the financial statement, in 1988. This time the financial statement was waived; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you never got a financial statement after that?

Mr. PROCTOR. That is correct, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now tell us about this 1990 conversation with Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. PROCTOR. I can't recall the specifics of that conversation at all. I know it was in regard to either renewal or maybe obtaining financial statements for the file, but I really don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did she call you or did you call her?

Mr. PROCTOR. My understanding was that she had talked with our bank president at the time, and was returning a call possibly to him, and I talked with her. But that's very sketchy because whatever it was, I can't recall it being a big enough issue to really remember the conversation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was that the only time you spoke to her?

Mr. PROCTOR. Maybe one other time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was the other time?

Mr. PROCTOR. It would have been similar, renewal, or there was a time period there we could not visit with the McDougals, wherever they may be at that time, so Mrs. Clinton at that time came in and helped with sending papers back and forth and renewal documents.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You kept giving the renewals?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was the loan paid off?

Mr. PROCTOR. Approximately 1992.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's about 14 years after it was first obtained?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, did you have a conversation with Susan McDougal in which you told her you were considering calling the loan at some point in late 1987 or early 1988?

Mr. PROCTOR. I don't remember the exact time. I did have a conversation with Mr. and Mrs. McDougal at different times were not taking the personal financial statements serious and we did need to have those in file.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you threaten to call the loan?

Mr. PROCTOR. I cannot recall threatening to call the loan. I don't think I ever tell anyone when I want to call your loan. I think that I may have implied that to be able to renew the loan, we need these things.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever take a similar position with Mrs. Clinton in speaking to her about needing these financial statements to renew the loan?

Mr. PROCTOR. It's my recollection, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You said in your conversations with Mrs. Clinton, if you don't give us the financial statement, we need them to renew the loan, that's a condition of renewing the loan?

Mr. PROCTOR. No, sir, not at that time. Because at this time, I'd received the waiver, the loan was paid down to what I consider to be an amount that we could do without the financial statements. And what I mean, by that is if, during an exam, the question would not really be asked if those financial statements were in file because our escrow funds were sufficient enough to pay the loan, even if Mr. and Mrs. Clinton and Mr. and Mrs. McDougal were not on the loan any longer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Take a look at a letter in your package marked February 24, 1988, addressed to Susan McDougal.

Mr. PROCTOR. February 24, 1988?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right.

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, I have it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This letter is to Susan McDougal. It says:

Dear Susan:

As per our earlier telephone conversation, it is once again time for personal financial statements on the McDougals and Clintons and again time for financial statements and income statements on the Whitewater Corporation. Please be sure that all parties sign the appropriate financial statements and forward them to us as soon as possible.

We appreciate your help with this matter. If you have any questions, please feel free to call me.

Was this letter, which refers to an earlier telephone conversation with Susan McDougal, one of those earlier conversations in which you indicated to her you needed the statements in order to renew the loan?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So as of this time period, in early 1988, you are still in the position of needing the financial statements to renew the loan; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But then on July 15, 1988, about 4 months later, you request a waiver of the financial statement; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you ask for the waiver?

Mr. PROCTOR. At this particular point in time, I said, the escrow funds were sufficient. At this time, it could have been right after an exam, and it may be a time when I was trying to clean up documentation and felt, well, that would be nice to have that and later on I decided that we could do without it based upon those escrow funds being available to make the payments.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There was a change in the financial condition between the end of February and the beginning of July?

Mr. PROCTOR. I would say that in the banking business, 3 months makes a big difference.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's not an answer, Mr. Proctor, that's a generalization.

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. If you want to say you remember there was a change in the financial condition of the escrow between February 1988 and July 1988, you can if you're comfortable saying that.

Mr. PROCTOR. No, I did not say there was a change. I said there was a change in the financial condition in the banking industry.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Forget the whole banking industry. We're interested in this particular document regarding this particular loan. In this particular loan, are you prepared to say that between the time you were dealing with Susan McDougal, saying we need to have the financial statements to renew, as late as the end of February, and then the beginning of July when you request a waiver of the documentation, there was a material change in the financial condition of this loan that led you to change your view on it? Is that your testimony?

Mr. PROCTOR. No, it is not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me back up a little. There came a point in time that Chris Wade actually got back involved in this loan; isn't that right, Mr. Proctor?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What he did was he acquired a certain number of lots in return for an airplane? Is that right?

Mr. PROCTOR. And some cash.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. He then assumed part of the obligation for the mortgage; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The Clintons and the McDougals remained obligated secondarily behind Mr. Wade, as to the portion that Mr. Wade had taken; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were all on the hook for you?

Mr. PROCTOR. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then Mr. Wade took responsibility for at least the lots he had taken over. He was selling some of those lots; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did there come a point that Mr. Wade wound up saying to the Clintons that he was going to assume or payoff the entire value of the mortgage?

Mr. PROCTOR. I don't know that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was paid off in 1992?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You know that?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Wade wrote the check?

Mr. PROCTOR. I do not know where the payoff came from.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree that a lot of time had passed, between the time Mr. Wade had gotten involved and the time he finally paid it off?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Patterson, you know something about that, don't you?

Mr. PATTERSON. About what, sir?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I just want to put this in perspective. Here we are in 1992, 14 years after the original loan, and pieces of this loan are still out there and Mr. Wade had been in bankruptcy since before 1992; right?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then he came up with the money in 1992. Do you remember when it was in 1992, Mr. Proctor, that Mr. Wade finally paid it off?

Mr. PROCTOR. No, sir, I don't have the exact date.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it around late spring, April or May?

Mr. PROCTOR. That seems about right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know, Mr. Patterson, how Mr. Wade, a man who is bankrupt, which means, of course, that he has more debts than he has assets, how he came up with the money all of a sudden to pay this loan out in 1992?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Tell us how that happened.

Mr. PATTERSON. We lent him the money at the bank that I worked at.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What bank is that?

Mr. PATTERSON. River Valley Bank & Trust.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where is that?

Mr. PATTERSON. In Lavaca and Barling, Arkansas.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What's your position with that bank?

Mr. PATTERSON. I have no position now, I was the President of that bank.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you own the bank?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir. That's why I'm not having the position there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who owned the bank?

Mr. PATTERSON. A group of people.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who was the group?

Mr. PATTERSON. It's public record. I think there was 5 or 60 people. I'm sorry I can't name their names.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Any prominent people from Arkansas in that group?

Mr. PATTERSON. Define prominent.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know what the word prominent means? Someone like a political figure?

Mr. PATTERSON. There were no political figures.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there any well known business figure, a corporate executive who was in that group?

Mr. PATTERSON. Not by my opinion.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We'll come back to that in a second. Now who made the decision to loan Mr. Wade the money so he could finally pay off that debt in 1992?

Mr. PATTERSON. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How much money did you loan him?

Mr. PATTERSON. None of this is from my memory, it's been told to me through the various investigative people. I believe it was about $10,000.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you come to lend him the money?

Mr. PATTERSON. He was worth the loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I beg your pardon?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's what banks do. He was worth the loan, therefore, he got the loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He came to you?

Mr. PATTERSON. No. Mr. Wade and I not only are not friends and not only are not close to each other, he handled his business by telephone.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Wade has a Whitewater debt, that he's on the hook for, together with the Clintons. You're at this River Valley Bank. How did you come to make him the loan? Did he approach you, either in person or via telephone?

Mr. PATTERSON. He called and applied for a loan. I did not know it was for a Whitewater debt.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You said you were not friends with him?

Mr. PATTERSON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You disliked each other?

Mr. PATTERSON. Probably.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So he picked you to call to ask for a loan?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's true.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew he was in bankruptcy?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, I didn't know he was in bankruptcy in 1992.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He didn't tell you he was in bankruptcy?

Mr. PATTERSON. He had told me he was in bankruptcy.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So he asked you for a $10,000 loan. Did he tell you what it was for?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't remember that he did, no, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he submit a loan application?

Mr. PATTERSON. All these documents would be on record. If you would show it to me, I would tell you if he did it or not. I don't remember specifically, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you do a credit check?

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. Wade, you know, I've been answering your questions specifically. Specifically, he had many loans at the bank. He had cross collateralization on all of the loans. We felt like they were secured. Some of them were quite large. I really don't remember thinking about a $10,000 loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were these loans he had gotten after he went into bankruptcy?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So after he went into bankruptcy, you were loaning him additional money?

Mr. PATTERSON. Not additional. Define additional. I guess I should know what that is also but—

Mr. CHERTOFF. My question to you is this: Were these loans that he had taken out before or after bankruptcy, these other loans?

Mr. PATTERSON. OK. As I remember, Mr. Wade was in bankruptcy in the mid-1980's when a lot of people were in financial trouble. As I remember, he got out of bankruptcy at some point in time after that, but before the bank that I worked at made him any extensions of credit.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So he got extensions of credit from your bank after he had emerged from bankruptcy?

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, after he had filed where anything that he had would have been a new deal. You know, bankruptcy gives people the right to start over and anything that we would have done with him would have been some new deal, as I understand it, starting over.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. We all understand what the theory of bankruptcy is.

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, good.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Jim Blair have anything to do with this loan?

Mr. PATTERSON. I've never met or never heard of or do not know, other than the newspaper, Jim Blair.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To your knowledge, did Mr. Blair have anything to do with this loan?

Mr. PATTERSON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you talk to anybody besides Mr. Wade about making this loan?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't even remember talking to Mr. Wade about making the loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he secure this loan? Was it secured with anything?

Mr. PATTERSON. I feel like all of Mr. Wade's credits at the bank that I worked at were secure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What do you mean, you feel they were secured? I mean, did he execute a note? Was there a piece of property, or some document that said, if he doesn't pay back the $10,000, you have something you can take and foreclose on?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir. Anything that Mr. Wade did not pay back at the bank that I worked at, we would have been able to proceed against him on thousands of acres and hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of assignment of escrow contracts.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But my question for you is were those properties previously pledged as security for other loans?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't know specifically. I answered your question correctly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, my question for you—

The CHAIRMAN. The red light is on, and we will come back to the questions on our time.

Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Very, very briefly, to try to follow where this is all going, and remotely what the theory is of this loan to Wade that has anything to do with what this Committee is interested in. I for one, fail to see it, but as I understand it, there was no blanket policy in the State of Arkansas or at your bank that stated that anyone who ever had been in bankruptcy would be forever prohibited from borrowing money from a lending institution. Is that about right?

Mr. PATTERSON. I would say that's about right.

Senator SARBANES. In fact, the bankruptcy laws are designed to enable people who hit a difficult economic circumstance to begin their economic life over again, which might well include access to credit. Isn't that the case?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes. You're asking my opinion, is what you were asking.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Wade, as you have described, went into bankruptcy in the mid-1980's. He came out of bankruptcy, acquired other assets against which you, in your capacity as President of the bank, made some loans, including this $10,000 loan?

Mr. PATTERSON. As I understand it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They were all cross collateralized if I understand you. You felt you were well protected on those loans; correct?

Mr. PATTERSON. I feel that we were, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Proctor, if I recall your testimony from several hours ago, 40 percent of the borrowers, in dollar value terms, at your bank in the late-1980's, or mid-1980's, did not have current financial statements on file in their loan portfolios. Is that correct?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to the waiver of the requirement, let's identify a document. It's in your loan file. It's your July 15, 1988 documentation.

Mr. PROCTOR. OK.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let's see if we can put that up on the screen. In July 1988, there was a waiver of personal financial statements of the guarantors on the Whitewater loan that was signed by you; correct?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Or initialed by you, and approved by whom?

Mr. PROCTOR. That is the initials of Mr. Wes Strange, the bank president.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The bank president. You gave reasons for that, and I think those should be part of the record. This document is marked PM&S for Pillsbury Madison & Sutro 02263. According to this document, it says the reason for the request is that the payments on the loan are derived from Whitewater escrow contracts controlled by FONB. That's your bank?

Mr. PROCTOR. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The collateral is sufficient to cover the loan; is that correct?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. As of that date, what was the outstanding balance on the loan, if you have records to reflect that?

Mr. PROCTOR. Approximately $50,000 or less at that point. We had a note in 1987, I believe, at $52,000, so it was under $52,000.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The loan had been paid down to $52,000. You're stating that according to your analysis, the payments, that would be the sales made of land from the Whitewater Development, would come through an escrow account required by your bank, and would be utilized to pay down the loan as the sales were made?

Mr. PROCTOR. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You felt that was sufficient collateral and you no longer needed financial statements although, if I understand you, the McDougals, the Clintons, and Wade were all personally liable on the loan as well?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The fact that you didn't have their financial statements did not excuse the individuals, including the Clintons, from liability on the loan.

Mr. PROCTOR. That is very true.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Even when Mr. Wade came into the picture, that was just additional collateral and security for the loan. You did not excuse the McDougals or the Clintons?

Mr. PROCTOR. Absolutely not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If you had excused the Clintons, I'm sure we would be hearing about that in chapter and verse. But, the bank had the additional value of collateral in the personal statement of Mr. Wade, as well.

Mr. PROCTOR. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have nothing further.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Patterson, what do you do now?

Mr. PATTERSON. I'm self-employed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In what field?

Mr. PATTERSON. I farm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You farm?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you leave, what was it, the River Front Bank, River Side Bank?

Mr. PATTERSON. I'm sorry?

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the name of that bank, River Side Bank?

Mr. PATTERSON. River Valley Bank.

Mr. CHERTOFF. River Valley Bank, sorry. When did you leave River Valley Bank?

Mr. PATTERSON. July 1995.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How long did you work at River Valley Bank?

Mr. PATTERSON. Sixteen years.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who hired you?

Mr. PATTERSON. I'd have been hired by a Board of Directors.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there someone in particular?

Mr. PATTERSON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who was the Chairman of the Board of the bank when you were hired?

Mr. PATTERSON. The bank was a total stock sale and acquisition. The new group of people, which was a reasonably large group of people for that community, that made up the stockholders, elected Ronnie Udouj, a man named Larry Hearst, and myself as the directors. It was understood that I would be the President of the bank and Mr. Hearst would be the Senior Vice President. Mr. Udouj was the Chairman of the Board.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where was the bank located?

Mr. PATTERSON. Lavaca, Arkansas.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Which was where relative to Little Rock?

Mr. PATTERSON. It's on the Arkansas River, 150 or so miles west.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who was the largest shareholder of the bank in 1992?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So 16 years earlier, that would be some time in late 1979 or early 1980, you left the bank of Flippin to go to the River Valley Bank?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you come to leave the bank of Flippin?

Mr. PATTERSON. The bank at Flippin asked for me to resign.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They asked for you to resign?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. For what reason?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't know there was a specific reason.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know if there was a general reason?

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, generally there was, we'd been there 8 years, it was a new charter, and that's probably about as a good time factor for anybody to come, start a new bank and stay. After 4, 5, 6 years, why you're usually on your way somewhere else. The bank was selling, there was new people buying, and there were people selling their stock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Ritter, can you help us a little bit. Do you know why Mr. Patterson was asked to leave?

Mr. RITTER. Frank Burge followed him up. I believe he might know better.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm sorry. Mr. Burge, do you know why?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why?

Mr. BURGE. Mr. Patterson and a group of investors were trying to start a savings and loan in a contiguous community.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the significance of that in terms of his activities at the Flippin Bank?

Mr. BURGE. Direct conflict of interest.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is that right, Mr. Patterson?

Mr. PATTERSON. It was one of the reasons.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, we have that straight. I want to come back to this issue of Mr. Wade, and I want to explain why this is important. We have evidence from prior depositions of Jim Blair that this final payment by Mr. Wade that closed the loans in Mr. Proctor's bank was made during the campaign in 1992, shortly after the press had started to raise issues concerning Whitewater. And there's evidence that Mr. Blair went to Mr. Wade and asked him to pay the loan off. Naturally, the question arises, how did Mr. Wade get the wherewithal to do it. Now, Mr. Patterson, is it your understanding that Mr. Wade, in fact, originally started out in Chapter 11 bankruptcy?

Mr. PATTERSON. I'm not aware.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would it surprise you to learn he filed his initial Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition on November 1, 1989?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it wasn't the mid-1980's that he started this, it was the end of the 1980's; right?

Mr. PATTERSON. I'm sorry?

Mr. CHERTOFF. November 1, 1989, is when he filed his Chapter 11 petition. Do you consider that the mid-1980's, as you testified 15 minutes ago?

Mr. PATTERSON. I thought it was. Yes, sir, I thought he filed bankruptcy quite a bit earlier than that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, do you have reason to doubt that he filed on November 1, 1989? That's our research from the file. Do you have reason to dispute that?

Mr. PATTERSON. I wouldn't dispute a filed document, no, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then he converted to Chapter 7. Do you know what Chapter 7 is?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Explain to us what Chapter 7 is.

Mr. PATTERSON. Chapter 7 is ultimate bankruptcy.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ultimate bankruptcy?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And he filed that on November 1, 1990. Did you know that?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir, I didn't know the date.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know a guy name Claude Jones?

Mr. PATTERSON. I'm sorry?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know a fellow named Claude Jones?

Mr. PATTERSON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was the trustee on that bankruptcy. Do you know what a trustee does in a Chapter 7 bankruptcy?

Mr. PATTERSON. Limitedly, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Give us your limited idea.

Mr. PATTERSON. I believe he becomes responsible for the assets.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He manages the assets of the bankrupt estate; is that right?

Mr. PATTERSON. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know when Mr. Wade emerged from the bankruptcy?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that Mr. Jones served as trustee until August 9, 1994?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You still want to tell us that when you made the loan to Mr. Wade in 1992, that he had already emerged from bankruptcy?

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, no, I wouldn't say that because it is not right evidently.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now that throws your whole testimony of 15 minutes ago right up in the air. Let's try it again.

Mr. PATTERSON. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you lend Mr. Wade the money?

Mr. PATTERSON. He was worth the loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you said—

The CHAIRMAN. How can you say he was worth the loan?

Mr. PATTERSON. If he wasn't, then I made an error. I thought he was worth the loan.

The CHAIRMAN. You said, you didn't like Mr. Wade. You weren't friends. Isn't that true?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's true.

The CHAIRMAN. So what did you look at and what led you to believe that he was worth the loan? Here's a man that the records indicate was in bankruptcy, and had no control of any assets. What, if anything, did you have that indicated that he was worth the loan? Because you spit that out before, he was worth the loan. What do you mean he was worth the loan? Did he call you?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. He called you up on the phone?

Mr. PATTERSON. I would assume, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You assume?

Mr. PATTERSON. I never saw him at the bank, so he would have called me, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. He just said, I need $10,000. What did he say?

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, any time he ever called me, he always wanted a loan.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. Anybody tell you to be available to make a loan to him?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's what we did for a living, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did anybody call you and tell you that Mr. Wade was going to call and you should give him a loan?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Nobody. So the phone rang one day. You haven't told us yet for how long.

Mr. PATTERSON. We made him several loans.

The CHAIRMAN. When was the first time you made him a loan?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't remember the first loans that we made at the bank I worked at, at Lavaca, and I don't remember the last loans.

The CHAIRMAN. Wait, the last loan you made to him was this $10,000, isn't that true?

Mr. PATTERSON. I didn't think so but it might have been.

The CHAIRMAN. You mean you made him a loan after that?

Mr. PATTERSON. I thought so.

The CHAIRMAN. Supposing I told you you didn't make him any loans after that?

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, the record would show what we made. We kept a good log of all the loans that were made.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, Mr. Burge, did you take over the bank thereafter?

Mr. BURGE. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You got the records dealing with the loans that were made in these transactions back in 1992?

Mr. BURGE. No, I was at the Citizens Bank.

The CHAIRMAN. That's the one that he moved out of?

Mr. BURGE. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. What's the name of this bank?

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is the Bank of River Valley.

The CHAIRMAN. The Bank of River Valley. Well, we better get the records of the Bank of River Valley.

Mr. PATTERSON. I think that they have been subpoenaed.

The CHAIRMAN. Have we gotten those records? Do we have the records?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I do not believe we have those records.

Senator SARBANES. Is there some bank we missed in Arkansas? [Laughter.]

Mr. CHERTOFF. Evidently they're all connected in some way.

[Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. I have to tell you something. I don't think it is humorous, and I'll tell you why. We are not talking about just some loan or any loan. This is a loan made to a fellow who's bankrupt. You come here with a preposterous story about a fellow that you don't even like who calls up, he is in bankruptcy and you make a $10,000 loan. We ask why, and you say he was worth it. We ask you, what do you mean he was worth it? You say, well, he was worth it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We have the $10,000 loan. That was under subpoena.

The CHAIRMAN. I would like to find out the documentation, if any. Why was he worth it? What collateral did he sign? Did he pay it back? Do you know if he paid it back?

Mr. PATTERSON. I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you still at that bank?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. When did you leave that bank?

Mr. PATTERSON. I left in July 1995.

The CHAIRMAN. You made this loan when, in 1992?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. When, May?

Mr. PATTERSON. I didn't remember making the loan.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't even remember making it?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, I do not. But I'm sure that I made it. I have had enough people tell me that the bank did.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it your custom to make a loan to somebody of $10,000 over the telephone? Did you make it over the telephone?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you get any collateral for it?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't remember. I would have assumed that there would have been collateral.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff, go ahead, see if you can —

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Patterson, I understand that when someone is in bankruptcy, they're not supposed to be engaging in financial transactions without court supervision; right?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, I didn't understand that if somebody had filed bankruptcy that they couldn't go make a new deal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your understanding is that if you are in bankruptcy, you can make all kinds of deals. You can pay this one and pay that one, totally outside of the supervision of the court that's protecting the pre-existing creditors; right?

Mr. PATTERSON. I'm sorry, you need to phrase that for me again.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right, let me ask you this, Mr. Patterson. You told us earlier, when we took our first whack at getting the story here, that there were several loans that had been made by River Valley Bank to Mr. Wade. By the way, where was Mr. Wade's center of operations?

Mr. PATTERSON. At Flippin.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where is Flippin relative to River Valley Bank?

Mr. PATTERSON. Oh, 175, 185 miles.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is Flippin considered to be in the territory of the River Valley Bank?

Mr. PATTERSON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it was an out-of-territory loan?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, it was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were Mr. Wade's other loans from the River Valley Bank out-of-territory loans?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You said you didn't like Mr. Wade?

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, I said we weren't friends, I believe is hopefully what I said. I probably don't like him, though, if you want to say that. He voted against me back when Frank and everybody voted against me, which was fine.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was one of the guys who was responsible for kicking you out of the Bank of Flippin'?

Mr. PATTERSON. He was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. For this conflict of interest?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yet you are the guy he comes to to get a loan when he's in bankruptcy and he needs to pay off a debt on White-water to clean it up?

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, I didn't know it was for Whitewater.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did he tell you it was for?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't really remember. He had several loans at the bank. I believe I've told you that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's not an answer, Mr. Patterson. I'm not a banker, but I've had enough to do with banks that I have to tell you, I have never heard of a banker who gives out a loan and says, well, I don't need to know what you need it for because you've got other loans at the bank. Are you telling us that you didn't ask him what the purpose of the loan was?

Mr. PATTERSON. I would have probably asked him what the purpose of the loan was. I don't remember what he said.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't care enough to figure out what he said?

Mr. PATTERSON. Really didn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know if you got any collateral?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had one telephone conversation with him?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, he called the bank reasonably often.

Mr. CHERTOFF. About this loan?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir. I don't remember him calling about this loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You said you had other loans secured by property. Do you want to change your testimony now about whether those other loans were loans that existed before he went into bankruptcy?

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, I was giving testimony to the best of my memory and recollection. There were loans made at the bank that I worked at and they were on property. And I don't remember how they would work. You would have to take each of the loans and look at it and very carefully see what it was based on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You think that maybe those original loans were made before he went into bankruptcy?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you think maybe the Bank of River Valley, in fact, was one of the creditors in the bankruptcy?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't remember being a creditor in it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Had you dealt with Mr. Wade with respect to these other loans? You were President of the bank at this point?

Mr. PATTERSON. I'd have been the one that he started out with.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you were responsible for making all the other loans to him?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you can't remember——

Mr. PATTERSON. I would have been the one responsible for starting out. If they were a certain size, the Board would have had to voted on it. And depending on the nature of the collateral, some person in the bank would have been responsible for handling it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know some people named Larimore, John and Marilyn Larimore?

Mr. PATTERSON. Say the last name again?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Larimore?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't know them. I know of the name, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you do business with them when you were at the Bank of River Valley?

Mr. PATTERSON. We made them a loan and that was the loan that evidently allegedly it was Wade's asset, it was the wrong purpose of the loan, it was something that was in his bankruptcy. The bank was protected and safe, but he did something wrong, and I believe that was one of the ones that he plea bargained with the Special Prosecutor on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you learn there was a problem with this Larimore loan in the bankruptcy?

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, I didn't know about it being in bankruptcy but the FBI told us and showed us documents on Larimore.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think, Mr. Chairman, the red light is on.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I thought we had the file on this $10,000 loan. We've hit more banks in Arkansas than Bonnie and Clyde. I can't imagine we missed any. Let me ask you this, Mr. Patterson. Did anyone tell you to make the loan to Mr. Wade?

Mr. PATTERSON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This $10,000 loan was made in what year?

Mr. PATTERSON. I believe he said 1992.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Taking from your testimony, you don't have a specific recollection of the circumstances or indeed of even having made that $10,000 loan as you sit here today?

Mr. PATTERSON. I can't honestly say I remember it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But you know that your bank did business with Mr. Wade prior to the making of the $10,000 loan. This wasn't the first loan that you had made to him?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't think so. It seemed like we would have had larger loans made earlier.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I guess the point here is whether someone told you to please make this $10,000 loan to Mr. Wade because that was somehow going to help some political situation in Arkansas.

Mr. PATTERSON. That didn't happen.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Of that you can be certain?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's true.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I've tried to finish it up.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me just pull this down, and I'm going to put it on the Elmo so we don't take the time to copy it, but we can all see it. It's an affidavit. It was actually Ozark Air Services, Chris Wade's company; right?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It appears from an affidavit filed by Chris Wade that the proceeds of this loan shall be used in my business, agricultural pursuits.

Mr. PATTERSON. Oh. So you told me I made Chris Wade a loan and I really didn't make him a loan? Is that what you're saying?

Mr. CHERTOFF. What I'm telling you, Mr. Patterson, is you actually swore to us that Chris Wade called you up and asked you for a loan. Now that happened; right?

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, I didn't know who he asked it for, and I will tell you, you know, I'm answering your questions, but I haven't had those documents. As a matter of fact, my family had to send thousands of every check that I have ever written from 1978 until a very recent time ago, every deposit that I have ever had is now somewhere and all the copies that you have here in front of me, and I don't have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, for the record, we don't have your personal checks and deposits slips.

Mr. PATTERSON. They're not any good anyway.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it you mean the Independent Counsel subpoenaed them?

Mr. PATTERSON. They're gone, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. Does this refresh your memory that you didn't really get a purpose from Mr. Wade? I mean, the bottom line is I don't want to do the whole bankruptcy case here, but you know where we're at, Mr. Patterson. Here it is in the middle of a Presidential Campaign. All of a sudden, Whitewater hits the radar screen. Jim Blair makes a trip up to Flippin to talk to Chris Wade. Suddenly, after 14 years, the loan is retired. Now the question that arises is, how does a man who is in the middle of bankruptcy, which means he has all these people he owes money to, how does he all of a sudden get the money in order to pay off this loan on Whitewater? This has not been a burning matter of concern for the last 14 years or 10 years that you were involved in it.

It turns out that he calls you up. You, a person he doesn't even get along with. You wind up giving him a loan over the telephone. You don't remember why you did it. You didn't know he was in bankruptcy. There's no indication that we can determine in the bankruptcy file that this was reported to the bankruptcy court. You're not even sure who the loan was made to. You don't know if it was secured by anything other than a promissory note. And when you talk about all this other property that's available as security, you're not even sure whether that property was part of the bankruptcy or not.

Mr. PATTERSON. Sounds like when I told you I didn't really remember it, I might have been telling the truth.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Patterson, it sounds like this whole loan was incredibly irregular.

Mr. PATTERSON. No, it wasn't incredibly irregular at all.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You can't even tell us whether this loan was paid back, can you?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, I can't. And you haven't put the document on the screen you was going to show me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I will be happy to take it down to you. You know, this question about this curious conversation with Mr. Wade just emerged here. And I must say, to my surprise.

Senator SARBANES. Maybe you could give him a copy of that document.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We are giving him our copy.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Patterson, they will bring the document to you. Did you do a deposition with this Committee's staff?

Mr. PATTERSON. I'm sorry, I couldn't hear you, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. Did you do a deposition with this Committee's staff?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. When was that, do you recall?

Mr. PATTERSON. February 26, 1996. February 22nd, I'm sorry.

Senator SARBANES. When?

Mr. PATTERSON. February 22nd.

Senator SARBANES. You did your deposition?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Were you shown these documents that you're now being asked about?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir. It was over the telephone.

Senator SARBANES. So no documents were sent to you for you to use in the course of your deposition?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Thank you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just to finish up. Mr. Proctor, was it your understanding that all of Chris Wade's Whitewater lots were pledged as part of his obligation to your bank?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your understanding was that any Whitewater property that Wade had was secured——

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, we'd like to have a copy of the document so we can follow along.

The CHAIRMAN. I'll tell you what we will do. Since it seems to me that we are going to get into some extensive examination of Mr. Patterson, and some documents are not available, we will have some copies made and we will stand in recess until 3:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 1:50 p.m., the Committee was recessed, to reconvene at 3:00 p.m., the same day, Wednesday, May 8, 1996.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

The CHAIRMAN. The meeting will come to order.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

This is where we were when we left. We had a loan which had originally been issued in 1978 by what was then called the Citizens Bank. There remained an unpaid balance on the loan 14 years later in 1992. At that point, the loan was in Mr. Proctor's bank; is that correct?

Mr. PROCTOR. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That Whitewater loan was secured by a number of lots of the property of Whitewater; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was also guaranteed by the people who had the obligation to pay the debt Chris Wade, Bill Clinton, and Hillary Clinton; correct?

Mr. PROCTOR. Well, I was reviewing the security agreement and it appears that the only people that were still liable were the four, the McDougals and the Clintons, the husbands and wives.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were personally liable?

Mr. PROCTOR. Right. And Wade was only, we only released some lots to him subject to our mortgage to be able to sell, so he really wasn't liable on the loan itself.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Other than the property itself as collateral, the only people who were on the hook personally and provided the personal security were the Clintons and the McDougals?

Mr. PROCTOR. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, did you know that Mr. Wade was in bankruptcy in 1992?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Here we are in May 1992, and, as we know from our prior hearings in February, the press had begun to ask questions about Whitewater. There was, I think, an amendment of the Presidential Disclosure Statement shortly thereafter in which the Whitewater loan was added to that Presidential Disclosure Statement for the first time. We have evidence that Jim Blair from Tyson's had made a trip to meet with Chris Wade up in Flippin to ask him to pay off the balance of this loan on which the Clintons and the McDougals were liable, and which were secured by this property.

Now we come to you, Mr. Patterson, you're now with what was called, at one time, the Bank of River Valley, but later becomes the Bank of Lavaca; right?

Mr. PATTERSON. It started out Citizens Bank of Lavaca, and it is now called River Valley Bank & Trust.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. Let's call it the Citizens Bank of Lavaca because I think that was the name back in 1992. You were the President of that bank; right?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In 1992, Chris Wade calls you up; and he's the guy that you've previously told us you don't like. He's the guy who we know is, at this time, in bankruptcy, and he tells you that he wants to take a loan out; right?

Mr. PATTERSON. I believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Does he tell you what the loan is for?

Mr. PATTERSON. Not that I remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We've handed out three documents. On the affidavit that Mr. Wade signs for the company which actually physically holds the lots, he indicates the proceeds of the loan are to be used for business and agricultural pursuits, and there's no more detail there. And I take it you didn't ask for any more detail?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now if both you and Mr. Proctor would look at the other documents I've put before you, you're going to see there are two documents, one from the First Ozark National Bank which is Mr. Proctor's bank, and one from Mr. Patterson's then bank, the Bank of Lavaca.

It looks like to me it's not as you told us earlier, Mr. Patterson. You made a $10,000 loan based on some other property that was used to secure some other loans that were granted at a time that you don't remember. It looks like what happened was the pieces of property that were used to secure the loan at Mr. Proctor's bank were transferred over to your bank, Mr. Patterson, as security for the loan that you gave to Mr. Wade to pay off Mr. Proctor's bank. Is that pretty much what the story is?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then tell us what your memory of the story is.

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, from this morning, you asked me what we had for collateral, and I told you I didn't know. I just didn't remember. And if I didn't remember, I didn't remember.

We then pushed the situation is did our bank give $10,000 away to somebody, and my answer, or my intentional response was that in some manner, it would be collateralized. I knew that we'd had business with these people and their associates and their companies, and you know, we weren't a loose bank, and we had collateral. And as I see now, we had these lots as collateral, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now those lots, Mr. Patterson, happened to be the Whitewater lots which were used to secure Mr. Proctor's loan. You see the other deed of release, when Mr. Proctor's bank was paid off with the money that came from your bank to Chris Wade, the property that was used to secure the original loan from Mr. Proctor's bank moved over to your bank.

In effect, gentlemen, what I'm suggesting to you happened is, the loan was simply moved off the books of Mr. Proctor's bank—and I'm not suggesting from your standpoint, Mr. Proctor, that that was wrong—it was moved off the books of your bank and put on the books of Mr. Patterson's bank. Because what happened is that the property, the loan was paid off to you and the property you held as security was transferred over to your bank and used as security for the loan that was used to pay off Mr. Proctor's bank.

Now it looks like and correct me if you have a contrary memory, gentlemen, what happened here is essentially, Mr. Proctor, your loan got paid off. Then with the property that had been used to secure your loan, an identical amount of money was taken out of your bank, Mr. Patterson, which was used to pay off Mr. Proctor. In effect, the loan moved from Mr. Proctor's bank to Mr. Patterson's bank, with one big exception. When the loan was at your bank, Mr.

Proctor, in addition to the property, it was secured by four individuals personally; right?

Mr. PROCTOR. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I gather that security was a part of the security that made you comfortable with the creditworthiness of that loan?

Mr. PROCTOR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When the loan reappears on the books of your bank, Mr. Patterson, it has the same property as security, but it doesn't have any personal guarantees anymore. In the transition from Mr. Proctor's bank to Mr. Patterson's bank, the same amount of money is secured by the same amount of property, but Mr. Patterson's bank doesn't have any individual signatories on the loan. There's nobody to go after only the physical pieces of property.

Mr. Patterson, you have the mortgage in front of you. Is there anything besides Whitewater Estates and the promissory note of Chris Wade, who is bankrupt, any other piece of property that secures that mortgage for this loan?

Mr. PATTERSON. On these documents that's in front of me?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right.

Mr. PATTERSON. I did not see any.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So I think we have finally, at least to my knowledge, a question has been answered. The question was how is it that the Whitewater loan got paid off? By the way, Mr. Proctor, did you ever talk to Mr. Blair about the payoff of this loan?

Mr. PROCTOR. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And Mr. Patterson, you said you never spoke to Mr. Blair?

Mr. PATTERSON. Don't know the man. I did not speak to him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever talk to anybody from Tyson's Food in connection with this transaction?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is Tyson's a depositor at your bank?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do they do business at the Bank of Lavaca?

Mr. PATTERSON. We've some people that work at a chicken plant that might be owned by Tyson that cashes and deposits checks.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How big was your bank in 1992?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't know, but the bank was $4 million when we started there, and it was $85 million when we left.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's a story for another day.

Mr. PATTERSON. It's a good story I hope you would think.

Mr. CHERTOFF. With respect to this transaction, Mr. Proctor and Mr. Patterson, what we have is this. We started out with what is a loan, the remainder of the Whitewater loan secured by the remainder of the property and the personal guarantees of four people. It moves over to your bank, Mr. Patterson, and when it makes that move, it winds up being the same loan amount that's a loan secured by the same amount of property, but the four people who had liability had dropped out of the transition.

My question to you, Mr. Patterson, is this. Why were you prepared to accept the loan that Mr. Proctor had four guarantors on without requiring those same people to sign?

Mr. PATTERSON. I didn't know Mr. Proctor had the loan or the four guarantors. Did Mr. Proctor say that I knew that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. No. I am just asking you. Did you explore with Mr. Wade what he was using the money to pay off? Did you examine what the money was going to be used for? Did you do any due diligence at all with respect to this man that you were lending money?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Chairman, I think on that note I'm done.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, we've established that Mr. Tyson did not own your bank, he wasn't an officer, he wasn't on the Board of Directors, he wasn't a substantial depositor in your bank. Did you, from time to time, in the relevant years, have a chicken sandwich?

[Laughter.]

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't remember.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Obviously, Mr. Patterson, the connection that Mr. Chertoff is straining to find was not there according to everything you know about the ownership and control of the bank; is that correct?

Mr. PATTERSON. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let me explore this——

Mr. PATTERSON. I'm sorry. I said correct to what? I mean——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Correct to your knowledge that Mr. Tyson did not own, or control the bank, or in some way direct you to make a loan of $10,500 to Mr. Wade in 1988, I guess? I'm sorry, 1992.

Mr. PATTERSON. 1992.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. 1992; correct?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We've established that no one else pressured you to make this loan to Mr. Hale, I'm sorry, to Mr. Wade.

Mr. PATTERSON. Actually the loan was to Ozarks Air something.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ozark Air Services which Mr. Wade was a principal of, I take it.

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, to Ozarks Air. I don't know who the principals were.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Proctor, when your loan was paid off, what was the balance paid off?

Mr. PROCTOR. It was approximately $10,000.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At that time, you had still security for that loan in a number of different lots and assignment of contract; is that correct?

Mr. PROCTOR. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The security for the loan that you accepted as you now see documented, included the assignment of contracts and the remaining lots are listed, 2, 9, 23, 30, 37, 43, and 44.

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't think I had the assignment of any contracts. I'm not sure.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If you check——

Mr. PATTERSON. It was only seven lots.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was seven lots. It says, "Assignment of Contracts" above that. Then in parentheses, it says, "See Contracts."

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir, I see that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Does that reflect there were contracts of sale that were assigned?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In the box marked 4 checked above, it says, "Mortgage, Ucc-1's & Assignments" which reflects a securitization for the loan; correct?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I know that your recollection is not the greatest on this, and that you haven't been shown these documents prior to your appearance here today, but to the best of your knowledge, at the time you made the loan, did you feel that it was adequately secured?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes. Also, this is kind of a garbage terminology. All these people are from an area where there's a lot of assignment contracts. I'm not saying that I didn't know. I'm saying I don't remember, but it would be normal to put Assignment of Contracts and file a Ucc-1 on any of this type of developmental property as a safeguard and filing it in another place, not at the same place as the mortgage would be recorded.

So I'm not saying that, to my knowledge, I didn't remember there being any contracts. Proctor and I never talked. This would not have been, in my mind, the same Assignment of Contracts that you're talking about.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. Well, this would mean there would be an Assignment of Contracts if there was an actual transfer of deed?

Mr. PATTERSON. If there was one.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And you would still be protected by way of securitization?

Mr. PATTERSON. We'd have put that on nearly any mortgage.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have nothing further.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Patterson, let me just ask you one thing. When did you finally leave this bank?

Mr. PATTERSON. In July 1995.

The CHAIRMAN. What were the terms of this loan? When were they payable? How did it have to be paid back?

Mr. PATTERSON. It would have been a demand loan. We could have required it to have been paid any time with 6 month's notice.

The CHAIRMAN. To the best of your ability, you have no knowledge at this time whether or not the loan was actually paid? You don't recall it being paid one way or the other?

Mr. PATTERSON. I believe I saw where it was paid after I left in some of these papers that you've shown me.

The CHAIRMAN. After you left?

Mr. PATTERSON. I believe that's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. OK, so we can't—

Mr. PATTERSON. If I've seen that—

The CHAIRMAN. No, you don't have any recollection of it being paid before, so that's something the Committee then will have to determine. We may have that information. I don't know whether we do or whether we don't.

Mr. Chertoff, any further questions?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just one last question for each of you. Earlier you were read a portion of a report from Pillsbury Madison & Sutro, which worked for the RTC in examining a number of questions. I want to ask you, Mr. Proctor, were you ever interviewed by Pillsbury Madison & Sutro?

Mr. PROCTOR. Not that I'm aware of. I've talked to the Independent Counsel but not in regards to the Pillsbury.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Dewey, were you ever interviewed by them?

Mr. DEWEY. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Denton, were you ever interviewed by them concerning Whitewater, what you've testified about today?

Mr. DENTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was that?

Mr. DENTON. July 1994, on at least one occasion, I spoke with representatives on at least two other occasions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Ritter, were you ever interviewed by them?

Mr. RITTER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever communicate with them, for example, about your discussions with Mrs. Clinton early in 1980?

Mr. RITTER. With the RTC?

Mr. CHERTOFF. With Pillsbury Madison?

Mr. RITTER. I am not familiar with Pillsbury Madison, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Patterson, did they ever interview you?

Mr. PATTERSON. I am not familiar with that name, and I don't have any recollection of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Burge.

Mr. BURGE. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I may, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Have any of you been interviewed by representatives of the FDIC or the RTC?

Mr. DENTON. Yes, I have.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson.

Mr. PATTERSON. I have not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Burge.

Mr. BURGE. No, I have not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Very well. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee wants to thank all of those witnesses who have participated today. Most of you have answered the questions in a very straightforward, very truthful way, and I think to the best of your ability. We are indebted to you for your participation.

Thank you.

We stand in recess until tomorrow at 10:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 3:10 p.m., the hearing was recessed, to reconvene at 10:00 a.m. on Thursday, May 9, 1996.]

Dear Mr. Giuffra:

In your letter of May 2, 1996, you inquire on behalf of the Senate Special Committee whether our investigation would be hindered or impeded if the Committee were to call Harry Don Denton as a witness to provide deposition testimony or perhaps appear at a public hearing. You state that Mr. Denton will only be questioned about matters in connection with the Whitewater investment.

At this time, we do not believe that our investigations and prosecutions would be hindered or impeded if Mr. Denton testifies concerning the Whitewater investment, provided that testimony does not delve into the banking practices of Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association ("Madison Guaranty"). Any questions which call for testimony by Mr. Denton concerning the banking practices of Madison Guaranty could lead to claims by the criminal defendants in United States v. James B. McDougal, et al. that their rights to a fair trial were jeopardized. Accordingly, while we do not have substantial concerns about testimony by Mr. Denton about Whitewater at this time, we strongly request that the Committee refrain from seeking any testimony from Mr. Denton concerning the banking practices of Madison Guaranty prior to the conclusion of trial in United States v. James B. McDougal, et al.

If you have any questions about this matter, please feel free to contact me. Thank you for your continued concern for the integrity of our investigation.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Giuffra:

On May 3, 1996, we informed you that our investigations and prosecutions would not be hindered or impeded if the Senate Special Committee examined Harry Don Denton concerning the Whitewater investment, provided that the questioning and testimony do not delve into the banking practices of Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association ("Madison Guaranty"). You have now asked for our position with respect to the Committee's proposed examination of Mr. Denton concerning his knowledge of the April 1985 fundraiser involving Madison Guaranty. At this time, we do not believe our investigations and prosecutions would be hindered or impeded if Mr. Denton were questioned about matters in connection with the April 1985 fundraiser. However, we reiterate our strong request that the Committee refrain from seeking any testimony from Mr. Denton concerning the banking practices of Madison Guaranty (with the exception of the April 1985 fundraiser) prior to the conclusion of trial in United States v. James B. McDougal, et al.

Please feel free to contact me with any further questions. Thank you for your continued concern for the integrity of our investigation.

SECURITY RECEIPTS AGREEMENT

THIS AGREEMENT is made and entered into in Flippin, Arkansas, on this 4th day of May, 1985, by and between Citizens Bank & Trust Company of Flippin, Arkansas, herein after referred to as "BANK", and Ozark Air Service Inc., herein after referred to as "OZARK", wherein the following promises, covenants and stipulations are mutually agreed, to wit:

1. Ozark has entered into an agreement with Whitewater Estates, Inc., for the purchase of lots 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 20, 22, 23, 24, 28, 30, 35, 37, 43 and 44 of Whitewater Estates Subdivision in Marion County, Arkansas.
2. The Bank presently holds the mortgage on said properties together with others and that said mortgage exceeds $35,000 dollars.
3. That Ozark is purchasing said properties from Whitewater Estates, Inc., for the consideration of assuming and agreeing to pay $35,000 dollars of the existing mortgage secured in part by the above properties. That Bank consents to the transfer of title to the above properties but by said consent does not release Whitewater Estates, Inc., from any lawful obligation of payment.
4. That Bank agrees and covenants with Ozark that for each amount of $1,600 dollars paid on the mortgage Bank will fully release from said mortgage any one of the setout lots as Ozark may designate.
5. That the properties hereto acknowledge the sufficiency of the considerations given for this agreement.
6. Whitewater Estates, Inc., signs hereto by its President and Secretary for the purpose of acknowledging its agreement with Ozark and for the additional purpose of consenting to the release of security by Bank on the terms above set-out.

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

THURSDAY, MAY 9, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:25 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING COMMENTS OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

I want to apologize for the delay in starting the hearing this morning. Ms. Thomasson, would you stand for the purposes of taking the oath.

[Witness sworn.]

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Ms. Thomasson, do you have any statement that you would like to make?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF PATSY L. THOMASSON DEPUTY ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT & DEPUTY DIRECTOR OF PRESIDENTIAL PERSONNEL

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Good morning, Ms. Thomasson.

I want to take you back to 1993. I'm going to hold up and I think you have probably seen this before, this is a Xerox copy of a notebook that was in Vince Foster's office, and more specifically in his briefcase, at the time of his death on July 20th, which was held by Mr. Nussbaum for over—well, I guess for the balance of his tenure as White House Counsel, and then was held later in the White House Counsel's Office for over a year before it was turned over to the authorities.

That notebook is filled with his observations and his comments about the handling of the Travel Office firings, including comments about you and your activities. When is the first time you saw that notebook?

Ms. THOMASSON. I have never seen the original notebook that I recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When is the first time you learned of the existence of the notebook?

Mr. WILLIAMS. You mean this notebook you just handed to us?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't know that I knew it existed before you just made your statement, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You mean to say that, until today, you had never heard or seen anything, even in the media, about the fact that Vince Foster had a large notebook that was in his briefcase at the time of his death which contained information about the Travel Office firings? Until today you didn't know that?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't read all that stuff in the paper, Mr. Chertoff, I don't have time for it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that Mr. Foster was working on putting together some kind of a report or some kind of a memo with respect to the Travel Office matter before he died?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't have any knowledge of that, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You worked with Mr. Foster with respect to the Travel Office matter; isn't that correct?

Ms. THOMASSON. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now at that period of time you were Mr. Watkins' Deputy, that's to say in 1993?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, I was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that would be David Watkins. What was his exact title in 1993?

Ms. THOMASSON. He was Assistant to the President for Management and Administration.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were his Deputy?

Ms. THOMASSON. I was his Deputy.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you know that Mr. Watkins wound up writing a memorandum sometime after he was, I guess, reprimanded as a consequence of an internal White House review for his handling of the White House Travel Office matter?

Ms. THOMASSON. I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You know that because he showed it to you; is that right?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did he show it to you?

Ms. THOMASSON. Sometime in the fall of 1993.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You reviewed it?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You made marginal notations?

Ms. THOMASSON. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I correct that, with respect to this, and you have a copy in your package in front of you; it's headed, "Privileged and Confidential, Memorandum for," and then there's no name listed, and it says, "From David Watkins." It's marked, "Draft." You saw this in the fall of 1993?

Ms. THOMASSON. Sometime in the fall of 1993.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Watkins gave it to you?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He gave it to you so you could make comments?

Ms. THOMASSON. He asked me to read it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You made comments on it?

Ms. THOMASSON. I made a couple of notations on it, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I correct that, except for the question mark and the lines on the first page, you have identified all the handwriting on this as being your writing?

Ms. THOMASSON. I did not identify the handwriting on the second—on the second page of the memo as mine. I don't know whose that is. I identified the information on the third page, where it says, "John Rogers," and "Firing of prior Travel Office Head" is mine. And the writing on CGE 12290 is mine. That's all the handwriting I see.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. The Travel Office is not within the scope of our Resolution, and in fact, it's being looked into by the Committee over in the House, chaired by Representative Clinger. Now, I'm not really making his argument for poaching on his territory, although he conceivably might be sensitive to that, but I am making the point that it's not within the scope of the inquiry of this Committee to look into the Travel Office matter.

In fact, you know, it is being looked into, so it is not as though it is not being examined. It is being examined by a Congressional Committee, and I assume from what I read in the newspaper, at least in some respects by the Independent Counsel, but it is not within the scope of our Committee.

The CHAIRMAN. I think the Senator makes a fair point and we do not intend nor do I think it would be the call of this Committee to move into the Travelgate matter per se. However, as it relates to the handling of papers in Vince Foster's office, to exploring the motivation of those people who went into Foster's office the night of his death or thereafter, or handled papers in his office, it is an important element. Obviously, it is an element that came to the Committee's attention well after we had any reason to believe that there was any possible connection with the movement of papers, et cetera.

So for a limited period, I am going to permit a reasonable exploration into this area as it relates to the papers, to why people may or may not have been interested in them. Was that part of the consideration, was that an area that they were looking into, was this memorandum something that Ms. Thomasson knew about.

This was the first time I've heard that she was aware, you might say well, this is out there in the public domain. But just the way, believe it or not, Ms. Thomasson has indicated she doesn't follow everything with minute detail in the press, even those matters that people may think have been of concern, I have no memory of having seen the fact—until you testified now, that you had even seen these, nor did I have any reason to believe or did the Committee have any reason to believe that these papers may have been of some interest.

So for those purposes, I am going to permit Mr. Chertoff to continue. Go ahead, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now—

Senator SARBANES. I take it we are not going to go into the substance of these?

The CHAIRMAN. No, I don't intend to get into that.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Before we get into the questions that had been asked previously regarding this matter, Ms. Thomasson—

The CHAIRMAN. There is a question concerning some previous testimony and I believe that the Committee has an obligation to ascertain what the facts are. If there are going to be corrections made, we will have them made.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This memorandum which you saw sometime in the fall of 1993, you returned a copy to Mr. Watkins?

Ms. THOMASSON. I thought I returned the only copy that he gave me to Mr. Watkins.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You made whatever notations you felt were appropriate and then you returned it; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. I thought I did. I did not return it to him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In any case, it is clear you did review the document in the fall of 1993?

Ms. THOMASSON. I've answered that. Yes, I have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to direct your attention back to July 11, 1995, when, in connection with your deposition for this Committee regarding the handling of documents in Mr. Foster's office—and I don't think you will dispute the fact that, late in the night after his death, you in fact were in his office. I mean that's undisputed; is that correct?

Ms. THOMASSON. Sometime around 10:00 p.m., yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In connection with our examination of that issue, you were asked a series of questions in your deposition concerning the work you had done with Mr. Foster before his death, which were designed to examine your state of mind and to help us explore the question of why Mr. Watkins may have chosen to ask you to go into the office. You answered at some length about the nature of your work, without, I might add, any objection to our exploration of this by anybody in the room, so that this was clearly within the scope of what we examined in the course of the deposition. It was relied upon by—certainly by myself, I can't speak for anybody else but I presume by others, in determining what to pursue with the investigation of the handling of Mr. Foster's office after his death.

Therefore, what I would like to do is not to get into the underlying merits of the wisdom or lack of wisdom or the propriety of what was done in the Travel Office, but to determine the accuracy of your statements about what occurred, as they were given to this Committee under oath, in July 1995.

I think you have a copy of your deposition in front of you. And if you do, I would like to ask you to turn to page 33.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Again, we just received the minutes before the hearing started.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I assume, Ms. Thomasson, you did have a copy of this deposition. I think it was sent to you last year, in connection with your testimony before the Committee. But if you didn't bring it, we made sure you had another copy. I want to first direct your attention to page 33, where you indicate that you worked with Mr. Foster during the spring of 1993 before his death.

Question: What in particular was the work that you did in connection with that?

Answer: In connection with that, the White House staff in the Office of Management and Administration had been reviewing every office under its purview to make sure its operations were what we wanted them to be and to make sure they operated in a manner that we thought was effective for the Clinton Administration.

One of the offices we had not done was the White House Travel Office and we were working to evaluate the White House Travel Office and its function and its ability to function. When we got to that particular office, it was so different than every other office that we had looked at because we had already looked at the Office of Administration and we had looked at various offices within the White House, but the White House Travel Office was the only one that handled cash every day. None of the other offices handled cash on a daily basis because of the nature of their work.

We did not have on staff at the White House accountants, numbers guys, bean counters, auditor types. As a result of that, we opted to hire someone from the outside to come in to help with that particular part of the review of the Travel Office.

I want to stop at that point, Ms. Thomasson, and I want to ask you this. The suggestion in that testimony is that in the course of a normal review of all of the functions at the White House, you finally hit the Travel Office, and because there were issues of a financial nature with the Travel Office, you went out and hired accountants and auditors.

Ms. Thomasson, the reason the accountants and auditors were brought in was because Ms. Cornelius, who had been assigned by Mr. Watkins to work in the Travel Office, had come to Mr. Watkins and said that she had uncovered what she viewed as irregularities; and because Mr. Watkins understood that there was a desire and intent on the part of Harry Thomason—no relation to you I want to make clear—to have his friends involved in the Travel Office operation. Isn't that the fact?

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I know Mr. Chertoff wants to lay out the Travelgate, and I guess it has been troubling him that Congressman Clinger has been doing it, but this doesn't comport with what you indicated the purpose of this session was going to be, and I don't think we ought to do Travelgate all over again.

The CHAIRMAN. I agree we should not attempt to get into the details of Travelgate nor do we intend to, but I do believe, as it relates to testimony that was given, particularly by Ms. Thomasson, that the Committee has an obligation to ascertain what the facts were, the state of mind of the people who were looking for documents in Mr. Foster's office and apparently in his briefcase, the notebook. This is an area that Ms. Thomasson has given testimony. So for these purposes, I'm going to permit it. Mr. Chertoff is attempting to set the background—

Senator SARBANES. That's a discreet way of putting it, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. OK, but he is attempting to set the background. I am going to ask him to get to it, because as I have indicated to Counsel on the Minority, I think it is fair, we don't need a replay of history, so to speak. There's that tendency, because you want to try to put a setting to it, but we are aware of most of the things that have taken place, the record contains them, so we don't have to revisit it again.

I was probably a little tough on Mr. Ben-Veniste when I said let's not ask every single witness was there a banking crisis in 1988 and what was the aspect, but he wanted to set the tone in which things took place. So I will permit both Counsel some latitude in that. But I will ask them to go more to the issue and to the facts. Otherwise we will be here for days and I don't think that serves the interests of getting the facts, and it doesn't really help make the points that both sides think are necessary. I'm going to ask Mr. Chertoff, in that same spirit that I mentioned to Mr. Ben-Veniste yesterday, if we could get to it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am going to focus directly on your prior sworn testimony before this Committee, which you gave under deposition last year? That's what we'll keep focused on. At page 34 of your deposition, you describe the decisionmaking process to hire the auditors, which was a result of an ordinary course review of all of the operations. In the course of that, for no reason other than you didn't have accountants on staff, you came to the Travel Office, and you hired accountants. Is your testimony about the reason and the manner in which the accountants were hired on pages 33 and 34 of your deposition correct or not?

Ms. THOMASSON. It's correct, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your testimony is that the accountants were hired, not because of any allegations or claims that you were aware of concerning problems in the Travel Office, but as part of an ordinary course review of all of the operations? That's your sworn testimony today?

Ms. THOMASSON. It's my sworn testimony because there was over $10 million that we found that went through that office on an annual basis. We didn't have anyone who had the knowledge or the background or experience to look at that—those kinds of accounts and do a reasonable audit on that. We needed to do that; we hired those people to come in and do it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your testimony is that it was done before there was any allegation or any decision to substitute new people in the Travel Office for the ones who were then occupying that office?

Ms. THOMASSON. That decision was made before any decision was made about putting somebody new in there, or terminating the former employees of the Travel Office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your testimony was: "We talked among David Watkins and Vince and myself, and we agreed that it would be a better idea to get someone from the outside than someone from the inside." Is it your testimony that those were all the people who discussed the question of bringing auditors in?

Ms. THOMASSON. Where are you reading from?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Page 34 of your testimony, paragraph beginning at line 11.

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall talking to anyone else but David and Vince with regard to that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you didn't talk to Mr. Eller about it?

Ms. THOMASSON. I didn't talk to Mr. Eller about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you aware that Mr. Eller had discussions with people about it?

Ms. THOMASSON. I was aware Mr. Eller had an interest in it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you aware that the First Lady had an interest in it?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall. The First Lady never called me about it, never talked to me about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Isn't it a fact, Ms. Thomasson, that contrary to the notion that this was an ordinary course review which just came up in turn, the decision to have auditors called in was made on an emergent basis or urgent basis, short-circuiting the normal plan for doing a management review?

Ms. THOMASSON. The process for the management review was set by the office staff, and when we got to the Travel Office, it was, the determination to hire the outside auditors was on an urgent basis and we did have them come in on a quick basis.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You would agree with me you short-circuited the long-term plans to do the review in order to turn to the Travel Office immediately; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. We didn't have a long-term plan, other than to say we were going to review all offices within the Office of Administration and within the White House office, to look at each operation. We did not have a fixed schedule that said we're going to do this office this week and another office the next week, because we had to do all our other work in addition to doing the review. We did not have a fixed schedule.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you to turn the draft of Mr. Watkins' memo which you indicated you reviewed and which has your handwriting on it. If you'll turn to page CGE 12288.

Senator SARBANES. Do we know the date of this memo?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I believe the witness testified she saw it in the fall of 1993.

Senator SARBANES. The fall of 1993?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Correct. This is presumably after Mr. Foster's death but before her testimony. I want to direct your attention, do you have page 12288 in front of you?

Ms. THOMASSON. I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You see the last line, next to last paragraph says:

If given time to develop, the original plan to reorganize the Travel Office for a smooth transition in September would have allowed the Travel Office employees to seek other Federal placement, along with other Executive Office of the President staff, in anticipation of the end of the fiscal year staff cuts; however, when pressure began to build for immediate action in the Travel Office, the long-term plans were short-circuited.

Is that, in fact, what really happened?

Ms. THOMASSON. Mr. Chertoff, you would have to ask Mr. Watkins about that because I wasn't there in February 1993.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You read it. You got there in March, though?

Ms. THOMASSON. March 1.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The auditors were hired March 13 and 14; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. May 13 and 14.

Mr. CHERTOFF. May 13 and 14. So during the period of time you were there, you presumably had some knowledge of the planning of how the Travel Office review was going to take place; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. I had no exposure to the Travel Office until sometime after May 1.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You're not in a position to agree or disagree with this statement in the memo; is that your testimony?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's exactly right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. During the period of time that this review with the auditors was going on, you were involved in reporting on that to Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Foster?

Ms. THOMASSON. I was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Foster was involved in this process; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. He was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You obviously were aware of that because you were involved in the process?

Ms. THOMASSON. Absolutely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there something called a SWAT team at the White House? The group with the informal designation of a SWAT team was also involved in handling this Travel Office matter in May?

Ms. THOMASSON. They were involved in all of the management reviews of all the offices within the Office of Administration in the White House office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were they known as the SWAT team?

Ms. THOMASSON. From time to time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you part of the SWAT team?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, I was not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was Mr. Foster part of the SWAT team?

Ms. THOMASSON. He was not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At the point at which a decision was made to go hire outside auditors, had a decision already been made to substitute new people for the Travel Office staff and to take over the Travel Office function before the auditors were hired?

Ms. THOMASSON. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Isn't it a fact that the very day there was discussion about going out to hire the auditors, you had discussions with people in the White House about the propriety of hiring new people to take over the office without having a bid, an open bid procurement process?

Ms. THOMASSON. One of the items that we talked about was doing what the rest of the Government does, and to outsource all our travel arrangements at the White House. It was my understanding at that time that the White House was the only Government agency that didn't outsource its travel arrangements.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm asking you a different question and I'll put it in perspective with the dates. We have a chronological record prepared by the White House itself. It's a 2-page chronology which is in your package, CGEPR 563; it's a typed chronology. Do you recognize the handwriting on the chronology?

Ms. THOMASSON. I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now on May 13th, it says, "David Watkins contacts Larry Herman of Peat, Marwick and asks the company to review Travel Office files." Do you have reason to dispute that it was on Thursday, May 13th, that the initial contact for Peat, Marwick was made?

Ms. THOMASSON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then the next day, Friday, May 14th, it says, "Larry Herman and five other Peat, Marwick accountants began review." Do you have any reason to dispute that that's, in fact, what happened?

Ms. THOMASSON. I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You see that this chronology was prepared on May 25, 1993? That was before Mr. Foster's death; is that correct?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, it is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was the first time you saw this chronology?

Ms. THOMASSON. Today.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No one ever showed you that chronology?

Ms. THOMASSON. I do not recall having seen this before.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is a White House document, CGEPR 563, I think it was distributed to everybody. I think it is a public document, or made public by the House.

Senator SARBANES. This is a House document?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's correct, Mr. Chairman.

Senator SARBANES. Well, Mr. Chairman, we are back doing the House's job again.

The CHAIRMAN. We're not going to do the House's job, but—

Senator SARBANES. That's what we're doing.

The CHAIRMAN. This is a matter of public record. We are not going to get into the details of this, but we are going to get into what Ms. Thomasson has testified to before, what she knew, et cetera, and for those limited purposes, I am going to allow Mr. Chertoff to continue.

Senator SARBANES. I guess I need to have some understanding of what Mr. Chertoff's theory is within the scope, because if there is such a theory, he could get to that with Ms. Thomasson. What we're doing right now is just marching through the Travelgate step by step. I take it these are documents from the Clinger Committee; is that right?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's correct.

Mr. Chairman, my theory is very simple. We took a deposition of Ms. Thomasson to determine what was on her mind or what her knowledge was concerning Mr. Foster's activities when Mr. Watkins directed her to go into that office—

The CHAIRMAN. I think it's important to note that Mr. Watkins directed Ms. Thomasson to go into the room. Consequently, there's a very real question as to why and what it testified to—why people were directed to go into Vince Foster's office and what people may or may not have been concerned about and what they may or may not have been looking for. That's a very real question, and we will permit that.

Ms. THOMASSON. Mr. Chairman, if I could just correct one thing.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Ms. THOMASSON. I was not directed to go into Vince Foster's office. When David Watkins paged me to let me know that Vince Foster had killed himself, I was distressed, I was disturbed that my friend had killed himself. And at that time I said what can I do to help, where are you, do you need me at the house to answer the phone, what do you need me to do. And he said do you mind going to the White House and just see if Vince Foster left a suicide note.

The CHAIRMAN. And we will examine that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now in connection with that question of your state of mind, what you knew as of July 20th, we explored that in your deposition. Your involvement in working with Mr. Foster, logically suggests what you knew or could have supposed was in Mr. Foster's office.

And as I say, we had a considerable amount of testimony from you in the deposition about this Travel Office activity without objection. That's what I want to review now, in light of documents that have become known after you testified.

There came a point in time that outside people were brought in to take over the Travel Office function after the employees were removed. Were those people identified and selected before there was a decision to remove the Travel Office people?

Ms. THOMASSON. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to go back to your testimony, page 37 of your deposition, you were asked at line 11:

Question: At this point in time, was there a substitute for the company or agency that was handling the money in the Travel Office? Was there a change in the identity of the people who would be handling the travel out of the White House?

Answer: Not at that point.

Question: Did there come a point where there was a change?

Answer: Yes, there was.

Question: When was that?

Answer: It was the next week after the members of the Travel Office had been terminated. We had a firm that volunteered to come in and help us get through some period of time until we could let a contract to either do it through contract and have the work done by contractor, or we could make a determination on who we wanted to run that office on an ongoing basis.

It's still your testimony that it wasn't until after the members of the Travel Office had been terminated that new people were selected to come in?

Ms. THOMASSON. Based on my knowledge.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to direct your attention to the Travel Office chronology, CGEPR 563, the 2-page typed document.

Senator SARBANES. That came from the House Committee?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's correct.

May 10—Harry Thomason and Darnell Martins meet with Watkins, describe Martins' encounter with Billy Dale. Thomason calls Martins' Cincinnati office and has memo faxed to White House. Thomason makes copies for David Watkins, Katherine Cornelius and himself.

And isn't it a fact, Ms. Thomasson, that before the firing of the Travel Office workers during the week of May 17th, a decision had already been made the previous week as to who was going to come in and substitute for them?

Ms. THOMASSON. Not to my knowledge, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Isn't it a fact that the previous week you personally had conversations with people at the White House in which you raised questions about whether it was appropriate to bring people in without a bidding procedure?

Ms. THOMASSON. I raised the issues about bidding procedures and how we would go through that, if that was the determination about how we would proceed with the White House Travel Office as other Government agencies do their travel.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is important to keep the weeks in sequence. It is the week of, I guess, May 17th that the firing occurs. Your testimony is that the selection of the new replacements does not come until after the firing. Isn't it a fact that the week before the firing, on Friday, Mr. Watkins had a conversation with the First Lady in which the First Lady told Mr. Watkins that Harry Thomason had selected people to come in to run the Travel Office, World Wide Travel and Penny Sample, and that those people could be put in place immediately after the dismissals?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't know what the conversation was between Mr. Watkins and the First Lady. I have no idea about that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And isn't it a fact that on Monday morning of the following week, again before the people at the Travel Office were terminated, you had a conversation with Mr. McLarty and Mr. Watkins in which Mr. McLarty discussed with you that this issue of replacing the employees with the World Wide Travel personnel was on the First Lady's "radar screen"?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall that in the discussion, but it certainly could have happened. I don't recall it though.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Again, let me take you back to the draft of Mr. Watkins' memo which you reviewed, and let me ask you to focus your attention on the second page. I want to read this to you.

Foster regularly informed me that the First Lady was concerned and desired action—the action desired was the firing of the Travel Office staff. On Friday, while I was in Memphis, Foster told me that it was important that I speak directly with the First Lady that day. I called her that evening and she conveyed to me in clear terms that her desire was for swift and clear action to resolve the situation. She mentioned that Thomason [Harry Thomason] had explained how the Travel Office could be run after removing the current staff—that plan included bringing in World Wide Travel and Penny Sample to handle the basic travel functions, the actual actions taken post-dismissal, and in light of that, she thought immediate action was in order.

On Monday morning, you came to my office and met with me and Patsy Thomasson. At that meeting you explained that this was on the First Lady's "radar screen." The message you conveyed to me was clear: Immediate action must be taken. I explained to you that I had decided to terminate the Travel Office employees, and you expressed relief that we were finally going to take action (to resolve the situation in conformity with the First Lady's wishes). We both knew that there would be hell to pay if, after our failure in the Secret Service situation earlier, we failed to take swift and decisive action in conformity with the First Lady's wishes. You then approved the decision to terminate the Travel Office staff, and I indicated I would send you a memorandum outlining the decision and plan, which I did.

Now this memorandum indicates that you were personally present at this meeting on Monday morning, before the Travel Office staff was fired, in which there was discussion about the plan to replace them with World Wide Travel and that this was on the First Lady's "radar screen." Your testimony is you don't remember this meeting?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, my testimony is that I don't remember that part of the conversation of the meeting. At that meeting Mr. Watkins had asked me what my opinion was with regard to firing the Travel Office. And my opinion at that time had changed because the Peat, Marwick people had been there all weekend and they had made it very plain, very clear for me to see that the Travel Office was not being run under normal operating procedures that any small business would be asked to do.

I didn't see any way to correct those errors without replacing the White House Travel Office. Mr. Watkins asked me my opinion with regard to that, I gave him my opinion, and I told him that I agreed that we should fire the White House Travel Office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. My question to you is this, Ms. Thomasson. Wasn't the selection of the people who were going to take over made before there was a decision to fire the people who were the current incumbents? Didn't you know that fact because it was clear to you, at the very least, as of that meeting Monday morning?

Ms. THOMASSON. I knew on Monday morning, if we were going to fire the White House Travel Office, we had to have replacements and that they had to be there quickly, they needed to be there the next day.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew who the replacements were?

Ms. THOMASSON. I knew who we were talking about. I didn't know they would be selected that morning. I knew that morning who we were considering, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So when you told us in response to the question that I asked you last year at this point in time was there a substitute for the company or agency that was handling the money, and you said not at that point.

Ms. THOMASSON. There was not a decision made at that point, Mr. Chertoff, on who it would be or if it would in fact be them. There was a consideration being given to that particular company but we had to determine, through the purchasing people and the procurement people in our agency, whether or not we could in fact hire them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You then went on to say:

Question: Did there come a point when there was a change?

Answer: Yes, there was.

Question: When was that?

Answer: It was the next week after the members of the Travel Office had been terminated. We had a firm that volunteered to come in and help us get through some period of time.

My point, Ms. Thomasson, is that it was not that the decision was made to fire the people and then a new group came in to volunteer to take over. My point is, wasn't the reality that a decision was made and there was a group that wanted to come in and take over? It was afterwards that a decision was made to fire the incumbents in the office?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's not correct, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's not the way you remember it?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's not the way I remember it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the paragraphs I have read to you from Mr. Watkins' draft, you don't recognize the handwriting on page 2? You don't recognize it to be your handwriting?

Ms. THOMASSON. It could be mine but I don't recognize it as mine.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What is clear is there's no writing on this, particularly next to the description of your meeting with Mr. McLarty and Mr. Watkins. There is no notation by you that this is incorrect or at variance with your memory as to how it was when you reviewed this in the fall 1993; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. There are a lot of things that are incorrect in this memorandum. I didn't correct anything in this memorandum.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did make notations. My question is this—

Ms. THOMASSON. They were not corrective notations. They were only additions or comments with regard to other aspects of the situation.

The CHAIRMAN. One last question because we're over the time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. My question to you is simply this: In the fall of 1993, within 6 months of the time of these events, you had this memorandum, you reviewed it, and you made certain marginal notations or additions where you felt it was appropriate. There's no notation, no dispute, no contradiction, nothing you have entered with respect to this description of a meeting you personally participated in that in any way contradicts or takes issue with the rendition of events in this memorandum; isn't that correct?

Ms. THOMASSON. That was not my assignment. I was only assigned to read it, I was asked to read it; I read it, I gave him my comments.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And no comments are there——

Ms. THOMASSON. I didn't give him very many written comments, as you will see.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Thomasson, in order for this questioning about Travelgate not to be a disingenuous pretext to exceed the scope of our Resolution by going into Travelgate because the tank is empty of material we are authorized to cover, one would expect a cogent theory of getting into this material that has some relationship to the investigation of materials in Mr. Foster's office, looking for a note following his suicide on July 20, 1993.

Now the theory would have to be that you were concerned about Travelgate and went into Mr. Foster's office to search for, find, carry off, destroy, mutilate, spindle, and otherwise make unavailable any material on the Travel Office.

So now what do we have? We have, in fact, Mr. Foster's spiral notebook found in his briefcase. When Mr. Chertoff held it up and you heard all those cameras clicking—as you will again, this is called a photo opportunity—you hold this up and you say here is a thick spiral notebook full of Mr. Foster's jottings on the Travelgate, or the Travel Office matter. In fact, as you would know if you went through the document, in this thick spiral notebook, which is a photocopy of all of the pages in a spiral notebook, there are exactly 20 pages that have some writing on them. So that's the particular spiral notebook.

As I recall your testimony before this Committee, you went into the office of Mr. Foster to look for a note, to see if there was a suicide note, on the night of his suicide; correct?

Senator SARBANES. Could I interrupt Counsel just for a minute? Because Mr. Chertoff held this up and talked about this spiral notebook. I wasn't aware of this, but I see that a great many of these pages are just blank. Is that the point?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes. There are only 20 pages that have any kind of writing on them.

Senator SARBANES. Out of all of these pages?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right.

Senator SARBANES. Well, that certainly was not the impression that was left and it certainly was not the impression I had, so I am glad that point has been made because it clarified this matter.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I recall your testimony, in the course of searching for a note on that evening, and we've testified about it several times at length over hundreds of pages of transcript, one of the places that you looked was in Mr. Foster's briefcase. According to your testimony, you opened the briefcase and you looked inside to see if there was a note lying in plain view in the briefcase; is that correct?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That is the very place where this Travel Office notebook was located, and we know that because when the inventory was conducted in the presence of all of the three-letter agencies, the Department of Justice and everyone else, according to the notes that were taken of that inventory, the Travel Office matter—and let me find the document itself, because we have that.

On July 27, 1995, in our hearing, Exhibit 1 was the notes made by Mr. Spafford during the review of materials in the office. Among the things which were called out by Mr. Nussbaum was a “notebook of notes of meetings,” and then under that, “WH Travel Office management” and it appears to be either a file or a word that looks like that.

So immediately after Mr. Foster’s death, in the presence of the Department of Justice, FBI, and Park Service officials, the notebook with Travel Office material was identified. That is the very notebook which should have been, if there is a theory or a nexus as to why we are having this hearing, that is legitimately within the scope of our Resolution, that should have been your objective, to hone in on that and I guess do something untoward, get rid of it, doctor it up, somehow destroy it. Did that happen?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In all of the 40 minutes that Mr. Chertoff was questioning here—I guess that didn’t allow him the time to ask you a direct question—was your intent to go in the office of Mr. Foster after his suicide to look for notes relating to the Travel Office?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you, on that evening, review any material that had to do with the Travel Office?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was the Travel Office a matter that concerned you and was it the reason why you went to Mr. Foster’s office that evening?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Will you tell us—for the hundredth time—why you went into the office that evening?

Ms. THOMASSON. I was asked to go to the office that evening to see if I could find a suicide note to determine whether or not Mr. Foster left a suicide note. We wanted his wife and his children to be the first ones to know the contents, if there was such a note.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who asked you to go there?

Ms. THOMASSON. Mr. Watkins asked me to go there.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What was your reporting relationship with Mr. Watkins at that time?

Ms. THOMASSON. He was my direct supervisor.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you recall where Mr. Watkins was when he asked you to go and look for a note at that time?

Ms. THOMASSON. He was at Vince Foster’s home.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Our evidence has been there was a question as to whether a note was left by Mr. Foster in his home. They looked for a note there and they did not discover one. According to my recollection of the testimony, Mr. Watkins indicated that he had spoken with Mrs. Foster about the issue of whether a note had been left, and thereafter had called you and asked you to go in and see if he had left a note in his office. Now, we have had days of testimony regarding what occurred that night from Mr. Nussbaum from you, from Ms. Williams, and from others. I don’t intend to spend the Committee’s time regurgitating, reiterating, and recy clinging all that information. We have a complete record of it, and I presume it will be the subject of a section in the final report.

Is there anything that has come to your attention that would have a bearing on the testimony you gave previously. Some material that would clarify, elucidate, or correct anything to do with the reasons why you went into the office, or what you did when you were there that night?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. How many different agencies have you given your testimony or statements to with respect to this matter?

Ms. THOMASSON. The Park Police, the FBI, this Committee, the House Committee on Travel, this Committee more than one time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I only count it once.

Ms. THOMASSON. OK. I think that's it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Independent Counsel?

Ms. THOMASSON. Absolutely, Independent Counsel.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I wouldn't think they would be neglectful of you in that regard. So that's five different investigatory agencies. Do you have any idea of how much time you have spent testifying and preparing for testimony?

Ms. THOMASSON. I have no idea. It's an enormous amount of time, to get ready each time that one has to do this.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Because when you come up here, you don't know what questions will be asked about what subject. You have to go back so you can play this cat-and-mouse game about "gotcha" in some testimony you may have given 2 years ago on an unrelated subject. You have to go back and try to review all of that testimony on every subject in order to prepare adequately to come here to defend yourself, as it were, before this Committee.

I have to say that as a trial lawyer, and understanding what it takes for a witness to prepare adequately under such circumstances, it's a tremendous obligation, and it's a stressful kind of undertaking. I am very sympathetic to the witnesses who have been called, recalled, recalled again, and have testified in this way. I have to say that this Travel Office material was produced in January of this year. You were again deposed in February of this year; is that correct?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. A month after the memo you have been questioned about was produced, you were not asked a single question by the Majority in your deposition about the subject?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That to me underlines the fact that this is well outside the scope of this Committee's jurisdiction, to get into the details of the Travel Office as has been done here this morning—and that the pretextual reason this would somehow provide a nexus between your search for a note on July 20, 1993, is strained at best. I have nothing further.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, in light of that—

Senator SARBANES. I want to withhold our time for a moment.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask you some other questions and maybe we can save some time by covering them more quickly from the Minority side. Now with respect to the Rose Law Firm billing records, did you ever see those billing records, in Mr. Foster's office, on any occasion?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall seeing those records until my deposition.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I take it the Rose Law Firm billing records was not a motivator for you on the night of July 20, 1993, in going into Vince Foster's office?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And there was no discussion among you, Mr. Watkins, Judge Johnson, or any other characters who have been woven into this intricate conspiracy theory? The billing records, these highly and supposedly relevant and incriminating billing records, were the subject of any discussion about going into Vince Foster's office after his suicide?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, they were not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me, if I can, go to the actual statement, because Mr. Chertoff paraphrased it in a way that, in fairness to you, might have made a jump—and I have to say here if America ever fields a conclusion-jumping team for the next Olympics, we're going to be in very good shape with the Majority staff. On page 33, you were asked:

Question: And what in particular was the work that you did in connection with that [the Travel Office review]?

Answer: In connection with that, the White House staff in the Office of Management and Administration had been reviewing every office under its purview to make sure its operations were what we wanted them to be and to make sure they operated in a manner that we thought was effective for the Clinton Administration.

One of the offices we had not done was the White House Travel Office and we were working to evaluate the White House Travel Office and its function and its ability to function. When we got to that particular office, it was so different than every other office that we had looked at because we'd already looked at the Office of Administration and we'd looked at various offices within the White House, but the White House Travel Office was the only one that handled cash every day. None of the other offices handled cash on a daily basis because of the nature of their work.

We didn't have on staff at the White House accountants, numbers guys, bean counters, auditor types. And as a result of that, we opted to hire someone from the outside to come in to help with that particular part of the review of the Travel Office. We felt we had the talent and capability in-house to look at the management side and how the office was being managed, but we didn't have in-house talent to review the numbers and to do an audit of the dollars and cents that were there.

We talked among David Watkins and Vince and myself, and we agreed that it would be a better idea to get someone from the outside than someone from the inside who might not be as credible, who might have done the work fine but might not be as credible because they didn't have a CPA behind their name, so we would hire an outside firm.

Is that what you testified to?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, we're going to yield back our time in order to move this along but I just want to make one observation. Obviously, we're going to have to deconstruct the photo opportunities, I guess, over the next few weeks.

At the outset of this hearing, Mr. Chertoff held up this document and unfortunately all the photographers have gone now, and waved it around and so forth these notes of Watkins. This was the document that was held up. These are the pages, these few pages, 21 of them, that have any writing on them at all. Now these are the pages that have no writing on them. There are 88 pages with no writing and 21 pages with writing, so as I understand it, 80 percent of these had no writing on them. I just make that observation for the record.

With respect to the documents that were shown, another indication of what we're talking about here is that this Committee never subpoenaed those records from the White House. These were records that were turned over to the House of Representatives by the White House because they are looking into Travelgate. All of the documents that were displayed and about which this witness was questioned were documents that this Committee has received, not pursuant to process or request but over the transom, as it were, from the House.

We yield back whatever time we have.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Just to be clear on this, it's 20 or 22 pages of closely written notes in Mr. Foster's own handwriting. These notes detail in exquisite, painstaking detail all of his activities and discussions in connection with this matter, including discussions with you.

For example, and I want to tie it directly to your prior testimony. Ms. Thomasson, it's my understanding, that this document was not turned over to any investigative authority, until more than a year after Mr. Foster's death.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, may I make a point here? When the inference is made that this document was hidden and not turned over, that's a far cry from what actually happened, according to the testimony that we have had. The document was identified in the presence of the investigators on July 22nd, I believe. The investigators stated that any document that they wished to have reviewed would be segregated, put in a stack, and Mr. Nussbaum would review that material. After reviewing it, he would make a decision about whether to turn it over or not.

That document removed from the briefcase and identified as Travel Office material, notebook containing Travel Office inquiry material, was never requested at that time. I think that, in fairness, it should be said when we talk about material that was not turned over for a year.

The CHAIRMAN. I think that's a very fair observation. The Chair would make an observation as well, and I don't want it to be point and counterpoint. Given the note that was turned over in which obviously Mr. Foster expressed his concern over a number of matters, including the travel situation, I think it goes to the heart of how and why the search of the office should have been and would have been better handled by the Justice Department, as opposed to the manner in which it did take place. The note would have been found then, and the relevance if any as it related to the notebook would have been put forth. We wouldn't have had the conjecture as to why this was not made available.

But I think your observations, they will stand as you have made them and we will continue.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I just want to put forth on the record that I asked for a copy, from the Minority, of Mr. Spafford's handwritten list of things in the briefcase and there was a reference to a Travel Office management role report. Ms. Thomasson, there was a Podesta report in early July on the management issues raised by the White House Travel Office; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. There was such a thing, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that typed report, that management review, is what was proclaimed in front of all the law enforcement authorities as being the content of the briefcase. The notebook was simply described in Mr. Spafford's notes as "notebook of notes of meetings, GC issues." So we're not confused, the reference in the presence of investigators to White House Travel Office management role relates to the typed Podesta report, which I acknowledge was made public rather swiftly. But, my understanding of the record is that the notebook was not described in any way that would make it clear that it was part of the Travel Office matter. And that it was to the intense surprise of Mr. Shaheen, the career official in charge of the Office of Professional Responsibility, when he learned in 1994 that he had conducted his own investigation of this matter without the benefit of this notebook.

My question to you is this, Ms. Thomasson: You were asked in your deposition—and this goes directly to the issue of your prior relationship with Mr. Foster, that you worked on——

The CHAIRMAN. What page?

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is page 38. We asked you without objection on line 15, after you had identified World Wide Travel correctly as the company that came in after the Travel Office individuals were fired:

Question: Was there anybody in particular who volunteered the firm to handle the travel?

Answer: I don't know the answer to that.

But isn't it a fact, Ms. Thomasson, that you did know that it was Harry Thomason—again no relation to you, and I want to be clear about that—who was responsible for volunteering World Wide Travel and the air charter group individual, whose name is Penny Sample?

Ms. THOMASSON. I think if you go back to page 37, we—there were questions with regard to who that was, and I say, at line 21 on page 37:

Answer: It was the week after the members of the Travel Office had been terminated.

Question: What was the firm?

Answer: Slips my mind. World Wide Travel

Question: Where was the firm located?

Answer: Little Rock.

I think where you are quoting from is after that, but yes, I identified World Wide Travel in that deposition.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I asked you, following up, was there anybody in particular who volunteered the firm for travel—you don't know Harry Thomason was involved in volunteering World Wide Travel and Penny Sample to handle this matter?

Ms. THOMASSON. I didn't know the answer to that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think we gave you some copies of excerpts of Mr. Foster's notebook. There's one page before you that may be cut off, it's F 15, it's ruled paper with handwritten notes. It has a little circle 24 in the upper left-hand corner.

Senator SARBANES. This is F 15?

Mr. CHERTOFF. F 14 and F 15. We gave you the selected pages. It has a little 24 with a circle in the margin in the upper left-hand corner. You may want to look at the screen to help you compare. Do you have that?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I couldn't read that screen when I was back in the fifth grade and had good eyesight.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think Ms. Thomasson has the document now. This is part of Mr. Foster's description of the events of Thursday, May 13th, in this notebook, in the briefcase, in his office at the time of his death. It says, "HT," that would be Harry Thomason, "understands they can switch over immediately." The next item, "Tell PT," that's you, "same on Eller. Pass on HT comment while noting not our role, ask her to have DW call. PT unsure of ability to sub without procurement."

Does this change your recollection of the fact that you were aware before World Wide Travel was brought on that it was Harry Thomason who was recommending them for the job?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Finally, let me turn to page 40 of your deposition. The question really boils down to why it was that Mr. Watkins chose to suggest that you travel from the restaurant in Georgetown to the White House to do this examination of Mr. Foster's office when there was a White House full of people who Mr. Watkins could have asked to go into the office. And you were asked the following questions at line 13:

Question: Did there come a point in time when there was a certain amount of controversy concerning the fact that the FBI had been called in on this issue with the Travel Office?

Answer: I read that in the paper, yes, sir.

Question: Was there discussion in the White House about the controversy?

Answer: There was not discussion—there was not controversy that I was in conversations with that discussed that controversy, no.

So your testimony was that before Mr. Foster's death, there was no discussion in the White House about any controversy concerning Travelgate. It was simply not a matter that was the subject of concern to anybody in the White House. That was your testimony then. Is it still your recollection that before Mr. Foster's death, there was no controversy, no discussion in the White House about a controversial problem with the Travel Office firings?

Ms. THOMASSON. My answer was then, and it continues to be, that I was not involved in conversations with regard to the controversy with regard to the FBI.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Watkins never discussed this with you, never discussed with you the fact that he was upset about the Podesta report in early July that had caused him to be reprimanded?

Ms. THOMASSON. Mr. Watkins and I did not discuss that that I recall. I don't recall talking about that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were unaware that Mr. Foster was upset about the criticism of his handling of the Travel Office matter based on that initial review by the Podesta team?

Ms. THOMASSON. I was not aware what Mr. Foster's state of mind was with regard to the White House Travel Office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And to be perfectly clear on this, in the period in May, 2 months before Mr. Foster's death, you worked regularly with Mr. Watkins, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Foster and others who were involved in the decision to fire the Travel Office personnel and replace them; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were involved in the discussions concerning whether to bring in the FBI; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. I was not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were involved in discussions about bringing in the auditors; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. I was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were involved in discussion about the fact that the President and the First Lady, themselves, personally, had communicated their desire to have this transition take place; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't have any recollection of having any discussion about whether the President was interested in having this happen.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Take the President out. What about the First Lady?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't specifically recall discussions with regard to the First Lady.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you generally recall on Thursday, May 13th, you had a discussion with Mr. McLarty and Mr. Watkins in which there were observations about the First Lady wanting to have this transition speeded up?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't remember the specifics of that conversation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember a conversation you had with Mr. Foster, Mr. Watkins, and Mr. McLarty in which Mr. McLarty approved the idea of doing this outside audit review on Thursday, May 13th?

Ms. THOMASSON. I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Isn't it a fact that, at that particular meeting, Mr. Foster referred to the clients as being concerned about the White House Travel Office matter?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you ever told anybody that, at this meeting, Mr. Foster referred to the clients as being concerned about the White House Travel Office matter?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall having done that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Watkins ever refer in your presence to the Clintons, either of them, as the clients?

Ms. THOMASSON. On occasion.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was a term he would use?

Ms. THOMASSON. On occasion.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to ask you whether you were aware, before Mr. Foster's death, that Mr. Foster had had conversations with the First Lady about the Travel Office matter.

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't know that I was aware of it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Finally, I want to direct your attention back to the memorandum from Mr. Watkins, the draft memorandum that you saw. I want to direct your attention in particular to page CGE 12290. Do you have that?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This relates to the portion of your deposition before this Committee where you were asked about the sequence and who was involved in the decision to substitute World Wide Travel for the Travel Office employees.

Now this page is Mr. Watkins' response to criticism from Mr. Podesta's internal review that hiring World Wide Travel on a no-bid basis created the appearance of favoritism. There are several paragraphs of Mr. Watkins' response. There's a handwritten notation in the left-hand corner. Whose handwriting is that?

Ms. THOMASSON. It's mine.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What does it say?

Ms. THOMASSON. "GSA contract in Atlanta."

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you add that notation to the discussion that Mr. Watkins had about his previous relationships with World Wide Travel?

Ms. THOMASSON. World Wide Travel had a Government contract with someone in Atlanta, with GSA.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you know that?

Ms. THOMASSON. How did I know that? I don't recall how I knew that, but I knew that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that from World Wide Travel?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall how I knew that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you work with the people from World Wide Travel, when you reviewed this draft report, to get additional information so you could supplement Mr. Watkins' memorandum?

Ms. THOMASSON. I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you check with GSA or with someone in the White House to get this information about World Wide having a GSA contract in Atlanta?

Ms. THOMASSON. I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You will at least agree that you did some independent, outside research to come up with this notion or this fact that there was a GSA contract in Atlanta for World Wide Travel; isn't that correct?

Ms. THOMASSON. I knew at some point during the summer or fall of 1993 that World Wide Travel had a GSA contract in Atlanta.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Ms. Thomasson, I would like to turn your attention back to the period of time you worked with Mr. Lasater. How long did you work with Mr. Lasater?

Ms. THOMASSON. From 1983 until 1992, mid-1992.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was your position?

Ms. THOMASSON. I had several different positions with Mr. Lasater and Mr. Lasater's firms.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Tell us about them.

Ms. THOMASSON. I was the President of LFI Corporation at one time which was a corporation owned by Mr. Lasater. I was President of Lasater, Inc. at one time, a company owned by Mr. Lasater. I held various other jobs in Mr. Lasater's companies.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you involved at all with work that was done, either the preparation for the work or the actual work that was done, in connection with a contract for the Arkansas Development Housing Authority?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No involvement at all?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have conferences or meetings about it?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall having any conferences or meetings about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it an area of activity that would have been within the scope of your responsibility?

Ms. THOMASSON. It was not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to show you a bill from the Mitchell, Williams, Selig, Jackson & Tucker firm, the firm in which, formerly, current Governor Jim Guy Tucker was a partner. Direct your attention to the pages that are marked with little Arabic numerals on the lower right-hand corners, 81 and 84.

The CHAIRMAN. At this point, because the red light has gone on, why don't we turn to Senator Sarbanes. They may want to have an opportunity to go over the areas that you've completed. This is a whole new area, and this way we will not be impinging upon our colleagues on the other side.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Ms. Thomasson, when David Watkins called you on the evening of the death of Vince Foster, he did not order you to go to Foster's office, did he?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

Senator SARBANES. I take it you were distressed by the news. As I understand your testimony earlier, you said was there anything you could do to help; is that correct?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. And he indicated to you maybe you could see if there was a suicide note?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Is that why you went to Foster's office, to see if you could find a suicide note?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. You were at dinner, as I recall your previous testimony?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. When you left your dinner companions and headed to the White House to go to Foster's office, the only purpose in your mind was to find a suicide note?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. You weren't looking for something else?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

Senator SARBANES. When you got to Foster's office and looked for the suicide note, is that the only thing that remained in your mind that you were there for?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. While you were there, you didn't start looking for others things as well, did you?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Your whole focus was on the suicide note?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. That's what took you to Foster's office, and that was what you sought to do during the period of time you were there; is that correct?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's correct, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. First of all, let me say that the schedule of what was found in the briefcase, in Mr. Foster's office, his personal briefcase, is set out in a document which we identified last summer before this Committee. There is no question that in the briefcase there was a "notebook of notes of meetings," and there was a "White House Travel Office management role" materials. In addition to that—and this is what is pretty interesting about how we come, a year later, to focus on this, as a potential motive—when Mr. Watkins gave his deposition to us on July 25, 1995, at page 66, he was questioned—actually this was in open hearing, on July 25, 1995, so that's 10 months or so ago.

He was asked as to what the conversation was in the car when he was riding to the Fosters' home to do the notification, an unpleasant job. He was riding with Officers Rolla and Braun of the Park Police, and Senator Dodd asked the question:

Senator DODD. Who was driving the car, Mr. Watkins?

Mr. WATKINS. I think Investigator Braun was driving.

Senator DODD. But were you asking more questions of them or were they asking more questions of you, just as a general—

Mr. WATKINS. As a general, I don't know. I don't know which way it was. I told them about the Travel Office—

I told them about the Travel Office.

—and he [Vincent Foster] said that he had been upset about the Travel Office as we all were. I was concerned at the time—I asked them about the fact, I asked, who notifies the family?

The one item that Mr. Watkins specifically identified to the Park Police as something on Mr. Foster's mind that had burdened him, was the Travel Office. Then, a couple of days later, in the presence of Park Police again, the contents of Mr. Foster's briefcase were removed and the materials relating to the Travel Office identified. And I say again that those materials were not requested to be segregated or reviewed.

Now, we had the Travel Office notebook, and we had access to it before the very first time you were deposed by this Committee. It was so remote, and so clearly not an issue, that you weren't asked any questions about it during your first deposition, during your testimony, in open session before this Committee, or in your second deposition before this Committee.

Mr. Kravitz.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Thank you, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Good morning, Ms. Thomasson. I would like to direct your attention back about 13 years, to about 1983. Was that the year in which you first began working for Dan Lasater?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, it is.

Mr. KRAVITZ. And what was your position with Mr. Lasater at that time?

Ms. THOMASSON. I was a troubleshooter, Mr. Kravitz. I took on whatever job was there to be done on a given day, and that might be anything from planning events to reviewing financial statements.

Mr. KRAVITZ. What was the name of Mr. Lasater's company you were employed by in June 1983?

Ms. THOMASSON. From June 1983 until November 1983, I was employed by Collins, Locke & Lasater, Inc., which later became Lasater & Company.

Mr. KRAVITZ. That was Mr. Lasater's securities firm?

Ms. THOMASSON. It was.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Was their principal focus when you were employed in 1983 at Collins, Locke & Lasater, did it have anything to do with obtaining State bond contracts for the firm?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Where did you go to work in November 1983 when you left Mr. Lasater's security firm?

Ms. THOMASSON. I went to work for Mr. Lasater personally.

Mr. KRAVITZ. What was your role, working for Mr. Lasater, personally after November 1983?

Ms. THOMASSON. Mr. Lasater had a number of holdings including horse farms, thoroughbred horses, real estate, both commercial and domestic real estate, and I managed all those assets for him.

Mr. KRAVITZ. How long did you work for Mr. Lasater personally after you began in November 1983?

Ms. THOMASSON. In the spring of 1984, I switched over to a company payroll called LFI, which was Lasater Farms, Incorporated, which was owned by Mr. Lasater's children. My duties remained approximately the same.

Mr. KRAVITZ. In any of those roles or those positions, was one of your major functions obtaining State bond business for Lasater's securities firm?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Did you also hold any State government positions in the 1980's?

Ms. THOMASSON. I did.

Mr. KRAVITZ. What positions were those?

Ms. THOMASSON. I was on the State Highway Commission in Arkansas from 1977 until 1987.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Who appointed you to that position?

Ms. THOMASSON. Senator David Pryor, who was then the Governor.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Was that a 10-year term?

Ms. THOMASSON. It was one 10-year term.

Mr. KRAVITZ. As a result of your being on the State Highway Commission, did you have contacts with either Governor Clinton or any members of his staff?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, I did.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Those contacts occurred during the time, I take it, when you were working for Mr. Lasater?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes.

Mr. KRAVITZ. During any of the contacts that you had with Governor Clinton and/or members of his staff, as a Member of the Highway Commission, did you ever discuss the question of State bond contracts for Mr. Lasater's securities firm?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't think I ever did that. I don't have any recollection of ever doing that, Mr. Kravitz.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Did you ever discuss that subject with the Governor himself?

Ms. THOMASSON. No recollection about having a conversation about that with the Governor.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Did you ever discuss the subject of bond underwriting contracts for Mr. Lasater's securities firm with Betsey Wright?

Ms. THOMASSON. I have no recollection of that, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. With Mr. Nash?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, I did not.

Mr. KRAVITZ. And as far as you are aware, do you know of any political pressures that were brought to bear on any State agencies during the 1980's while Mr. Clinton was Governor of Arkansas. Pressure to steer the State bond underwriting contracts to Mr. Lasater's securities firms?

Ms. THOMASSON. Not that I am aware of.

Mr. KRAVITZ. During the 1986 Gubernatorial Campaign in Arkansas, did you read allegations of that happening?

Ms. THOMASSON. There were numerous allegations with regard to that during the 1986 campaign. Later the Arkansas Gazette, which is now not in business, ran a story that reflected the actual truth about the matter, and showed exactly how much money had gone to every agency in Arkansas.

Mr. KRAVITZ. But other than these articles that contained allegations, which apparently you later learned were totally unsubstantiated, you did not hear anything that led you to believe that any influence peddling had occurred regarding State bond underwriting contracts?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's true.

Mr. KRAVITZ. That's all I have. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Before we resume with the bill, just to pick up on something I think you were asked about earlier, had you, before Mr. Foster's death, ever been involved in obtaining or deleting records from the Travel Office computers relating to the whole issue of the conduct of the Travel Office?

Ms. THOMASSON. I was involved in getting every record on the Travel Office computer copied, both into hard copy form and onto disk, so that it would be preserved for posterity.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you were involved in directing people? This would have been in May 1993?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were involved in directing people to remove—was this something called the hard drive removal process?

Ms. THOMASSON. I asked the Information Systems and Technology Department in the Office of Administrations to do whatever was necessary to preserve the information in the computers.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where was that information; where were the disks that were created kept?

Ms. THOMASSON. I have no idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you the person who supervised the process or directed others and then told them what to do with the product of this removal?

Ms. THOMASSON. There were two hard copies of the information that were produced, as a result of the directions that I gave to the Information Systems and Technology to preserve the information. They provided one copy to the White House Travel Office, they provided a copy to me which I put in the safe in the East Wing of the White House.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you personally did that?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, I gave it to somebody else who took it to the safe.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Going back to this bill of Mr. Tucker's firm, it indicates—this is pages 81 and 84, if you look at the little Arabic numeral on the bottom—it says, "January 13, Telephone conference with Patsy Thomasson." Then on January 28th it indicates that a lawyer from the firm had a "Conference with Thomasson, Moudy and Drake." Do you know who Moudy and Drake were?

Ms. THOMASSON. Moudy and Drake, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who were Moudy and Drake?

Ms. THOMASSON. They both worked for the investment banking firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Does this refresh your memory that, in fact, you did have involvement in discussions concerning the legislation that led to the ADHA—I'm sorry, led to the police radio contract?

Ms. THOMASSON. I have no recollection of being involved in any way.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you have any reason to think the firm would simply make up a nonexistent conversation with you about this police radio contract?

Ms. THOMASSON. They could have called me to see if I could find Mr. Lasater to be involved in something. I don't recall what the conversation was about.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm sorry?

Ms. THOMASSON. It says a telephone conversation. It doesn't—it says "to review litigation" but I don't recall them talking to me with regard to what the legislation was going to do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The next entry, January 28, where it says, "Conference with Thomasson, Moudy and Drake," you think that was simply a request that you go get somebody?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't have any idea. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you were the Highway Commissioner, even putting aside your operations as a Highway Commissioner, did you have conversations with Governor Clinton about Mr. Lasater?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall specific conversations, but I certainly could have had a conversation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he ever ask you questions about Mr. Lasater?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall him doing that, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew, of course, that Mr. Lasater had hired Mr. Clinton's brother?

Ms. THOMASSON. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that was at Mr. Clinton's request?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't know whether that was at Mr. Clinton's request, or whether that was at Roger's request.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew it was a favor to Mr. Clinton, to Governor Clinton?

Ms. THOMASSON. I think it was a favor to Roger Clinton, to get him a job.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your testimony here now is that it was not at the request of Governor Clinton that Roger Clinton was hired by Mr. Lasater?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall whether it was a request of Governor Clinton or whether Roger Clinton made the request to work on the farm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't Mr. Lasater himself tell you that Governor Clinton made a request to have Roger Clinton given a job?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall. He certainly could have done that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you to look at your deposition of February 23rd of this year, page 85, line 9:

Question: Did Governor Clinton make a request to Mr. Lasater during this time period to find Roger Clinton a job?

Answer: He asked him to put him to work, yes.

Question: How do you know that he asked him to put him to work?

Answer: Because Mr. Lasater told me he asked him to put him to work.

Question: When did he tell you that?

Answer: Sometime around the time he put him to work.

Question: Do you know when that was?

Answer: Sometime in 1982-1983.

Correct, were those your answers to the questions?

Ms. THOMASSON. Those are my answers to the questions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is also a fact that Mr. Lasater wound up lending money to Roger Clinton in the early 1980's; is that right?

Ms. THOMASSON. He did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You wrote the check out for that; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And it was for an amount between $5,000 and $10,000?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would it refresh your memory if I suggested it was for $8,000?

Ms. THOMASSON. I just remember it was somewhere between $5,000 and $10,000. It certainly could have been $8,000.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The check was for what?

Ms. THOMASSON. A loan to Roger Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. For what purpose?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You never found out?

Ms. THOMASSON. Mr. Lasater told me it was a loan to Roger Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew Roger Clinton?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Roger Clinton ever tell you why he needed the money?

Ms. THOMASSON. He didn't tell me why he needed the money.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You started to work for Mr. Lasater in 1983?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you get familiar with his business activities and his business operations?

Ms. THOMASSON. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You socialized with him as well?

Ms. THOMASSON. On occasion.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You also knew a man by the name of Locke, George Locke?

Ms. THOMASSON. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who is George Locke?

Ms. THOMASSON. He was a State Senator from Arkansas and a friend of Mr. Lasater's.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And in fact, they had been in business together; is that right?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, they had. Collins, Locke & Lasater.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you become Highway Commissioner?

Ms. THOMASSON. 1977.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You remained in that position for how long?

Ms. THOMASSON. 10 years.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you take yourself out of any discussions about whether the Lasater Company would have any dealings with the Highway Commission?

Ms. THOMASSON. The Highway Commission didn't do bond issues.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There was no connection between Lasater and any activities of the Lasater Company and the Highway Commission?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But, I assume you, as a Highway Commissioner, and a citizen, you obviously viewed yourself as having some responsibilities to the citizens of Arkansas in terms of making sure that they were getting good value for their money; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. The highway dollars, that was definitely my responsibility.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you familiar with an occasion when former State Senator Locke had a bankruptcy?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was that bankruptcy about? What was the occasion? Was it that his business went bankrupt? Was it related to the investment company?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, are we going to get into another bankruptcy—

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think, Mr. Chairman, what we are going to get into is testimony about Mr. Lasater in a bankruptcy proceeding, which is pertinent to the question of his qualifications to be hired to do bond work for the State of Arkansas.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now do you remember what the bankruptcy was about?

Ms. THOMASSON. Mr. Locke's companies went bankrupt.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did one of those include the investment banking firm he had in partnership with Mr. Lasater?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, it did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was Mr. Lasater involved in helping Mr. Locke hide his assets from creditors?

Ms. THOMASSON. In my opinion, he was not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And were you aware there was an issue raised about that?

Ms. THOMASSON. I was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where was that issue raised?

Ms. THOMASSON. In bankruptcy court.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was raised in a trial or hearing at bankruptcy court in late 1984 and early 1985; is that correct?

Ms. THOMASSON. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. A Federal judge, a bankruptcy judge, actually made a determination, a finding that Mr. Lasater had been involved in conspiring with Mr. Locke to hide his assets from creditors; is that right?

Ms. THOMASSON. I cannot quote what the judge found in that case, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Does it ring a bell there was a judicial finding?

Ms. THOMASSON. There was a judicial finding, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And there was also a judicial finding that Mr. Lasater's testimony, under oath, during that bankruptcy proceeding was not to be believed; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. Mr. Chertoff, you know that better than I do. I haven't reviewed any of this information.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You will certainly agree that at the time you were aware that there was a controversy about it, you were aware that Mr. Lasater testified, and you were aware that there was an adverse judicial finding, by a Federal judge, that was highly critical of Mr. Lasater; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. I was aware that there was an adverse judicial finding, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact it was publicized in the press; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did anybody from the State, to your knowledge, Mr. Clinton or anybody else, ever raise an issue about whether a person—a judge has accused of being involved in bankruptcy fraud is fit to be a vendor for contracts involving State money?

Ms. THOMASSON. Mr. Chertoff, I didn't do that kind of business for Lasater & Company. I was not involved in any of those issues.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But recognizing you specifically didn't do it, you were clearly in some sense involved with Mr. Lasater's business activities. I am asking you, to the best of your knowledge, from any source, did you ever hear that the Governor of the State of Arkansas, or any of the commissioners of the agencies that did Lasater bond work, ever raised the issue of whether there was a problem with Mr. Lasater getting this work when a Federal judge had, on the record, made findings that he was involved in bankruptcy fraud?

Ms. THOMASSON. I was not involved in that business, Mr. Chertoff. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So I guess the answer is, to your knowledge, that was never raised as a question involving his qualifications?

Ms. THOMASSON. I wasn't exposed to those issues so I wouldn't have knowledge of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now did you also get involved in handling Mr. Lasater's investments in New Mexico?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know whether Governor Clinton, at a point in time, spoke to the Governor of New Mexico and made an introduction for Mr. Lasater?

Ms. THOMASSON. We knew the Governor of New Mexico, and whether or not Governor Clinton introduced us or whether we were introduced by someone in New Mexico, I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't remember Governor Clinton in any way intervening or dealing with the Governor of New Mexico on your behalf?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you get personally involved in the investment in New Mexico?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you, in fact, meet with the Governor of New Mexico about getting his assistance in the investment?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall having a personal visit with Governor Anaya. I recall being in social occasions with Governor Anaya.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In social occasions with Governor Anaya, did it come up?

Ms. THOMASSON. Social occasions were where the investment was; it was in New Mexico at the property.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was the State of New Mexico involved in funding or assisting this investment in any way?

Ms. THOMASSON. No. The State of New Mexico was not involved, that I recall anyway, in funding the project.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When were these meetings with the Governor of New Mexico?

Ms. THOMASSON. In the fall of 1984; after we brought the project, we had a welcome party for all of our friends in New Mexico to kick off the start of a new season there. Governor Anaya was there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And other than that socializing, was there any assistance you got from the State of New Mexico in that investment?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't recall any specific assistance that we received from the State of New Mexico.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now are you familiar with an operation called Emerald Isle?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, I am.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was Emerald Isle?

Ms. THOMASSON. It was a time-share resort.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the relationship between Lasater & Company or the Lasater Group and Emerald Isle?

Ms. THOMASSON. Emerald Isle was a subsidiary of the parent company of Lasater & Company.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You worked for the parent company?

Ms. THOMASSON. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So Emerald Isle was a subsidiary of the company you worked for?

Ms. THOMASSON. It was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What kind of time-sharing investment was it? Can you describe it for us?

Ms. THOMASSON. It was time-share. It was 40 condominium units and we sold interest in those 40 condominiums 1 week at a time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have transactions involving that investment with Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Ms. THOMASSON. Madison Guaranty bought from Lasater & Company some paper that was generated at Emerald Isle prior to Lasater & Company buying it—prior to Lasater, Inc. buying it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Run through this transaction with me and explain how Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan came to be involved in buying investment paper related to this time-sharing operation.

Ms. THOMASSON. As time-share intervals were sold, there were notes and mortgages generated. So each time you sold a time-share week, unless someone paid cash, paid so much down, generated a note, and a mortgage was taken back. So then you had notes and mortgages that you sold, or hypothecated to someone else. In the case of Madison, they bought some of the time-share paper—that was generated prior to the time that Lasater bought the property.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you are saying that the paper that was bought was bought from sales that occurred before the Lasater group was involved in the sales?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So when Lasater bought the property, what happened with respect to the notes that were held by Madison Guaranty?

Ms. THOMASSON. The sale took place after Lasater bought the property.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm sorry. The sale of the notes?

Ms. THOMASSON. The sale of the notes took place after Lasater brought the property.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's make sure I understand this. There is a development called Emerald Isle, they are selling time-shares. Some of those time-shares are being bought with notes or mortgages to the seller; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Lasater buys the property; right?

Ms. THOMASSON. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And buys the notes; right? Or gets the notes, holds the notes?

Ms. THOMASSON. I am not sure that I can say that's how that transaction went down, Mr. Chertoff. It was—I am not sure that's what really happened. I am not sure Lasater ever bought those notes. Lasater & Company might have made an agreement with Madison Guaranty to buy the notes from the original holder of the notes, which was not Emerald Isle but was a bank in Hot Springs.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So what you are saying is, your recollection, there is some kind of joint venture where in a sense Lasater came in and bought the property and Madison came in and bought the notes?

Ms. THOMASSON. At some time Madison bought some of Emerald Isle's notes; yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What year was this?

Ms. THOMASSON. 1984 or 1985.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you get involved in setting that up?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, I did not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If there is some point to make on Emerald Isle, you know, I encourage you to make it and finish that area. It is not anything I ever heard of before, and we have gone once again right for the capillary.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is that a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Let's stop this. Come on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What happened with respect to that investment?

Ms. THOMASSON. Emerald Isle?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Ms. THOMASSON. What do you mean, what happened to it?

Mr. CHERTOFF. What happened to the development? Did Lasater hold the investment? Did they sell it again?

Ms. THOMASSON. Continued to sell time-shares and I guess they continue to sell time-shares today. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your involvement dropped out?

Ms. THOMASSON. No. At some point I had responsibility for managing the management company that managed Emerald Isle, so yes, I was involved on a day-to-day basis. I was also involved with a company who collected the monthly payments on the notes and mortgages and made sure that anyone who had investments in Emerald Isle paper got their checks every month.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you collect also on behalf of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Ms. THOMASSON. We did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did this come about? Were you involved in bringing Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan into this transaction?

Ms. THOMASSON. I was not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who did it; who was involved?

Ms. THOMASSON. Dan Moudy did it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Dan Moudy?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was his position?

Ms. THOMASSON. Senior Vice President of Lasater & Company.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did he come to get a savings and loan, in the mix of purchasing notes on this investment, how did that come about?

Ms. THOMASSON. You will have to ask him, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know that?

Ms. THOMASSON. I don't know that.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, I'm sorry. I would ask the Chairman's permission at this time, we have a saying in Arkansas, that I need to go see a man about a horse right now.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't believe we have any more questions, so why don't we take a 5-minute break and get the next panel out.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me finish up in this area. It will take me 1 minute.

Mr. WILLIAMS. That's fine. The horse can wait.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If the horse can wait a minute.

Let me just ask whether Lasater & Company was in the business of developing real estate?

Ms. THOMASSON. Lasater, Inc. was in the business of developing real estate.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was Lasater, Inc. in the business of holding mortgages?

Ms. THOMASSON. No, we sold our mortgages.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was Madison Savings & Loan a savings and loan?

Ms. THOMASSON. It was, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Are savings and loans in the business of holding mortgages?

Ms. THOMASSON. Yes, sir, they are.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That's it. I think I beat the minute.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, we are going to take a 5-minute recess.

Ms. Thomasson, we thank you for your testimony, and we will bring on the second panel.

[Recess.]

The CHAIRMAN. May I ask the witnesses to please stand for the purposes of taking the oath.

[Witnesses sworn.]

The CHAIRMAN. Let me thank all of you for coming today and ask if any of you have a statement you want to make for the record? Mr. Strange.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF J. WESLEY STRANGE
FORMER PRESIDENT & CEO, 1ST OZARK NATIONAL BANK

Mr. STRANGE. I have no statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Penick.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF EDWARD M. PENICK
FORMER PRESIDENT
TWIN CITY BANK OF NORTH LITTLE ROCK
FORMER CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD
1ST OZARK NATIONAL BANK

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Eldridge.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF MARGARET (DAVENPORT) ELDRIDGE
FORMER SENIOR VICE PRESIDENT
TWIN CITY BANK OF NORTH LITTLE ROCK

Ms. ELDRIDGE. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Good afternoon, panel.

Mr. Penick, I would like to begin with you, sir, if I might. Now during the 1980's, you were the President of the Twin City Bank; is that right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Twin City Bank was the flagship bank of a bank holding company called TC Bankshares?

Mr. PENICK. Not technically right, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What was Twin City Bank, was it part of the holding company?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, not at this time.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was Twin City Bank owned by the same person who owned the holding company?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who was that person?

Mr. PENICK. Mr. Lyon.

The CHAIRMAN. Could you pull that microphone up a little closer. You can pull it right up. Great.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And Twin City Bank was one of the largest State-chartered banks in Arkansas?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In 1984, TC Bankshares, owned by Mr. Lyons, acquired a bank called Citizens Bank & Trust of Flippin; right?

Mr. PENICK. Not the exact date. It did acquire that bank in the mid-1980's.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In the mid-1980's, and the bank was subsequently renamed 1st Ozark?

Mr. PENICK. 1st Ozark National Bank, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You became the Chairman of 1st Ozark?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In your capacity as the Chairman of Twin City Bank, your responsibilities included legislative lobbying; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You would sometimes meet with legislators to discuss legislation?

Mr. PENICK. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You would sometimes meet with Governor Bill Clinton to discuss legislation?

Mr. PENICK. I was in larger group meetings with Governor Clinton. I never met one on one that I recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. During those longer group meetings, you discussed legislation with Governor Clinton; and that was the purpose of the meeting; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir. At the time, too, I was Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce and we did discuss legislation that was non-bank-related also.

Senator SARBANES. Chairman of which Chamber of Commerce?

Mr. PENICK. Greater Little Rock Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you sometimes attended meetings with Governor Clinton of which there was discussion of banking legislation?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, among other legislation.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You knew Mrs. Clinton; correct?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The Rose Law Firm had represented the Twin City Bank in some matters?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You had some contact with Mrs. Clinton in connection with that representation by the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. PENICK. I only can recall one instance where I had contact with her, and I am not sure it was even in the 1980's, relative to representation of Twin City Bank.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did there come a time, after you became the Chairman of 1st Ozark, that you learned that 1st Ozark had a Whitewater loan?

Mr. PENICK. I can't recall specifically when I found out. It could have been before the transaction was closed; it could have been right after.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you learned that the Whitewater Development Corporation had a loan with 1st Ozark; right?

Mr. PENICK. I learned that Whitewater Development had a loan with either Citizens or 1st Ozark Bank.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you learned that the borrowers in connection with that loan included Governor and Mrs. Clinton; right?

Mr. PENICK. They were guarantors of the loan, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You learned that they had personally guaranteed the loan?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ever have any contact with Mrs. Clinton about the Whitewater loan that was at 1st Ozark?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What was the nature of the contact you had with Mrs. Clinton about this Whitewater loan that was at 1st Ozark?

Mr. PENICK. It was a letter I wrote to her.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You wrote her a letter to ask for what?

Mr. PENICK. A personal financial statement.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why did you write the letter to Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. PENICK. It seemed to be a more effective thing to do because if I wrote Governor Clinton, it would go to the State capitol possibly, or it would go to the Governor's Mansion and may or may not end up in his hands, and certainly would not be treated personal and confidential as it was intended to be.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you were afraid that if it got out that the Clintons needed to submit a personal financial statement in connection with this loan, there might be some adverse publicity toward the Clintons?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you wanted to keep it confidential that there was a problem with the loan?

Mr. PENICK. We treated all borrowing relationships with customers confidential.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that you volunteered to write this letter after the Clintons' name appeared on a document deficiency list that was discussed at a Bank Board Meeting?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, that's the best of my recollection.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why do banks maintain document deficiency lists?

Mr. PENICK. It is a prudent lending practice.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now banks normally will obtain current financial disclosure statements from their borrowers; right?

Mr. PENICK. That is a prudent lending practice also, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You normally include such a statement in your loan file; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This is the sort of routine documentation that is required by Federal and State bank regulators; right?

Mr. PENICK. You are—if you do not have it in the file, it appears in examination report—

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you will be criticized by the regulators?

Mr. PENICK. They write up a report, yes, sir, and it goes to the Board of Directors.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Banks don't normally want to get written up by bank regulators?

Mr. PENICK. It is prudent lending and management practice not to have that done.

Mr. GIUFFRA. One of the purposes of a financial statement is to allow the bank to estimate the value of the guarantee; right?

Mr. PENICK. It is used to evaluate the guarantor's capacity to handle deficiency in the event one occurs.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It also might be helpful to obtain such a financial statement in deciding whether to renew a loan; right?

Mr. PENICK. It should be reviewed, yes, sir, in the process of a loan renewal.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If a borrower fails to provide a financial statement, might that be a red flag to a bank?

Mr. PENICK. It depends on the circumstances.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But it could be an indication that the loan is in some trouble?

Mr. PENICK. Not necessarily.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you would agree that it is something that might be a source of concern for a lending officer?

Mr. PENICK. It is a prudent lending practice, if you have guarantors, to have a current financial statement, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. There came a time when you obtained a copy of a blank financial statement, and sent it to Mrs. Clinton; right?

Mr. PENICK. I wrote Mrs. Clinton a letter and I attached a blank personal financial statement form, which we have on record with the letter, as I recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, Mr. Strange, you were the President of 1st Ozark Bank; right?

Mr. STRANGE. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You learned that the Whitewater loan was on your document deficiency list?

Mr. STRANGE. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It was missing an updated financial statement from the Clintons?

Mr. STRANGE. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In approximately March 1987, you were looking to renew that loan; is that right?

Mr. STRANGE. I believe that is right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were waiting to obtain this financial statement from the Clintons before you could renew the loan?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now did there come a time when you saw Governor Clinton?

Mr. STRANGE. As I recall, yes, there was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ask Governor Clinton about this loan?

Mr. STRANGE. Not specifically.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ask Governor Clinton to contact you about the loan?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes, I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did there come a time when Mrs. Clinton subsequently contacted you about the loan?

Mr. STRANGE. There was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What did you tell Mrs. Clinton about the loan?

Mr. STRANGE. I don't recall specifically at this time what our conversation consisted of. It was something in regard to the—that the loan was up for renewal, and we were needing a financial statement.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did there come a time when Mrs. Clinton submitted the financial statement?

Mr. STRANGE. There was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you subsequently renew the loan?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In fact, the records indicate that you obtained the financial statement on March 24th, and renewed the loan on March 26th. Does that sound accurate?

Mr. STRANGE. That would be about right; yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, Mr. Penick, in 1987, were banks in Arkansas able to branch outside of the city or town in which they were incorporated?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, to my best recollection.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's say January 1987, your bank was located in North Little Rock?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Could you open a branch in Little Rock at the time?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So you could not locate a branch outside of the town in which you were incorporated?

Mr. PENICK. Not in January 1987, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So as of January 1987, a bank in Arkansas was restricted by a bank branching law from setting up a branch outside of the town or the city in which it was incorporated; right?

Mr. PENICK. That's a matter of legal interpretation. There are a lot of other ways that banks can branch. So I can't testify exactly where that's accurate or not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But your bank could not open a branch in Little Rock?

Mr. PENICK. That is correct. Twin City Bank is a State bank, FDIC insured, and could not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were limited to having offices in North Little Rock?

Mr. PENICK. State that again.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You could only have your branches in North Little Rock in January 1987?

Mr. PENICK. As a State bank, I believe that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Little Rock was a far more lucrative market potentially than North Little Rock; right?

Mr. PENICK. That's a matter of opinion.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you think it was a more lucrative market?

Mr. PENICK. There were more people there; there was more money there.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In 1987, did Twin City Bank, as part of its legislative agenda, want to change the State's bank branching law?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir. Twin City Bank and others who supported changing the legislation did, so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In fact, wasn't the change in the bank branching law the most important item on your legislative agenda?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was there a more important item on your legislative agenda?

Mr. PENICK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What would that have been?

Mr. PENICK. We have an archaic usury provision in Arkansas that only allowed 10 percent interest.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Along with the 10 percent usury limitation, the bank branching limitation was on your legislative agenda?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, it was important.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Something you worked toward changing?

Mr. PENICK. One of the things we worked on to change.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did there come a time in 1987, when legislation was introduced to allow banks in counties with populations above 200,000 to branch throughout the county?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And this obviously would have been a great benefit to Twin City; right?

Mr. PENICK. It would open up new opportunities for us.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that Pulaski County contains both North Little Rock and Little Rock?

Mr. PENICK. And other communities, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Pulaski County was the only county in Arkansas with a population above 200,000?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So that the only banks that would benefit from this particular legislation were those located in Pulaski County?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But if Pulaski County was the only county with a population above 200,000, no other banks would benefit? If you were outside Pulaski County, you would not benefit?

Mr. PENICK. And as I recall, there were provisions for extended branching in the bill also, so other banks outside Pulaski County were ultimately going to benefit.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That was the 1988 legislation; right?

Mr. PENICK. I seem to recall it was in 1987, too.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This legislation was called Act 539; is that right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was that opposed by the Arkansas Bankers Association?

Mr. PENICK. As best as I can recall, they did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It was also opposed by the Independent Bankers Association of Arkansas?

Mr. PENICK. My best recollection, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that the majority of the banks in Arkansas, at least in numerical terms, opposed Act 539?

Mr. PENICK. I don't think there was ever a head count taken, but there were more banks outside the populated area that would be opposed to it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Little Rock banks had little to gain by opening branches in North Little Rock; am I right?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, I don't agree.

Mr. GIUFFRA. First Commercial's a bank that is located in Little Rock; right?

Mr. PENICK. First Commercial is, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It was a competitor of your bank during this time; is that right?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In fact, didn't they sue Twin City Bank, after the legislation was put in place, in order to declare the law unconstitutional?

Mr. PENICK. I am not sure who the plaintiffs and the defendants were, but there was definite litigation over that issue; correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You don't recall whether First Commercial was the other party to the litigation?

Mr. PENICK. I think they probably were, but again, I don't recall who the plaintiffs were and who the defendants were.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You spent a lot of time lobbying the legislature to obtain passage of Act 539; right?

Mr. PENICK. I did, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Can you recall contacting anyone from the Governor's office in connection with this legislation?

Mr. PENICK. I cannot recall that I did, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you might have done so?

Mr. PENICK. I don't recall that I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You don't recall one way or the other; is that right?

Mr. PENICK. I do not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you might have done so?

Mr. PENICK. I don't recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You obviously needed the Governor's support in order to have the legislation signed into law; right?

Mr. PENICK. It cannot be a law without the Governor's signature, that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you had two of the most important trade associations for banks in Arkansas that were opposed to this particular legislation; right?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The Arkansas Bankers Association is not one of the leading trade associations for banks in Arkansas?

Mr. PENICK. It is.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The Independent Bankers Association is also not a leading trade association?

Mr. PENICK. Not in my opinion, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You would agree that the Bankers Association is?

Mr. PENICK. The Association of Bank Holding Companies was much more powerful and influential than the Independent Bankers Association, and I recall they were for the bill.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now prior to the passage of Act 539, were you aware that a branching law applying just in Pulaski County might be unconstitutional under the Arkansas Constitution?

Mr. PENICK. I can recall that, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You know Marlin Jackson; right?

Mr. PENICK. I do, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall he switched his position with regard to Act 539 during the legislative consideration of the bill?

Mr. PENICK. I do not recall that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, you recall that Governor Clinton ultimately signed the bill; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, he did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. We know from records that the Committee has obtained that the bill was signed on April 1, 1987, which was just several days after the Clintons' Whitewater loan was extended on March 26, 1987. You are aware of that, aren't you?

Mr. PENICK. I don't know one way or another. I haven't seen documentation to that effect, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. After Act 539 was enacted into law, you opened a branch in Little Rock's business district; right?

Mr. PENICK. We opened two branches as I recall, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. One of those branches was in a building called Capital Towers?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And for those people who are familiar with Little Rock, that's now the TCBY building.

Mr. PENICK. TCBY Tower, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were part owner of that building at the time?

Mr. PENICK. I am a minority partner in that building, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up the chronology that we have prepared. This chronology indicates that on January 8, 1987, the "1st Ozark Loan Committee—Renewal of the Whitewater loan is conditioned on receipt of financial disclosure statements from the Clintons and the McDougals."

Then sometime Mr. Penick, in early 1987, you would have written to Mrs. Clinton to ask to obtain that financial statement; right?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You didn't write a letter to Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. PENICK. I testified I did write a letter. I don't know when I wrote the letter.

Mr. GIUFFRA. We have obtained the financial statement, a disclosure statement from the Clintons, which was submitted to your bank on March 24, 1987. So you have no reason to dispute that was when the financial disclosure statement came in?

Mr. PENICK. That's not correct, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You don't believe the financial disclosure statement came on March 24, 1987?

Mr. PENICK. Would you repeat the previous question. I don't think that was accurate.

Mr. GIUFFRA. My question was you wrote a letter to Mrs. Clinton; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You wrote a letter asking her about a financial disclosure statement; is that right?

Mr. PENICK. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You wrote the letter after the Whitewater loan appeared on a document deficiency list; right?

Mr. PENICK. I do not know that, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were advised that there was a need for a financial disclosure statement from the Clintons; right?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Presumably, if it is on the document deficiency list, we know that, as of January 8, 1987, there was a problem with regard to documentation of that loan, from the documents we have, OK. So your contact with Mrs. Clinton was sometime prior to when the Clintons put in the financial disclosure statement; right?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir. I don't know when I wrote Mrs. Clinton the letter.

Mr. GIUFFRA. As a simple matter of logic, you wouldn't have written a letter to Mrs. Clinton asking for a financial disclosure statement if the bank already had one; right?

Mr. PENICK. If the loan was renewed on an annual basis, it could have been a previous year when the loan was renewed that we didn't have a financial statement, and I wrote her at that time. I do not remember and don't have a copy, and have not seen a copy of the letter I wrote Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The record at least that we have before us shows that the bank wanted a financial statement on January 8, 1987. There was a document deficiency. We know that the financial statement was dated and provided on March 24, 1987, and we know that the loan was extended on March 26, 1987. We know that Governor Clinton signed the law allowing Twin City Bank to enter the lucrative Little Rock market approximately 5 days later.

Now, Mr. Strange, your recollection is there was a problem with regard to the financial statement in 1987; right?

Mr. STRANGE. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ultimately, you got the financial statement; right?

Mr. STRANGE. That is correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you extended the loan on the 26th; right?

Mr. STRANGE. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The records indicate that the legislation was signed 5 days later allowing Twin City to benefit and go into the lucrative Little Rock market.

Let's turn to 1988. Mr. Penick, do you recall a special session of Arkansas legislature, in 1988, that considered possible legislation which would allow branching of banks throughout Arkansas over a 10-year period, was it going to be phased in?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, I recall there was a session called to address that issue.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that Twin City was concerned about the possible inclusion of a provision in that law that would have forced Twin City to close its Capital Towers branch?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir. We thought it was unfair.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In fact prior to 1987, under Arkansas law, a bank could not locate a branch within 300 feet of the principal office of another bank; right?

Mr. PENICK. Prior to 1987?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Yes.

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So the 1987 legislation allowed you to locate a branch within 300 feet of a principal office of another bank; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Capital Towers was located within 300 feet of First Commercial's main office; right?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir. That's the question of fact; we were never able to determine that accurately.

Mr. GIUFFRA. There was litigation or at least a dispute, as to whether you could locate your branch in the Capital Towers building; is that right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Because First Commercial claimed it was within 300 feet of their main office?

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Penick, come on. I mean, there was a dispute and the question was whether they were within the proximity permitted by the law; isn't that correct?

Mr. PENICK. Senator, I do not know that.

The CHAIRMAN. I am not asking you to ascertain whether they were within the law. There was a dispute that took place; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, there was that.

The CHAIRMAN. The question was not whether or not it fell in or outside of the number of feet, or the specified distance that had to be maintained between the banks. I am not asking you to concede that it was in the 300 feet or out, but there was that dispute and it centered around that situation; isn't that correct?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir. There was a dispute, not a dispute but a question of how that 300 feet is measured, is it measured from exterior—

The CHAIRMAN. Right, from the parking lot or the lobby. I used to do a little of this work years ago. OK, come on, let's go.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Twin City lobbied against including this 300-foot limitation in the Omnibus Bank Bill; right?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You didn't lobby against it?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You say you never lobbied against having this 300-foot limitation?

Mr. PENICK. We were in favor of the bill; we were opposed to 300-foot limitation and lobbied—

Mr. GIUFFRA. Go ahead.

Mr. PENICK. —lobbied to extract the 300-foot amendment from the bill.

Mr. GIUFFRA. There were banks that wanted the 300-foot limitation in the bill; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir. First Commercial particularly.

Mr. GIUFFRA. OK. So you lobbied to extract the 300-foot limitation from the bill; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall lobbying Governor Clinton's office in connection with removing this 300-foot limitation?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, I cannot remember contacting the Governor's office on that issue.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ever lobby Betsey Wright on this issue?

Mr. PENICK. Not that I can recall, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What was the name of the Chairman of Twin City Bank?

Mr. PENICK. The Chief Executive Officer and Chairman was Terry Renaud?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know whether Mr. Renaud ever spoke to Ms. Wright?

Mr. PENICK. I do not know, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you ever recall lobbying Governor Clinton in connection with removing this amendment that would have caused you to remove your branch in the Capital Tower?

Mr. PENICK. I cannot recall, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know whether Governor Clinton ultimately supported eliminating this amendment from the bill?

Mr. PENICK. I know he signed a 1988 bill without the 300-foot provision in there, but I don't know whether he took a position on 300 feet or not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, Mr. Penick, do you recall writing a note to Governor Clinton, thanking him for removing this 300-foot provision from the bill?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up on the Elmo a document that bears Bates number JRTS 206. Now just to sort of get the record straight, this is a document that the Committee received from Mr. John Tisdale, who was custodian for certain papers of Governor Clinton.

The document is dated 7/5, presumably 1988. And is that your signature down at the bottom, sir?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, it is.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Is this your handwriting?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, it is.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you believe you wrote this note?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let me read the letter, it's to "Bill" and then it has across the top "Gov." In the upper part of the document and to the left of "Gov" there is the distinctive checkmark we have seen on other documents that Governor Clinton has reviewed. It says:

Bill:

It has been reported to me your assistance on the Omnibus Bankers Bill and the 300-foot provision and I wanted to relay our appreciation for taking this stand. Terry and I can't understand why Mr. Bowen feels so threatened by our little office in Capital Tower.

Now do you recall sending this note to Governor Clinton?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Presumably you did, it was found in his papers?

Mr. PENICK. I don't presume that, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who else could it have been sent to? The document came from Governor Clinton's files. It has "Gov" on the top, and it's got a checkmark, that's the Clinton checkmark?

Mr. PENICK. I didn't put the checkmark on there. I didn't put "Gov" on there. Bill Ford was the Bank Commissioner at the time. It could have gone to Bank Commissioner Bill Ford.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This document wasn't produced by the banking commission. It was produced by Governor Clinton's lawyer.

Mr. PENICK. It is routine, in my understanding, that those administrative people send notes like that to the Governor's office.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you something. Do you see this note?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, I have a copy here in front of me.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you write it?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You wrote it?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir. I said I did.

The CHAIRMAN. Where did you get this note from?

Mr. GIUFFRA. From Governor Clinton's document custodian. You see the notation "Gov" at the top of the letter; right?

Mr. PENICK. I see that, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now——

Senator SARBANES. That's not your notation, is it, Mr. Penick?

Mr. PENICK. No, it is not, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. It is not your handwriting?

Mr. PENICK. It is my handwriting, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. It is your handwriting? You wrote it.

Mr. PENICK. The "Gov" part is not my handwriting——

The CHAIRMAN. I understand you didn't write that. We got it from the Governor's office. You don't think that you wrote it to the Governor?

Mr. PENICK. Senator, I cannot recall——

The CHAIRMAN. Who do you think you wrote it to? Take a look at it.

Mr. PENICK. I believe I wrote it to Bill Ford.

The CHAIRMAN. To Bill who?

Mr. PENICK. Bill Ford. He was the State Bank Commissioner at the time. To the best of my recollection, he took a position against the 300-foot provision.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I would note, for the record, that the Committee sent a subpoena to the banking department, and no such document was produced to us by the banking department. The document was produced to us by Mr. Tisdale, who was the document custodian for the Governor's office.

Senator SARBANES. It could have been sent to the Governor by the banking commissioner for his information, which would comport with this "Gov" appearing on the top of it which is not in Mr. Penick's handwriting.

The CHAIRMAN. That's true. That could be the case. Let's move on. We will have to let it speak for itself.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And Mr. Bowen—

The CHAIRMAN. By the way, let me say something. I don't see any big deal about this. If you wrote a note to somebody you know who supported a legislative provision and you said, I can't understand why some people oppose it and thank you. I mean, we are all jumping up and down over here. You find the note in the Governor's office, so what? You know him, you knew him through the trade association, you deal with him. You are not supposed to say thank you.

But what I find bothers me is that we have to kind of drag certain things out, like when we talked with that 300-foot thing. No one asked you to concede whether it was in or out, but you knew there was a dispute about it. So be a little more forthcoming when you can and we will get through this thing faster. Let the facts speak for themselves. Don't try to be protective if you can.

I appreciate what you are saying. You are saying I may have sent this to a legislator and it may have found its way over there. Let's keep it going. What I am trying to say is let's not be so uptight. I have seen in the history of other witnesses sometimes the truth will really set them all free and there is no big deal. It is a logical kind of thing. But we are dancing around, and you know, it may be interpreted in a sinister manner. You want certain legislation, it was very important to you. So what, there is nothing wrong with that.

You wanted to do business in a particular town. Those were antiquated laws that existed that impeded people from doing this kind of thing. We had them throughout the country at various times and various States responded in different ways.

You have a legitimate interest to petition your Government—but when it happens, we become so uptight about it—then we say why aren't you being forthcoming. Now by the same token, we may try to put some kind of unflattering spin on this thing, but I want to see if we can't move on it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up on the Elmo a comment which bears Bates number JRTS 195. This is a memo, dated July 5, 1988, which is the same date that was on the handwritten note from Mr. Penick. This is a memo from Betsey Wright to the "Gov, cc: Sam." That's Sam Bratton. It says:

Re: Bankers Bill.

Neither Sam nor I understands what your next step/follow-up with Bill Bowen is on the 300-foot issue.

The bill which is being delivered to this office in the morning by the Bankers Association/Bill Ford does not contain the 300-foot provision based on their conversation with you [the Governor] this morning.

So this memo from Ms. Wright seems to indicate it was Governor Clinton who intervened with Mr. Ford to have the 300-foot restriction taken out of the bill.

Let's put another document up on the Elmo. This is CBF411 and this is a request for a loan documentation waiver in connection with the Whitewater Development loan. It is dated July 15, 1988. And Mr. Strange, those are your initials down at the bottom?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes, it is.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It is an important act when you agree to do a loan documentation waiver; right? I mean, the president of the bank has to sign off on it; isn't that right?

Mr. STRANGE. One of the senior officers needs to sign off on it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Not a purely administrative decision; right?

Mr. STRANGE. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This particular waiver allowed both the Clintons and the McDougals not to put in any financial statements in connection with the renewal of their loan?

Mr. STRANGE. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I also not correct that the loan was extended on July 15, 1988?

Mr. STRANGE. I believe that to be right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Which would be the same date that the waiver occurred. Let's briefly go through the chronology that we now have up on the easel. That chronology indicates that there was a dispute between Twin City and First Commercial—

The CHAIRMAN. The red light is on. Let me suggest this, so we will have a continuous flow. With your acquiescence, we let Mr. Giuffra continue for another 7 minutes, until 1:00 p.m., and then we will break for lunch. We will start with Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me just address this one if I might, Mr. Chairman, because I really don't think it is an issue of somebody being uptight or disingenuous. If he has written a letter to somebody, he ought to say who he recalls it having been, the letter—the note that has been identified here is in your handwriting, that's been established. It was written to Bill, but it doesn't say Bill who, and your recollection, as I understand your testimony, you were writing to the Bank Commissioner?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, I can't recall specifically who it went to. It would be more consistent with the actions at the time that it would have been to Bank Commissioner, Bill Ford.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I understand you are being careful and you don't have a recollection. The note was written in 1987, obviously a long time ago. But, as I understand it, you had a first-name relationship with the Bank Commissioner, you knew the Banking Commissioner for some time, did you not?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You had an Ed/Bill relationship; correct?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask you whether you had that kind of a relationship with the Governor at the time?

Mr. PENICK. It really depended on the occasion, but more than likely it was Governor.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you feel you would have written him a note containing the information as reflected in this note, and addressed it Bill, and written it in the informal way that you did?

Mr. PENICK. It would be more consistent that this would go to Bill Ford, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We want you to be careful, we want you not to accept suggestions but rely on your recollection in giving testimony because you are under oath, and it is important that you give your best recollection.

Indeed, the concept of the branch banking legislation was, if I understand, a memo that has been produced to us that is entitled "File Notes, May 27, 1986." It has your name at the bottom. It isn't marked with a Bates number. But it reflects that in 1986, 10 months before this loan renewal, that the then-Commissioner of Banking, Marlin Jackson, indicated that it was, in his opinion, time for someone to foster legislation to permit countywide branching. Have you seen that memo?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, I have.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is that consistent with your recollection; apparently it is your file note?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, I dictated it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, outside of any of these charts and chronologies, I mean, we had a perfect match here, and it was so inconvenient and we couldn't do anything with it. On April 4, 1985, there was a fundraiser at Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, and on the very same day, the Governor signed authority for raising funds through a bond offering for the State police radio. And guess what? Everybody had to concede that was just a coincidence. These renewals were done on an annual basis; is that correct?

Mr. PENICK. It is my understanding, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We had testimony from Mr. Proctor yesterday that 40 percent, in dollar terms, of all of the loans in the portfolio lacked current or updated financial statements because of this continuous roll-over procedure. So it wasn't all that unusual to have in the file a loan that did not have a completely updated financial statement; isn't that so?

Mr. PENICK. It is not unusual; that's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK, and the loans that were renewed really were not dependent on the financial statement. This was a renewal of a loan, you knew about the property, you knew about the substance of the individuals. If in fact, the financial condition of the borrower had dramatically changed in a negative way, did you not have the right to call the loan?

Mr. PENICK. I don't have a copy of the note here in front of me. Generally, we had a demand or no-demand provision in the promissory notes, but I don't have a copy to review.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We go half an hour without anyone asking the central question, was there a quid pro quo for support for this branch banking legislation, in return for renewing the loan that had already been made but given a waiver on the financial statement?

Mr. PENICK. Absolutely not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is that preposterous?

Mr. PENICK. It is a reach, yes, sir, in my opinion.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It is another example, in my view, of this conclusion-jumping facility, and I would like to come back to explore this, Mr. Chairman, if we are going to go into this in more detail.

The CHAIRMAN. Before we break, I want to touch on something. Have someone take this down to the witness. You see, Mr. Penick, you indeed have communicated with the Governor in an impersonal way and called him Bill, haven't you?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, I probably have from time to time.

The CHAIRMAN. You have even written him in that fashion. Take a look at that letter; it's TCBe. That's the name of your company up there? What does that TCBe stand for?

Mr. PENICK. It was the logo, Senator, for the bank at the—

The CHAIRMAN. Tell me about it.

Mr. PENICK. It is a Bee; at the time Twin City Bank, and they had a logo with a Bee.

The CHAIRMAN. Read that to me. Did you write this letter?

Mr. PENICK. Those are not my initials. These were note pads that were used all over the bank for people to scribble notes on.

The CHAIRMAN. Come on now, Ed. Let's stop it. "Governor Bill Clinton." What does it say? Take a look at it, "Bill," huh? Right?

Mr. PENICK. I can barely read this copy, Senator. It says—I can't read the date.

The CHAIRMAN. It's June 6, 1988. Governor Bill Clinton. Then it says what?

Mr. PENICK. "Bill, the attached"—

The CHAIRMAN. "Bill, the attached copy is"—go ahead.

Mr. PENICK. "Is revised slightly from the previous one you had been furnished."

The CHAIRMAN. My only purpose is to say that you have. So it is not a kind of a reach—when we say look, this is what we see, it is in the file. Then at the end, EMP. Who is EMP?

Mr. PENICK. That's me.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. You see, when you look at it, I mean, that's you. You said people had this all over. EMP. Nobody just signs your name or initials your name or types in your name, do they?

Mr. PENICK. Those are not my initials, no, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is EMP?

Mr. PENICK. That's me.

The CHAIRMAN. So? I mean—

Mr. PENICK. I didn't type the note.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course, you didn't type the note. Someone typed the note for you; isn't that true, Edward?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

We stand in recess until 2:00 p.m.

Senator SARBANES. Let me be clear. You didn't initial this note either, did you?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, those are not my initials, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. No one suggested that you initialed—

Senator SARBANES. The letters are your initials but they were typed on the note by somebody; you didn't initial the note yourself; is that correct?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you suggesting that somebody wrote this note on their own and put your name down there, EMP, and used your stationery?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, I am not.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. We stand in recess.

[Whereupon, at 1:00 p.m., the hearing was recessed, to be reconvened at 2:15 p.m. this same day.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Penick, I did not notice heretofore the magnificent splendor of that very colorful tie of yours.

Mr. PENICK. Thank you, Senator. My daughter, Erica, picked that out. She told me to wear that.

The CHAIRMAN. That's a great tie she picked for you.

Mr. PENICK. It's a Jerry Garcia tie.

The CHAIRMAN. A who?

Mr. PENICK. Jerry Garcia.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The Grateful Dead.

The CHAIRMAN. I only really heard about him as a result of his passing because, I guess, it was quite sudden. I have to tell you that is the first time I knew who he was.

Mr. Ben-Veniste, why don't you let Mr. Giuffra go first and then I'll give you any other time you need.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I thought I used about 5 minutes of my 30.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead, and then we'll start with Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Now, Mr. Strange, let me ask you what your position was at the bank in 1986?

Mr. STRANGE. I was President.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And you were a person who had been with the bank through virtually the entire history of this loan, what we've been calling the Whitewater loan; is that correct?

Mr. STRANGE. No, that is not correct. I came with the bank in January 1986.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You came in 1986 and you stayed until 1992?

Mr. STRANGE. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is it correct, that at the point when the loan matured, in December 1986, and a renewal of the loan was sought by the McDougals, that the loan balance had been paid down to approximately $53,000?

Mr. STRANGE. I believe that is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We established yesterday that the loan had been paid down from—what was the largest amount, to your knowledge?

Mr. STRANGE. I believe it was in the $180-plus-thousand.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So it had been paid down from, $187,000 or $186,000 down to $53,000 by 1986?

Mr. STRANGE. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is that the type of thing that a bank looks at? Whether the principal has been paid down on a loan as to whether things seem to be going along in a reasonably reliable way?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes, it is.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. From the standpoint of what was going on with that loan, at the time the renewal was requested in 1987, the loan was classified, or rated as 3. The rating system with 6 being the worst and 1 being the best?

Mr. STRANGE. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We have heard from witnesses yesterday, including Mr. Proctor, that virtually 80 percent of the loans in the portfolio at the bank at this time were characterized or identified as 3 on that rating scale. Would you agree with that?

Mr. STRANGE. That would be very close, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. A 3 rating signified a normal loan?

Mr. STRANGE. That is right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Contrary to the statement in a book called "Blood Sport," which has a 3 rating as indicating a problem loan or a loan that is about to go into default, the true fact is that a 3 rating meant it was a normal loan?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes. A 3-rated loan was a standard acceptable credit in the bank with no particular problem.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the loan committee for 1st Ozark according to records that we have looked at in deposition testimony held its regular weekly meeting on January 8, 1987, and you were among the attendees at that meeting?

Mr. STRANGE. Very possible.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. According to our records, you, Mr. Proctor and Vernon Dewey, two witnesses we had yesterday, attended that meeting. According to our records, 14 loans were considered at that meeting, and the Whitewater renewal loan was 1 of 8 commercial loans which was considered by the bank on its agenda. According to the testimony we have received, a single negative vote would have meant that the loan was not approved for renewal. Does that comport with your recollection?

Mr. STRANGE. That is right. The way the committee was structured, that it was not a unanimous vote to approve. It had to be—I mean, it had to be unanimous. Any one dissenting vote would withhold the application for further action on it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now at that time there were three conditions, according to the information we have received, which would have applied to approval of a loan renewal: First, that all sales proceeds, less commissions, be applied to the note; second, that all contracts were to be maintained at 1st Ozark; and third, would be updated financials. Now according to what occurred at that time, it appears that the conditions were met and the loan was renewed without dissent. Does that comport with your recollection?

Mr. STRANGE. I believe that's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When the loan was renewed in March 1987, it was subsequent to receipt of an updated financial statement by Mr. and Mrs. Clinton; correct?

Mr. STRANGE. I don't have the exact date of that renewal.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. According to records that we have, the statement was received on March 24th; it was received by the bank on March 26th, and the loan renewal was approved on the 27th.

Mr. STRANGE. OK. The statement that I have indicates on the top, I believe, under Mr. Proctor's initials of 3/26 rather than 3/24.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was apparently dated 3/24 at the bottom and received at the bank on 3/26.

Mr. STRANGE. I believe that's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The financial statement which we went into in some detail yesterday appears to be a two-sided form used by the bank for submitting a personal financial statement; correct?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I am not going to go over the ground that we covered yesterday unless the Majority intends to do so, but I want to go now to the 1988 renewal. At that time, is it correct that Mrs.

Clinton telephoned you in 1988 with respect to seeking information for preparation of a tax return?

Mr. STRANGE. It is correct that she phoned me. I don't recall the exact date of that. Somewhere in the packet I believe there is a letter which I have responded which would approximate the date.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That would be an April 12, 1988 letter by you to Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. STRANGE. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It is a short letter. Why don't you read that into the record?

Mr. STRANGE. It says:

Dear Mrs. Clinton:

As per our phone conversation, we have researched the transaction regarding the Whitewater Development Company, Inc. and they are enclosed. The loan and escrow data are for 1987 only and do not include any of the 1988 transactions. Hope this will help you in preparing your tax return and some type of balance sheet.

I have also enclosed a renewal note, hoping that you could help me in getting all the signatures on this and returning it as soon as possible.

In addition, we will be needing an updated financial statement on the personal, as well as the corporation.

Respectfully, J.W. Strange.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thereafter, did Mrs. Clinton advise you that she had made several attempts to contact Mr. and Mrs. McDougal without success?

Mr. STRANGE. I believe she did, yes. The letter I have not found in my package yet but I believe there is one there.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And of course we know from information developed in this Committee that, as of that point, Mr. McDougal had been obliged to leave Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, and that he had left Arkansas for California. I take it the efforts of 1st Ozark to contact the McDougals directly was unsuccessful?

Mr. STRANGE. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have in your file a letter dated June 9, 1988, from Mrs. Clinton to you in which she expressed or outlined the effort she had made to reach Mrs. McDougal about the materials needed for a loan extension. In a P.S. she said to you, "Wes, I do not know what else to do. If you have any suggestions, please give me a call. Thanks."

Mr. STRANGE. Yes, I have a copy of that letter.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you have some suggestions about what she might be able to do to try to find the McDougals at this point?

Mr. STRANGE. Not really. I think we were both at a loss as to what to do at that point.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And it seemed, did it not, as the result of your contact with Mrs. Clinton, that this whole thing had been dumped in her lap and that the McDougals were out of the picture and, for all intents and purposes, unreachable?

Mr. STRANGE. That's the way it appeared.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now on July 13th, Mrs. Clinton wrote to you, apparently having given up trying to reach the McDougals. She said in part, "I am enclosing the renewal note you sent for Bill's and my signature. Despite repeated efforts, I have been unable to reach the McDougals." Is that correct?

Mr. STRANGE. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. On July 15, 1988, Mr. Proctor prepared a request for a waiver of financial statements for Whitewater Development Corporation and its guarantors; that is, the Clintons and the McDougals. In his request, which we have, he explained that the individual financial statements were unnecessary because, first, the payments on the loan are derived from escrow contracts controlled by 1st Ozark.

Mr. STRANGE. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The second reason was that the collateral was believed sufficient to cover the loan.

Mr. STRANGE. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The request for a loan documentation waiver, approved by Mr. Proctor, was presented to you, his superior, for your approval?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And you did?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you have any problem in doing that?

Mr. STRANGE. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. By this time, the loan had been paid down to approximately $36,000?

Mr. STRANGE. I believe that's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In your view, it was supported by an adequate income as well as collateralized by the land?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes, and our basic history of the loan is that the payments were being made, so there was not a concern.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So this was a truly unremarkable event at the time, I take it?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The bank regulations provided for you to authorize a waiver of the filing of personal financial statements under the circumstances?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes, they would.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that this would not be considered a loan deficiency by the examiners?

Mr. STRANGE. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let's go to this fascinating coincidence of branch banking legislation. At the same time, this totally unremarkable extension of this paid-down loan was made by the bank. First, we focused and focused and focused on Governor Clinton's approval of this legislation. We have examined the timing and we have brought forward the fact that the prior State Bank Administrator Mr. Marlin Jackson, I believe, had recommended, 10 months prior to this loan renewal, that it would be a good idea to put forward a bill authorizing branch banking, and removing the restrictions.

Our information is the legislation passed the Arkansas House by a vote of 80 to 10, and that it passed the Senate by more than a 2 to 1 majority. Does that comport with your recollection?

Mr. STRANGE. I believe it would. I did not follow the legislation that closely, but I knew that it was passed with a wide majority.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Penick, does that comport with your recollection?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, it does.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This was not a particularly close or controversial piece of legislation, from the standpoint of the votes involved, by the legislative body; correct?

Mr. STRANGE. I would think so.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. "Blood Sport"—which obviously provides the basis for our going into all of this business of branch banking because it wasn't anything we had explored. I will be quite candid with you, prior to the publication of that book which indicates that the legislation was initiated by Twin City Bank, and indeed, we have now demonstrated with a memorandum dated 10 months earlier, previous to the passage of that legislation, that it was, in fact, initiated by a State regulator.

Let me ask you whether, in your view, there is any evidence to suggest, in any way, shape or form, any quid pro quo or relationship between the passage of branch banking legislation and the renewal of this now $36,000 unremarkable Whitewater loan?

Mr. STRANGE. There was none that I am aware of or knew of at the time, and still don't know. The book that you refer to, I have not read in any detail, but the parts that I have read seem to be more fiction than fact.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Penick, do you have a view on this?

Mr. PENICK. I would agree, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Eldridge?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. I would agree.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In connection with the 1987 loan renewal, is it correct that the Clintons were not in any way removed or released from responsibility for the ultimate repayment of that loan?

Mr. STRANGE. No, they were not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is it correct that that loan was unremarkable in terms of other commercial loans made by your bank at the time with regard to the length of the extension and the interest rate charge?

Mr. STRANGE. I think it could be classed that way. It was unremarkable.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Strange, can you think of any reason why the Clintons would have some nefarious or untoward motive for not wanting to submit a financial statement which was ultimately submitted in April 1987?

Mr. STRANGE. Not that I know of.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They had previously submitted financial statements to your and other banks; and, of course, Governor Clinton had submitted state-mandated financial disclosure forms which identified the Whitewater investments.

Mr. Penick, can you think of any reason why that would motivate the Clintons to be worried or otherwise be concerned about submitting a financial statement, other than the nuisance involved as this loan rolled over?

Mr. PENICK. Not to my knowledge, no, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Can you, Ms. Eldridge?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Sir, I didn't have any involvement with this loan.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, since you were there, you are a target of opportunity and this is what happens in these hearings. I'm not suggesting you should have any knowledge. This book, "Blood Sport," seems to imply that the Twin City Bank was the only bank that favored this 1987 legislation on branch banking. Mr. Penick, were there other banks that, to your knowledge, specifically, supported this legislation?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, there were.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Can you tell us who supported the legislation? Was it just a fluke that it passed 80 to 10 in the House?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, there were a lot of banks that were concerned about our restrictive branching legislation, and we needed to break the mold and start liberalizing those branching laws to be competitive with other States and be competitive with the savings and loans. Union National Bank, which was probably the third largest bank in the State was a close ally with us in this lobbying effort. The Arkansas Association of Bank Holding Companies was very supportive of it. A bank in Jacksonville, Arkansas and the Walton Banks were very supportive of it. And there were other banks out in the State that thought it was time to liberalize our branching laws.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. As the Chairman has pointed out, you viewed this as a somewhat archaic restriction which put you at a disadvantage in Arkansas and with other States?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, it was just a matter of time, in our opinion. The Mississippi—the Deposit & Guaranty case had just been announced in Mississippi where the Comptroller of the Currency was granting Deposit & Guaranty National Bank the authority to branch statewide and there were lots of pressures from the savings and loans to receive more liberal branching. The Comptroller of the Currency was more lenient in branching areas and certainly had the authority in some cases to step in and grant branching applications that State banks didn't have the right to.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In the minute of my remaining time, can you explain the support that the 1988 legislation enjoyed?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir. Basically in the end, everybody supported the compromise legislation in the Omnibus Banking Bill. Different factions started out with different drafts of the bill and they had different issues in it that had to be lobbied and resolved, but ultimately it was a pretty fairly unanimous effort to get the thing passed through various stages.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In term of the ultimate vote, more or less on the same lines?

Mr. PENICK. I believe so. I cannot recall it specifically.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I don't have those figures. I wouldn't want to mislead you by suggesting I know them, but if you have any reason to believe that this was a closer vote, than the 1987 legislation, I would like to hear your view.

Mr. PENICK. No, sir. Basically, if the bankers get their act together and agree on a bill, it would go through the legislative process without problems.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Strange, you testified that there was "no particular problem" with the Whitewater loan. Do you recall that testimony?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You are familiar with the system of rating loans, pass, special mention, substandard, doubtful, and loss; right?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. At your bank, what would a 6 be?

Mr. STRANGE. It would be doubtful.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What would a 5 be?

Mr. STRANGE. Probably would be a substandard.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What would a 4 be?

Mr. STRANGE. Watch.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What would a loss be? Wouldn't a loss be a 6?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Loss would be a 6, doubtful would be a 5, substandard would be a 4; right?

Mr. STRANGE. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then what's called a special mention, you're substandard? You're familiar with that term, are you?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That would probably be a 3?

Mr. STRANGE. No, not in our bank.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What would be a pass loan?

Mr. STRANGE. A 3 would be pass loan.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What would a 1 be?

Mr. STRANGE. 1? A 1-rated loan?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would that be a pass loan as well?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And 2 would be a pass loan as well?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So you have three ratings for pass, and your first ratings was a 4 for substandard; is that right?

Mr. STRANGE. I believe that's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If there was no particular problem with the Clinton loan, why was it—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I think we've been calling it the Whitewater loan.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why was concern expressed with regard to the absence of financial statements, the fact that there was a need to have the contracts maintained at your bank, and the fact that sales proceeds had to be applied to the note at the meeting on January 8, 1987? It was not a note that was perfectly clean, was it? It had some deficiencies; correct?

Mr. STRANGE. I don't know that those would be deficiencies. With the exception of the financial statement, they would be—

Mr. GIUFFRA. A regulator would flag a loan, if you didn't have a financial statement; right?

Mr. STRANGE. No. He would possibly list it as a deficiency but I don't know that the loan would be flagged.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You would argue that loan, absent the financial statements, would be a clean loan?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The fact that it did not have the financial statements was a deficiency in the loan?

Mr. STRANGE. That is correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, Ms. Davenport, I'm sorry, you are now known as Ms. Eldridge—Davenport back in this period—you were a Senior Vice President and then later an Executive Vice President at Twin City Bank?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you have many dealings with regard to loans during the 1987-88 period with a balance of about $50,000 at 1st Ozark?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. I didn't have any dealings with loans from 1st Ozark.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were a friend of Ms. Clinton?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Close friend; is that right?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Good friend.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were also on the Board of the ADFA organization, Arkansas Development Financial Authority?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were appointed by Governor Clinton?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ever contact Mrs. Clinton with regard to the Whitewater loan that was maintained at 1st Ozark?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. No, sir, I did not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And are you certain that you did not contact Mrs. Clinton?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put up on the Elmo a document that bears Bates number House W/W report 9540. This is a document, across the top, it says Hillary Rodham Clinton and appears to be some note of Mrs. Clinton's, and then it says, "Notes, talk with M. Davenport." Presumably that's you.

Ms. ELDRIDGE. That's what it says.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Up in the right-hand corner, it says 1987.

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. There's a discussion and it says, "$56,623 balance," and then it says below that, "$2,303.78, October 3." Then it says, "5-year amortization with 2 years"—I can't really read the rest of it—"Note secured by mortgage received 3/18/78 on 171 acres known as Whitewater Estates. Originally $121,000 note." Do you recall giving this information to Mrs. Clinton?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. No, sir, I do not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It would appear from this note, in Mrs. Clinton's handwriting, that you did.

Ms. ELDRIDGE. I would like to point out to you at the top of the page where it says notes of a talk with M. Davenport, that's not the same handwriting as the rest of the—

Mr. GIUFFRA. Are you familiar with Mrs. Clinton's handwriting?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. I'm familiar with her signature, but I'm looking at the differences in the characters, and I believe that you will note that the ink is darker, the characters look different. And I don't have any knowledge that—

Mr. GIUFFRA. So what you're saying is you are absolutely certain you never spoke to Mrs. Clinton about this loan?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. I don't have any recollection.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You don't have a recollection but the only evidence we have is this document which has your name and a discussion of the loan. Now, Mr. Strange, the information that's contained on this piece of paper appears to be about this particular Whitewater loan; right?

Mr. STRANGE. Appears to be, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It appears to be correct information; right?

Mr. STRANGE. I have not gone back to research the exact balances and all, but I would think that it's close to being correct, the balance and all.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, Mr. Penick, did you ever ask Ms. Davenport to speak to Mrs. Clinton about the deficiency in connection with the Whitewater loan, and in particular, the absence of a financial statement?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you have any recollection of doing so?

Mr. PENICK. I do not, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Strange, are you aware of Ms. Eldridge being asked to do that?

Mr. STRANGE. No, I was not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put up on the Elmo the testimony of Mr. Proctor in his deposition, and I'll begin on page 55. Mr. Strange, who was Ronald Proctor? He testified here yesterday.

Mr. STRANGE. He was a loan officer with the bank, with 1st Ozark National Bank, and the primary officer handling this credit.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Vernon Dewey, who was he?

Mr. STRANGE. He was a junior loan officer, consumer loan officer with the bank, with 1st Ozark National Bank.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why don't we first look to Mr. Proctor's testimony at his deposition.

Mr. STRANGE. Do we have a copy of that?

Mr. GIUFFRA. You should have it in your packets. We'll put it up on the Elmo.

The CHAIRMAN. Refer to it, please, by giving the page.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Pages 55 and 56.

Senator SARBANES. This is the Mr. Ronald Proctor who was here yesterday?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Correct.

Senator SARBANES. Is this from yesterday's transcript?

Mr. GIUFFRA. No, this is from his deposition.

Senator SARBANES. Was he asked about this yesterday?

Mr. GIUFFRA. I believe he was.

The CHAIRMAN. It's in his deposition.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I'll just read: "Question: Did anyone at—"

The CHAIRMAN. Wait a second. You have to put it up on the Elmo. Do we have it so we can put it up?

Mr. STRANGE. I don't believe I have a copy of it in the packet.

The CHAIRMAN. Do we have copies of this? Is this Mr. Proctor? So now everybody knows who Mr. Proctor is? Mr. Strange, do you know who he is?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes, I do.

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Let's go.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It says:

Question: Did anyone at 1st Ozark ever tell you that they had had contact with Margaret Davenport regarding the Whitewater loan?

Answer: No. It was my understanding that someone was going to speak with Margaret to help convey some information to Mrs. Clinton concerning the renewal of the loan.

Question: Who was that person?

Answer: That would have been Ed Penick, who was Chairman of our Board at that time.

Question: How did you come to know this?

Answer: This was discussed in a board meeting.

Question: Do you recall the date of that board meeting?

Answer: No.

Going down further.

Question: Can you explain the circumstances around Mr. Penick's inquiry?

Answer: We were having some difficulty getting financial statements, as we had often had with this loan. And we had asked—we had discussed that that was one of our deficiencies—not the only deficiency we had. But we were talking about deficiencies, the sensitive nature of the deficiency because of Mr. Clinton being the Governor. And Mr. Penick says, "Well, gosh, Margaret and Hillary are personal acquaintances. Let me ask and see if she can help you get the financial statement."

Mr. Penick, does this refresh your recollection about what might have happened back in 1987?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Eldridge?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. I can assure you Mr. Penick did not ask me to speak with Hillary Clinton about financial statements.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why don't you turn to the testimony of Mr. Dewey, page 28 of his deposition, May 3rd:

Question: Do you recall any discussions regarding the Whitewater loan that involved Mr. Penick?

Answer: Yes.

Question: Could you tell us about them?

Answer: I don't remember specifics, but I know that Ed was there, Ed Penick. Susan Sisk was there. Ron was there. I'm not sure Wes was. And we were discussing the financial statement on the Clintons. And Ed said that Margaret was personal friends of Hillary's and Susan said something to the effect that yes, she thought she was. Ed said that he would get Margaret to call Hillary and see if we could get a financial statement.

Question: Do you recall what financial statement, or when this occurred?

Answer: No, I don't. This is a memory in my head.

Question: Do you know if Mr. Penick asked Davenport to get a financial statement?

Answer: No, I don't.

Question: Do you recall if the financial statement was obtained?

Answer: I do not recall getting a financial statement.

Now, Mr. Strange, do you recall being at a meeting where Ms. Eldridge was going to be asked to get a financial statement from Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. STRANGE. I do not remember such a meeting.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Penick, again?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Eldridge?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. I'll state again, Mr. Penick never asked me anything about a financial statement for Hillary Clinton.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Penick, would Mr. Proctor have any reason to make this up?

Mr. PENICK. I'm sorry, Senator, I didn't understand you.

The CHAIRMAN. You've read both the testimony and had it read to you by both Mr. Proctor and Mr. Dewey. You know these men, don't you?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know them to be honorable men?

Mr. PENICK. As far as I know, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Would they have any reason to make up this statement, or is it just a question that you don't recall?

Mr. PENICK. I don't recall. I remember being at a meeting where I volunteered to contact Mrs. Clinton and try to get the financial statement, which I did.

The CHAIRMAN. Would it be reasonable for both Mr. Dewey and Mr. Proctor to have a more specific memory that you said specifically, that you knew Margaret to be a friend of Mrs. Clinton and you would contact her?

Mr. PENICK. I don't recall talking about Margaret at that meeting, no, sir, or any other meeting.

The CHAIRMAN. Could you have?

Mr. PENICK. It's possible but I don't recall it.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. Now, we're making some progress—do you know Margaret Eldridge?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. She was an employee of yours at that time?

Mr. PENICK. I was not her supervisor, no, sir. She worked for Twin City Bank.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you know that she had a personal relationship with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. PENICK. I knew she was a friend of Mrs. Clinton, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Eldridge, while you were at Twin City Bank, did you ever lobby Governor Clinton or a member of his staff?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Lobby?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Yes.

Ms. ELDRIDGE. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ever attempt to arrange meetings between senior bank officers and the Governor or members of his staff?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. In my deposition, there were some notes that showed that I arranged for a luncheon with Betsey Wright and Terry Renaud.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall arranging that luncheon?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. I remember arranging a luncheon with Terry Renaud and Betsey Wright. I didn't recall, and I still don't recall, the content of the meeting.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Renaud, was he your boss?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He was the Chairman of the bank?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Betsey Wright was Chief of Staff of the Governor?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You don't recall anything more about this particular meeting?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put on the Elmo JRTS 2. What I would like to do now is go through some of the history of the 1988 bank branching legislation. This document was produced to the Committee by Mr. Tisdale, Document Custodian for the Gubernatorial papers. And it notes Sam Bratton, then Counsel to the Governor and a member of the Governor's staff was most involved in banking legislation.

Now, Mr. Penick, did you know a man named Bo Carvill?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, I know Mr. Carvill.

Mr. GIUFFRA. At this period in 1988, was he the head of the Arkansas Bankers Association?

Mr. PENICK. I believe he was Executive Director, yes, sir, of the Arkansas Bankers Association.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who is Mr. Hartsfield?

Mr. PENICK. Mr. Hartsfield, President of a bank in Searcy.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was he Senior Officer of the Bankers Association?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Again, the Bankers Association was probably the preeminent trade association for banks in Arkansas?

Mr. PENICK. It had the greatest number of members, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall discussing with either Mr. Carvill or Mr. Hartsfield Twin City's position with regard to whether there should be a special legislative session to consider banking legislation?

Mr. PENICK. I did probably discuss it with both of them, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This memo says "BC/Bo Carvill, W. Hartsfield." This is a meeting held on January 25, 1988. It states on the first line, "Opposition—TCB, Walton Banks, Union, maybe Bowen—said his will probably oppose." This is a question as to whether there should be a special session. Do you recall Twin City Bank being opposed to a special session of the legislature back in January 1988, as reflected in this note of Mr. Bratton?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir. Our reservation at the time was, as I testified to I think earlier, that there was a provision—

Mr. GIUFFRA. This is the 300-foot provision?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir. And we weren't opposed to the legislation, but we were opposed to any legislation that would have that restrictive provision in it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up another document from Mr. Tisdale. It bears Bates number 496. This is a note from Ms. Wright to Governor Clinton dated 4/19/88. Ms. Eldridge, this memo reflects the lunch that you had arranged with Mr. Renaud.

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I'll just read some of the memo. It begins, "I had lunch with Terry Renaud and Margaret Davenport today." Then going down to the bottom of the first paragraph, "I knew that if Terry Renaud asked her to set up the lunch with me, I had to do it for her." You had been considered for Bank Commissioner, I gather; right?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now in the third full paragraph, it says:

1. Terry says there is no way to declare this a 'State' emergency. Most of the elements of the Omnibus Bill will pass in the January session regardless of the State-charted S&L issue.

Then going down,

4. Terry says if he were in an S&L, he would move in with resentment that bankers were utilizing one of their provisions to bargain their own deal.

Then there is a discussion of the dual-banking system. On the next page:

6. He, and he says other like-minded bankers, are unwilling to be overt in opposition to this bill; he doesn't oppose it. He says there is no emergency and it will be a donnybrook, no matter how many legislators say they are for the bill.

8. He is fearful that a donnybrook in a visible special session will seriously impair what he believes the big crisis to banks to be: going to the people to change the usury rate.

Do you recall this lunch at which Mr. Renaud indicated to Ms. Wright that the Governor should not call a special session?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Sir, I don't remember the content of the luncheon. It was my responsibility to arrange the luncheon. If you'll notice, I am not quoted in there anywhere.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You attended the luncheon?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. I attended the luncheon.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Penick, did you discuss with Mr. Renaud his opposition to a special session?

Mr. PENICK. I can't recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was he looking forward to the special session? Was it something he was encouraging, or was Twin City Bank opposed to the special session? You had gotten what you wanted the prior year, you had gotten the branching into Little Rock; correct?

Mr. PENICK. No, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was Twin City Bank in favor of the special session in April 1988?

Mr. PENICK. I think we were favorable to a special session if it would help break down the banking branch restrictions.

The CHAIRMAN. The light is on.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I'll come back to this.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If there is a notion here that a special session called in 1988 was a quid pro quo for extending a 1987 loan. A loan that had been on the books since 1978, had been paid down from $186,000 to $36,000. Maybe somebody here could answer that question directly, if that seems to be a point of relevance.

Is there some connection between the 1988 special session of the legislature of Arkansas and the 1987 extension of the Whitewater loan in your view, Mr. Strange?

Mr. STRANGE. None.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Penick.

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, not in the least.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have any idea of what connection that could be, Ms. Eldridge?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. I don't have any idea what connection this has with anything.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Eldridge, you indicated that you did not contact Ms. Clinton about providing a financial statement. Are you quite clear in your recollection?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Yes, sir, I'm very clear in my recollection.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Penick, you are quite clear in your recollection that you did contact Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. PENICK. I know I wrote a letter, yes, sir, to Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Eldridge, was it common knowledge, in the bank in 1987, that you were friends with Mrs. Clinton?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So is it possible that Mr. Proctor, heard about that connection and having heard there was a request for a financial statement, that he may have thought erroneously that you were the person to contact Mrs. Clinton?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. I can't comment on Mr. Proctor's thoughts.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What any of this has to do with the price of beans certainly mystifies me as it relates to who might have contacted Mrs. Clinton to provide a financial statement which was provided and yet it was unnecessary in terms of the approval of this loan which had been paid down to this magisterial sum of $36,000.

Senator SARBANES. Was this loan paid off, eventually?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, it was.

Senator SARBANES. In its entirety?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, all principal and interest was collected.

Senator SARBANES. All the interest was paid on it as well?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. In this period they're asking about, what was the amount of the loan?

Mr. STRANGE. Roughly $36,000 as I recall.

Senator SARBANES. What was it at the outset?

Mr. STRANGE. $180,000-plus.

Senator SARBANES. So at this point it had been paid down from $180,000 to $36,000?

Mr. STRANGE. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Subsequently it was completely paid off?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. All the interest accruing to it was paid?

Mr. STRANGE. That's correct, yes.

Senator SARBANES. Thank you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I'd be prepared to cede back the time to see whether we can develop some relevance to this.

The CHAIRMAN. I think there is some relevance here. Let me tell you, this is not just in a vacuum. I'm not saying that anything was done more or less than what Mr. Proctor and what Mr. Dewey have said. It seems to me their testimony has not been refuted. What we have is a case where you, Mr. Penick, say you don't recall. You think they made this up, the fact that you said we'll get hold of Margaret and have her call? Do you think they really made that up, both of them independently, each of them being deposed independently?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, I don't think so, but it would be abnormal for them to be in a meeting where I was at the bank. I was Chairman of the Board of the bank and was not a member of the officers loan committee or directors loan committee, and rarely would they come to—it's possible, but rarely would those two junior officers come and talk about a loan to the full board.

The CHAIRMAN. Maybe because it was a loan you were concerned about, there was some relevance. Maybe you were concerned, that given the fact that it was the Governor and you didn't want to press him—how do you press and say we need this personal thing and we don't want this red flag to stand up? The fact of the matter is that you did have a relationship with the Governor, didn't you, and no one says that's wrong but you had a relationship?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, I knew—

The CHAIRMAN. My gosh, you knew him from your work with the chamber, and banking legislation, et cetera. I think we become so defensive. Wouldn't you be concerned? Isn't it a difficult thing to approach someone in a high position, even if you have a relationship? To say look, we need your financial documents. We need it because this loan wasn't in compliance. You had to have that particular financial statement and that's a fact.

We had both Mr. Proctor and Mr. Dewey, and they're junior officers, saying they have a problem. Pretty logical as to why they would bring it up and say this is a problem. You say, OK, we'll see if we can't get it. And the information did come. But it is relevant and it is not something that someone mystically created. We didn't create it. It happened.

Now let's keep going.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Strange—

Senator SARBANES. I just want to be clear, Mr. Penick. As I understand it, you did contact Mrs. Clinton about providing this statement; isn't that right?

Mr. PENICK. Senator, I did write her a letter.

Senator SARBANES. So you don't dispute that?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, never have.

The CHAIRMAN. And there's no reason to dispute or suggest that these two men who you knew to be honorable employees, you never had any difficulty with them, did you, with Mr. Dewey?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, I did not. Never have.

The CHAIRMAN. Does he still work there? I don't know whether he does or not.

Mr. PENICK. I don't know—

Mr. STRANGE. He does not.

The CHAIRMAN. You never had any problem with him in terms of his honesty, ethical conduct or anything, did you, Mr. Strange?

Mr. STRANGE. No.

Senator SARBANES. Did you say that he does or doesn't work there now?

Mr. STRANGE. He does not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, maybe one thing could be clarified as to where they work. I know there's an implication that they worked in the same building or the same town or locale.

The CHAIRMAN. But the fact is he testified that he was there and that Ed brought this up and they both remember this with specificity. Now, you don't recall it, and that's OK, but to suggest that somehow these fellows just invented this, when they had no reason to invent this.

Ms. Eldridge, you were a friend of Ms. Clinton's; isn't that true?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's continue.

Senator SARBANES. I think Ms. Eldridge said that she never discussed this with Mrs. Clinton, didn't you?

Ms. ELDRIDGE. That's exactly right.

Senator SARBANES. Well, these fellows may have thought that Mr. Penick was going to get Ms. Eldridge to do it. Apparently Mr. Penick wrote her a letter himself.

The CHAIRMAN. From the testimony of these two gentlemen yesterday, Mr. Proctor and Mr. Dewey, Mr. Penick said at this meeting, this was a conversation that took place, and there was some concern. My gosh, the facts are irrefutable, that that financial documentation was not there; is that correct? It wasn't there; is that correct?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, that's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. It had come in late on a number of prior occasions. It took a little bit of doing to get it there; is that correct, Mr. Penick?

Mr. PENICK. I did not administer the loan. No, sir, I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. That's the testimony—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, I thought Mr. Proctor's testimony was that no one told him that such a contact had been made. He understood that there was a friendship, and it had been discussed, but not that somebody told him Ms. Eldridge had contacted Mrs. Clinton.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, I understand that, but what we have are two junior officers who the pressure was on to see to it that the documentation was in, not only in this case but also in all of the matters that they had, because the regulators were cracking down. They were going from, you might say, business, do whatever you want to, to coming in looking and supervising in a much tighter manner. That was the history of what was taking place, and not just at your institution.

So the fact of the matter is this was obviously a concern. Otherwise you wouldn't have written a letter, would you, Mr. Penick? You don't generally write letters to people to say get your financial documentation in, did you?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You did?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. That was a general thing that you did?

Mr. PENICK. Where I could help provide document—

The CHAIRMAN. Where you could help? It wasn't a general policy for you to do that. Didn't your junior loan officers and other people do that? Don't stretch the imagination now.

Mr. PENICK. Senator, I'm explaining. If I could assist with documentation, I would be pleased to do so.

The CHAIRMAN. If you could assist. It wasn't a general practice for you to be the person to indicate to someone that they didn't have loan documentation in, was it?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, it was—

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Senator SARBANES. Let him finish.

The CHAIRMAN. I let him finish.

Senator SARBANES. Let him finish.

The CHAIRMAN. Wait a minute, Senator. On your time do your thing. Don't tell me how to conduct myself. He knows he's pushing that point.

Senator SARBANES. Well—

The CHAIRMAN. It was not a general practice for you to send a letter to people who were delinquent, as it related to their financial statement. That you, as the Chairman of the Board, got on the phone or sent a letter out? Was it a general practice? Yes or no?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you. We didn't have to go through all that. If you had been more responsive, I wouldn't have to do that. I asked you that before. Save it for your counsel. Don't play games with us.

Mr. PENICK. I am not, Senator, I am just trying to tell you the truth.

The CHAIRMAN. Wait a minute, Senator, you can make your observation on your time.

Senator SARBANES. I'm not going to sit here and let you browbeat the witness. Let him give a complete answer.

The CHAIRMAN. You know something, Senator, the fact of the matter is we have gone through this now. If he had been responsive instead of trying to hedge and said well, when I can be of assistance, you knew what we were getting at.

Senator SARBANES. If I was being browbeaten this way, I would be very careful about my answer too. I think this witness ought to be given a chance to develop a fuller answer if he wants to do so.

The CHAIRMAN. And he has been.

Senator SARBANES. No, he hasn't. He has been denied that just now. There's no question about that.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, that's your interpretation.

Senator SARBANES. I think that it's the interpretation of anyone watching this proceeding.

The CHAIRMAN. I'll tell you something. Anyone watching the proceeding would see that there have been less than candid responses, testifying to the whole truth instead of attempting to play games.

Senator SARBANES. I don't think they're trying to play games. They're trying to give straight answers.

The CHAIRMAN. No, I don't think so. I think there has been a holding back in a number of cases and it was totally unnecessary. It is not a fair and accurate response for somebody, the Chairman of the Board, or the President, to say or imply that he would regularly send out these notifications when, indeed, it was only in special circumstances. Let's not kid ourselves.

Senator SARBANES. Let him answer that question.

The CHAIRMAN. When you get to it on redirect, you can do that.

Senator SARBANES. I certainly will, but I do think, Mr. Chairman, in all fairness you should do that when you're asking the questions yourself. I mean, this notion, well, I'm going to shout at him and browbeat him and cut him off, and then when you get your turn, they can have a chance to answer the question.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you know, Senator, you are doing that to me. I do not do that to you, and when the witness—

Senator SARBANES. On occasion, Mr. Chairman. On occasion.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, on occasion, but you do it more regularly and I don't think it's necessary. I said to the witness before, let's be a little more forthcoming. He did it with the business about the 300 feet, I would suggest he was playing games and he is playing games. I characterize it as playing games and being less than fully responsive to the questions.

Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's go back to the 1988 branching legislation. We know on January 25, 1988, there was a meeting with Governor Clinton, Mr. Carvill, and Mr. Hartsfield of the Bankers Association in which, at least according to Mr. Bratton's notes, it indicates the Twin City Bank was opposed to the special session that would consider the Omnibus Bank Bill.

Then we have this luncheon on April 19, 1988, arranged by Ms. Eldridge, at which the Chairman of Twin City Bank, Mr. Renaud, attends a meeting with the Governor's Chief of Staff and indicates that Twin City would prefer that the Governor not declare a special session to consider this Omnibus Bank Bill.

Let us turn to another document. Let us turn to the document bearing Bates number JRTS 491. This is a "Memorandum—From: Sam Bratton. To: Governor/Betsey Wright. Date: April 25, 1988. Subject: Special Session." It says:

Bowen called this morning to inquire about as to what I thought were the possibilities for a special session. His assessment based on discussions primarily with First Commercial's correspondent banks is that an overwhelming majority of the banks out in the State are expressing support for the proposed legislation, but that many of them are "paying lip service" to agreeing and continue to gripe about various specific provisions of the bill and that most of them are not really working that hard on their legislators.

This is the key sentence:

He also said it was his impression that TCB [Twin City Bank] is attempting "to be a spoiler."

Again, Mr. Penick, is that accurate? This rendition from the Governor's Counsel to the Governor and the Governor's Chief of Staff, that Twin City Bank was attempting to be a spoiler with regard to the Omnibus Banking Bill in 1988?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, I didn't view our position that way at all.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's turn to the next document which is another document from Governor Clinton, JRTS 142. This is a letter from Mr. Penick to Marlin Jackson. Do you have that letter, sir?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall writing this letter to Mr. Jackson?

Mr. PENICK. I'm sorry, I have the wrong letter.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This is the May 23, 1988 letter.

Mr. PENICK. I found it, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall writing this letter to Mr. Jackson?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Jackson at this point is at First State and Bank Trust Company in Conway, Arkansas according to your letter; is that right?

Mr. PENICK. I assume so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He had formerly been the Bank Commissioner?

Mr. PENICK. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why did you write the letter to Mr. Jackson?

Mr. PENICK. This is a letter that went to all bankers in the State. It was stating our position with respect to the special session, and the bill that was going to be call the Omnibus Banking Bill.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's look at the second full paragraph, I'll read that into the record. "TCB does not oppose the bill. Our reluctance is based on the effect of one part of the bill that seems directed solely at us and this litigation." Now what was the part of the bill that you thought was directed solely at Twin City Bank?

Mr. PENICK. This was the litigation we spoke of earlier, about First Commercial objecting to our branch which was in 300 feet, which was passed and permitted within Act 539.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Your main concern, as expressed in this letter, was this 300-foot branches limitation; is that right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, we didn't oppose the bill.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I will read the last paragraph, the second page of the letter. You are proposing some legislative language to Mr. Jackson; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, and others that received the letter.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It reads:

As initially stated in this letter, TCB wants to support the proposed bill. However, we must have reliable assurance that the wording 'grandfathers in' any operating branch. We appeal to your sense of fairness and ask for your support to enable TCB to fully and actively support this bill by contacting your legislators and securing their commitment to adopt a grandfather provision that states.

Then it provides the grandfather provision; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Again, your concern is you really need this one specific provision that will allow your bank to keep its branch in the Capitol Building?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir. There were other branches too that may or may not be in jeopardy that we were operating. We were trying to grandfather all of them in that were passed under 539.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were looking for a specific provision that would grandfather your bank?

Mr. PENICK. We wanted that in the bill; we thought it was fair, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's turn to a document, JRTS 141. We looked at this document before the lunch break. This is the note that was sent to Governor Bill Clinton. The Chairman focused your attention on the first paragraph; I would like to focus your attention on the second paragraph.

Mr. PENICK. Mr. Giuffra, which one are you talking about?

Mr. GIUFFRA. I'm talking about the June 6, 1988 note.

Mr. PENICK. The date on our copy is illegible. Is this it?

Mr. GIUFFRA. This is another document we received from Governor Clinton's files. This is the document that says:

Bill, the attached copy is revised slightly from the previous one you have been furnished. I've highlighted the two changes for your information.

In an additional note, on 6-1, the Arkansas Association of Bank Holding Companies Board of Directors adopted this position. A formal notice will come from that organization shortly.

Do you recall trying to get support of the Arkansas Association of Bank Holding Companies for your particular grandfathering provision?

Mr. PENICK. I think they were pretty supportive of the bill that we were trying to get passed, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall the Association of Bank Holding Companies was willing to support your provision which would be this grandfathering of banks within 300 feet?

Mr. PENICK. I don't specifically recall, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But doesn't this letter suggest that you had gone out and gotten the Association to support this particular provision?

Mr. PENICK. Well, I don't know that that provision is what's referenced in this note.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This was the only provision, according to your letter to Mr. Jackson, and to other bankers, as you testified on May 23rd. You indicated that your concern with this legislation was with regard to this 300-foot branch restriction; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So the next letter, less than 2 weeks later, to the Governor, talks about the provision that you wanted in the bill and how the Association of Bank Holding Companies was supporting your position with regard to presumably the 300-foot branch restriction.

Now on 7/5, we have the handwritten note that you were unsure as whether it went to Governor Clinton, but you thought it had gone to the Bank Commissioner. Then on 7/5, we have the note JRTS 195 and let's put that back up. That's the memorandum from Betsey to the Governor dated July 5, 1988. Re: Bankers Bill. cc: Sam Bratton, who was the person at the Governor's office responsible for this particular piece of legislation.

I think this is a very important memo to look at, because this memo read in connection with the handwritten note dated the same date of 7/5 in which you thank Bill, and we don't know who Bill is—although the only document we got was from Governor Clinton's files.

It has been reported to me your assistance on the Omnibus Bankers Bill and the 300-foot provision and I wanted to relay our appreciation for taking this stand. Terry and I can't understand why Mr. Bowen [your competitor from First Commercial] feels so threatened by our little office in Capital Tower.

Then on the same day, we have this memo from Betsey to the "Gov" which says:

Neither Sam nor I understands what your next step/follow-up with Bill Bowen is on the 300-foot issue.

The bill which is being delivered to this office in the morning by the Bankers Association/Bill Ford does not contain the 300-foot provision based on their conversation with you this morning.

This memo, by any reasonable measure, seems to indicate that Governor Clinton spoke to the Bankers Association and/or the Bank Commissioner and told them that he did not want the next version of the Omnibus Bank Bill to contain the 300-foot limitation. Isn't that the most fair reading of this particular memo, sir?

Mr. PENICK. Would you state that again? I'm sorry. I didn't follow it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's focus on the last sentence of the memo.

The bill which is being delivered to this office in the morning by the Bankers Association/Bill Ford does not contain the 300-foot provision based on their conversation with you this morning.

This is a memo from Betsey Wright to Governor Clinton. The only reasonable interpretation of that sentence is that Governor Clinton spoke to the Bankers Association and/or the Bank Commissioner, Mr. Ford, and told him he did not want the new version of the Omnibus Bank Bill to contain the 300-foot provision; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, I think that would be consistent with my handwritten note, I assume it to be to Bill Ford on July 5th.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The point is—I know Mr. Ben-Veniste is giving us side chatter.

The CHAIRMAN. Now wait. Mr. Ben-Veniste is not. That's not right. We are over time. Continue. Make your point.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The point is this memo clearly demonstrates that the Governor did intervene to remove the 300-foot provision from the legislation as your bank wanted. And your bank was the only bank that was going to benefit from the elimination of this provision. I mean, this was the thing you had been lobbying for starting in January. You had written a letter to every banker in the State about this provision on May 23, 1988, and then by July 5th, the Governor has taken care of it for you.

Mr. PENICK. That's not the way I interpret it, no, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You can interpret it and then we are going to go to Mr. Ben-Veniste. If you have some kind of interpretation, Mr. Penick, that can clear it up, you can tell me, because I am lost.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's turn to another document.

The CHAIRMAN. No, wait. I am going to do this now.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Penick, Mr. Strange, how many times did this loan get extended? When did it first get extended? It was extended every year; wasn't it, wasn't that the way it worked?

Mr. STRANGE. I don't recall the exact number of times. It was extended numerous times over the life of the loan, thought.

Senator SARBANES. Before we reach this point that we are talking about here, this loan had been extended previously more than once, in fact, a number of times; is that correct?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes, that would be right.

Senator SARBANES. On the previous occasions when it was extended, was there legislation in the Arkansas legislature that involved your bank and the Governor?

Mr. STRANGE. Not that I am aware of.

Senator SARBANES. No, I mean, what's being more than just suggested here is that this loan got extended in this year because of this legislation that was pending. Now was there any connection between the extension of the loan and the legislation?

Mr. PENICK. Absolutely not.

Mr. STRANGE. None, none that I know of at all.

Senator SARBANES. No basis on which to assert that, is there?

Mr. STRANGE. There is none.

Mr. PENICK. Not to my knowledge, no, sir.

Senator SARBANES. In fact the extension of the loan was handled, as in the past, separately; and I take it according to however you tried to do those things. This legislation was something that came up in this particular instance but hadn't been present before; isn't that correct?

Mr. PENICK. I believe so, yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Well, you know, I mean, they can go round and round about this thing and try to establish some linkage; but I don't see it. And I don't know how long we are going to spend sort of on this ring-around-the-rosey.

Now, Mr. Penick, I didn't think you had a chance to fully respond earlier on this volunteering to help collect documents for a credit file. Was that something you did on occasion?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, I did, but it was not a general practice.

Senator SARBANES. Not a general practice, but do you recall other instances in which you did it?

Mr. PENICK. Oh, yes, sir. Yes, sir. I was on numerous loan committees, and if it was a situation where I could assist, I volunteered to do that. It was not a general practice, I did not do it every day, but I did it, and it was not just done in this situation.

Senator SARBANES. In fact, in your deposition, you were asked:

Question: Was this the first time you had volunteered to help collect documents for a credit file?

Answer: No, sir.

Question: Do you recall the other instances in which you did it?

Answer: They are too numerous to recall.

Question: So you had done it previous to this.

Answer: I'm sorry. I didn't hear you.

Question: So you had previously volunteered to help collect documents for a credit file?

Answer: Yes, sir.

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I think that's important. You didn't do it in every instance, or it wasn't a standard practice, but you did it often enough that it constitutes a number of times in which you engaged in such activity; is that correct?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, it was.

Senator SARBANES. Is that a fair way to put it?

Mr. PENICK. That's fair, yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Now is there anything you want to add at this point?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, that concludes it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. From 1978 through 1987, that's 9 years, you go forward, rolling this loan over, as we heard, on 6-month or a year basis because that's the way things were done in Arkansas at that time, in order to deal with interest rate fluctuations. Suddenly, the notion has been advanced that in 1987, there was a required trade between support by the Governor for branch banking legislation—passed 80 to 10 by the legislature—and getting still another loan renewal. By this time, the loan was paid down to $36,000—the sales from the lots and the contracts, fully servicing the payments on the loan, and the loan being further collateralized by the remaining lots in the Whitewater Development parcel; is that fair to say?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Strange.

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It is interesting that the document regarding your recollection of who it was you were writing to when you wrote to "Bill, it has been reported to me that your assistance on the Omnibus Bankers Bill and the 300-foot provision, and I wanted to relay my appreciation for taking this stand." It is dated July 5, 1988.

The memorandum which Mr. Giuffra just alluded to, from Betsey Wright to Governor Clinton, regarding the Bankers Bill is dated exactly the same day, July 5, 1988. And that memo says, "the bill which is being delivered to this office in the morning by the Bankers Association/Bill Ford does not contain the 300-foot provision based on their conversation with you this morning."

Therefore, the notion that the tie-in between your letter of appreciation to Bill Ford, the Commissioner, who took a position with respect to the 300-foot question, whatever the heck that means, in terms of the price of beans, of what this Committee is supposed to do, at any event, leads you further to conclude that your note was written to Bill Ford; is that right?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have nothing further.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up on the Elmo documents bearing Bates number JRTS 204 and 205. Mr. Penick, you will agree that 300-foot branching restriction was important to Twin City Bank; right?

Mr. PENICK. I'm sorry, we don't have the document yet.

Mr. GIUFFRA. We will get it to you—204 and 205. It is a letter from Mr. Bowen of First Commercial to Governor Clinton.

Mr. BELMAN. Counsel, do you have a date for the document?

Mr. GIUFFRA. This is the July 7, 1988 letter.

The CHAIRMAN. He is giving it to you right now.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Penick, let's go back to a question first. You have the letter in front of you?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, you will agree that the 300-foot branching restriction was a concern to Twin City Bank; right?

Mr. PENICK. It was important, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It was important to you. Now, you had even taken the step of writing a letter to other bankers throughout the State, including Mr. Jackson, seeking a grandfather provision so that you could keep your branch open in Capital Tower; right?

Mr. PENICK. And other branches that might come in—

Mr. GIUFFRA. Other Twin City branches?

Mr. PENICK. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You had even been in litigation with First Commercial with regard to the Act 539; right?

Mr. PENICK. We were operating the branch and First Commercial sued us to stop it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Penick, you know what the problem is here? The problem is that it is hard to get a simple answer to a simple question. Let me be very simple. There was a case going on that everybody in that area in banking knew about. It is discussed in the letter to the Governor by Mr. Bowen, the Chairman of your competitor, that makes it clear that there is an ongoing case challenging this home-rule provision. Depending on the outcome of the case, you are either going to get to keep your branch there or you are going to have to move your branch.

This is not a matter of great momentous policy. There are no economic policy questions. It is a matter of pure personal interest to the two banks that are involved in the litigation: Your bank, which didn't want to have to close up shop in its office here and move outside of the 300 feet, and the bank of the competitor that wanted you to move.

And the letter on July 7, 1988, to the Governor from Mr. Bowen makes it very clear that the whole function of this part of legislation on the 300 feet is to address this case which is going on, because if they wind up changing the law, and they repeal or repudiate the home office protection feature, the case is going to go away, and you are going to have to move your branch. Isn't that really what this letter is about? Isn't that what this whole deal was about during the first 6 months of 1988?

Mr. PENICK. Well, the thrust of the litigation was primarily a Constitutional issue.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The thrust of the litigation for you was not an abstract interest in the Constitution of the State of Arkansas; it was your business. You had a branch, you were being challenged on the location of that branch; your competitors wanted you to move your branch; you wanted to keep your branch. That's what the case was about to you; right?

Mr. PENICK. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No, it was about Constitutional theory; right?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now let's take this letter of July 7th. You may be interested in Constitutional theory but your competitors and the ABA and these other individuals from the banks, seemed to be interested in the practical element, as one would expect. They seemed to be interested in this particular case, and this particular rule that I gather protects banks in their home offices. Now as a matter of fact, this was a personal concern to you because you actually had a minority interest in the very building in which this particular branch that was the subject of the case was located; right?

Mr. PENICK. That is correct. But it was an easy solution, just move it back more than 300 feet in the building.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In addition to your interest in this as the Chairman of the TCB, you had an interest as an owner of the building; is that right?

Mr. PENICK. I was a minority owner of the building, yes, sir. I have testified to that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had a piece of the building. Now what seems interesting about this—and Mr. Ben-Veniste kind of alluded to it—I mean, we are now in, I guess, what is essentially the end of the first decade of the existence of this loan. This loan was on the books, started out in 1978. We heard the whole story about how the loan in the predecessor bank was originally split. And it turned out that the downpayment was really borrowed. There were all kinds of—you know, part of it was repaid and part of it wasn't repaid. Now 10 years into this loan, you had become a Federally-chartered bank; right?

Mr. PENICK. Is the question to me, Mr. Chertoff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, the question, Mr. Penick, was you had become a Federally-chartered bank?

Mr. PENICK. "You" being whom?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I mean, 1st Ozark.

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, we converted to the charter to a national charter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did that happen?

Mr. PENICK. I'm not sure.

Mr. STRANGE. January 1, 1986.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That means, Mr. Strange, the Office of the Controller of the Currency gets involved in examining the bank; right?

Mr. STRANGE. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We heard testimony from Mr. Proctor yesterday that they tended to be a little more rigorous, let's say, in the way they looked at loan documentation issues. So now, for the first time, 8 years into the life of this loan, there is a new regime, there are new regulators. We have a loan that Mr. Proctor and Mr. Dewey acknowledged yesterday was the subject of discussion in the bank. I think Mr. Dewey said it was kind of a nuisance loan, there were problems with the loan.

Then in 1987, there was a significant effort to get that financial statement and the financial statement comes in in March 1987; isn't that right, Mr. Strange?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then in 1988, you have to get a financial statement again if the loan is going to be turned over. But in 1988, the decision was made that there would be a waiver of the requirement of any future financial statement, or at least of any financial statement for that year from the Clintons; isn't that correct, Mr. Penick?

Mr. PENICK. I don't know, sir. I was not involved in the——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Strange, that's correct; right?

Mr. STRANGE. Excuse me——

Mr. CHERTOFF. In 1988, the requirement of a financial statement from the Clintons was waived; right?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes, it was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The reason this is brought up is because we have an issue here that is frankly, judging from the letter of July 7th, of concern to a bunch of bankers who are worrying about where their branches are located, but which doesn't concern some momentous issue of economic policy. And yet, it appears from the memo of July 5th from Betsey Wright to the Governor, which the Governor reads and checks off, that the Governor personally has intervened to take a position on this 300-foot issue.

We have this case here involving a dispute between two banks about where are they going to locate a branch and the Governor personally gets on the phone and gets involved in a discussion about whether we are going to change the pre-existing law and drop this 300-foot limitation out.

And you would agree with me, Mr. Penick, you wouldn't normally think the Governor of a State would take a personal interest in a matter as particular and as individual as how there is going to be a resolution of a lawsuit between two banks about where the branch is going to be located. That's not a big macroeconomic policy issue, is it?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, but it was holding up the legislation. The agreement the Governor had with Mr. Hartsfield and others, where if the bankers came together and agreed on legislation, he will call a special session and sponsor it through. This was simply an attempt to get that agreement. We wanted the 300 feet thrown out; others wanted it kept in.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In connection with this memo of July 5th, we have on the very same day, your note in your handwriting to Bill—and you are telling us you don't know whether it is Bill Ford or Bill Clinton—specifically thanking him for assistance on the 300-foot provision; right? This comes not from the files of the Banking Commission, which hasn't produced any such document, but from the files of the Governor. And it is your testimony that the Bill that you are addressing here is not Bill Clinton, but it is Bill Ford; is that right?

Mr. PENICK. That's what I recall, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But the memo written the very same day from Betsey Wright to the Governor indicates that the deletion—it says, “the bill does not contain the 300-foot provision based on their conversation with you,” the “you” being Governor Clinton, “this morning.” In other words, the contemporaneous memo of Betsey Wright indicates that the basis for not having the 300-foot provision is the conversation with the Governor, and that the Governor is the one who finally breaks the logjam. Would you agree; that’s correct?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, I don’t think he did. I think it was still the same understanding that he had all along: The banking community had to come together. Because it was a very controversial issue, he had supporters on all sides; he needed to have a piece of legislation that would go through without opposition, or the least opposition as possible.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me also observe to you, Mr. Penick, and you have no way of knowing this but it may help move you on your recollection of whom you wrote this Bill letter to—that all these letters were produced, all these memos which are internal memos of the Governor, were produced from the Governor’s office, and they are numbered in order the way they are produced. And right in the middle of the production is the letter to—the Bill letter, the handwritten Bill letter, which I think further confirms that this was a letter which was directed not to the Bank Commission, which doesn’t seem to have a copy of it, but to the Governor’s office, which has it in the same file as all the other internal memos of the Governor concerning this issue.

My question to you is this: This 300-foot issue, was an issue of concern to your bank because of an ongoing case which involved the location of one of your branches; isn’t that correct?

Mr. PENICK. It was an issue, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that was the issue that, from the beginning of the year, you were pushing and lobbying to get resolved in a way that would support your point of view; in other words, you wanted to delete that 300-foot limitation from the law so that the lawsuit would go away and you could have your branch in the building which you owned a minority interest in; right?

Mr. PENICK. It was not the top priority, no, sir, but it was something we were working on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was kind of close to the top; right?

Mr. PENICK. I wouldn’t put it there, no, sir. I think the passage of the Omnibus Banking Bill was a lot more important.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was certainly priority enough for you to spend time on and write notes on and have conversations with around get up—kind of get opposite this Arkansas Bankers Association group that wanted to keep the bill. I mean, it was important enough for you to do that?

Mr. PENICK. We were adversaries of the Arkansas Bankers Association for a long, long time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On this particular issue; right?

Mr. PENICK. I think they opposed this, yes, sir, in the beginning.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And then it turns out the Governor called it your way; is that right?

Mr. PENICK. The bill that was ultimately passed did not have a 300-foot provision in it, no, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's what you wanted?

Mr. PENICK. Among other things, that's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Penick, if nothing else, let's at least get this one straight. The bill that came out did not have the 300-foot provision, which meant that there was no legal impediment to your keeping the branch in the building you owned a minority interest in, and that was what you wanted; yes or no?

Mr. PENICK. I'm sorry. Would you repeat your question?

Mr. CHERTOFF. The bill that was finally passed did not have the 300-foot limitation; you got to keep the branch in the building, and that's what you wanted; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, it was a good bill and we agreed with it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Penick, who is Wayne Hartsfield?

Mr. PENICK. He is President of a bank in Searcy, and in early 1988, he was President of the Arkansas Bankers Association.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now according to the notes that we have, on March 14, 1988, you stated that:

Wayne Hartsfield, President of Arkansas Bankers Association and President of First National Bank of Searcy, visited with me today concerning a proposal he is working on to settle the Branch Banking dispute.

Hartsfield has an agreement with the Governor to call a special session, upon full concurrence and commitment of the bankers and banking organizations in the State to support the legislation.

Now, you are familiar with that memo, because you apparently dictated it?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did anyone charge you with going back into the files and backdating some document, scooting this into your files, about Mr. Hartsfield being the person who initiated this matter with the Governor's office?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir, not to my knowledge.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Therefore, wouldn't this indicate the true genesis of how this 1988 business all got started, to the extent it has any relevance to anything that we are doing?

Mr. PENICK. I am just reading it, but I don't see any comment relative to the position on the 300-foot in this memo.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right. And with respect to calling the special session, Mr. Hartsfield is the one who had the agreement with the Governor's office about calling the special session, which was the crux of getting any legislation out. According to this memo, that required that you bankers sit down, get your act together, come up with some kind of a compromise you could all live with, and then present it; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That's what happened?

Mr. PENICK. That's what happened, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, Mr. Chertoff told you what Mr. Dewey said in his testimony, but not what Mr. Proctor said. So let me go back over this, this was just yesterday.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So we have the flow. Mr. Dewey, would you agree with me that this loan, this Whitewater loan was a nuisance and was continually past due at the bank?

Mr. DEWEY. As I remember it, sir, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was something that was discussed at the bank?

Mr. DEWEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Proctor, you would agree with that, right?

Mr. PROCTOR. No, I would not, because I personally handled the loan and Mr. Dewey did not. So he saw it from the outside, yes, the outside looking in, and I guess he saw what I was doing, and he thought maybe that was a burden to me. But I did not see it that way. I thought it was very typical of the loans that we had at that time, during that period in the economy.

Now that is a fuller picture of what occurred. Obviously, you have not been provided with a transcript of what actually was testified to here yesterday.

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I hope we are about finished here.

Mr. Chairman, we will yield our time back.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up JRTS 203. As Mr. Chertoff just mentioned, the documents as they are produced to the Committee are produced by the Governor's lawyers, presumably, in order the way they are found in the files. Document 203, which is the first one we are going to put up, is a handwritten note from Sam Bratton to the Governor. That's followed by Bates number 204 and 205, which is the letter from Mr. Bowen to the Governor relating to this 300-foot branching issue. That's followed by this Penick note which bears Bates number 206, the one which, Mr. Penick, you think may have been written to the Bank Commissioner. But I would like to just draw your attention to this—

The CHAIRMAN. Let's make sure he has it. Do you have it in front of you? No?

Mr. PENICK. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's get someone down there, even though it is in the file, because it will take forever for him to look through and try to find this.

Mr. BELMAN. What's the date on the documents?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Well, it is an undated note, but it bears the Bates number 203.

The CHAIRMAN. At the top of it, it says, "State of Arkansas, Office of the Governor, Route Slip, Remarks."

Mr. BELMAN. If you give us a date around that, these are supposedly in chronological order, if you will tell us about where it is in the file.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This would have been sometime in July, presumably, 1988. We will put up the copy I have on the Elmo. Let's make it a little smaller. This note was found in the production before Mr. Bowen's note.

Senator SARBANES. I can't read the Elmo.

Mr. GIUFFRA. We will make a copy of it.

The CHAIRMAN. You know what, I've reached a point where I am going to take a recess. We are going to get the three documents that we are going to look at. Everybody is going to have an opportunity to have them in front of him, because we are going to do this thing the right way. We stand in recess for 5 minutes.

[Recess.]

The CHAIRMAN. I have been advised everyone now has the documents in question. We will now ask Mr. Giuffra to identify the first one which is up on the Elmo, and see if we can't move through this. Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The issue that we have been trying to grapple with is whether this note which bears the Bates number 206, to Bill from Mr. Penick, was sent to Governor Clinton.

The CHAIRMAN. You have a different one up there now.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In the production of documents, this note, Bratton to the Governor, bears the Bates number 203 and it is followed by the letter from Mr. Bowen of First Commercial Bank to the Governor about the 300-foot branching restriction, indicating the Governor's willingness to eliminate the 300-foot branching restriction. Then the next document is the letter from you, Mr. Penick, to Bill, thanking Bill for his help on the 300-foot branching restriction; you will agree with that? Bates numbers 203, 204, 205 and 206; right?

Mr. PENICK. I have them, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You will agree your note bears Bates number 206; is that right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, it does.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Bowen's letter to Governor Clinton bears the Bates number 204, 205; right?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The document I want you to take a look at is 203. We are trying to solve the mystery of who you might have written the letter to. This is a note to Mr. Bratton. It bears the Bates number 203. It appears to be attached to the Bowen letter, and also to your note. The note from Mr. Bratton, who is the person in the Governor's office most responsible for the banking legislation, "Did you talk with Bowen after this letter?" Presumably this is the letter of July 7th, in which Mr. Bowen said he wanted the Governor to reconsider his position on the 300-foot restriction. "Do you want a written response?" Then it says, "Same Q on Ed Penick note."

Now presumably, the Governor's Counsel would not be asking the Governor if he wanted to respond to a letter that was written to someone else; right?

Mr. PENICK. 203 is not dated.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That's correct, it is not dated; I would agree with that. But 203 falls in the production before the Penick letter which it refers to, and then your note which it also refers to; correct?

Mr. PENICK. I don't know anything about the production, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you can see the numbers, can't you, at the bottom right-hand of the documents?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, but they don't mean anything to me.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But these numbers indicate how the documents were found in Governor Clinton's files, and they indicate that your note was referred to, "Same Q on Ed Penick note. Do you want written response?"

Mr. PENICK. If you are asking me to swear to that, I will not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I'm not asking you to swear to it. I'm asking you, doesn't it appear from this cover memo that it refers to your note?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir. The one Ed Penick, that could be my father also, because he was Chairman of Worthen Bank at the time.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did your father write this note bearing Bates number 206, which follows three documents in the production after the note from Sam Bratton?

Mr. PENICK. 206 is my note.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Clearly your note. We are almost done.

Mr. Strange, just so we get this down, lines of responsibility at your bank for a loan of $50,000, which is what this Whitewater loan was, would normally be handled by the loan officer; right?

Mr. STRANGE. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were the President of the bank, so wouldn't it normally be handled by you; right?

Mr. STRANGE. Not necessarily.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, you had a number of communications with Mrs. Clinton about this loan; right?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that Mrs. Clinton was your primary contact among the borrowers with regard to this loan?

Mr. STRANGE. She was my only contact.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The first contact you had with Mrs. Clinton was in the fall of 1986; right?

Mr. STRANGE. As I recall, that would be about right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mrs. Clinton called you; right?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You did not call Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. STRANGE. No, I did not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why was Mrs. Clinton calling you?

Mr. STRANGE. From a question I had posed to Mr. Clinton at that time about the loan, that I needed to talk with somebody about it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then Mrs. Clinton came to you later about some tax information she wanted; right?

Mr. STRANGE. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In this period July 1988, when we are having a lot of activity—June, July 1988—with regard to the branching legislation, Mrs. Clinton was having communications with you; right?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. About the renewal of the loan?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put it up on Elmo. We have CBF 416. This is a letter from Mrs. Clinton to Jim McDougal which is cc'd to you, and it says, "Blind P.S." It is dated June 9, 1988.

Mr. STRANGE. Excuse me, what's the date on that?

Mr. GIUFFRA. June 9, 1988.

Mr. STRANGE. OK, I have that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall Mrs. Clinton indicating to you that she was having a problem getting certain documentation from Mrs. McDougal; right?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You told Mrs. Clinton you were concerned about this loan being called attention to during a bank examination; is that right?

Mr. STRANGE. I don't recall that I said that it would be called to in a bank examination.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why don't we look at the last sentence of Mrs. Clinton's note to Mr. McDougal. It says: "The note is up for extension and the bank is clearly anxious to have this matter resolved properly in time for their examination." Do you recall indicating to Mrs. Clinton that your bank was clearly anxious to have this matter resolved properly in time for the examination?

Mr. STRANGE. I do not recall specifically that statement.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's turn to July 13th. This letter is from the same time this branching issue is arising. Do you have that letter in front of you? This is Mrs. Clinton's letter to you.

Mr. STRANGE. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This is when she sent you the renewal notice; is that correct?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. On July 15th, we have CBF 411, 2 days later, you sign off on the document waiver, indicating that you don't need to have financial statements from Mr. McDougal; right?

Mr. STRANGE. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That is the same day the Governor signs the bill without the 300-foot branching restriction; correct?

Mr. STRANGE. That is according to the records. I did not know that personally, but that seems to be correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. One last question and we will be done. I would like to move your attention to 1992, during the Presidential Campaign. Do you recall getting a letter from Mrs. Clinton asking you to communicate with someone by the name of Loretta Lynch?

Mr. STRANGE. I believe that I do, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What was Mrs. Clinton asking you to do with regard to Loretta Lynch? We have a letter actually dated March 4, 1992, which bears Bates number RIC 3638.

Mr. STRANGE. She was asking me to release documentation that was in the bank's possession to Loretta Lynch.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you have a conversation with Mrs. Clinton at that time?

Mr. STRANGE. I don't recall that I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall Mrs. Clinton indicating to you that Ms. Lynch was a secretary to either Mrs. Clinton or the Governor?

Mr. STRANGE. I believe that Ms. Lynch, in a phone call; asking for some documentation, identified herself as having something to do with the campaign, or assistant to one or the other of them.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did she indicate to you she was Mrs. Clinton's Secretary? That's your deposition testimony.

Mr. STRANGE. That may have been. I am not exactly sure what her identification was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did she indicate to you why she was looking for these documents?

Mr. STRANGE. I don't believe she did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Since the 1992 campaign, have you had any communication with anyone from the White House or a representative of the Clintons with regard to this loan?

Mr. STRANGE. Yes, I have. Mr. Clinton's attorney.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Kendall.

Mr. STRANGE. Mr. Kendall called me just prior to the Time magazine article being published, and he asked for a copy of the 1987 financial statement.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Penick, since the 1992 campaign up to the present, have you had any communication with anyone from the White House or any representative of Governor Clinton with regard to your activities in 1987 or 1988, in connection with either the branching legislation or the loan?

Mr. PENICK. Not that I can recall, no, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Same question to you, Ms. Eldridge.

Ms. ELDRIDGE. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Thank you. No further questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I didn't quite follow it, Mr. Penick, but you were asked some question about being the landlord or the owner of the building in which the branch was located; is that correct?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct, yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. I guess the implication was that you had a big vested interest in this, a personal vested interest in this matter. I think you said, you were a minority owner; is that right?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. How much of a minority owner were you?

Mr. PENICK. Senator, it is way down, it is less than—less than half a percent, I know. And there are 50-something partners in the building. My disclosure was made in my interest, and also two other officers in the bank had an interest in that building also.

Disclosure was made to our full Board of Directors, and to Bill Houston, who was Regional Director of the FDIC in Memphis at the time when the branch was approved.

Senator SARBANES. So it was disclosed to the FDIC and to your own bank?

Mr. PENICK. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. And the extent of your interest, in any event, was about half of 1 percent; is that correct?

Mr. PENICK. Yes, sir, way down. It is the passive interest.

Senator SARBANES. That's all I have. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. No further questions. We thank the panel.

We stand in recess until Tuesday.

[Whereupon, at 4:25 p.m., the hearing was adjourned, to reconvene at 10:00 a.m., on Tuesday, May 14, 1996.]

- (2) That's where I was born and raised.
 (3) As a result of that, if there were events
 (4) that would happen in the Fourth Congressional
 (5) District that would be in honor of or something that
 (6) Beryl Anthony would give for his friends, I would be
 (7) invited because of my membership on the Highway
 (8) Commission.
 (9) And I met Vince Foster at one of those
 (10) events but I can't tell you whether it was in Hot
 (11) Springs or it was in Little Rock or where that
 (12) happened. It could have been El Dorado but
 (13) probably
 (14) Hot Springs or Little Rock.
 (15) Q In the period before you came to
 (16) Washington, did you have much contact with
 (17) Mr. Foster?
 (18) A No, I did not.
 (19) Q Did the Rose Law Firm do any work for the (20) Lassiter businesses either at the holding company
 (21) level or the subsidiary level?
 (22) A They might have done a little work on a consulting kind of basis at one time for

Page 31

- (1) Mr. Lassiter. There was a particular lawyer that
 (2) Mr. Lassiter liked in the firm whose name was Kenny
 (3) Sherman, and from time to time Dan would call Kenny
 (4) and ask him for personal advice. Did they handle
 (5) any
 (6) of our lawsuits, no.
 (7) Q When you say "consulting," you mean legal
 (8) advice consulting?
 (9) A Yes.
 (10) Q Anybody besides the lawyer that you
 (11) mentioned that provided legal advice to
 (12) Mr. Lassiter's business?
 (13) A Not to my knowledge.
 (14) Q Did you ever have any occasion in any other
 (15) capacity to work with the Rose Law Firm?
 (16) A I don't recall ever having the Rose Law
 (17) Firm on my side.
 (18) Q Were you ever against them in a case in
 (19) litigation?
 (20) A I can remember being in their law firm when
 (21) they were on one side and we were on an opposite
 (22) side, yes.
Q When you say "we" -

Page 32

- (1) A It was the Lassiter Company.
 (2) Q Do you remember what instance that was?
 (3) A It was an Emerald Isle case and it was a
 (4) bankruptcy case that we were peripherally involved
 (5) in. And there were other lawyers there, but the Rose
 (6) Firm had somebody there for somebody. And there
 (7) were
 (8) a number of parties to it, but I remember essentially
 (9) we weren't on the same side as the Rose Firm.
 (10) Q When was this case?
 (11) A '84, '85.
 (12) Q So this was around - this was before you

- (13) took out that loan that you testified about
 (14) previously from Madison Guaranty?
 (15) A I would say it was before, yes.
 (16) Q And I take it that this representation by
 (17) the Rose Law Firm had nothing to do with that loan
 (18) from Madison Guaranty?
 (19) A Had nothing to do with that.
 (20) Q Now, when you came to the White House in
 (21) March of 1993, did you have occasion to work with
 (22) Mr. Foster?
 A We worked together on occasion as it

Page 33

- (1) related to the White House travel office.
 (2) Q And what in particular was the work that
 (3) you did in connection with that?
 (4) A In connection with that, the White House
 (5) staff in the office of management and administration
 (6) had been reviewing every office under its purview to
 (7) make sure its operations were what we wanted them
 (8) to
 (9) be and to make sure they operated in a manner that
 (10) we
 (11) thought was effective for the Clinton
 (12) Administration.
 (13) And one of the offices we had not done was
 (14) the White House travel office and we were working to
 (15) evaluate the White House travel office and its
 (16) function and its ability to function. When we got to
 (17) that particular office, it was so different than
 (18) every other office that we had looked at because
 (19) we'd
 (20) already looked at the office of administration and
 (21) we'd looked at various offices within the White
 (22) House, but the White House travel office was the only one that handled cash every day. None of the other offices handled cash on a daily basis because of the nature of their work.

Page 34

- (1) We didn't have on staff at the White House
 (2) accountants, numbers guys, bean counters, auditor
 (3) types. And as a result of that, we opted to hire
 (4) someone from the outside to come in to help with
 (5) that
 (6) particular part of the review of the travel office.
 (7) We felt we had the talent and capability in-house to
 (8) look at the management side and how the office was
 (9) being managed, but we didn't have in-house talent to
 (10) review the numbers and to do an audit of the dollars
 (11) and cents that were there.
 (12) We talked among David Watkins and Vince and
 (13) myself, and we agreed that it would be a better idea
 (14) to get someone from the outside than someone from
 (15) the
 (16) inside who might not be as credible, who might have
 (17) done the work fine but might not be as credible
 (18) because they didn't have CPA behind their name, so
 (19) we
 (20) would hire an outside firm.

(118) That discussion, I believe, took place
 (119) among the three of us. And then we hired a
 (120) particular firm who had some experience in
 (121) government, and because they had that experience
 (122) with
 (123) government and RIGO, we determined that would be
 (124) a

Page 35

(11) good firm for us to do.
 (12) Q Government and?
 (13) A Reinvesting government.
 (14) MR. BEN-VENISTE: RICO means something else
 (15) that criminal lawyers know.
 (16) THE WITNESS: This is reinvesting
 (17) government. Then the auditors came in and I took
 (18) them to their work space every day and they would
 (19) report back to me as to their progress and then I
 (20) would report to Vince if he were around. If Vince
 (21) weren't around, I would report to Bill Kennedy
 (22) information that they were turning up along the way.
 (23) BY MR. CHERTOFF:
 (24) Q As a consequence of the information they
 (25) turned up, did there come a point in time when you or
 (26) Mr. Foster or Mr. Kennedy wound up in contact with
 (27) the FBI?
 (28) A Someone was in contact with the FBI, yes.
 (29) Q How did that happen?
 (30) A Well, they had turned up, fairly early in
 (31) the investigation, that there was a lot of missing
 (32) dollars, somewhere between 15- and $18,000 missing

Page 36

(11) and unaccounted for in the petty cash. As a result
 (12) of that, that's a large sum of money particularly
 (13) when the White House is acting in a fiduciary
 (14) responsibility for the White House press corps, for
 (15) that money to be missing.
 (16) And at that point we knew that we had to
 (17) do - we had to alert some authority about this
 (18) missing money, that we couldn't just put our head
 (19) under our shoulder and wish it would go away.
 (20) Someone had to be alerted. So we talked about it
 (21) and
 (22) I was not in all those meetings, but I know
 (23) subsequent to that, the FBI was called because in
 (24) Little Rock, we would have called the prosecutor's
 (25) office and said look, guys, we've got a problem.
 (26) Tell us what we need to do.
 (27) In Washington it's a little harder to know
 (28) this and this is the White House and because we had
 (29) had ongoing relationships with the FBI on a
 (30) day-to-day process with the vetting process at the
 (31) White House, I think that's why - I'm sure that's
 (32) why Bill Kennedy talked to the FBI, to talk to them
 (33) about it.

Page 37

(11) Q It was Mr. Kennedy's decision to call the
 (12) FBI?
 (13) A I don't know if it was singularly
 (14) Mr. Kennedy's decision.

(15) Q Were you part of the group that was dealing
 (16) with this issue?
 (17) A I was part of the group that was dealing
 (18) with how much money was missing. I was not part
 (19) of
 (20) the group that was making the decision about who to
 (21) call.
 (22) Q At this point in time, was there a
 (23) substitute for the company or agency that was
 (24) handling the money in the travel office? Was there a
 (25) change in the identity of the people who would be
 (26) handling the travel out of the White House?
 (27) A Not at that point.
 (28) Q Did there come a point where there was a
 (29) change?
 (30) A Yes, there was.
 (31) Q When was that?
 (32) A It was the next week after the members of
 (33) the travel office had been terminated. We had a firm

Page 38

(11) that volunteered to come in and help us get through
 (12) some period of time until we could let a contract to
 (13) either do it through contract and have the work done
 (14) by contractor, or we could make a determination on
 (15) who we want to run that office on an ongoing basis.
 (16) Q What was that firm?
 (17) A Slips my mind. Worldwide Travel.
 (18) Q Where was the firm located?
 (19) A Little Rock.
 (20) Q Who were the principals of the firm, people
 (21) who ran the firm?
 (22) A I can't tell you that. I don't know.
 (23) Q Do you know any of them?
 (24) A No, I don't.
 (25) Q Was there anybody in particular who
 (26) volunteered the firm to handle the travel?
 (27) A I don't know the answer to that.
 (28) Q Was there anybody who's related to the
 (29) President who was involved with the firm?
 (30) A Not to my knowledge.
 (31) Q Was there anybody who's friendly with the
 (32) President who was part of that firm?

Page 39

(11) A Well, the firm had worked in the campaign
 (12) and provided travel services through the campaign,
 (13) so
 (14) I'm sure that all the people who were in the
 (15) campaign
 (16) knew the travel agency, knew the travel agents and
 (17) the people.
 (18) I didn't work in the campaign so I don't
 (19) really know those travel agency people. I'm sure
 (20) I've heard their names in the past. I just don't
 (21) recall them.
 (22) Q You don't remember the name of the travel
 (23) agency people?
 (24) A No, I don't remember.
 (25) Q When you say they volunteered, they
 (26) obviously volunteered with the notion they'd be paid?

MEMORANDUM FOR

FROM: DAVID WATKINS

SUBJECT: Response to Internal White House Travel Office Management Review

In an effort to respond to the Internal Travel Office Review, I have prepared this memorandum, which details my response to the various conclusions of that Report. This is a soul cleansing, carefully detailing the surrounding circumstances and the pressures that demanded that action be taken immediately. It is my first attempt to be sure the record is straight, something I have not done in previous conversations with investigators - where I have been as protective and vague as possible. I know you will carefully consider the issues and concerns expressed herein.

As a preliminary matter, the procedure followed in finalizing the report was needlessly unfair. Even in the context of General Accounting Office audits and reviews, the reviewed agency is afforded the opportunity to respond to the report and criticisms prior to release and publication. This is an important step which allows inaccuracies or erroneous conclusions to be addressed and corrected prior to publication, and more importantly, allows the criticized party to respond to the contents of the report. Unfortunately, in this case, neither I nor others directly involved were afforded any opportunity to rebut the contents and conclusions of the internal Review.

In this case, I was notified of the forthcoming reprimand around 10 a.m. on July 2. But I received a copy of the report shortly after noon the same day, and at get exact time from that briefing the report was publicly released. I was never afforded the opportunity to respond, and until this memorandum, I have never responded to the report or its contents.

With the recent release of GAO audits and the resultant press coverage and criticism of my office, setting the record straight on the Travel Office occurrences is important.

BACKGROUND

As you recall, an issue developed between the Secret Service and the First Family in February and March requiring resolution and action on your's and my parts. The First Family was anxious to have that situation immediately resolved, and the First Lady in particular was extremely upset with the delayed action in that case.

Likewise, in this case, the First Lady took interest in having the Travel Office situation resolved quickly, following Harry Thomason's bringing it to her attention. Thomason briefed the First Lady on his suspicion that the Travel Office was improperly funnelling business to a single charter company, and told her that the functions of that office could be easily replaced and reallocated.

Once this made it onto the First Lady's agenda, Vince Foster became involved, and he and Harry Thomason regularly informed me of her attention to the Travel Office situation - as well as her insistence that the situation be resolved immediately by replacing the Travel Office staff.

Foster regularly informed me that the First Lady was concerned and desired action - the action desired was the firing of the Travel Office staff. On Friday, while I was in Memphis, Foster told me that it was important that I speak directly with the First Lady that day. I called her that evening and she conveyed to me in clear terms that her desire for swift and clear action to resolve the situation. She mentioned that Thomason had explained how the Travel Office could be run after removing the current staff - that plan included bringing in World Wide Travel and Penny Sample to handle the basic travel functions, the actual actions taken post dismissal ^{of} and in light of that she thought immediate action was in order.

On Monday morning, you came to my office and met with myself and Patsy Thomason. At that meeting you explained that this was on the First Lady's "radar screen." The message you conveyed to me was clear: immediate action must be taken. I explained to you that I had decided to terminate the Travel Office employees, and you expressed relief that we were finally going to take action (to resolve the situation in conformity with the First Lady's wishes). We both knew that there would be hell to pay if, after our failure in the Secret Service situation earlier, we failed to take swift and decisive action in conformity with the First Lady's wishes. You then approved the decision to terminate the Travel Office staff, and I indicated I would send you a memorandum outlining the decision and plan, which I did.

I have never stated all this so clearly before, but to form a complete and accurate picture it must all be kept in mind while reading the specific criticisms of the Podesta Management Review. I will now address those criticisms directly.

RESPONSE TO SECTION II "DISCUSSION OF PRINCIPAL ISSUES" OF TRAVEL OFFICE REVIEW

"Travel Office Management" (Page 14):

"The review conducted by KPMG Peat Marwick uncovered serious financial mismanagement." At ...

At the strong recommendation of myself and others in my office, KPMG Peat Marwick was brought in - instead of having the FBI take over immediately - to review the financial practices of the Travel Office. I concurred in Peat Marwick's analysis and conclusions: Management of the Travel Office was abysmal.

"Treatment of the Travel Office Employees" (Page 15):

"While all White House Office employees serve at the pleasure of the President, the abrupt manner of dismissal of the Travel Office employees was unnecessary and insensitive." At _.

In the conversation with the Travel Office staff notifying them of their termination, I explained that a review of the Travel Office operations had always been planned to conform to the general review process implemented across the White House administrative offices and the Office of Administration. I further explained my decision to terminate them; I explained that from a management perspective, in this case it was best to relieve them all immediately from their jobs and provide them an additional two weeks in pay. I informed them of this and asked them to leave immediately. The tone was firm, with emphasis on the mismanagement recounted in the Pest Marwick report. I explained that in light of that mismanagement, it was best to dismiss the entire office.

The allegation in the report that this was insensitive is wrong. These employees work at the pleasure of the President and all in the White House Office should understand that there is extremely low tolerance for the severely negligent and unaccountable procedures followed in that office. In light of the First Lady's insistence for immediate action and your concurrence, the abrupt manner of dismissal, from my perspective, was the only option.

"Moreover, the Pest Marwick report did not furnish sufficient cause for terminating the employees without financial authority. As a legal matter, the White House has the right to terminate an employee without cause. In this case, however, the White House asserted that the termination of all seven was for cause. Based on the information available, this assertion was inappropriate with respect to the employees who did not exercise financial authority. . . . Absent cause, a more humane approach was in order. For example, even if it were decided that the Travel Office would operate more efficiently with a reorganized, smaller staff, an effort could have been made to locate other federal employment for those who would be displaced." At 15.

John Report forwarded to press head

As early as February, the intent of Management and Administration was to review and reorganize the Travel Office before October 1 into a leaner operation - just as with every other office within the domain of Management and Administration, from the Photo Office to the Telephone Office to the Travel Office. That remained the plan until the intense pressures surrounding this incident arose in May. If given time to develop, the original plan to reorganize the Travel Office for a smooth transition in September would have allowed the Travel Office employees to seek other federal placement, along with other Executive Office of the President staff, in anticipation of the end of the fiscal year staff cuts; however, when pressure began to build for immediate action in the Travel Office, the long-term plans were short-circuited.

"The other major White House mistake in the treatment of the former Travel Office employees was in tarnishing their reputations. This resulted, as discussed above, from the inappropriate disclosure of an FBI investigation into potential wrongdoing in the Travel Office. (p. 15) . . . It was a mistake for the White House to publicly discuss FBI involvement, which led to the disclosure of the FBI investigation. . . . The talking points prepared by Watkins' office for the press office stated that the

DRAFT

White House had asked the FBI to investigate. Eller had also mentioned the FBI in an earlier draft of talking points. In making that reference, Watkins and Eller were insensitive to the effect such reference can have on the reputation of an innocent person. [This mistake was compounded when Foster's and Kennedy's instruction to eliminate the FBI reference was not carried out. Watkins did attempt to reach Myers, and Eller himself omitted the FBI reference in his own background press briefings the morning of May 19. However, neither ensured that Myers avoided the reference.] At 18.

Revealing the ongoing FBI investigation was insensitive, but that fact comprised one sentence in a draft version of talking points drafted by one of my staff and distributed for comment on the morning of May 19 — the day of the termination. The talking points were distributed to Foster, Kennedy, Myers, and Eller with the expectation that we would have until the 2 o'clock press briefing to get the kinks worked out of the talking points. As soon as the suggestion came to delete the reference to the FBI, it was done. I immediately went to see Myers to inform her of the change and sensitivity to the ongoing investigation, but she had gone to the Hill with the President. I struck that sentence from Eller's copy and asked him to inform Myers. As soon as Myers returned from the Hill, prior to noon — more than an hour before the press briefing — I proceeded to her office and told her not to mention the FBI investigation. She informed me that it was too late. She had already responded by phone to a reporter's inquiry by phone.

Thus, this was a mistake made on my part because I was not intuitive enough to take the talking points drafted by one of my staff and realize that the FBI investigation should not be mentioned — despite the strong support this provided for White House actions.

"Catherine Cornelius also played a role in the dismissal of the Travel Office employees, and she too had a personal stake in the outcome. As the three memos she wrote on the Travel Office attest, she was eager to work in and, if possible, manage the Office. Her proposal to reorganize the travel office was appropriate and would be considered usual to any transition process. But her role in the decision-making process after she became, in effect, an 'accuser' of the Travel Office employees, by collecting documents and alleging possible wrongdoing, was inappropriate. . . . [E]very effort should be made to insulate the federal government's management decisions from even the appearance that personal interests have played a role in the outcome of those decisions." At 20.

Catherine Cornelius had no part in the dismissals. I put no stock in most of what Cornelius told me except to the degree it was factual. Her arguments for dismissal and reorganization had absolutely no bearing on the final decision to terminate the employees. If her input had been respected, the need for Peat Marwick would have been negligible, but in light of her self-interest and her tendency to exaggerate, I decided to rely exclusively on a professional accounting firm. Catherine Cornelius, despite the Review's suggestion to the contrary, had absolutely no role in the decision-making process, and was in no danger of being placed in charge of the Travel Office. My intent all along was to put a trained financial manager over all the White House administrative operations, including the Travel Office.

DRAFT

When I assigned Catherine to the Travel Office, I did ask her to provide a report to me on May 15 based on her previous experience and actual experience in the Travel Office. She was placed in the Travel Office because of her prior experience in that area and a need to move her out of my immediate office — where she had become a liability to daily operations. Having had extensive experience with Catherine, I knew that her report would contain unworkable recommendations, but as I have in the past, I expected to distill those with which I disagreed from those I thought helpful. Unfortunately, due to her desire to revamp the Travel Office in her own likeness, Catherine may have ignored my intent to carefully review and scrutinize any recommendations made.

After Catherine became an "accuser" of the Travel Office staff, her input was merely on a factual level. I interviewed her to derive the factual basis of her allegations and for facts about the tasks performed by the Travel Office staff, but never asked for other, non-factual input other than the May 15 report I was expecting. All views she expressed were evaluated in light of her known bias. To put it simply, she had no impact on the decision-making process other than by providing factual information.

"The White House took several actions that demonstrated an insensitivity to the appearance of favoritism. Hiring World Wide Travel on a no-bid basis — even as an interim, stop-gap measure — created the appearance of favoritism toward a local friend from the campaign. World Wide's president, Beta Carney, is a long-time acquaintance of Watkins. Watkins' Little Rock advertising agency was a client of World Wide in the 1970s and World Wide was a client of Watkins' agency during that time period." At 20.

Part of the plan for immediate replacement of the Travel Office staff was use of World Wide Travel Service to book commercial flights for the Office. This aspect of the plan was discussed with all interested parties, and all concurred with knowledge that World Wide had been the campaign's travel agent. This made the most sense due to the fact that we could not have publicly solicited bids in light of confidentiality concerns and when we had ongoing business needs that had to be taken care of immediately following the terminations.

As for the my longtime acquaintance with Beta Carney and World Wide Travel, I must point to my experience in the business world. There, reliance on a firm from whom one has received exceptional service is the rule.

As well, since the time I was a client of World Wide's and since World Wide was a client of my advertising agency in the 1970s, I have personally and professionally used at least half a dozen other travel services. So, any suggestion that calling them in this case derived from that history is absurd, and the media suggestions of improper favoritism were likewise absurd.

We had recent experience with World Wide, and based on that experience I knew we could rely on them for confidentiality in handling and preparing to handle the Travel Office business, until the business could be subject to full and open competition.

 CGE 012291

"None of this implies any improper conduct by World Wide, which is a well-established, successful travel agency, twenty-third largest in the country. World Wide executives understood that they could secure White House business only through an open, competitive bidding process. But the impression of favoring a local supporter was impossible to dispel."

At this point in the sequence of events, with the current plan approved by the First Lady and the yourself including resort to World Wide Travel, it would have unnecessarily heightened confusion to recruit an unknown travel service. Again, a primary source of the problem was the abruptness caused by the calls for immediate action in the Travel Office and the at least daily inquiries. If my plan to slowly shift as the fiscal year came to a close had remained intact, a travel agent would have been procured in a more transparent fashion. However, since at the time of hiring World Wide it was known that they had a GSA contract, hiring World Wide was not as questionable or "non-competitive" as the Report or the press would have one believe.

"Bringing in Penny Sample, President of Air Advantage, to handle prom charters on a no-bid, volunteer basis furthered the appearance that the White House was trying to help its friends. Sample was the Clinton-Gore campaign's charter broker and a close associate of Darnell Martens. This implies no improper conduct on Sample's part, but, again, created an appearance of favoritism." At 20.

Like World Wide Travel, Penny Sample was part of the short-term plan for running the Travel Office after the terminations. Since she was willing to volunteer her services without her or her company receiving any compensation — because we realized, like they did, that they would be conflicted out of virtually all White House business — we believed the conflicts and appearance of favoritism issue had been sufficiently addressed. Again, we did not believe it to be favoritism to have a former service provider for the campaign volunteer to assist the White House.

"White House Management" (Page 21):

"The White House made a number of management mistakes in handling the Travel Office."

"Lax Procedures"

"The responsibility for Thomason's influence on the Travel Office incident must be attributed to White House management. Thomason should have avoided continued involvement in a matter in which his business partner and his friends in the charter business stood to benefit and in which there was an appearance of financial conflict of interest. But lax procedures allowed his continued participation in the process. . . . There should be better management control with respect to the mission that any non-White House staff person is brought in to carry out. Permitting Thomason — or any non-staff person who comes in on special assignment — to work on problems outside the scope of his or her assignment is not a good practice." At 21.

Management and Administration had no part in bringing Thomason into the White House. In fact, the responsible office failed or intentionally neglected to inform Management and Administration of the nature of his work. Contact with this Office on the subject consisted only of the First Lady's Office calling to insist on immediate access for Thomason.

CGE 012292

"Placing Cornelius in Travel Office."

"Given Cornelius' personal interest in running the Travel Office, Watkins should not have placed her in the Office to make recommendations on how the Office should be structured."

As stated above, Catherine was placed in the Travel Office because of her experience in travel and to allow her to make a meaningful and significant contribution to this Administration. The original assignment was made to see if she would work there permanently -- if she liked that work and if it likewise suited her. The report I asked her to draft and provide on May 15 was in no way the driving force for her assignment to the office, it was simply a way to help determine her long-term suitability. She was placed in that office because of her extensive experience since October 1991 in coordinating travel for then-candidate Bill Clinton. She was not placed in the Travel Office primarily to make recommendations on its future structure.

"Watkins compounded the problem when, in response to Thomason's complaints, he asked Cornelius to be alert to possible wrongdoing or corruption. Cornelius lacked the experience or preparation for this role. Nor was she given any guidance." At 21.

Catherine was not asked to investigate or document wrongdoing by the Travel Office staff. I understood that she lacked experience to perform such a task. Catherine was merely asked to observe what transpired in the Travel Office -- nothing further was requested or expected. Special training is not needed to keep one's eyes and ears open, to observe. I never asked her to collect documents or other information; she undertook this of her own volition.

"If, in April, Watkins thought the allegations reported by Thomason should be looked at more seriously, he should have done so in a more professional manner." At 21.

The suggestion that this could be more professionally handled is absurd. I noted the allegations, but thought they could wait for review -- and knew they would be examined -- during the course of the planned internal review of the Travel Office. For that reason, no action was taken other than to ask to Catherine to "keep her eyes and ears open."

"Poor Planning."

"There was no adequate plan in place to manage the Travel Office in the aftermath of the dismissal." At 21.

Harry Thomason indicated that he could put a more efficient structure in place in an hour's time to handle all the tasks of the Travel Office. While I believed that my original plan to carefully review the Travel Office would best serve the White House, when I spoke with the First Lady on Friday night, May 14, she cited Thomason's plan as support for the need for immediate action. That action involved utilizing World Wide Travel and Penny Sample in the short term. As well, in my memo to you on May 17 explaining my intent to terminate the Travel Office employees the next day, the intention to use World Wide Travel was outlined. You approved this action based on this memo prior to the actual terminations.

DRAFT

"For example, no one in the decision-making chain spoke to the White House press and press advance staff members who worked closely with the Travel Office employees, knew the employees there, understood the services they provided and the degree to which they were relied upon by members of the travelling press and other considerations. None was contacted by Watkins." At 22.

In light of the need for absolute confidentiality, it would have been foolhardy to consult the press or press advance staffs. From the staff review and Catherine Cornelius' experience (this is the primary area where her factual expertise was relied upon), we in fact did know the services that the Travel Office staff performed. Catherine Cornelius and Harry Thomason regularly and repeatedly reassured me that the press charter function could easily be assumed with the assistance of Penny Sample. Thus, plans to replace these aspects of the Travel Office functions were in place prior to the dismissals. Then, when the need for immediate replacement became evident, I committed to provide whatever manpower was needed to perform the services the Travel Office staff had performed.

Immediately following the dismissals, meetings were held with the press and press advance staff to make all necessary arrangements for upcoming trips. These discussions came after the fact, but were accompanied with a commitment from my office for all necessary resources to perform the job.

"The absence of a plan prompted the last-minute use of World Wide Travel and Penny Sample of Air Advantage, which fueled the charges of favoritism already discussed." At 22.

As explained above, the plan was to use World Wide Travel and Penny Sample; there was no absence of a plan. Because of the need for confidentiality and the need for quick action, reliance on those with whom we had experience seemed the only rational decision. Having performed superbly in the campaign and in light of our need for immediate travel agent support — due to the pressure for immediate action from several quarters — we decided the plan would include short-term reliance on World Wide Travel.

I would have much preferred to have my staff carefully review the Travel Office and make a detailed business plan for the new fiscal year. This proved impossible, though, when the pressure for action from the First Lady and you became irresistible. This demand for immediate action forced me to accept hastily formulated plans for hasty, inadvisable action.

"Overview."

"The management problems in the handling of the Travel Office extended beyond the White House Office of Management and Administration. The Chief of Staff and the White House Counsel's Office had the opportunity to contain the momentum of the incident, but did not take adequate advantage of this opportunity." At 22.

CGE 012293

DRAFT

"The process should have been handled in a more careful, deliberate fashion. Before any decision was made, the Travel Office employees should have been interviewed and other White House staff who understood the operations of the Travel Office should have been consulted. If dismissals were deemed appropriate, a new structure should have been designed and readied for implementation before any action was taken. Throughout, the process should have treated the Travel Office employees with sensitivity and decency." At 22.

As stated above, I too would have much preferred to have my staff carefully review the Travel Office and formulate a detailed business plan for the new fiscal year. This proved impossible, though, when pressure for action became irresistible. If forced me to accept hastily formulated plans for hasty, inadvisable action.

CONCLUSION

I think all this makes clear that the Travel Office incident was driven by pressures for action originating outside my Office. If I thought I could have resisted those pressures, undertaken more considered action, and remained in the White House, I certainly would have done so. But after the Secret Service incident, it was made clear that I must more forcefully and immediately follow the direction of the First Family. I was convinced that failure to take immediate action in this case would have been directly contrary to the wishes of the First Lady, something that would not have been tolerated in light of the Secret Service incident earlier in the year.

For this reason, I was forced to undertake the Travel Office reorganization without a business plan firmly in hand - something I had never before done in years as a management consultant, where such plans were my business.

All failings outlined in the Podesta Management Review were either mistaken and groundless criticism, or were based on actions dictated by the need for instant action. This reorganization required more careful review, but in this case that possibility was foreclosed. Delaying action was beyond my control.

CHRONOLOGY OF TRAVEL OFFICE FIRINGS (as of 5.25.93)

Early February -- Dee Dee Myers talks to Harry Thomason and Darnell Martens about press charter business. Martens contacts Billy Dale in the White House travel office and is told there is no chance TRM will get White House business. Martens writes memo about conversation to his file.

February 15 -- Catherine Cornelius and Clarissa Cerda write memo to David Watkins proposing reorganization of travel office.

April 25 -- Catherine Cornelius goes to work in the Travel office, acting as a liaison to scheduling and advance and arranging hotels and flights for White House staff. Go there, take some report on May 10 -- Harry Thomason and Darnell Martens meet with Watkins, describe Martens encounter with Billy Dale. Thomason calls Martens Cincinnati office and has memo faxed to White House. Thomason makes copies for David Watkins, Catherine Cornelius and himself. ATM says to me the Decker {Darnell met w Ed m} May 23 -- Bill Kennedy (and others?) meet with representatives (who?) of the FBI, seeking guidance on disturbing information discovered in the travel office. FBI confirms that there may be enough information to warrant further investigation.

May 13 -- David Watkins contacts Larry Herman of Peat, Marwick and asks the company to review travel office files.

May 14 -- Larry Herman and five other Peat, Marwick accountants begin review. Interview several members of the travel office (which ones?)

May 15 -- Peat, Marwick auditors brief members of White House counsel's office, administrative staff, and FBI about their findings. Based on information provided during the briefing, the FBI determines they have "predicate" to investigate.

May 19 -- David Watkins meets with four or five members of the travel office in Washington, including Billy Dale. Tells them they have been dismissed and asks them to clear out their belongings by day's end. Jeff Eller briefs Al Kamin of the Washington Post and George Condon of the White House Correspondents' Association. Dee Dee Myers briefs White House press corps at 2 p.m., confirms that FBI has been called and further investigation is "likely". Later that afternoon, George Stephanopoulos, Dee Dee Myers, Jeff Eller, David Watkins and Larry Herman hold back ground briefing for wires and nets to provide more details. POTUS answers question during photo op; telling reporters inquiries should be directed to Mack McLarty.

May 20 -- George Stephanopoulos briefs White House press corps. Later that evening, Gene Gibbons of Reuter and Wolf Blitzer of CNN notify George that they have obtained the Cornelius/Cerda memo on restructuring the travel office. They agree to hold the story until George, Dee Dee and David can meet with their bureau chiefs the following morning. Sen. Christopher Bond releases letter, calling for a full accounting of travel staff firings before the Government Oversight Committee.

May 21 -- George, Dee Dee and David meet with Bill Headline, Wendy Walker and Wolf Blitzer of CNN and Bureau Chief and Gene Gibbons of CNN. Following meeting, they run story. George, Dee Dee, David, Bernie Nussbaum, Vince Foster, Bill Kennedy, David Dryer, and John Collingwood of the FBI then meet in George's office to review details surrounding dismissal. At the end of the meeting, John Collingwood returns to his office to update statement. Meanwhile, Peat, Marvick agrees to produce final draft of report. Meanwhile, Ann Devroy and Ruth Marcus notify George and Dee Dee that they have obtained copy of Martens memo. Dee Dee contacts Harry in Florida. He explains circumstances, says he will track down Darnell Martens. At 4:15, press staff hands out Peat, Marvick report, Cornelius/Cerda memo and the FBI statement. George briefs White House press corps. Later, Martens comes to the White House at Dee Dee's request. Calls Ruth Marcus from Dee Dee's office to discuss memo. POTUS is questioned during photo op with President of Cyprus, says change will save press 25 percent on first trip. Finally, George issued a statement late in the day stating the World Wide Travel had voluntarily given up the White House business.

May 22 -- POTUS travels to New Hampshire, talks extensively about the travel office during a session with local radio and television reporters. Press office distributes Martens memo to traveling reporters.

May 23 -- William Safire accuses White House of "politicizing" FBI during appearance on Meet the Press.

May 24 -- Safire column appears, outlining charge that White House politicized the FBI to justify firings. George briefs White House press corps. Press follows briefing with questions about Janet Reno's statement that proper procedures were not followed.

May 25 -- POTUS is asked during photo session about allegations that White House politicized FBI. He repeats answer that change in travel staff has saved press and taxpayers money and that further questions should be referred to McLarty.

Dear Bob:

I am enclosing a copy of recent billings from the Mitchell law firm which have been paid by Lasater & Company. The legal services rendered, as you can see from the detail sheets, were in support and advancement of our group efforts on the Arkansas State Police Communications System Financing. Since we (Raney, Hutton, Lasater) agreed to split expenses, liability and fees on this transaction, we would appreciate receiving your check for one-third of these legal fees in the amount of $10,716.98. I fully expect our group to be reimbursed for these expenses from bond proceeds and look forward to receiving your check as soon as possible.

Thank you in advance for your assistance in this matter.

Sincerely,

Michael J. Drake

113) subject of a criminal investigation?
 114) A No one on the Governor's staff discussed
 115) Mr. Lasater's criminal investigation with me.
 116) Q Do you have any knowledge whether anyone
 117) on
 118) the staff knew about it?
 119) A I have no knowledge of that.
 120) Q Do you know who Roger Clinton is?
 121) A Yes, I do.
 122) Q Do you know him personally?
 123) A Yes, I do.

Page 85

124) Q Did you know him during this time period
 125) 1982 through 1986?
 126) A I knew him before 1982 and I knew him
 127) through 1986 and I continue to know him today.
 128) Q Did you ever have any personal contact with
 129) him between 1982 and 1986?
 130) A I saw him at a lot of social events during
 131) that period of time.
 132) Q Did Governor Clinton make a request to 133) Mr. Lasater during this time period to find Roger 134) Clinton a job?
 135) A He asked him to put him to work, yes.
 136) Q How do you know that he asked him to put
 137) him to work?
 138) A Because Mr. Lasater told me he asked him to 139) put him to work.
 140) Q When did he tell you that?
 141) A Sometime about the time he put him to work.
 142) Q Do you know when that was?
 143) A Sometime in 1982-83.
 144) Q Do you know how the subject came up of the 145) Governor's request -

Page 86

146) A I have no idea.
 147) Q - to give Roger a job? Did he say why the 148) Governor asked Mr. Lasater to get Roger a job?
 149) A As far as I know, from my recollection of 150) the conversation, he wanted him to be doing
 151) something
 152) where he was using his energy up, so we put him to
 153) work shoveling manure.
 154) Q I have done that and I can tell you it does
 155) take quite a lot of energy.
 156) MR. COLE: It will use your energy up.
 157) MR. WILLIAMS: The same words of General
 158) George Patton
 159) BY MR. O'CALLAGHAN:
 160) Q The Committee appreciates your genteel
 161) choice of words
 162) A Mucking buystalls.
 163) Q Were you ever told of any specific reason
 164) the Governor asked Mr. Lasater to find Roger Clinton
 165) a job?
 166) A The only recollection I have with that is 167) Roger liked horses, he liked the horse racing
 168) business and thought he wanted to be in the horse

Page 87

169) racing business. He wanted to be in something where 170) he could use his energy up and maybe get started in 171) something he could make a career. The only way to 172) start in the horse racing business is to start from
 173) the ground up.
 174) Q Literally.
 175) A He is a little too heavy to be a jockey.
 176) Q Did Mr. Lasater eventually give Roger
 177) Clinton a job?
 178) A He was on the farm payroll in Florida and 179) worked at the farm in Florida.
 180) Q Do you know how long he worked there for?
 181) A I don't have any idea.
 182) Q Are you aware whether during this time
 183) period that Mr. Lasater loaned any money to Roger 184) Clinton?
 185) A Mr. Lasater did loan some money to Roger 186) Clinton, yes.
 187) Q How do you know that?
 188) A I think -
 189) MR. COLE: Again, for the sake of the 190) record, sorry to interrupt, I do want to note the

Page 88

191) Minority's objection to this line of questioning and
 192) also just to bring that to your counsel's attention.
 193) Once again, I will not instruct you now to 194) answer the question, because I think the more fair
 195) thing to do for you is to get this deposition over
 196) with without delaying any further. Do you need the 197) question read back?
 198) THE WITNESS: Please.
 199) BY MR. O'CALLAGHAN:
 200) Q I will restate it. How do you know
 201) Mr. Lasater loaned Roger Clinton money?
 202) A Mr. Lasater told me to write a check and 203) get a note signed by Roger.
 204) Q Did you write a check for Mr. Clinton?
 205) A Roger got a check, yes.
 206) Q How much was the check for?
 207) A I don't recall specifically. It was
 208) somewhere, I would say, between 5 and $10,000.
 209) Q Out of what account was the check drawn?
 210) A I don't recall.
 211) Q Do you recall whether it was his personal
 212) account or the company's accounts?

Page 89

213) A I don't recall.
 214) Q Was it on Lasater & Company account?
 215) A It would not have been on Lasater &
 216) Company, because I couldn't control that checking
 217) account.
 218) Q And you said - he asked you to get Roger 219) to sign a note?
 220) A Yes.
 221) Q What do you mean by that? Could you
 222) explain?
 223) A Mr. Lasater was not in the habit then of 224) giving money away, and if he lent Roger money, then
 225) he would expect Roger to sign a note back to him

Neither Sam nor I understands what your next step/followup with Bill Bowen is on the 300' issue.

The bill which is being delivered to this office in the morning by the Bankers Association/Bill Ford does not contain the 300' provision based on their conversation with you this morning.

FILE NOTES
May 27, 1986

State Bank Department

Today I visited with Commissioner Marlin Jackson concerning the prospects of TCB refiling a branch application for either Gravel Ridge or Kiehl Avenue and asked his reflection of the current attitude of the State Banking Board. He was quick to point out that the banking law has changed and under existing law, the State Bank Commissioner can approve a branch application as long as it is economically feasible and there is no irreparable harm done to a competing financial institution. His ruling can be appealed to the full board for its vote. He personally saw no support for Gravel Ridge, but felt that Kiehl Avenue could be a profitable branch.

The existing members of the State Banking Board are familiar names to us. The current Chairman of the Board is T. E. Patterson. Elmer Ferguson has passed his appointment time, but is still serving until a replacement is named. The Commissioner speculated that Doug Simmons, who is in the state bank at West Helena would be Ferguson's replacement; and he was surprised that Simmons hasn't been appointed already. Betty Wilkerson, Franklin Collier, Dr. Ralph Ratton and Bill Ford round out the State Banking Board.

The Commissioner also mentioned that, in his opinion, it was time for somebody to foster legislation to permit county-wide branching. The legislation could be restricted in counties with over 100,000 population so that only Pulaski County could be affected. He felt there was a good chance the legislation would be approved.

He questioned the practical issue of whether the State Banking Board would overrule a commissioner's approval of a branch. To date, this has not happened and he felt the only member, based on his gut reaction, to vote against it would be Betty Wilkerson.

In my opinion, knowing these individuals, the prospects don't sound much better than they have before despite a change in the law. I would feel that Hastings and Harkins would definitely appeal the issue to the State Banking Board and probably rally Pat Wilson on their side; and you would have the same issue of the big bank versus the little bank that defeated us the last go round. It would be interesting to casually feel out our state delegation to determine if there would be support for county-wide branching, but I'm not too optimistic here either knowing the influence of Max Howell and the close association he has with Pat Wilson.

Governor Bill Clinton

Bill, the attached copy is revised slightly from the previous one you have been furnished. I've highlighted the two changes for your information.

In an additional note, on behalf of the Arkansas Association of Building Companies Board, I've accepted this position. The office will come from the organization shortly.

If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to contact me.

Dear Mrs. Clinton:

As per our phone conversation, we have researched the transaction regarding the Whitewater Development Company, Inc. and they are enclosed. The loan and escrow data are for 1987 only and do not include any of 1988 transactions. Hope this will help you in preparing your tax returns and some type of balance sheet.

I have also enclosed a renewal note, hoping that you could help me in getting all the signatures on this and returning it as soon as possible.

In addition, we will be needing an updated financial statement on the personal, as well as the corporation.

Respectfully,

J. W. Strange

CONFIDENTIAL

Q D-149. It's entitled Enc Notes, Whitewater Development, Inc. Loan 585. It's dated 1/6/87. (Handing document to witness.)

(Pause.)

THE WITNESS: Okay.

BY MR. NAPPI:

Q Do you recall preparing this?

A Yes.

Q Could you explain the circumstances?

A It was a renewal of the loan. As is very common, you make a collateral inspection at the renewal origination of the loan, especially you know, in a situation where you've got properties that are being constructed on, as in this case.

Q Was this the first such collateral inspection you'd done?

A It was the first one I had done.

Q On this piece of property?

A Right.

Q I'd like to direct your attention to the second page, the last paragraph. You value the lots at $750 per acre. Initially the lots had been valued, I believe, at $1,100 an acre.

Page 53

A I believe that's correct, yes.

Q What do you attribute the devaluation to?

A Primarily from what I've said on the front because of the quality of homes and the lack of homes that had been built there when it was clean, and a new subdivision, I think $1,100 was a fair price or value.

After the mobile homes sprung up and a few other things, it devalued the property.

Q What were the other things?

A Trash, just general refuse.

Q You value the contracts receivable at $60,000 and change. I'll be more precise - $60,786.

I would take it that's a fairly easy evaluation to make. You just compile what's on the various contracts for deeds?

A Yes. Just take the outstanding balances.

Q And the remaining unsold property at $43,350?

A Yes.

Page 54

Q Was that remaining unsold property the property that had been transferred to Chris Wade?

A Partially, yes.

Q Do you recall whether Whitewater still owned some unsold lots at that point in time, or is that your recollection?

A I don't recall. I'm not sure.

Q Just so the record's clear, you're not sure who actually owned the remaining unsold property?

A No.

Now, I need to clarify that, too. The reason for that is that we were not - It did not make any difference to me in this bank who owned it because I had the mortgages on the lands.

Q You had the right to go in and foreclose if need be?

A True.

Q The next record I'd like to show the witness, again it's a one-page record. It's a copy of notepaper that has printed on the top Hillary Rodham Clinton. It's personalized notepaper, and it contains handwritten notes. The Bates stamp number is DKRT 00294.

(Handing document to witness.)

MR. BELMAN: I think just for the record, you identified this as DKRT 00294. It's DKRT 700294.

BY MR. NAPPI:

Q Do you know a woman named Margaret Davenport?

A Yes, I do.

Q How do you know Margaret?

A Margaret was executive vice president at Twin City Bank up till a year or two ago.

Q Did you ever have any contact with Margaret Davenport regarding the Whitewater loan?

A No.

Q Did anyone at First Ozark ever tell you that they had had contact with Margaret Davenport regarding the Whitewater loan?

A No. It was my understanding that someone was going to speak with Margaret to help convey some information to Mrs. Clinton concerning the renewal of the loan.

Page 56

Q Who was that person?

A That would have been Ed Penick, who was chairman of our board at that time.

Q How did you come to know this?

A This was discussed in a board meeting.

Q Do you recall the date of the board meeting?

A No. You saw how poorly I did on dates earlier. So I'm not going to try that.

Q Can you explain the circumstances around Mr. Penick's inquiry?

A We were having some difficulty getting financial statements, as we had often had with this loan. And we had asked - we had discussed that that was one of our deficiencies - not the only deficiency we had. But we were talking about deficiencies, the sensitive nature of the deficiency because of Mr. Clinton being the governor.

And Mr. Penick says, "Well, gosh.

Margaret and Hillary are personal acquaintances.

Let me ask and see if she can help you get the financial statement."

Page 57

A Yes, he did.

Q What was that role?

A I don't recall.

Page 26

Q But he was a member of the Board of Directors?

A As I recall, he was.

Q Do you know on individual named Terry

Renaud?

A Yes, I do.

Q How do you know Terry Renaud?

A He was Chairman and CEO of Twin City

Bank.

Q Was he also on the board at First Ozark?

A Yes, he was.

Q Did you know Susan Sisk?

A Yes, I do.

Q Who was Susan Sisk?

A She was our senior credit officer from

Twin City Bank.

Q What does that mean?

A That means in the beginning, she drove up every Thursday or Friday - I think it was Thursday - to our loan committee.

Q At the beginning? You mean?

A When Twin City Bank first purchased us.

And any loan request over X dollars, I don't remember what those dollars were, had to go through her.

Page 27

Q Did that practice continue or did it change in any way?

A When I left First Ozark it had changed. She was no longer required to sign off on any loan requests.

Q Did she also have to sign off on renewals?

A No. If it was over a certain dollar amount, she did. I don't know what that dollar amount was.

Q So renewals and loans over a certain threshold?

A Yes.

Q Do you recall when she stopped actually participating in the loan officers meetings?

A No, I do not. It had to be like late '89 or early '90, I would imagine.

Q Do you know on individual named Margaret

Davenport?

A Yes, I do.

Q How do you know her?

A She was senior vice president and cashier at Twin City Bank.

Page 28

Q Did she have a role in the operation of

First Ozark?

A No, not that I'm aware of. That was Ken

Pennebaker, but he's dead now.

Q Could you spell that name?

A P-E-N-N-E-B-A-K-E-R.

Q Do you recall any discussions regarding the Whitewater loan that involved Mr. Penick?

A Yes.

Q Could you tell us about them?

A I don't remember specifics, but I know that Ed was there, Ed Penick. Susan Sisk was there. Ron was there. I'm not sure Wes was. And we were discussing the financial statement on the Clintons. And Ed said that Margaret was personal friends of Hillary's and Susan said something to the effect that yes, she thought she was. Ed said that he would get Margaret to call Hillary and see if we could get a financial statement.

Q Do you recall what financial statement, or when this occurred?

Page 29

A No, I don't. This is a memory in my head.

Q Do you know if Mr. Penick asked Davenport to get a financial statement?

A No, I don't.

Q Do you recall if the financial statement was obtained?

A I do not recall getting a financial statement.

Q Is that the only recollection you have of a conversation regarding a Whitewater loan with Penick?

A With Mr. Penick, yes.

MR. PORTNOY: Can I ask him to clarify his last answer?

Did you testify that you did not receive a financial statement from the Clintons, or that you do not recall whether you received a financial statement?

THE WITNESS: I do not recall whether we received one or not.

MR. PORTNOY: Thank you.

BY MR. NAPPI:

Page 30

Q You just indicated that's the only conversation you recall with Mr. Penick.

Do you recall conversations with other persons regarding the Whitewater loan?

A Well, I recall conversations with Ron and Wes. This loan was discussed quite often at the bank. It was a nuisance at the bank. It was continuously past due at the bank. It was continuously pulled by auditors to audit. And it was continuously noted that financial information was lacking. And we discussed periodically what to do with the loan. I guess none of us liked it. It was there at the bank because of these things because we were continuously raked over the coals.

Q Raked over the coals by?

A I guess raked over the coals may not be the right word, but the officer, the Comptroller of the Currency auditors were always on us about not having proper documentation in the file.

Q With this loan more so than other loans?

RE: Terry Renaud

cc: Sam

I had lunch with Terry Renaud and Margaret Davenport today. I actually would not have agreed to an appointment to discuss the bank special session and would have insisted on them talking to Sam, except that Margaret has been very standoffish to me since her own attempt to be appointed bank commissioner. I knew that if Terry Renaud asked her to set up lunch with me, I had to do it for her.

Well, I wish I understood all these issues, but I will try in my feeble way to set them forth.

1. Terry says there is no way to declare this a "state" emergency. Most of the elements of the omnibus bill will pass in the January session regardless of the state-charted S&L issue.

2. The idea that this has to happen before Comptroller of the Currency grants any of the pending applications flies in the face of the speed with which that office operates. Terry says that even if something greased them through before January without the usual federal delays and extensions, Bill Ford could file in court the very next day asking to enjoin the Comptroller just like they did in Mississippi. That for sure would delay til the regular session he said.

3. Even if everybody gets here to a special session saying they are for the bill, there will be lots of amendments and he says it will be a major fracas and predicts only one tiny portion will survive. EVEN I QUESTION WHETHER THE BANKERS CAN GET A FIRM COMMITMENT FROM THE MEMBERS OF THE RELEVANT COMMITTEES TO SUPPORT THEIR BILL ONLY WITH NO AMENDMENTS.

4. Terry says that if he were in an S&L, he would move in with resentment that bankers were utilizing one of their provisions to bargain their own deal. One way or the other S&L's will inject getting state deposits into the battle, increasing the fray.

5. Terry says that the important goal is the preserve the dual banking system, and that it would be an emergency if applications were granted and all state banks started moving to federal charters. The Arkansas Bank Department would then face an emergency situation cause they wouldn't have funding. And the dual banking system would be threatened. Terry says that the solution here is to give identical powers of the Controller to our Bank Commissioner, not this legislation.

6. He, and he says other like-minded bankers, are unwilling to be overt in opposition to this bill; he doesn't oppose it. He says there is no emergency and it will be a donnybrook, no matter how many legislators say they are for the bill.

7. He says that most banks in this state did not participate in the "vota"

8. He is fearful that a donnybrook in a visible special session will seriously impair what he believes the big crisis to banks to be: going to the people to change the usury rate.

I know I have not done this justice; I also know I am looking for any way out of a special session on this; I also know that the calls I am getting from legislators reflect no understanding on their part of the "emergency" involved or what amendments, etc. might be attempted.

OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR

MEMORANDUM

To: Governor Bailey EB Date: April 23, 1998

From: Sam

Subject: Special Session

Seven called this morning to inquire as to what I thought were the possibilities for a special session. His assessment based on discussions primarily with First Commercial's correspondent banks is that an overwhelming majority of the banks out in the state are expressing support for the proposed legislation but that many of them are "paying lip service" to agreeing and continue to gripe about various specific provisions of the bill and that most of them are not really working that hard on their legislators. He also said it was his impression that "CS is attempting to be a spoiler".

I also received a call from Charlotte May of the Arkansas Association of Bank Holding Companies who said that a telephone survey of the Holding Companies membership at the end of last week indicated that 72% of that group favored the bill, 18% were opposed to it and 10% were neutral. On the question of whether the special session should be held to consider the issue, 57% were for a session and 43% were opposed. According to Charlotte, roughly half the banks in the state are members of the Bank Holding Company Association and, while she declined to be pinned down as to a specific number of banks that were contacted, she said that only two or three of the Association's membership did not respond to the survey.

Also attached are recent correspondence on this issue.

The Twin City Bank

THE TWIN CITY BANK
400 CAPITOL AVENUE
LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS 72202

MAY 27 1988

Mr. Martin Jackson, President
First State Bank & Trust Company
P. O. Box 109
Conway, Arkansas 72032

Dear Martin:

As you know, Twin City Bank and State Bank Commissioner Ford are defending Act 539 of 1987 in a lawsuit brought by First Commercial Bank and others. An attempt is being made to inject this litigation into the debate over the proposed Omnibus Banking Bill. This letter is written for the purpose of clearly setting forth the situation and position of TCB in this controversy.

TCB does not oppose the bill. Our reluctance is based in the effect of one part of the bill that seems disregarded totally by us and this litigation.

Act 539 of 1987 passed overwhelmingly: 30 to 13 in the House, 23 to 10 in the Senate. Under its provisions, TCB applied for, and was granted, five permits to branch in Little Rock. No objection was raised in the application process despite all appropriate notices being sent by the State Bank Department. First Commercial Bank and its allies ignored a direct attack of our permits in Circuit Court, the established statutory means of challenging the Bank Commissioner's approval. deleted phrase or construction Instead, they challenged the action of the Bank Commissioner after our permits were granted and without naming TCB as a party. In fact, we were not even brought into the case until after we had gone to the expense of actually opening our branch at 400 Capitol Avenue, which is the financial center of the ~~major~~ metropolitan area of the state. It was only at this point that First Commercial tried to close our Capitol Avenue Branch while the lawsuit was being decided. They failed.

Simultaneously with this litigation, the banking community was taking steps to develop a comprehensive state solution to disparities in the branching authority of banks and savings and loans. Initially, drafts of the Omnibus ~~Bill~~ Bill were circulated which were consistent with TCB's branching initiatives made possible by Act 539 of 1987. A meeting was held by the Arkansas Bankers Association on May 11, 1968, a meeting to which TCB was not invited. At that meeting, we understand, representatives of First Commercial inserted a 100 foot provision which was calculated to interfere with our established Capital Avenue branch. A grandfather clause was included but its wording may be insufficient to protect that operating branch.

As initially stated in this letter, TCB wants to support the proposed bill. However, we must have reliable assurance that the wording "grandfathered in" any operating branch. We appeal to your sense of fairness and ask for your support to enable TCB to fully and actively support this bill by contacting your legislators and securing their consent to adopt a grandfather provision that states:

"Any bank may, at its option, operate any branch office, teller's window, or other banking facility which is separate from the main office of the bank and in operation on May 11, 1968 as a full service branch or a customer-bank communications terminal."

Yours truly,

Edward M. Perlow, Jr.

RE: Arkansas Bankers Branching/Interstate Banking Legislative Initiative for Presentation to the Special Session

Dear Governor:

You invite me to remove from the captioned ABA package, the so-called "home office protection" feature. It prohibits branching within 300 linear feet of the principal office of an existing bank. This feature is in the existing law and has been since 1973.

Your invitation presupposes that I have the right to remove this feature and that it lacks the support of bankers and legislators. To support the latter point, you advise that some 15 bankers and legislators have told you they don't like it. This information apparently came to your attention in the July 5 morning meeting with Bank Commissioner Ford, Former Commissioner Jackson, ABA Past President Hartsfield, Senator Beebe and Representative Wilson. This minority view you cite is not surprising. It contrasts with endorsement by 80% of bank CEO's attending a statewide meeting in March and with an ABA legislative head count of 65% support for the bill as a package.

My response to your invitation was to ask you to sleep on it; you invited me to find support for inclusion of the home office protection feature.

The leadership of the ABA is as follows. I have consulted them all except Rainwater.

President:	Sloan Rainwater (hospitalized with heart surgery)
President-Elect:	Sonny Henson, Fort Smith
Treasurer:	Al Rusher, Brinkley
Group Chairmen:	C. L. Lieblong, Paragould; Larry Nelson, Mountain Home; Rick Parsons, Springdale; Bob Burns, Magnolia; Curtis Hutchins, Fordyce

Leaders, in addition to these, with whom I have visited include Walter Turnbow, Springdale; W. E. Ayres, Simmons, Pine Bluff; Bob Gantt, First National, Magnolia; and Cecil Culp, Jr., and Ray Cash, Arkansas Bank and Trust, Hot Springs.

July 7, 1988
Page Two

To 2 men, each of these leaders endorsed the entire legislative package and specifically the home office protection feature, and Barnett Grace, President of First Commercial Bank, confirmed with Jim Walton his support. *

If the home office protection feature is excluded and the suit in Pulaski Chancery repudiated which challenges Act 539 of 1987, TCB will be left in place in the TCBY Tower within 300 linear feet of this building. If the ABA bill as proposed is passed and TCB loses the suit, as my lawyers confirm and I am confident they will on July 14, they can relocate just outside the 300 foot parameter of existing law and there join the Worthen, the Union, OneBank, First Commercial, Savers, Capitol Savings and Loan, First Federal, Home Savings, and Superior Federal, all within a stone's throw of 5th and Broadway.

What is your guidance? I am committed to support this legislative initiative, as is or as reasonably modified. I prefer the widely supported ABA package.

Cordially,

William H. Bowen

March 14, 1986

RE: Branching

Wayne Hartsfield, President of the Arkansas Bankers Association and President of the First National Bank of Searcy, visited with me today concerning a proposal he is working on to settle the Branch Banking dispute.

Hartsfield has an agreement with the Governor to call a special session upon full concurrence and commitment of the bankers and banking organizations in the state to support the legislation. The Bank Commissioner is supportive of the legislation and Marcus Halbrook, Retired Director of the Arkansas Legislative Council, is drafting the bill. A draft copy will be forwarded as soon as Hartsfield receives it.

The key provisions of the bill are as follows:

1. Interstate reciprocity with approximately 15 states will be approved, effective January 1, 1989.
2. County-wide branching will be approved, effective January 1, 1989.
3. Contiguous county branching would be phased in over a period of five years.
4. Statewide branching would be phased in over a period of 10 years.
5. Incorporated communities with less than 3,000 in population and a bank charter will be protected from branching from the outside. However, if banks in these communities branch out, then reciprocity will follow banks in the communities where they branch.
6. Branching statewide could be accomplished by acquisition or merger under the 10 year phase-in.
7. State chartered savings and loans will be covered under the state branching bill as state banks.
8. The current statewide branching applications with the Comptroller will not be grandfathered.

Page 2

Hartsfield said he had not talked personally with James Street, President of the Independent Bankers, but in conversations with some of their board of directors, the comments were they did not like statewide branching, but the proposed legislation, as spelled out above, is better than they would get under federally dictated statewide branching.

TUESDAY, MAY 14, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:15 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING COMMENTS OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

May I ask the witnesses if they would stand for purposes of taking the oath.

[Witnesses were duly sworn.]

The CHAIRMAN. I ask the witnesses if they have any statement they would like to make at this time.

[No response.]

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Doyle.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF PATRICIA SOLIS DOYLE SPECIAL ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT & DIRECTOR OF SCHEDULING FOR THE FIRST LADY

[No response.]

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING COMMENT OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Thank you for coming down, Ms. Thomases. I'm going to ask you to direct your attention back to 1993. I would like to ask you when was the last time you had a conversation with Vincent Foster before he took his life.

Ms. THOMASES. Either the Wednesday or the Thursday before he took his life.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Tell us where was the conversation?

Ms. THOMASES. It took place at 2020 O Street in Washington.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is that a hotel at which you often stay?

Ms. THOMASES. It's not a hotel, it's a facility at which I often stay when I'm in Washington.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you come to meet Mr. Foster at that facility? Did he ask to meet with you?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was this in the evening?

Ms. THOMASES. Early in the evening.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How long did you spend with Mr. Foster?

Ms. THOMASES. Not a real long time, maybe 20 minutes, half an hour, maybe a little longer than that. We spent some time at the house.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At the house?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was this by appointment? You know, he set it up, he arranged it?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was at his instigation or at his request that you had the meeting?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't want to ask you about all the details of the meeting but I understand there was a portion of the discussion that related to certain personal issues that were on Mr. Foster's mind. Is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. There were a few personal issues.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But there was also discussion of issues on Mr. Foster's mind that concerned the Travel Office, is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes. It was really about work.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Putting Mr. Foster's personal life out of it, what did Mr. Foster tell you about work?

Ms. THOMASES. He was concerned that there were not enough attorneys to handle the amount of work currently in the Counsel's Office. And he was concerned that if there were, in fact, a Congressional investigation of the Travel Office, that he would really be struggling in order to keep up with it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he tell you he had some concern about David Watkins?

Ms. THOMASES. Not at that particular time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he tell you at some other particular time that he had a concern about David Watkins?

Ms. THOMASES. He told me at a prior time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How much prior to this meeting on the Wednesday or Thursday before his death?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know how much prior, but it was not at that meeting. It was prior to that meeting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it a week before, a month before?

Ms. THOMASES. I have no idea. It was at some point.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did he tell you were his concerns about David Watkins?

Ms. THOMASES. He was concerned, and his real concern was that Hillary would be a target, an unfair target and he thought that Watkins might be the source of the criticism.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say a target, a target of criticism?

Ms. THOMASES. Of criticism, an unfair target.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And the source of that might be an unfair accusation by David Watkins?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he tell you what the nature of the accusation might be?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you knew, as of the last day you had spoken with Mr. Foster, that one of the things he had on his mind was a concern that David Watkins might make some kind of allegation that would make Mrs. Clinton, as you described, an unfair target of criticism, is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On this particular occasion, which is the last time you saw him when you were at O Street, I guess, it is called the Mansion, is that right?

Ms. THOMASES. The Mansion.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you were at the Mansion on O Street, he raised with you again the issue of the Travel Office, right?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In particular the possibility of there being some kind of investigation in Congress?

Ms. THOMASES. That's what he talked about.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On this occasion, when you talked to him about the possibility of a Congressional investigation, did he talk to you again about Mr. Watkins or somebody being responsible for the First Lady being a target of criticism?

Ms. THOMASES. No. The entire discussion about the Travel Office, when I last saw him, was the resource issue, and the fact that there were not enough people to handle the number of things that would come up. It was essentially a personnel problem, not the substance of it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had dealt with Mr. Foster before on the issue of the Travel Office, right?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Had you ever spoken to anyone in the White House during the period of time that the White House was reviewing the Travel Office situation leading up to the time that the Travel Office people were fired? Did you ever talk to anybody in the White House about the Travel Office personnel and the issues surrounding them?

Ms. THOMASES. Could you repeat the question?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever talk to someone in the White House about the Travel Office personnel and the issues surrounding their conduct before they were terminated?

Ms. THOMASES. The only person I remember even mentioning it to me was Harry Thomason, at one point.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did he say to you?

Ms. THOMASES. He just said that he was working on it. I mean, it was not a big conversation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Harry Thomason, just to put it in context, he is the Hollywood producer who is friends with the Clintons from some previous time, right?

Ms. THOMASES. He was very involved, he had been very involved in the campaign as a producer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He did not have a White House position in 1993, is that right?

Ms. THOMASES. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But he told you he was working on the Travel Office issue?

Ms. THOMASES. I may have overstated that. But, yes, he was the only person whoever raised the actual idea of the Travel Office with me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you talk with Mrs. Clinton about the Travel Office?

Ms. THOMASES. Not that I remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And did you talk to Mack McLarty about the Travel Office?

Ms. THOMASES. Not that I remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I would ask that we put on the Elmo a package, I will show it to you, CGE 9110, which is a copy of a steno pad of notes of a White House person known as Lorraine Voles, that says at the bottom, "S. Thomases went to Mack; Hillary wants these people fired. Mack wouldn't do it. DW didn't want to do it." Did you go to Mr. McLarty and say to him at some time that Mrs. Clinton wanted to have these people fired?

Ms. THOMASES. No, I don't believe I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say you don't believe that you did, and you say you don't recall, are you prepared to absolutely say with certainty that the account that is contained in these notes by a White House official is incorrect?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes, I am.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you absolutely dispute this account?

Ms. THOMASES. Well, I don't know. I mean, I don't remember Hillary every telling me to do that, and I never remember having that as a topic of a meeting with Mack.

Senator SARBANES. Could I ask whose pad this is?

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is from Lorraine Voles, V-O-L-E-S, who works at the White House.

Senator SARBANES. Is this part of our document production?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think it was a production made to the House of Representatives.

Senator SARBANES. In their Travelgate inquiry?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's correct.

Ms. THOMASES, after this meeting at the Mansion at O Street, you did not see Mr. Foster again, is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now did there come a point in time, sometime thereafter, that you were interviewed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation regarding Mr. Foster's death?

Ms. THOMASES. An FBI agent called me on the phone.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did he ask you?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't remember specifically.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he interview on the telephone?

Ms. THOMASES. It was a rather perfunctory inquiry, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say it's perfunctory?

Ms. THOMASES. I did not feel at the time, and I do not feel now that it was an in-depth interview.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Putting aside your speculation about what was in the agent's mind, did the agent tell you he was an FBI agent?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he tell you he was investigating certain matters relating to Vincent Foster?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were aware of the fact that he was operating on official Government business?

Ms. THOMASES. I went through a period of wondering. I felt insecure that in fact, since I was not seeing him, that in fact he was an FBI agent, and we spent some time in the beginning of the conversation discussing that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In other words, you're telling us at the beginning you had a doubt about whether he was really an agent?

Ms. THOMASES. Well, he called me up on the phone and said he was an agent, but I didn't see him, and I raised with him that it would be more comfortable for me if we actually had a conversation in person.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you eventually satisfied yourself that he was an agent, right?

Ms. THOMASES. No. But I treated him as if he were one.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is pretty important, and I think you and I both understand why it's important. Are you trying to tell us now that when you talked to this FBI agent, and you know as well as I do, there is an FBI report, and this really was an agent. Are you trying to suggest to us that at the time you talked to him, you were under the belief that he might not really be an agent?

Ms. THOMASES. No. What I am saying is, when he first called, I was a little concerned about that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You, of course, understand that when you talk to an agent on the matter of an official investigation, you have an obligation to tell the truth. Is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. Absolutely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to read you the last passage of this FBI report. I think you have a copy in the package before you. We will put it up on the screen. It's document OIC 418. It is two pages. But I want to focus your attention on the last paragraph. This is an interview of you.

She last saw Vincent Foster on Wednesday or Thursday before his death. She believes that they had lunch together with some other people in Washington. She recalls him mentioning he planned to take a weekend trip to the Eastern Shore of Maryland. She noted no change in his demeanor or physical appearance but was aware that he was working very hard and was under considerable pressure. His death came as a complete shock to her and she can offer no reason or speculation as to why he may have taken his life.

Did you say these things to the agent?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you tell the agent that you'd had lunch together with other people in Washington on the last occasion you saw him when in truth and in fact, as you have now sworn, you actually saw him by prearrangement at your hotel?

Ms. THOMASES. I think there may have been, I'm sure I probably did tell him that I also had lunch with him. I think there may have been some confusion because I did have lunch with him in the weeks before he died, but I don't know that I would have told him, and I have told other law enforcement people that where I saw him was at the Mansion on O Street.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This was your first interview by a law enforcement person about this matter, is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. I think so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So this is the first time you talked to someone in law enforcement. I want to go over the first two sentences so there is no misapprehension about what you were asked and what you said. "She last saw Vincent Foster on a Wednesday or Thursday before his death." That's correct, isn't it?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "She believes they had lunch together with some other people in Washington." That is incorrect because the last time you saw him on Wednesday or Thursday was at the Mansion at O Street in a prearranged meeting in which the two of you were alone; right?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know that that sentence fully—I think we talked about a number of things and so that sentence was only part of it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it your testimony that you told the agent about this private meeting at the Mansion on O Street?

Ms. THOMASES. I believe that I told him that we met away from the White House.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And did you tell the agent that the two of you met alone?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't remember specifically whether I said we met alone. I believe I told him he had asked to see me away from the White House.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you told the agent that this was by prearrangement?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know whether I used the word prearrangement but I think that I probably used the word that he asked to see me away from the White House.

Mr. CHERTOFF. None of this, of course, appears in the agent's report so your testimony is that you told this to the agent but the agent never made a note of it?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know. I can't speak for the agent.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you tell the agent that you had discussed the Travel Office the last time you had talked with him?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't think he asked what we discussed. He was more concerned about what I thought about the reason that he had killed himself.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you tell the agent, were you in fact unable to offer any speculation as to why he may have taken his life?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's what you told the agent?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes. And I still do not feel that I am ready to speculate on why he took his life.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But, in fact, you had had a conversation the week before he passed away where you discussed a number of issues, some of them personal and some of them work-related which could have borne on what was in his mind at the time that he made the decision to take his life. Isn't that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. I just want to say I saw Vince Foster. I feel tremendous guilt about the fact that I was not wise enough or astute enough to imagine the things that were on his mind would have triggered a decision for him to take his life. There was nothing about his demeanor or about the way he conducted himself that would have made me think that he was going to threaten his life. Had I thought he would have done so, I would have done something, it was my nature. And therefore I'm not willing to speculate even now about why Vince Foster took his life.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, let me withdraw the question.

I want to show you a passage from a book which I think you should have in your package. Page 284 of a book written by James Stuart called "Blood Sport." You know James Stuart, I take it?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You talked to him in connection with his writing of the book?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We will bring a copy of the book down. It is page 284, Ms. Thomases.

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Stuart writes:

Earlier, Foster had turned to Thomases to express frustration over the Travel Office report, and, like many in the White House, she had become something of a confidante. Now, she tried to reassure Foster, but he said he needed to talk to her "off the campus," somewhere they wouldn't be seen. Thomases suggested 2020 O Street, a private rooming house where she herself sometimes stayed in Washington.

When Foster arrived that evening, Thomases thought he looked a little better. He looked around the house and seemed amused by its garish Victorian decor. He mentioned that he and Lisa were going to get away for the weekend. But then he began to unburden himself.

He mentioned how overworked he was and how he lacked the time and the support staff he was used to in Little Rock. If he didn't get more help, he said, he was afraid he would "let the President and Hillary down." Predictably, he brought up the Travel Office affair, adding that he didn't trust David Watkins, who he feared might fabricate or embellish the facts to cover himself—possibly at the expense of the First Lady.

Now the portions of this I have read to you, did you, in fact, tell Mr. Stuart that this is what happened in your conversation with Vincent Foster?

Ms. THOMASES. I do not believe that I said that that is what happened with him that night. I think he probably put together different pieces of different conversations. As you know, that is his literary style.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I do not know his literary style because I have never dealt with him, but you have dealt with him because I think you actually approached him to get him interested in writing the book, is that right?

Ms. THOMASES. Not quite.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You clearly had a discussion with Mr. Stuart in which you gave an account of your conversation with Mr. Foster the last time you saw him, correct?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your testimony now is that his rendition of your account is incorrect?

Ms. THOMASES. Partially incorrect.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your testimony is that the FBI agent's rendition of your interview with him in June 1994 is also incorrect?

Ms. THOMASES. If you want to talk about the FBI's rendition, I would turn back to the first page of that rendition.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'd like to talk about first the paragraph that I'm concerned with. Is it your testimony that with respect to the paragraph we have been focused on concerning your last meeting with Vincent Foster, the FBI is incorrect?

Ms. THOMASES. There must be some confusion. I wouldn't say incorrect. There is an omission in it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. A significant omission. Namely, the fact that the last meeting was not a lunch but was a private meeting at Mr. Foster's request where he unburdened himself about a number of matters, including the issue of the Travel Office. That whole element of that last meeting is omitted from the agent's report, right?

Ms. THOMASES. It was not in the report as I received it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your testimony was, again just as you said, Mr. Stuart got it wrong in the book, your testimony is that you told the agent about these things but the agent wrote it down wrong, or didn't write it down properly or fully. Is that your testimony?

Ms. THOMASES. It is not fully in there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So both Mr. Stuart and the agent are incorrect. Now, I would like to move forward a little bit. I would like to move into the week following Mr. Foster's death, and I would like to put up a chart because we have had the benefit now of getting some additional documentation from the White House which I think may enlighten us about the events of that week.

Let me begin by saying this. Obviously, Ms. Thomases, at the time you learned of Mr. Foster's death, you understood that there was significance to your last conversation with him, is that right?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know that there was serious significance to it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Isn't it a fact that when you saw the President of the United States for the first time after Mr. Foster's death, you reported to him or you told him in detail about your meeting with Mr. Foster the previous week?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know that I told him in detail, but I told him about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you thought that it worth telling the President about, is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes, because I felt so badly that I hadn't noted that he was in such distress.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But putting aside what you felt, I just want to make sure we have the facts correct. The fact is that when you met the President on the 21st, the first time you saw him after Vince Foster's death, you, in fact, told him about your meeting with Mr. Foster at O Street, is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you were asked about this at our hearings, I don't think you mentioned that. I want to ask you to direct your attention to the hearing of August 8, 1995, page 76. You were asked about this particular meeting by Mr. Ben-Veniste.

The CHAIRMAN. Hold up for a second.

Senator SARBANES. What page are you on?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Page 76:

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What was the substance of that conversation?

Ms. THOMASES. It was more reviewing again our sense of helplessness and sadness that we might not have been as sensitive as we might have been to what we then believed was a tremendous amount of pain that Vince must have been in. We talked about that. He was very specific about how he had had a conversation with Vince and had intended to have him at the White House, and we each talked about opportunities in which we could have in fact perhaps, had we known of the problems, done something.

Nowhere in that answer, Ms. Thomases, is there any indication that you had had a meeting with Mr. Foster a week before his death in which he expressed a number of concerns or issues to you.

I want to ask you now to focus your attention on the chart to your right.

Ms. THOMASES. I really can't see it.

The CHAIRMAN. We will put a copy in front of you. I believe you have it. It says, "Activities At The White House, July 26-27, 1993. Is that correct, Mr. Chertoff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. By the way, Ms. Thomases, before we get to that, I do want to clear up one point. Before you came to testify on August 8th, had you or had you not spoken to the First Lady concerning your upcoming testimony at the hearings?

Ms. THOMASES. I always let the First Lady know if we talked near the hearings, that I am going to hearings, but we don't talk about the substance of the hearings.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm going to present you with two frankly inconsistent statements of yours and I want you to see if you can help us understand how it is you came to make these statements. At page 132 of your August 8th testimony, at line 9:

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you discuss your appearance here today with Hillary Clinton?

Ms. THOMASES. I did not discuss my appearance here today with Hillary Clinton.

However, more recently, on December 18th, when you returned, if you want to get that testimony at page 46, line 3:

Mr. CHERTOFF. You say at the time approximate to his death. Did you have a conversation with her at any time about the handling of the documents ever?

Ms. THOMASES. I might have in some subsequent times but I do not believe that I ever discussed them with her at that time, or anyone proximate to that time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the discussion that you had with her at some other time about the documents?

Ms. THOMASES. It probably was in the context of these hearings.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You mean that you have discussed it with her since the hearings have begun?

Ms. THOMASES. No. But, you know, just when it was raised that I was coming down.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you talked to her personally about your coming down to the hearings?

Ms. THOMASES. This was way back when, before the first hearing.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Back in the summer?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the discussion?

Ms. THOMASES. Just that I was going to have to come down, and that I didn't think I had very much interesting to tell you, that you were still going to ask me the questions because you felt the need to ask me the questions.

Now which is it, Ms. Thomases. You had a conversation with her concerning coming down, and there weren't going to be a lot of questions in December. Or as you told Senator Faircloth in August, you had no conversation or no discussion about your appearance before the August 8th testimony, with Hillary Clinton. Which is the correct one?

Ms. THOMASES. It is likely that I talked to her about the fact of my coming down, just as I would say to her, I'm coming down this week, I have a hearing. But I never discussed the substance of what my testimony was going to be or any review of my testimony after my testimony was given. In fact, sir, for awhile, we only really talked to each other through our lawyers.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But in this instance, you testified in December that you probably had a discussion with her about missing documents in the context of these hearings?

Ms. THOMASES. I didn't discuss with her the missing documents.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So the testimony in December is inoperative to the extent it says that?

Ms. THOMASES. To the extent that it suggests that we were talking about the substance of it, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now let's go to the activities. Bearing in mind that we now know, Ms. Thomases, that you had had a conversation with Mr. Foster in which the Travel Office came up the week before his death—I'm sorry——

Ms. THOMASES. Mr. Chertoff, you're going to have to slow down because I really can't follow you at the speed that you're going. You're jumping from subject to subject and I can't keep track of it.

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to ask Mr. Chertoff to pose it to you again.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I thought of all people, as a New Yorker——

The CHAIRMAN. Now come on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Thomases, we have established that you had a conversation with Mr. Foster the week before he took his life, in which he raised the issue of the Travel Office and his concern about the possibility of a Congressional investigation. And, you also knew, as of the time of his death, that he was concerned that Mr. Watkins might make allegations that directly involved the First Lady.

You get a call from Mr. Nussbaum on July 26th, which is the Monday after Mr. Foster's death, and in that telephone call, he tells you, for the first time, that there's a note or a piece of paper torn up that's been found in Mr. Foster's briefcase. He indicates to you the substance of that note which includes references to the Travel Office problem. You do recall that conversation, right?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Bearing all that we've now been able to establish in mind, you called Patricia Solis, now Patricia Doyle, congratulations, you called her at 5:24 on the 26th of July, right?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't specifically remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The records reflect that. Do you have reason to dispute the records?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

The CHAIRMAN. You have the record in front of you?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Isn't it a fact, Ms. Thomases, that particularly in view of the fact of your having had discussions with Mr. Foster about his concerns about the Travel Office, in view of what his concerns were about the First Lady, and in view of having heard from

Mr. Nussbaum about the fact that the paper found in his briefcase made reference to the Travel Office, didn't you call in order to set up an appointment or to see if you could reach the First Lady and have a conversation with her about it?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know why I called.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Solis, do you remember this telephone call? Do you have any idea why there was a call from Ms. Thomases the week after Mr. Foster had taken his life?

Ms. DOYLE. I don't remember the call.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now the next thing we have established, and I am not going to go through the recitation here, there's an increasing list of messages and calls back and forth on Tuesday, which we have established earlier is not your regular day for going down to Washington, which indicate on at least two occasions there were messages left for you to reach out for Mrs. Clinton, and that, in fact, you arrived at the White House at shortly before 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon.

With the benefit of the additional information we now have that you have heard about, do you now remember going to the White House to have the first face-to-face conversation you had with Mrs. Clinton since Mr. Foster's death?

Ms. THOMASES. No, I still don't remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm going to go over these in a second—but would you agree with me that particularly since you had had a conversation with Mr. Foster a week before he passed away, that that might be something that would be of interest to the First Lady in terms of determining what was in Mr. Foster's mind, or what was his state of mind before he took his life?

Ms. THOMASES. I probably mentioned that conversation to Hillary when I spoke to her, when she called me the night that she called me to inform me of his death.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You've never told us about that previously. You're now telling us that you remember the first time she called you, you mentioned this meeting?

Ms. THOMASES. I did not say I remembered it. I said it is likely that I mentioned it to her. I don't specifically remember mentioning it to her.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's go over this pattern. You got a message in the morning from Ms. Solis saying, "HRC wants to see you today."

Ms. Doyle, can I ask you how common was it for the First Lady to request Ms. Thomases to come down from New York for the day?

Ms. DOYLE. I'm sorry, to come down specifically?

Mr. CHERTOFF. To call up on a particular morning and say, come down, I need to see you today?

Ms. DOYLE. That's not normally the way it works. If Mrs. Clinton wanted to see Susan, she would ask if she in town, do you know what her schedule is, can she come by.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you actually were up there in the afternoon for several hours. In fact, we now know, in addition to the hour and a half we had previously accounted for your being in the residence, you were back in the residence, according to our chart, at 5:30 p.m. on the 27th because you made two calls from the residence on your credit card.

An hour later, Webster Hubbell arrived at the residence. Did you see Mr. Hubbell in the residence when you were up there with the First Lady on Tuesday, July 27th?

Ms. THOMASES. As I have said to you previously, I really remember nothing very specific about the 24th-27th.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember Mr. Hubbell being up there generally?

Ms. THOMASES. I remember seeing Webb Hubbell at some point with Hillary after Vince's death, but I don't remember whether it was specifically that day.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it in the residence?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know for sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Can you offer us a reason why—and to put it in context because some of this obviously relates, I mean, this was the Tuesday that the note was shown for the first time to the Attorney General of the United States who saw it actually after Mr. Hubbell had come to the residence.

It was also the day in which the documents were removed from Mr. Foster's office, were turned over to Williams & Connolly, and what is of interest is that of the universe of people that we know that had either physically seen the billing records or, in your case, had heard about the content of the billing records because we know from your notes, that you had talked to Webb Hubbell about the billing records, there was only three people, four possibly including the First Lady.

Mr. Foster, who was dead as of the 27th. Yourself, Mr. Hubbell, and Mrs. Clinton, and the three of you happened to be in the same place at the same time in the White House residence on the very day that the documents were removed from Mr. Foster's office, were finally turned over to Williams & Connolly after sitting in the residence for several days. And the very same day that the decision is made to show the Attorney General of the United States, Mr. Foster's torn-up note or writing.

With all of that in mind to help you refresh your recollection, Ms. Thomases, can you tell us what you remember about this meeting you had with Mr. Hubbell or this occasion you had where you were with Mr. Hubbell and Mrs. Clinton after Mr. Foster's death?

Ms. THOMASES. Can I just talk to my attorney for a minute?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sure.

Ms. THOMASES. I still don't remember the 27th, but I do remember at some point meeting with, being in the presence of Webb and the First Lady after Vince Foster's death. I don't know that it was on the 27th.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What happened?

Ms. THOMASES. We just talked about the tragedy of Vince's death and we talked about how sad it was, and I remember the first time that the three of us were together, we talked a little bit about some of the good times that we had had together in old times before Bill Clinton was elected President, and in the days in which I used to see them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Thomases, since the independent record establishes that this occurred on the 27th, because we have it from the records, how is it that you didn't discuss the note, the torn-up pieces of paper with Mr. Hubbell in this meeting?

Ms. THOMASES. I've testified it before, and I reiterate it again, I do not remember having that discussion. I know I wouldn't have brought up the subject of the note. I have no recollection of anybody else bringing up the subject of the torn-up note. And I just don't remember it.

The CHAIRMAN. We'll come back to that.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Good morning, Ms. Thomases, Ms. Doyle.

Ms. THOMASES. Nice to see you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. On this issue of Mr. Hubbell's visit to the White House on the 27th, the records indicate that Mr. Hubbell arrived at a point after which the files that had been segregated and taken over to Williams & Connolly had already left the White House residence.

According to the records, just to put this in the proper context, Mr. Barnett left the residence at 4:30 p.m., according to Secret Service records, and Mr. Barlow, the Williams & Connolly courier, left at 4:42 p.m. with the records. Actually, he was an administrator at the firm, so I don't want to denigrate his position there. But the records also indicate that Mr. Hubbell did not arrive until some 2 hours after that happened.

It is true there were a number of subjects covered in this 35-minute period of questioning. I want to start, I guess, with the reason for your travel to Washington on the 27th. Mr. Chertoff has suggested that the reason you traveled to Washington was because you got a message that Mrs. Clinton wanted you to travel to Washington on that day. Did that happen, to your recollection?

Ms. THOMASES. I really don't know why I traveled to Washington on that day. But as I stated, I could have come for any number of reasons. I knew I couldn't come to Washington that Wednesday because I had an important meeting in New York that day and I think I've so testified previously on that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes. Your prior testimony was that you had a meeting with a new client or a prospective client in New York, and that your regular travel to Washington was delayed by a day. Is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So all of this supposed hocus pocus about when you came down doesn't seem to make much sense since, if you were to be involved in things that were happening, one would expect that you would come earlier rather than later. Would that be fair to say?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In connection with the suggestion that the message Ms. Doyle left for you was that you should come down to Washington today, that isn't what the actual note says that we have been provided. That note says, I believe—I don't have it in front of me, perhaps you do—that Mrs. Clinton would like to see you today. Is that what that note was?

Ms. THOMASES. That's what the note says.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So there wasn't anything in that message or note about Mrs. Clinton wanting you to travel to Washington, but rather she would like to see you. Presumably at that point, since the message I believe was left at your Washington office, Ms. Doyle or the First Lady was aware that you were in Washington. Ms. Doyle, does that comport with your recollection of leaving the note that there was not a specific request to travel to Washington?

Ms. DOYLE. I don't remember the call at all.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the best evidence of that would be the phone message involved?

Ms. DOYLE. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now on the issue of Mr. Foster's concerns prior to his death, the things that were on his mind, I don't think we ought to take this as though we are dealing in a vacuum with new information.

You may be reminded that in the testimony given by Mr. Watkins, 10 months ago in a hearing before this Committee, and I can supply the page to you, Mr. Chairman that would be at page 66, on July 25, 1995, that in the very car ride that he took with the U.S. Park Police on their way to inform Mrs. Foster of her husband's apparent suicide, that Mr. Watkins, at that point, mentioned, and it was the only thing that he mentioned, that Mr. Foster was concerned about the Travel Office. "I told them about the Travel Office, and he said that he had been upset about the Travel Office." Those were Mr. Watkins' words in his testimony before this Committee. And of course, shortly thereafter, the note was discovered left torn up in Mr. Foster's briefcase.

Let me read the portions of that note so that if there is some mystery about what was on Mr. Foster's mind, that was very apparently resolved shortly after his death, at least insofar as in his own hand, he expressed his concerns, and he said:

No one in the White House, to my knowledge, violated any law or standard of conduct, including any action in the Travel Office. There was no intent to benefit any individual or specific group. The FBI lied in their report to the Attorney General. The press is covering up the illegal benefits they received from the Travel Office. The GOP has lied and misrepresented its knowledge and role, and covered up a prior investigation, also apparently relating to the Travel Office.

So all of this was well in hand within a short number of days after Mr. Foster's death.

Now, you have been asked whether you felt it appropriate to speculate when asked that question by an FBI agent, shortly after Mr. Foster's death. Actually, that report is dated June 14, 1994, nearly a year after Mr. Foster's death. Is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So this isn't something that was being done in the heat of an investigation immediately following Mr. Foster's death. Clearly, the FBI and everyone else knew, well in advance of that point, as a matter of fact, that Mr. Foster had expressed concerns about the Travel Office.

Incidentally, the concerns are not limited to anything internally about the Travel Office inquiry in Mr. Foster's note, but rather a number of things were listed that seemed to indicate his feeling that the White House was being treated unfairly in connection with the Travel Office matter. The GOP, the press, the FBI, et cetera, were conducting themselves in a way that he felt, at least according to his note, was disingenuous.

Putting all that in context, I take it that it was your view, in your interview by telephone, by an FBI Special Agent in New York that you did not wish to speculate as to the cause of Mr. Foster's suicide?

Ms. THOMASES. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the note, which was produced and read to you, was one which this Committee had not requested and had apparently not received in any official capacity, but rather was a document that was released in some manner in association with the House investigation into the Travel Office matter. That note, we are told by Mr. Chertoff, was apparently written by Lorraine Voles and produced by the White House to the House of Representatives. We, to my knowledge, have not questioned Ms. Voles. Is that correct, Mr. Chertoff?

The CHAIRMAN. The record speaks for itself.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The record is quiet here.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, I've allowed you some latitude here. We know this was an official public record. It was introduced, it is in the public domain. There's no mystery about this note.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. My only inquiry was I did not remember having Ms. Voles deposed by our Committee. I was simply trying to verify that. And we don't know anything about how this note was taken. It is undated, and I have to tell you I don't know anything more about it. The Travel Office is not the subject of our mandate according to Senate Resolution 120.

Let me go to the issue of the chronology of events from July 26th and 27th. Now there are, in fact, a number of markers and pieces of documentary evidence relating to the comings and goings of individuals on that date with respect to messages left for you, and with respect to your own telephone activity in the sense that there were a couple of calls that you apparently made on a telephone calling card from the White House on the afternoon of the 27th. Have you reviewed those?

Ms. THOMASES. OK.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Have you had an opportunity to look at a calling card record which has been marked ST0000128?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That reflects that on the 27th, at 5:27 and 5:29 p.m., two calls were placed, apparently by you, to numbers in New York City. They were placed from the White House residence. Do you see that?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thereafter, it appears that a third call was placed, also on your calling card number, at I think it's 8:44 p.m. It appears to be from Washington National Airport to Connecticut?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes, I see that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You also note that there are records that apparently reflect that Ms. Doyle and Evelyn Lieberman left messages for you on the 27th indicating that Mrs. Clinton would like to see you that day.

Ms. THOMASES. I see the message from Evelyn.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That's at 1:30 p.m.

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That is dated. Apparently it is from a message log kept for you at your Washington law firm office that reflects that Ms. Solis, now Ms. Doyle, left you a message that morning to the same effect?

Ms. THOMASES. I think this is the log of my New York office. That is the kind of log I keep in my New York office, but yes, it is the same day.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the records kept at the White House indicate that you were present at the residence at some point, at least during the afternoon of the 27th, and it appears that you were there for several hours. You've reviewed those records?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes. But as I have said before, in spite of the fact that I have tried very hard to remember anything about it, I don't remember actually being there. But the facts reflect the fact that I was probably there.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The fact that there are calling card records reflecting calls records made by you apparently from the White House residence lends further documentary corroboration to the Secret Service records and all the rest that you were there that afternoon. My point is that we've now accumulated I think everything that might bear on your comings and goings that day. And the issue and the question that I want to put to you is, now that we have all of this information collected and you've had a chance to look at it, does any of it refresh your recollection about the events of that day insofar as your visit to the White House residence?

Ms. THOMASES. Unfortunately, I have no real recollection of what I did that day. I'm sorry.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, we will cede back our time.

The CHAIRMAN. We'll take a break. We'll recess for 10 minutes. [Recess.]

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I would simply like to note that with respect to what is marked CGE9110, which is the handwritten note that was attributed again to Lorraine Voles at the White House, apparently a person who works in the Communications Office, and perhaps we can follow-up on this, Mr. Chairman.

This is an undated note and it doesn't indicate from whom the information was received. And I see that the way your name is apparently spelled incorrectly, it says S. Thomas, but someone from the press during the break mentioned that when Ms. Voles testified before the House, and I have no independent knowledge about this, she indicated that this note was an inquiry from the press, rather than the report of any individual.

So the notion of it being shown to you as though someone on the inside provided information to another official, then wrote it down on a steno pad, if in fact this reporter was correct in summarizing Ms. Voles' testimony, that is an astounding jump of olympic proportions in terms of a conclusion to be drawn.

I think, Mr. Chairman, we ought to review Ms. Voles' testimony before the House and then try to put this back on the record with some level of precision. That is all I would like to say about that at this time. Obviously, I did not know that Ms. Voles' testimony would come up here today, and I have not reviewed it.

Ms. THOMASES. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Thomases, I just want to focus on this issue of this meeting you had with Mr. Hubbell and Mrs. Clinton up in the residence. I understand you can't tell us the particular day that it happened, but we do agree at this point that you had a meeting with Mrs. Clinton and Mr. Hubbell in which you discussed the circumstances and various events surrounding Mr. Foster's death, is that right?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's fair to say it was the first time the three of you had been together since the death, which would have been the occasion to talk about it, right?

Ms. THOMASES. It's the first time that I had been with the two of them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Bearing those two facts in mind, and using the records of all the travel back and forth that we have, all the phone calls, all the ins and outs at the White House that we've developed for many months, I think we can say conclusively that this meeting had to occur on the 27th because there was no other occasion before the 27th, based on the records that we have, that you and Mr. Hubbell and Mrs. Clinton were together at the same place in the residence. So with the assistance of the records, we can now demonstrate, or we can now be confident that, in fact, you were present together with Mr. Hubbell and Mrs. Clinton on the 27th.

That raises the following question in my mind. On the 26th, you learned, for the first time, about what we can describe as the note, the Foster note, and from what we have in prior testimony, that appears to be the point at which Mrs. Clinton was shown the Foster note on the 26th.

On the 27th, therefore, there's almost kind of a compelling logic that you would have discussed with Mr. Hubbell in the context of reminiscing and ruminating about Mr. Foster, you would have discussed the one piece of information that had been discovered in the preceding week that shed some light, however dim, on what was going on in Mr. Foster's mind when he took his life. Would you agree with me, therefore, Ms. Thomases, that, in fact, in this meeting or discussion you had with Mrs. Clinton and Mr. Hubbell, that the subject of the note almost necessarily came up?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you clearly knew on the 27th about the note, is that right?

Ms. THOMASES. I have to tell you that I don't remember. I have some memories of my first meeting with Webb and Hillary. Although, as I said to you, I don't remember it as being on the 27th. But I do know, at least in my memory, that I never brought up the idea of the note with Hillary. Hillary never brought up the idea of the note with me, and I don't remember Webb bringing up the idea of the note. I mean, your conclusion that this was inevitable is your conclusion, and I don't think it had anything to do with the three of us.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's just establish the things we do know. We know that on Monday the 26th, you knew about the note, right?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We know this from other evidence, that Mrs. Clinton knew about the note on the 26th. We know that you just testified a moment ago that the meeting or the discussion you recall having had with Mrs. Clinton and with Mr. Hubbell where you talked about Mr. Foster was the first time you had come together since Mr. Foster's death, because you just told us that. And we know from looking at the records that the earliest that could have been was on the 27th because you all weren't together before the 27th in that period after Mr. Foster's death.

So by the simple operation of logic, almost like mathematics, this meeting that you remember had to be on the 27th. You said it was the first meeting. You had this discussion about Mr. Foster the first time the three of you got together after Mr. Foster's death. We know that first time is the 27th. We know that as of the 27th, you knew about the note. We know that as of the 27th, Mrs. Clinton knew about the note. And you'll agree with me that Mr. Hubbell had a close relationship with Mr. Foster, right?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was certainly concerned and wanted to know what might have been on Mr. Foster's mind that led to this, right?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yet with all of this, with both you and Mrs. Clinton aware that a note had been discovered and meeting for the first time with Mr. Hubbell on the 27th, your testimony is that you don't think that either you or Mrs. Clinton brought the issue of the note up to tell Webb, you know, hey, we found a note. What do you think was on Vince's mind? That didn't happen?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't believe it would have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were not trying to keep it from Mr. Hubbell, were you?

Ms. THOMASES. I wouldn't have brought it up, and I don't think Mrs. Clinton brought it up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there some reason that you would have avoided bringing up the note?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there some secrecy about this at the time?

Ms. THOMASES. No. I think that you have made a big deal of this writing and I don't know, because I have not discussed this, but I have never thought that this writing had the significance that you are vesting it with.

Mr. CHERTOFF. With all due respect, Ms. Thomases, I think a lot of the country made a big deal out of this writing.

Ms. THOMASES. Mr. Chertoff, I wouldn't have brought up the note if Mrs. Clinton hadn't brought it up, because I would not have wanted to upset her in that way. Therefore, I didn't talk to her about any writing for months, if at all, that I had heard about it from Bernie.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You're telling us you never spoke to Mrs. Clinton about the writing?

Ms. THOMASES. I've told you before, I didn't say never. But I said proximate to its discovery, I don't remember talking to her about it. I think I've so testified.

Mr. CHERTOFF. While we are on the subject of conversations with Mrs. Clinton, I want to go back now to this occasion before your first appearance in August where you say there may have been at least some contact with Mrs. Clinton indicating that you were going to come down to testify. Was this a telephone contact? Did you call Mrs. Clinton and say you were coming down to testify?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have a meeting with her before you came to testify on August 8, 1995?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't think I saw her, so it probably would have been on the telephone.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you make an appointment to stop by and see her at the White House after your testimony?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to show you S20561, and we are going to make sure you have a copy of it. It's a visitors' summary for 8/95. The date on this particular run is August 9, 1995. That would be the day after you testified. We're getting it down to you.

This indicates, at the very least, that an appointment had been made for you to visit the White House at, I guess it would be, 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon on August 9th, and it is to a visitee named Curry. Who is Curry?

Ms. THOMASES. He is a person who works in the White House.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In what capacity?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know his exact capacity.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is he someone that works for the First Lady?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know why you would have been at the White House on this particular day?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't believe I was at the White House. There was a Wednesday afternoon meeting that I sometimes would come to that was on Wednesday. I don't believe I was there on this day.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the period before you came to testify for the first time here in August, did you become aware of the fact that billing records had been discovered or had been seen in the Book Room of the White House?

Ms. THOMASES. Excuse me, could you repeat that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the period before you came to testify on the 8th of August, did you become aware of the fact that billing records had been observed by Helen Dickey in the Book Room of the White House?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm sorry, Carolyn Huber. Did you become aware that Carolyn Huber had observed billing records in the Book Room of the White House?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Solis, do you know who Mr. Curry is?

Ms. DOYLE. I think you're referring to Bill Curry.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who is Bill Curry?

Ms. DOYLE. I don't know his exact title but he works I think in domestic policy. I don't know.

OPENING COMMENT OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER J. DODD

Senator DODD. I think there may be, if I can say, Mr. Chairman, if it's Bill Curry, he was a candidate for Governor in Connecticut. He's a former State Senator and lost in the last election and was brought down as a domestic advisor, if that's the same Curry.

The CHAIRMAN. Domestic advisor at the White House?

Senator DODD. I think that's generally the title, but don't hold me to that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Thomases, before the beginning of this year 1996, when they became publicly visible did you ever see the billing records? I can show them to you if you need to know what we are talking about, which have now been publicly unveiled.

Ms. THOMASES. No. And I testified on December 18th, five times, that I had not seen them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Had you ever heard anything about the handling of those billing records up until January 1996?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Never discussed the issue with anybody?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever discuss it with Mr. Hubbell?

Ms. THOMASES. No. I mean, except to the extent that we talked about it back in the campaign, which you also reviewed in my testimony on December 18th.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was during the testimony in which we repeatedly raised the issue and asked about the whereabouts of the billing records. Let me ask you this, Ms. Thomases. After your testimony on the 18th of December of last year where the issue of the billing records kept coming up, did you have any discussion with anybody besides your attorneys concerning where those billing records might be?

Ms. THOMASES. No. But I was shown them by the Independent Prosecutor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That would have been sometime in 1996 though?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Faircloth.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR LAUCH FAIRCLOTH

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I have several questions, but just as a first question, maybe it doesn't have to do with anything, Ms. Thomases, but did you call Mrs. Foster after his death and talk to her with condolences?

Ms. THOMASES. No, I wrote her a letter.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. How long after his death before you wrote the letter?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know exactly which day.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But you didn't call her?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Why not?

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I asked a question. Why not? There was a plethora of calls going every which way to everybody else. Everybody says they were condolences. I would have thought one would have dropped in the bucket for Mrs. Foster.

Ms. THOMASES. I thought that the letter was the best way for me to communicate with her.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. That's good enough.

Did you ever visit with the First Lady in the residence or on the third floor of the White House last summer, before your appearance before this Committee?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't believe so.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You don't believe so?

Ms. THOMASES. No. I don't think I was here in that time period. I don't know because I don't have the records.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Ms. Thomases, if you don't know, who could we ask that might know? Did you ever discuss the First Lady's legal billings prior to these hearings last summer with the First Lady, Bruce Lindsey, or anyone else?

Ms. THOMASES. Excuse me. Could you repeat that?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Yes. Did you ever discuss Mrs. Clinton's legal billings prior to these hearings last summer with the First Lady, Bruce Lindsey, or anyone else?

Ms. THOMASES. No. Excuse me. Except during the campaign of 1992 in terms of a timeframe.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You didn't discuss them immediately prior to your appearance here?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Ms. Thomases, would Vince Foster be communicating with you about the Travel Office problems because he wasn't talking to the First Lady about Travel Office problems?

Ms. THOMASES. No. The conversation that I had with Vince Foster focused predominantly on personnel issues, staffing issues, and his need for more staffing.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Why didn't you tell the FBI about your conversation with Foster?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know. He asked me to speculate on what was the reason for his death. He didn't ask me about the general conversations that I had with him.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You stated earlier that you and Mrs. Clinton communicated through your lawyers. When did this start?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know. It was just after, not during the period after my first appearance, it was during the fall.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. That you only communicated with Mrs. Clinton through lawyers now?

Ms. THOMASES. It became a little bit of a joke.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. We aren't joking here, so would you tell me what was the joke? I missed it.

Ms. THOMASES. I didn't want to call her and potentially embarrass her, so I told her lawyer that I was thinking of her, and that if she wanted to talk to me, she could call me.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Through her lawyer. Do you talk to her through her lawyer now, or do you talk to her directly? Or is the joke over, or still going?

Ms. THOMASES. I talk to her directly.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. The joke's over.

Ms. THOMASES. But we still don't talk about the substance of these hearings.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes has agreed to let you continue your line of questioning. In order that we don't go over too much on one side or the other, and we've been moving pretty well, why don't we go to Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Fair enough.

The CHAIRMAN. Then we will come back to Senator Faircloth.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Thomases, I guess it's somewhat disconcerting if every time you have a conversation with Mrs. Clinton, it becomes the subject of inquiry by the U.S. Senate, the House of Representatives, the staff of both of those bodies, the Independent Counsel, and whoever else has the authority to call you up and question you. Is that the joke that you're talking about?

Ms. THOMASES. That's exactly the joke that I'm talking about.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In a sense, it's not very funny but the reality is everytime you have a conversation with someone who is somehow involved or remotely involved in these proceedings, that conversation will then become the object of a question for which you are obliged to have a precise recall and testify under oath. That's basically life in Washington as of May 1996?

Ms. THOMASES. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to the appointment that was reflected in document S020561, which you were asked about, according to the White House Directory, William E. Curry, Jr., in 1995, was a Counselor of Domestic Policy and Political Affairs, and, of course, Senator Dodd has further identified him on the basis of his personal acquaintance. You indicated, I believe, that from time to time, you would attend a regular meeting with Mr. Curry's group back in 1995. Is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that it would not be unusual for there to be a White House visitor's summary produced whereby, if you were possibly expected to attend the meeting, you would be cleared through?

Ms. THOMASES. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That appears to be what this record indicates. However, what is important to note is that according to the record, you did not appear or attend that meeting?

Ms. THOMASES. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Moreover, this meeting was not scheduled to be in the White House or in the residence, but rather in the Old Executive Office Building where Mr. Curry made his office both according to document S020561 as well as the White House Directory for that period of time. Is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Again, we have a coincidence of a record reflecting your authorization to attend a meeting that had absolutely nothing to do with any of these issues?

Ms. THOMASES. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Which you did not attend?

Ms. THOMASES. Which I did not attend.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And which was not in a building where the activities we are focusing on occurred?

Ms. THOMASES. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In order to move this further along, I think we would be prepared to cede back our time.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I would like to ask that the chart be put up again for the events of July 27th. Ms. Thomases, you might want to get your copy out. Your testimony is that in the last meeting with Mr.

Foster before he took his life, that Mr. Foster discussed the Travel Office matter but in the context of asking for additional resources?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But, of course, the person who had the authority to get more resources was Bernie Nussbaum, right?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You weren't the person who had the control over resources?

Ms. THOMASES. I think he wanted my support in that matter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In other words, is it your testimony that he was not himself able to persuade Bernie Nussbaum—to get Bernie Nussbaum into the White House Counsel's Office. Did he need to go to you to persuade Bernie Nussbaum?

Ms. THOMASES. It is not what he might have felt, it is not that he needed me, it is that he wanted to get some sense of urgency instilled in this issue. This is what I am inferring. I don't know it for a certainty.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK, so now that's useful, because now we understand that in this last conversation, what Mr. Foster was conveying to you, as you understood, is that he felt a sense of urgency concerning these investigations or this possible investigation to the Travel Office matter?

Ms. THOMASES. No, the sense of urgency was his need for more persons.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was a sense of urgency that was prompted by this impending investigation; right?

Ms. THOMASES. Perhaps.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was he talking, by the way, about bringing in outside criminal defense lawyers to supplement or as opposed to just adding more personnel to the White House Counsel's Office?

Ms. THOMASES. He inquired as to whether or not outside lawyers could be used to supplement White House staff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it your understanding that he was talking specifically about outside lawyers with expertise in doing criminal defense work?

Ms. THOMASES. That's not—I don't remember that as a specific focus.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now as of this point in time, as of this last meeting, you know from your conversations with Vincent Foster that he is concerned about an investigation, he wants your assistance or your support in terms of bringing outside lawyers in; and, in particular, you know from earlier conversations that he is concerned the First Lady might be pulled into this through accusations that David Watkins might make.

Keeping that in mind, I would like to move to another subject. As of this time as well, Ms. Thomases, I take it that you also knew that Mr. Foster was involved in dealing with Whitewater-related matters while he was in the White House Counsel's Office?

Ms. THOMASES. Excuse me? Could you repeat that, please?

Mr. CHERTOFF. You also understood that while Mr. Foster was working in the White House Counsel's Office that he was involved in Whitewater-related activities; right?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know. He hadn't talked to me about it in the period immediately before his death.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Take out the word "immediately," he had spoken to you since he had come to the White House concerning the work that he was doing on the Whitewater tax materials?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He complained to you that the materials were disorganized and he was having problems dealing with the issue?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes, I gave that testimony.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You understood he was working on that issue in the White House Counsel's Office?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that as of the point——

Ms. THOMASES. In the context of the Clintons' tax returns.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't he also tell you that he was working on corporate tax returns for Whitewater?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At any rate, you understood therefore that——

Ms. THOMASES. At least I didn't understand that to be.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In terms of what you understood, you understood that he was working on Whitewater-related issues and Travel Office-related issues in his capacity as Deputy White House Counsel; is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You understood from that that there were likely to be materials in his office that related to Whitewater?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You understood there were likely to be materials in his office related to the Travel Office affair?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Had you ever seen or were you aware that he actually had a notebook that he kept a handwritten kind of account of what was going on with the Travel Office matter?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now bearing all this in mind, I want to focus on the 27th. This is the first day that you have, putting aside your memory, according to the record, this is the first occasion you have a face-to-face encounter with the First Lady since the death. I would like to go through the sequence of this and see if you can help us understand how this comes about.

Let's begin in the morning on Tuesday. First, all that day the First Lady stayed in the residence and that is made clear by the Secret Service logs. In fact, it appears that from the records that the Committee has that although the First Lady had some appointments in her office, in I guess the West Wing portion of the White House, she actually didn't keep those appointments and she stayed in the residence.

The morning began with a message that Ms. Solis left in your New York office saying, "HRC wants to see you today." That's right, isn't it?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes, you have shown me the message.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't remember whether you stopped into your New York office that morning or not; correct?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did get the message because at some point you responded to Ms. Solis' office by placing a call there; correct?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know whether it was in response, but the record shows that I placed a call.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then there is a sequence in the next hour or hour and a half of a number of telephone calls to the White House, a 3-minute call to the operator, a 20-second call to the operator, almost 10 minutes to Mack McLarty and again 2 minutes to Mr. McLarty's office. As you sit here now, do you remember more about these calls with Mr. McLarty's office?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now again, I want to go back to this note from Lorraine Voles. I am informed that there is not any testimony by Lorraine Voles in the House Committee that would in any way characterize this note as being a press inquiry or not. But in any case, your testimony still is that you never had conversations with Mr. McLarty about the Travel Office back in the spring of 1993; is that right?

Ms. THOMASES. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's continue along on the 27th. We now see that you get another message from Mrs. Clinton, this time directed to your Washington office, "Please call Hillary." Did you get that message?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know whether I got that message.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know how it is that Mrs. Clinton became aware of the fact that you were not in New York where the call was placed at the beginning of the day, but that you were in Washington?

Ms. THOMASES. I have no idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Solis, let me ask you. I understand you don't remember the calls. Is there anything about the sequence that helps you? Your first call is a message left in the New York office saying, "HRC wants to see you today." Then sometime thereafter, in the early afternoon, you leave a message in the Washington office. Do you know how you came to understand that you should place the next call to the Washington office?

Ms. DOYLE. First of all, I didn't place the call to the Washington office. I think Evelyn Lieberman did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know how it is that she came to know that there was a—

Ms. DOYLE. Not really, but I can say that every time I called Susan, I automatically call the New York office because I know the number by heart and they will transfer me to the Washington number office which I don't know by heart. I'm sort of a creature of habit that way. I'm also used to speaking to Susan's assistant, Angie, who, you know, she can track her down for me. So even if I knew she was in the Washington office, I would have called the New York office by default.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You can't explain why Evelyn Lieberman would have called directly to the Washington office and left a message at the Washington office?

Ms. DOYLE. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me, Ms. Thomases, looking at this objectively, it looks like there is a fair degree of interest on the part of the First Lady in getting in touch with you?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then you arrive at the White House again shortly before 3:00 p.m. Mr. Barnett arrives. I'm not going to review. We have been through this with you and Mr. Barnett concerning the, I guess, variant testimony about the handling of the documents. The documents that had been originally taken from Mr. Foster's office and held in the residence for approximately 4 or 5 days are finally removed by an aide from Williams & Connolly at approximately 4:30 p.m. And then you are back in the residence again at 5:30 p.m. Do you recall knowing that Mr. Nussbaum was going to call the Attorney General and Mr. Heymann to come over to get a look at the note on that day?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We now have Mr. Hubbell arriving at the residence, and although you do not remember the particular date of the meeting, you do remember there having been an initial meeting or discussion between yourself, Mrs. Clinton and Mr. Hubbell after Mr. Foster's death at which you discussed Mr. Foster; right?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes. Can I say to you, this idea of meeting suggests a formality that I don't think this gathering was about.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will call it a gathering. You remember an initial gathering that occurred the first time you were all in each other's presence after Mr. Foster's death?

Ms. THOMASES. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Although you don't remember the specifics of the conversation, you remember the gathering; right?

Ms. THOMASES. I remember the fact that I was—that it was—this is just an impression. I was very glad to see Webb and to give him a hug and I was glad we were together, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And your recollection is that the note and the writing was not discussed with Mr. Hubbell?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there discussion with Mr. Hubbell about what the Attorney General was going to be shown?

Ms. THOMASES. No. I think this was a personal—my first recollection of my meeting with Webb and Hillary together, that it was all personal stuff. Remember, I had not been at the funeral. I had not been part of the mourning process. So, they shared that with me and we talked something about that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you talk to Mrs. Clinton and Mr. Hubbell on this occasion about your last meeting with Mr. Foster?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know that I did. I might have. I don't know that I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You may have on that occasion.

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Which I think we have now identified based on the records as the 27th. You may have said to Mrs. Clinton and to Mr. Hubbell that you had had a last meeting with Mr. Foster in which you discussed certain subjects; right? Correct?

Ms. THOMASES. I might have. I don't specifically remember that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You do specifically remember recounting that last meeting to the President when you saw him on the 21st of July?

Ms. THOMASES. Parts of it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was the meeting which you did not or at least which does not appear in the FBI interview—

Ms. THOMASES. I can tell you I don't know that I talked to the President about the substance of the meeting, just that I felt guilty about having met with him and not having noticed how distressed he was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't you tell the President in detail about the meeting?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know that I did. I don't, you know, if I said it in my prior testimony, I would like you to show me where I said it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't say it in your prior testimony.

Ms. THOMASES. That's what I'm saying.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Again, I want to go to "Blood Sport," page 298. Down to the bottom it reads as follows, this is relating to the 21st: "Susan Thomases arrived just as the meeting was breaking up and met with the President later that afternoon." Is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "He said he still could hardly believe it, that he was taken totally by surprise." I take it that's correct?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "Thomases said she had had an inkling and then told him in detail of her meeting with Foster the previous week." Is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know that I said to him that I had an inkling, because I too was taken totally by surprise.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you tell the President in detail of your meeting with Foster the previous week?

Ms. THOMASES. No, I told him about how guilty I felt, having met with him, that I hadn't noticed how depressed he must have been.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you discuss your meeting with the President with Mr. Stuart?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know that I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to be quite clear before my time runs out. You reject, therefore, Mr. Stuart's account that: "Thomases said she had an inkling, then told him in detail of her meeting with Foster the previous week"? That is incorrect?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know that I told that to Mr. Stuart in quite that way. If at all.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me break it into two parts. Is it, first of all, factually correct in the conversation with the President did you say that you had had an inkling and then told him in detail of your meeting with Foster the previous week?

Ms. THOMASES. No. I primarily focused on how badly and how guilty I felt that I had not noticed what distress he was in.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm afraid, Ms. Thomases, you are still not quite precisely answering the question. There are two parts to this. The first part is, as a matter of fact, in the meeting you had with the President, did you say that you had had an inkling and did you then tell the President in detail of your meeting with Foster the previous week?

Ms. THOMASES. I would not have—I probably would have said, if I said that I should have had an inkling, not that I did have an inkling, because I didn't have an inkling. I was totally surprised.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What about the second part?

Ms. THOMASES. And I do not believe that I gave him the details of my conversation with him except as to maybe the personal parts of the conversation in which he talked about how much he missed his house in Little Rock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your testimony is you did not give him a detailed or very substantial account of your meeting with Foster the previous week? That is factually incorrect?

Ms. THOMASES. That's factually incorrect.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your testimony is you did not tell Mr. Stuart the things that appear in this paragraph or this particular sentence?

Ms. THOMASES. Well, let me keep reading the paragraph.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will just limit it to the sentence, but you can read the paragraph.

Ms. THOMASES. He said the details of my meeting with Foster. I mean, I don't think I told him all of the details of my meeting with Foster.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Putting aside all the details, it is a pretty simple question. Basically is what Mr. Stuart wrote here about what you told the President, is that what you told Mr. Stuart or not?

Ms. THOMASES. Excuse me? Could you repeat it?

Mr. CHERTOFF. What Stuart has written about your conversation with the President, is this what you told Stuart or not?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know. I think Stuart may have—it works literally. It works as part of the story. It doesn't mean I told him that I told the President—him everything that I had discussed with the President.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I know it doesn't necessarily mean it. That's why I'm asking you.

Ms. THOMASES. I doubt that I told Stuart everything that I discussed with the President that day.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Again, you are answering every question but the one I'm asking. Did you tell Stuart that in the meeting with the President you said you had an inkling or should have had an inkling and that you told the President in detail of your meeting with Foster the previous week? Did you say this to Stuart or not?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Fine, thank you.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Thomases, we are going into excruciating detail once again about a conversation as to whether you told President Clinton everything in detail about your last conversation with Vincent Foster as though that would have some bearing or relevance to any of the subjects which we are investigating.

If there is some nexus, if you had told President Clinton in detail about the fact that Mr. Foster had expressed concern given the fact that Senator Dole had called for Congressional investigations of the Travel Office matter. Obviously, Mr. Foster would be concerned about having the adequate staff, as you have testified, to meet the responsibility of preparing adequately for Congressional hearings and every other thing that he would have to do with respect to the Travel Office matter from a standpoint of the work to be accomplished, whether you had told that to the President or not told that to the President eludes me as to its relevance to this Committee.

But we have now established from you in terms of your best recollection that you believe you told the President that you felt guilty that you did not have a sense that Mr. Foster was so disturbed about matters that he was contemplating taking his own life, otherwise you would have acted in some way to presumably try to help Mr. Foster or get him help in terms of coping with the things that were troubling him so.

Ms. THOMASES. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Notwithstanding whether or not Mr. Stuart is correct in all respects, we are not doing a detailed book review of "Blood Sport" here. From time to time it has come up. We have talked about certain things that were omitted or misstated as they relate to areas under our inquiry. But it is not my purpose to simply take this book from start to finish and point out all the inconsistencies or the consistencies or a review of his writing style or the dramatization of conversations and so forth and so on. But what I guess we are interested in is your best recollection. To the extent that something can help that recollection, we are prepared to show it to you, without evaluating whether it is accurate or inaccurate, because I don't think that is our Committee's function.

On the basis of all of this, have you now, for I can't imagine how many times, given your best recollection of your knowledge of Mr. Foster's state of mind and the conversations you had about it to the extent you had any, both before and after Mr. Foster's death?

Ms. THOMASES. No, I don't. I mean, about his state of mind?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Have you now given your best recollection?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes, I have given you my best recollection.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Based on all of the information that has been assembled and reassembled and re-reassembled for your appearance here?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We'll cede back our time.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. Senator Faircloth.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Ms. Thomases, following up on the earlier question, what I was trying to arrive at is this: You knew that Travelgate was a problem for Vince Foster and the First Lady; is that right, after your conversation with Mr. Foster?

Ms. THOMASES. Can you separate that question into both parts?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. All right. You knew that Travelgate was a problem for Vince Foster?

Ms. THOMASES. I know it was troubling to him.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you know that it was troubling the First Lady?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't believe it was troubling the First Lady.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. We will get by that. Did this lead you to your concern about the search of Vince Foster's office upon his death, that you were concerned about the search and is this why you and the First Lady or the First Lady did not want unfettered access to Foster's office?

Ms. THOMASES. Could you again split the question into its parts for me?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Having known that Vince Foster was worried about Travelgate, is that why you did not want unfettered access to his office?

Ms. THOMASES. I had no interest in this supposed unfettered access, which is someone else's term and not mine, to his office.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. It is not your words? You didn't use that?

Ms. THOMASES. It is not my words.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you tell Mr. Nussbaum you did not want anybody going in his office, whether you used the word "unfettered" or what?

Ms. THOMASES. I didn't use that word or any phrase like that.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you tell Mr. Nussbaum you did not want anybody going in that office?

Ms. THOMASES. No. As I have testified before, I mostly listened to Nussbaum tell me how he was going to handle the documents in that office.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You gave the FBI an interview on July 14th. Yet you couldn't remember the conversation with Mr. Foster then.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That's not true.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But in 1995, 2 years later—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That's the wrong date.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. —you could remember the conversation when you spoke to Mr. Stuart who was writing a book you thought friendly to the Clintons.

Ms. THOMASES. I remember that conversation when I talked to each of the law enforcement persons who talked to me, and I also remember the conversation last year when Mr. Ben-Veniste asked me about it in the course of my first deposition.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you tell the FBI about your conversation with Mr. Foster?

Ms. THOMASES. You mean—which conversation with Foster?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. The one that you had prior to his committing suicide.

Ms. THOMASES. He was interested in whether I had a reason for why Mr. Foster died. As I have told everybody, I was not ready to speculate on the reason that Mr. Foster took his life.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you tell the FBI about your conversation with Mr. Foster prior to his taking his life?

Ms. THOMASES. He didn't really ask about it.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. And you didn't think this was pertinent information that you ought to tell and something the FBI would be very interested in, but it was important enough to tell to James Stuart later when he was writing a book that you thought was friendly to the Clintons; is that right?

Ms. THOMASES. Is that a question?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Yes, that's a question.

Ms. THOMASES. I had already testified on this matter to various law enforcement authorities, and I thought it was OK to share that with James Stuart.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Ms. Thomases, when you first appeared before this Committee, you came billed as a lady by the press, by the White House staff, as a lady who was, you have heard all the terms, but as Hillary's blunt instrument, that you were the juicer and you were the juice. We heard all these descriptions of you, but that you were all over the White House, in the middle of everything and knew everything.

Now, I must say, when you come before us, I think I said before, you came somewhat as a lost lamb totally. You couldn't remember, you didn't remember, you didn't know. A totally different approach from the reputation you brought, the history you had and how you had handled and conducted yourself prior to that as a tough, quick, sharp, accurate, told everything.

Now before this Committee from day one, it has been "I don't know, I don't remember, I don't know." Would you tell us, are you trying to mislead the Committee? Are you leading us to—that you don't know. Or were you always so vague in the White House that you just had them confused? Who is being misled? Where does Susan Thomases stand? That's just the basic question I want to know. Which are you? Are you a lost lamb or the juicer?

Ms. THOMASES. Senator, I have no intention of misleading anybody.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I have no further questions at this point.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Thomases, I'm interested. You indicate to us that you told the Committee in your deposition on July 17th about your last meeting with Mr. Foster. Now, I assume you are referring to your testimony on page 127, where you indicated that over time Mr. Foster had expressed general concerns about the Travel Office, about the resources that would be necessary to handle the work. Would you find me the portion that indicates that you had a meeting in the Mansion with Mr. Foster at his request a week before he took his life?

Ms. THOMASES. No, the location of the meeting was not discussed or identified, but the substance of the meeting was, in fact, discussed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, Ms. Thomases, you never indicated that there was a specific last meeting which had been set up at Mr. Foster's request?

Ms. THOMASES. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did not indicate that?

Ms. THOMASES. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me now turn to another subject which is your activities during the campaign. We have a considerable number of your notes that you took down in February and March of 1992, when you were involved in assisting the campaign dealing with questions about Whitewater. Do you have those in front of you?

Ms. THOMASES. No, I don't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me suggest that they be pulled. They are in the package we gave you. It is handwritten and it is tough to miss.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. We are bringing a set down.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To set a context for this, Ms. Thomases, you were asked to get involved in dealing with the issue of Whitewater inquiries that were being raised by the press?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. For how long in the campaign, for what period of time did you serve that function?

Ms. THOMASES. A relatively short period of time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. A few weeks?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you stop serving that function?

Ms. THOMASES. Because I had recommended to them that they find an accountant to sort through this, which Jim Lyons did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you passed it over to Jim Lyons?

Ms. THOMASES. I passed over all my materials to Jim Lyons.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to direct your attention to certain pages of the notes and ask you to explain them. At the bottom of the notes are the various page numbers. Let me start with ST 23. Do you have that page?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This particular page is headed "February 20th." What does this particular page of your notes reflect?

Ms. THOMASES. It reflects the notes that I was taking down when Loretta Lynch was talking to me on the phone. If you look at an earlier page.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who is Loretta Lynch?

Ms. THOMASES. She was the young lawyer who was gathering the materials in Little Rock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She was reporting to you by telephone?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In this particular passage, there is a kind of chronology. I take it this came from Loretta Lynch?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There is an entry for 1982. It says, "Rose Law Firm represents McDougal and he paid." What does that reflect?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know except exactly what is written there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I right that there was an issue that arose in the campaign based on Mr. McDougal's allegation that at some point in 1984, the President came by to see him and asked him to give legal work to Hillary Clinton? I should say the then-Governor Clinton came by to see McDougal and asked him to give legal work to Hillary Clinton?

Ms. THOMASES. Could you repeat the question?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was one of the allegations or the issues that you were addressing in the campaign a statement by McDougal that in 1984, Bill Clinton had come by his office to request that McDougal give legal work to Hillary Clinton?

Ms. THOMASES. I would have to go through my other notes because I don't—I don't remember that off the top of my head.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't remember that issue?

Ms. THOMASES. Off the top of my head as part of my responsibility.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, wasn't that one of the most pivotal issues because McDougal was essentially saying that he had given legal work to Hillary Clinton as a favor to Bill Clinton? Wasn't that one of the big issues in the campaign that reporters were raising?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't remember it. If you will give me some time, I will try to look through my notes to see. But I don't have much independent recollection of this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. Well, if you don't remember that, we will move on to the next question.

Ms. THOMASES. If you want me to answer it, then give me some time. Maybe I can find you what you are looking for.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We will see if any more other passages here come to mind a little bit more easily. Then maybe we can take a break and you can review them.

I want to go to page ST39. This is headed "Questions for HC." It says, "Gerth" in the upper right-hand corner. I take it this was a list of questions that Mr. Gerth was requesting you get answers to from Mrs. Clinton; correct?

Ms. THOMASES. It looks like that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to go two-thirds of the way down the page. In large letters you have written "Bill Kennedy and Carolyn Huber Cooperation Issue." What was that?

Ms. THOMASES. I have testified before I don't know specifically what that refers to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know generally what it refers to?

Ms. THOMASES. Not really.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there a concern about whether or not Ms. Huber would cooperate with the campaign in saying certain things?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know whether it was say or give certain materials. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You think there was a question in the mind of the campaign about whether or not Ms. Huber was withholding materials?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me move on to ST43. It is headed "6/7/92. TC Bruce Lindsey." That indicates this occurs in June; right?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes. I suspect that I misdated the page.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Misdated in what way?

Ms. THOMASES. Because it is in a sequence of pages. They were all in order on my note pad and therefore—

Mr. CHERTOFF. You think this is March?

Ms. THOMASES. I think this is March.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is based on a telephone conversation with Bruce Lindsey?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes, that's what it indicates.

Mr. CHERTOFF. About a third of the way down the page, the following passage appears. Actually let me begin at the beginning. "Re: BC's comments." I guess BC is Bill Clinton; correct?

Ms. THOMASES. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "Not sure owned a bank when you started White-water, friends since 1966, real estate deals with people BC knew. No, all I did was lose money. J. McDougal said he want to buy them out one time. HC wanted an accounting before they sold it out." Am I reading that accurately?

Ms. THOMASES. Pretty accurately.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Lindsey tell you that Mr. McDougal wanted to buy the Clintons out at one time, but that Mrs. Clinton wanted to have an accounting before they sold out?

Ms. THOMASES. Could you repeat that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Lindsey tell you that Mr. McDougal wanted to buy the Clintons out at one time, but that Mrs. Clinton wanted to have an accounting before she sold out?

Ms. THOMASES. This is what my notes indicate.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were your notes an accurate reflection of what was said?

Ms. THOMASES. I tried to accurately record what was told me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you have no memory of this?

Ms. THOMASES. I have no independent memory of this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. Let me go to—

Senator DODD. Now, Mr. Chairman, on this point regarding the McDougal issue. First of all, with all due respect, the issue of the campaign was it's the economy, stupid, as I recall. But the Pillsbury Madison & Sutro law firm looked at this allegation concerning the conflict in testimony between McDougal and Mrs. Clinton. And on pages 23 and 24 of their report, they reject for a number of reasons McDougal's story.

It is worth noting, Mr. Chairman, that after an independent analysis, the law firm identified, on page 24, at least three reasons why they believe that Mr. McDougal's side of the story is not believable. I think that should be noted.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. I would also note that we are going to have the Pillsbury Madison people in Friday morning.

Senator DODD. I appreciate it. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. I think we only have a few more minutes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to go to ST46. There is writing on this page which is a page from a calendar, February 11, 1992. What does this writing reflect?

Ms. THOMASES. I must have written the notes on that page because that was just available. I don't think the date was relevant to my note. It was just I was flipped on that page, someone called, I took down the notes on there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What is the basis for these notes? I mean, it says here in the second paragraph, "John Latham, firm had not done anything for retainer, retained by Madison." Then I can't read the next two lines. Why don't you read those?

Ms. THOMASES. "Latham." I can't read the next word either. "That he was irritated."

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who told you that Latham had the view that the firm had not done anything for the retainer?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't have any idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you don't remember how you came by that notation; right?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know how I came by these notations.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to go to ST47. This is a letter you received from Jeff Gerth of The New York Times. Are these marginal notations your marginal notations?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes, it looks like my handwriting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me go to the third paragraph. This is addressed to you. It says:

You have said that Hillary recalls the Madison account being brought into the Rose Firm by Rick Massey. McDougal says that it came after a request from Mr. Clinton, who discussed it in Mr. McDougal's office, mentioning the couple's need for financial help.

Off to the left you have a little notation, "BC has no recollection." Where did you get that from?

Ms. THOMASES. I have no idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did it come from Mr. Clinton?

Ms. THOMASES. I have no idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you read us the rest of that section there?

Ms. THOMASES. Which section?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right below "BC has no recollection" in your own handwriting.

Ms. THOMASES. "What McDougal" I really cannot read my own handwriting. I don't know where the original is of this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What about next to Arabic numeral 2 where it says, "Henley BC said not" and I can't read the last word. Can you read your handwriting there?

Ms. THOMASES. I can't read it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you come by information that Susan McDougal's brother, one of the Henleys, was present during this?

Ms. THOMASES. Looking at this copy, it says, "McDougal's brother-in-law. No. 1, Clinton never had anything. No. 2, Henley BC said not" whatever that word is that I can't read.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. No recollection.

Ms. THOMASES. Maybe it was "reco." And No. 3, there is nothing written there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now where did you get this from?

Ms. THOMASES. I have no idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you discuss with Mr. Stuart your various activities during the course of the campaign during this period we have been examining in this round in terms of tracking down information about Whitewater?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So whatever Mr. Stuart wrote in the book concerning your activities during the campaign did not come from you?

Ms. THOMASES. No. Correct, it did not come from me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I see my time is up, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me just cover a couple of issues and we will cede the rest of our time.

Obviously, while this may seem to be a big campaign issue for the 1992 election in Mr. Chertoff's questioning, from your standpoint I take it the question of whether Mr. McDougal somehow responded to a request by the President in sending work in the grand amount of $22,000 of legal business, which was all performed by the Rose Firm in a way that the Pillsbury investigation and the RTC concluded as being innocuous, appropriate and above board, and appropriate legal work, was not a significant issue of the 1992 election campaign.

Ms. THOMASES. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The question of Mr. McDougal's recollection, I guess it needs to be put into some kind of context, because every time I read about it in the newspaper, somehow the ellipse between the time that Mr. McDougal first claimed to remember this than contact with the President and the actual request to perform legal services is never mentioned, which is perhaps the most striking circumstantial reason to disbelieve that Mr. McDougal was accurate when he first made the statement of his recollection which he has since clarified and I think rejected.

The point is that Mr. McDougal, when he first talked about President Clinton jogging over to his office, remembered that it was a sweltering day in August of I guess it was 1984 when he claims the President asked about legal work or he offered legal work and the President thought it was a good idea, whatever version you want to take.

But the important point is that according to our investigation, the only legal work that was performed was originated in April, actually, toward the end of April 1985, so that you would have, if Mr. McDougal's recollection was then accurate, a 9-month gestation between the planting of the seed of this idea of legal work and the request to actually perform legal work, which is rather farfetched, would you not agree?

Ms. THOMASES. I agree.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that the whole idea whether this was important or unimportant to the campaign, the notion of the nexus between the legal work in the Rose Law Firm has been explored in minute detail, not only by this Committee but by the RTC through a $4 million study that it commissioned, which included the Pillsbury Madison firm and its report.

So that all this questioning about Mr. McDougal's version of the origination of these legal fees seems at this point to have been exhaustively examined. People can make up their own mind, as the Pillsbury firm has and as the RTC has, in accepting Pillsbury's conclusions, that it is unlikely that Mr. McDougal's initial recollection of these events was accurate. It doesn't make him a bad person, but people remember things differently after the passage of time. And clearly in Mr. McDougal's case, having had heart surgery and the severe bout with manic-depressive illness, it is not entirely unexplainable.

But there is the record, and the only other thing I would want to clear up is I think perhaps Senator Faircloth misspoke when he questioned you about a July interview by the FBI which would seem to suggest that you were interviewed in the days or weeks following Mr. Foster's suicide. Indeed, the report that we have been discussing occurred on the basis of a telephone interview of you June 14, 1994, 11 months after Mr. Foster's death. I think the record should be clarified in that regard. Is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Thomases, I just want to be clear on one thing. These notes that you were being questioned about, which seem to be dated beginning February 20th and running through mid-March 1992, there is one note, and I take it you say the one page, the date is just wrong? It says 6/7 and it should be 3/7, I assume, from the chronology?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. The last one you think you were just making notes using that message pad and date book from your telephone directory; is that right?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes. It was just in front of me when someone must have been talking to me, so I just scribbled what was being said in there.

Senator SARBANES. You have no independent recollection about these matters, now some 4 years later?

Ms. THOMASES. Correct.

Senator SARBANES. So what you are testifying is on the basis of what you wrote down here in your notes; is that correct?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. Thank you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Just to put a cap to that, these notes were turned over by you last fall to this Committee?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. These were not destroyed or lost or mutilated. These were your notes, and whatever is in them you have acknowledged you wrote at the time, more or less contemporaneous with the event, and you have turned them over pursuant to this Committee's request?

Ms. THOMASES. Absolutely.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We would cede back our time.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Let me conclude by just addressing these last couple of points. I think, Ms. Thomases, in fact, you—I mean, you are a bystander on this issue. The record is really far from clear that Mr. McDougal's original rendition of how it is that the Rose Law Firm came to be hired is incorrect. In fact, we will explore that very issue here on Thursday, and I think I can predict with some degree of confidence that there is a considerable amount of evidence that supports the notion that Mr. McDougal did, in fact, decide to take steps to help the Rose Law Firm in the fall of 1984, not in April 1985, that the account that we originally heard from Mrs. Clinton about her involvement in bringing the work in, I think, is inconsistent with some of the evidence of records concerning the course of dealings between the Rose Law Firm and Mr. McDougal.

I think that, in fact, what is going to emerge is that there are witnesses that this $4 million group of Pillsbury attorneys never talked to who would have shed a considerable amount of light on the events about which they offered very firm opinions, and, of course, we will examine them at some point and determine why it is that they didn't see fit to talk to some of the witnesses with pertinent information.

We, however, when we reach a final conclusion within a few weeks, will have the benefit of talking to these additional witnesses, people who were affiliated with the Bank of Kingston, which was Mr. McDougal's first bank, as well as some other people.

In particular with respect to you, Ms. Thomases, I would like to direct your attention to the last couple pages of your notes, ST46 and ST47. In ST46, and this really goes to the heart of this issue about whether one can assume that the payments to the Rose Law Firm began in April 1985, when legal work started to be performed. It appears from the notes you have here that you had some information from some source that Mr. Latham was annoyed because the firm hadn't done anything for the retainer. That seems to suggest that perhaps there was a lag time between the time money was paid and the time the work was performed. Again, I want to ask you, do you remember the source of that information?

Ms. THOMASES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Finally, Ms. Thomases, I would like you to go to the letter from Mr. Gerth on ST47. In the next to last paragraph on that page, Mr. Gerth writes to you as follows:

As I told you last week, McDougal asserts that his wife is out $40,000 and he says his losses are somewhat greater than that. He has not produced any document to back that up, but the documents I have reviewed suggest he was subsidizing Whitewater through loans and payments to a far greater extent than the Clintons. Can I see any other documents you have on this issue?

Next to that in the right-hand margin, what did you write?

Ms. THOMASES. "Call Jim Guy Tucker."

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why on earth would you want to call Jim Guy Tucker to ask him a question about Whitewater?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did someone tell you to do it?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you do it?

Ms. THOMASES. No, I did not do it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You remember not doing it?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't believe I spoke to Jim Guy Tucker.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Clinton tell you to talk to Mr. Tucker?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, let me see if I can——

Ms. THOMASES. Can I look at my records?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am going to direct you to your records. Look at ST 36, toward the bottom of the page.

Ms. THOMASES. Just a second. I need to have my lawyer show me a clearer copy.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you have it?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is dated 2/22/92 and right before the entry for 2/27/92, it says in your handwriting, "Have Gerth call Tucker, BC told me to call Tucker." BC is Bill Clinton?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Does that help you understand that Bill Clinton told you to call Jim Guy Tucker?

Ms. THOMASES. That's what the note says.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And the note's in your own handwriting?

Ms. THOMASES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it must be true?

Ms. THOMASES. It must be true that I wrote it down.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It must be true that Mr. Clinton told you to do that. You didn't make it up, right?

Ms. THOMASES. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had not reason to lie to your own notes?

Ms. THOMASES. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. My question is this: Why on earth would you be calling Jim Guy Tucker about questions relating to Whitewater?

Ms. THOMASES. I don't know, and I don't remember calling Mr. Tucker.

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee stands in recess.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, could I ask our schedule for the rest of the week, if Counsel could just run through the that, I would appreciate it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Tomorrow, we have Mr. Norton and Mr. James, who are going to be testifying on some of the tax issues, and some of the issues involving the Clintons' investment in Whitewater.

On Thursday, we will be having witnesses who will testify about the manner in which the Rose Law Firm was retained and the circumstances of that.

Senator SARBANES. That's a panel of four witnesses?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Several witnesses. I don't remember off the top of my head, I think it's four. Then on Friday morning, we will have the Pillsbury people.

Senator SARBANES. Next week?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's as far as we've gotten.

The CHAIRMAN. We have not scheduled anything yet.

Senator SARBANES. We don't have anything scheduled yet.

The CHAIRMAN. Not at this time.

Senator SARBANES. I thought we had Hale scheduled.

The CHAIRMAN. We have not had a response, nor have we, either in writing or by any way of telephonic communication. As soon as we do, we will share that immediately. We have a letter out there, as you know, but we just have not had any response. Maybe Counsel, later today, or tomorrow, will take that question up with Mr. Hale's lawyer as to whether he will be coming in.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, as to whether he will claim Fifth Amendment privileges. And I just have no way of knowing.

Senator SARBANES. Tomorrow we are going to meet at 9:30, not 10:00 a.m.?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, 9:30 a.m.

We stand in recess.

[Whereupon, at 12:45 p.m., the hearing was recessed, to reconvene at 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday, May 15, 1996.]

SUSAN P. THOMASES, was contacted by telephone at the law firm of WILLKIE, FARR, and GALLAGHER, 113 East 53rd Street, New York, New York where she is employed as an attorney and a partner. After being advised as to the official identity of the interviewing agent and the nature of the interview, Ms. THOMASES provided the following information:

She resides at _____, New York, New York, has a non-published home telephone number, _____. She works the majority of her time in New York City but with her firm having had an office in Washington, D.C. since 1981, she routinely comes to Washington on Wednesdays and returns to New York on Thursday evenings. She is the managing partner of her firm's Washington, D.C. office.

She first met VINCENT FOSTER, JR. in Arkansas during 1976 through her friends BILL and HILLARY CLINTON. She served with HILLARY CLINTON on the Children's Defense Board and has known both HILLARY and BILL CLINTON for approximately 20 years. She regarded VINCENT FOSTER as a friend although she only saw him approximately once or twice a year during the period 1976 through 1991, when she would visit the CLINTONS and/or come to Arkansas on business.

In July, 1991, she moved to Arkansas to begin working full time on BILL CLINTON's Presidential campaign. During the entire campaign, she was in charge of daily scheduling for CLINTON and for campaign events. She continued this work on a part-time basis throughout the transition period from the BUSH administration to the CLINTON administration handling scheduling matters for the newly elected President. Toward the end of the transition period in December, 1992, she returned to her law practice in New York and Washington. Since she had met many volunteers during the CLINTON campaign who took positions with the new administration, she often visited with them during her weekly trips to her Washington, D.C. office. She therefore during the campaign, transition, and the first six months of the CLINTON administration, got to know VINCENT FOSTER fairly well.

She last saw VINCENT FOSTER on Wednesday or Thursday before his death. She believes that they had lunch together with some other people in Washington. She recalls him mentioning he planned to take a weekend trip to the eastern shore of Maryland. She noted no change in his demeanor or physical appearance but was aware that he was working very hard and was under considerable pressure. His death came as a complete shock to her and she can offer no reason or speculation as to why he may have taken his life.

Ms. THOMASES continues to regard HILLARY and BILL CLINTON as friends and visits with them from time to time when she is in Washington.

House. He seemed to consider the suggestion, but apparently never took her advice.

On July 11, Foster was again complaining to his wife about the travel office, which he was convinced would lead to congressional hearings. He called James Lyons, who'd handled Whitewater during the campaign, for advice on Travelgate, asking him to come to Washington. Lyons agreed to meet with Foster the following Wednesday, July 21. But Foster again told Lisa that he intended to resign. Lisa told him she was tired of hearing about it, and suggested he write down what was bothering him. He should take the offensive, she said, and defend himself.

Foster went upstairs. Taking a pen and a piece of yellow legal paper, he wrote:

"I made mistakes from ignorance, inexperience and overwork.

"I did not knowingly violate any law or standard of conduct.

"No one in the White House, to my knowledge, violated any law or standard of conduct, including any action in the travel office. There was no intent to benefit any individual or specific group.

"The FBI lied in their report to the AG.

"The press is covering up the illegal benefits they received from the travel staff.

"The GOP has lied and misrepresented its knowledge and role and covered up a prior investigation.

"The Ushers Office plotted to have excessive costs incurred, taking advantage of Kaki and HRC.*

"The public will never believe the innocence of the Clintons and their loyal staff.

"The WSJ editors lie without consequence.

"I was not meant for the job or the spotlight of public life in Washington. Here ruining people is considered sport."

After the exercise, Foster's mood seemed to brighten. He said to Lisa, "I haven't resigned yet. I've just written my opening argument."

The following Wednesday, Susan Thomases was in the White House, as had become her weekly custom, and dropped by to see

* The reference apparently refers to redecoration of the White House by the ushers office and Kaki Hockersmith, the Clintons' decorator from Little Rock.

Nussbaum. She was worried about Foster. As someone who saw him less, the change in his appearance and demeanor was more noticeable. "How is he?" Thomases asked about Foster. "Has he relaxed?"

Nussbaum was feeling good about progress on Ruth Ginsburg for the Supreme Court and Louis Freeh for the FBI. "We're feeling good," he said. "This is coming together."

Thomases wondered if the "we" really included Foster. "Help take the weight off his shoulders," she said. "You've been focusing on Ginsburg, and Vince is carrying the load."

"I'm going to get Vince the help he needs," Nussbaum said, acknowledging that they were all overworked. "Let's get through this first. It will be calmer."

Earlier, Foster had turned to Thomases to express frustration over the travel office report, and, like many in the White House, she had become something of a confidante. Now she tried to reassure Foster, but he said he needed to talk to her "off the campus," somewhere they wouldn't be seen. Thomases suggested 2020 "O" Street, a private rooming house where she herself sometimes stayed in Washington.

When Foster arrived that evening, Thomases thought he looked a little better. He looked around the house and seemed amused by its garish Victorian decor. He mentioned that he and Lisa were going to get away for the weekend. But then he began to unburden himself.

He mentioned how overworked he was and how he lacked the time and the support staff he was used to in Little Rock. If he didn't get more help, he said, he was afraid he'd "let the president and Hillary down." Predictably, he brought up the travel office affair, adding that he didn't trust David Watkins, who he feared might fabricate or embellish the facts to cover himself—possibly at the expense of the first lady. And he indicated he was homesick, not just for Little Rock, but for the quieter, predictable life he had there.

But then the conversation took a curious turn. One thing he had not missed about his life in Little Rock was Lisa, his wife. The marriage had not been what he'd hoped for, and it hadn't been for years. He had to make all the decisions in the family. She was completely dependent on him, and this had become a burden. He found he couldn't confide in her. Lisa's recent arrival in Washington had brought this to the fore, just when Foster himself needed someone to lean on.

Thomases didn't know what to say. Foster seemed calm, dignified—but infinitely sad.

The next night Foster complained to Lisa that his heart had been pounding, and on Friday he had his blood pressure checked at the White House. Two readings were taken, and both were normal. After Foster told her the results, Lisa suggested he call their family physician in Little Rock.

The same day, Foster called his sister Sheila Anthony, and told her he was depressed. His voice, she thought, sounded tight and strained. She herself had suffered from depression, and she offered to help. She gave him the names of three psychiatrists he might contact, and offered to call any of them on his behalf. Foster said she should wait; he wanted to think about talking to a psychiatrist over the weekend. He said he hadn't yet obtained his White House security clearance (one of many administrative procedures far behind schedule in the Clinton White House) and he was afraid that if he had to answer that he was under the care of a psychiatrist, it would be denied. Still, Foster did call one of the psychiatrists mentioned by his sister, once at 12:41 P.M. and again at 1:24, each time taking the precaution of charging the calls to his home phone. The psychiatrist wasn't in; apparently Foster reached the answering machine but left no message.

That afternoon, Foster and Lisa drove to the Eastern Shore of Maryland for dinner. Foster seemed in an even darker mood than earlier in the week, and was again talking about resigning. "Do you feel trapped?" Lisa asked him. Tears welled up in his eyes, and he began to cry. Though he wanted to quit immediately, Lisa urged him to finish the year, then stay in Washington until their son could graduate from high school.

It turned out the Hubbells were also on the Eastern Shore that weekend, staying with Michael and Harolyn Cardozo, friends of the Hubbells. They invited Vince and Lisa to join them for dinner Saturday and to return for the day on Sunday. Tennis pro Nick Bollettieri, a friend of the Cardozos, was also visiting, and Lisa was excited at the prospect of taking a tennis lesson with him. Lisa also got to play with Pam Shriver, the tennis star, but Foster didn't come to watch the match. That evening and the next day, Hubbell and we'd be supportive of each other and we'd work together, and we would laugh together, and we would play together, and we would always keep in mind our mission, which is to protect the interest of our client, our wonderful client, the president of the United States and the other people in the White House."

Finally President Clinton came to the microphone. Speaking of Foster, he reminded his staff that "When I started my career in Arkansas politics, he was there to help me. When I decided to run for attorney general, he was the first lawyer in Little Rock I talked to about supporting me. When the Rose Law Firm hired Hillary after I moved to Little Rock, Vince Foster and Webb Hubbell became her closest friends."

Then he reiterated points raised by McLarty, making them more forcefully. "I want you to think about the following: in the first place, one can never know why this happened. Even if you had a whole set of objective reasons, that wouldn't be why it happened, because you could get a different, bigger, more burdensome set of objective reasons that are on someone else even in this room. So what happened was a mystery about something inside of him."

Clinton concluded by emphasizing the need for discretion. "And the last thing I want to say is that Vince Foster spent a lifetime knowing when not to put himself first. And maybe he did that too much. But he had an extraordinary sense of propriety and loyalty, and I hope that when we remember him and this, we'll be a little more anxious to talk to each other and a little less anxious to talk outside of our family. We'll be a little more concerned about how we can help one another look good and achieve one another's goals, rather than how we might pursue our own objectives at the expense of someone else here. Those are the kinds of things that he would never have done."

Despite the president's admonitions, trying to stem talk and conjecture about a suicide in the White House was futile, human nature being what it is. The audience filed out quietly, but most work in the White House all but came to a halt.

④ Susan Thomases arrived just as the meeting was breaking up, and met with the president later that afternoon. He said he still could hardly believe it, that he was taken totally by surprise. Thomases said she had had an inkling, then told him in detail of her meeting with Foster the previous week. Clinton said that if he'd known, he would have dragged Foster over for the movie and would have tried to cheer him up.

Even though virtually everyone in the White House, from the president on down, had by now heard some accounts of Foster's depression, the official line remained that Foster's death was unfathomable. Foster himself had been such a private person that it seemed unseemly to mention anything so personal, and everyone in the White House was eager to spare the Foster family any embarrassment. McLarty briefed the press that afternoon, emphasizing that, "Try as we might, all of our reason, all of our rationality, all of our logic, can never answer the questions raised by such a death." Meanwhile, Lisa and other members of the Foster family retained James Hamilton, the Clinton campaign lawyer who'd handled some early Whitewater inquiries, as the family lawyer. Aside from the Arkansas contingent, people in the White House didn't know Lisa all that well, and there was concern she might be a "loose cannon." But Hamilton, too, did all he could to cut off inquiries, emphasizing that Foster had been a victim of a disease, depression, that had struck him at random. He rebuffed press efforts to speak to Lisa, emphasizing the family's interest in privacy. (No one appears to have raised any questions about the propriety of a Clinton campaign lawyer representing the Foster family.)

When Nussbaum returned to his office, the Park Police officers were waiting: "What are you doing here?" Nussbaum asked, as if he'd forgotten the entire earlier meeting. They reminded him that they wanted to search Foster's office, and that he'd promised to check with the attorney general. But Nussbaum was already hearing concerns about the search from McLarty and others in the White House. He didn't feel ready to let them go ahead, and later he suggested they return the next day at 10 A.M. Meanwhile, they could schedule interviews with people in the office, but he wanted lawyers present. The police officers were furious, both at their thoughtless treatment, and the way the investigation was being handled. It was becoming clear to them that the entire investigation would now be tightly controlled by the White House.

When Nussbaum had first talked to McLarty about letting the Park Police conduct their investigation, he'd said he was inclined to let them in to do their search. But McLarty had had reservations, and now concerns started pouring in to Nussbaum. Bill Burton, [118] Ms. Thomases. Good morning.

 [119] Mr. Ben-Veniste. May I ask you how it was that you
 [120] learned that Vince Foster has died?
 [121] Ms. Thomases. I was home in my apartment in New York.
 [122] and Hillary Clinton called me.
 [123] Mr. Ben-Veniste. What do you recall about that
 [124] conversation?
 [125] Ms. Thomases. It was very sad. She told me that Vince

Page 74

[11] had taken his life. We went through a period of talking
 [12] about how sad we felt. We then talked about how hard it was [13] going to be, not only on his wife but on his three children.
 [14] That is what we talked about.
 [15] Mr. Ben-Veniste. In that conversation, did anything come up with respect to any contents of Vincent Foster's
 [17] office? Any files?
 [18] Ms. Thomases. Absolutely not. It was not that kind of [19] a conversation.
 [110] Mr. Ben-Veniste. Now in that conversation, I believe [111] you have indicated that Mrs. Clinton knew of your practice
 [112] to come to Washington on a regular basis on each Wednesday?
 [113] Is that correct.
 [114] Ms. Thomases. That's correct.
 [115] In fact, she asked me specifically whether I was going [116] to be going to Washington the next day, and I said to her I
 [117] was not able to go early because I had some work that I had [118] to complete with respect to my practice which required that [119] I go to my New York office on Wednesday morning, but as soon
 [120] as that task was completed that I would—it was my plan to [121] go to Washington for some other business that I needed to do
 [122] that day and that, yes, I would be in Washington.
 [123] Mr. Ben-Veniste. And at approximately what time did you
 [124] arrive in Washington?
 [125] Ms. Thomases. Some time after two o'clock in the

Page 75

[11] afternoon.
 [12] Mr. Ben-Veniste. So it is fair to say that there was [13] nothing in the conversation between you and Mrs.
 Clinton
 [14] that caused you to revise your plan to work in your office
 [15] in New York. I take it, during the morning that Wednesday of [16] July the 21st, and then come to Washington as you had [17] planned to?

 [18] Ms. Thomases. There was nothing in my conversation with [19] Mrs. Clinton that suggested that I should, and I could not
 [110] because I had an obligation in another area.
 [111] Mr. Ben-Veniste. And what was the request that was made
 [112] of you by Mrs. Clinton once you came to Washington in that [113] initial conversation?
 [114] Ms. Thomases. Hillary Clinton asked me to please—she [115] said to me—she asked me if I had intended to go to the [116] White House. I said I thought that I might stop by there
 [117] and see how people were doing.
 [118] She said, would you please find out when my husband, the [119] President, is going to be there and please be sure to see
 [120] him; and, also please be sure to talk to Maggie
 Williams to
 [121] see if she were okay.
 [122] Mr. Ben-Veniste. What did you do once you arrived in [123] Washington?
 [124] Ms. Thomases. Since I didn't have to be at my [125] Washington office until close to four o'clock, I went

Page 76

[11] immediately to the White House to see if the President were
 [12] available, which I didn't know, and to talk to Maggie.
 [13] Mr. Ben-Veniste. And did you talk to the President?
 [14] Ms. Thomases. I did not talk to the President at that [15] time. I came back to the White House after I completed my [16] work at my Washington office and saw him at that time.
 [17] Mr. Ben-Veniste. Later on in the afternoon or early [18] evening?
 [19] Ms. Thomases. Yes, in the early evening.
 [110] Mr. Ben-Veniste. What was the substance of that
 [111] conversation?
 [112] Ms. Thomases. It was more reviewing again our sense of [113] helplessness and sadness that we had not been as sensitive
 [114] as we might have been to what we then believed was a [115] tremendous amount of pain that Vince must have been in.
 [116] We talked about that. He was very specific about how he
 [117] had had a conversation with Vince and had intended to have
 [118] him at the White House, and we each talked about

(19) opportunities in which we could have in fact perhaps had we
 (20) known of the problem, done something.
 (21) Mr. Ben-Veniste. Did in this conversation you had with
 (22) President Clinton any question arise with respect to the
 (23) contents of Mr. Foster's office?
 (24) Ms. Thomases. None whatsoever.
 (25) Mr. Ben-Veniste. Who else did you see that day?

Page 77

(1) Ms. Thomases. I saw numbers of people who were milling
 (2) around the White House sort of coming to terms with their
 (3) feelings about Vince's death.
 (4) It was sort of like being at a wake. I can't
 (5) specifically tell you who I saw and who I talked to. I did
 (6) not initially see Maggie when I first went to the White
 (7) House that day.
 (8) Mr. Ben-Veniste. Did you learn that President Clinton
 (9) had assembled the White House staff and spoken to them as a
 (10) group in terms of trying to console them in their grief?

(11) Ms. Thomases. Yes. I had learned that. I in fact
 (12) regretted that I had arrived too late to be there to hear
 (13) his statement, and also to hear Mack speak. Mack McLarty
 (14) speak. I did regret that I was not there because it sounded
 (15) as if it was sort of a memorial meeting that gave some
 (16) solace.
 (17) Mr. Ben-Veniste. Did you understand that Mr. Nussbaum
 (18) also spoke at that meeting?
 (19) Ms. Thomases. So I was told.
 (20) Mr. Ben-Veniste. Now do you recall who else you saw
 (21) that day?
 (22) Ms. Thomases. I know that it is hard to imagine—I
 (23) think the only people that I specifically remember seeing,
 (24) because I was so focused on seeing the President, were I
 (25) stopped by and saw some of the young women who had worked

Page 78

(1) for me during the campaign who I knew would have been rather
 (2) upset at the idea of a suicide.
 (3) I don't really remember specifically. I mean, for
 (4) example, I am sure I wanted to see Bruce but I actually do
 (5) not specifically remember seeing Bruce.
 (6) Mr. Ben-Veniste. Now let's go to the following day.
 (7) Did you have a conversation with Mr. Nussbaum on the morning

(8) of the 22nd?
 (9) Ms. Thomases. Yes, I did.
 (10) Mr. Ben-Veniste. And that is a conversation that you
 (11) have described in some detail?
 (12) Ms. Thomases. Yes.
 (13) Mr. Ben-Veniste. Did there come a time when you had a
 (14) follow-up conversation with Mr. Nussbaum in terms of the
 (15) procedure that was employed for the review of the document?
 (16) Ms. Thomases. I think I spoke to him not necessarily
 (17) that day but at some subsequent time in which he told me
 (18) that he felt that it had gone pretty well, but I don't think
 (19) it was necessarily on that day.
 (20) Mr. Ben-Veniste. Now, Ms. Thomases, you were asked
 (21) about whether there was some other writing than the one that
 (22) we have all been talking about over these four weeks of
 (23) hearings that was found but never disclosed.
 (24) You have answered that question in the negative.
 (25) Let me ask you whether you have any knowledge from any

Page 79

(1) source that any document or writing whatsoever from Mr.
 (2) Foster's office was either destroyed or obfuscated or hidden
 (3) in some way from the investigators?
 (4) Ms. Thomases. I have no knowledge of any document that
 (5) was hidden or not disclosed to the investigators.
 (6) Mr. Ben-Veniste. Mr. Lindsey, let me ask you the same
 (7) question, sir. Do you have any knowledge from any source as
 (8) to whether any document in Mr. Foster's office was
 (9) obliterated, destroyed, shredded, or otherwise made
 (10) unavailable to the police in connection with the request
 (11) that they had made?
 (12) Mr. Lindsey. No, sir. I do not.
 (13) Ms. Thomases. I would just like to say, I don't know
 (14) that everything was made available to them. I just don't
 (15) know that anything was destroyed or obliterated.
 (16) Mr. Ben-Veniste. Well that was my question—
 (17) Ms. Thomases. Yes.
 (18) Mr. Ben-Veniste. —Ms. Thomases, whether you have
 (19) knowledge—not direct knowledge; that was not the limitation
 (20) of my question, so that you understand it—whether you have
 (21) knowledge from any source, direct or indirect, as to whether

[14] Senator Faircloth. You couldn't get her. What did you
 [15] want to talk to her about?
 [16] Ms. Thomases. I wanted to find out how she was doing
 [17] and how she was feeling. She and Vince had become very [18] close, and I was as her friend, I was concerned that she [19] would be upset.
 [110] Senator Faircloth. Maggie Williams testified that [111] Hillary Clinton called her three times, including a call [112] prior to Maggie Williams going to the White House, and a [113] call immediately after Maggie Williams returns from the [114] White House.
 [115] As you know, a Secret Service agent has testified he saw
 [116] Maggie Williams removing documents from Mr.
 Foster's office
 [117] that night.
 [118] Ms. Thomases. did Hillary Clinton ever discuss
 Maggie
 [119] Williams, or documents, or removing them, or in any way
 [120] discuss Maggie Williams, documents, sending Maggie Williams
 [121] to the White House that night, or what she talked to Maggie
 [122] Williams about in those three straight calls--in any way.
 [123] now? Did you ever discuss with the First Lady why she spent
 [124] three calls on probably the most traumatic day of her life
 [125] to one woman. Maggie Williams?

Page 132

[11] The Secret Service has testified that they saw
 Maggie
 [12] Williams bring in a stack of documents out of the office.
 [13] Has the First Lady ever discussed that with you in any
 [14] way?
 [15] Ms. Thomases. The First Lady has never discussed
 that [16] with me in anyway. The First Lady never discussed any
 [17] documents with me on the night of Vince Foster's death, or
 [18] in the days immediately thereafter.
 [19] Senator Faircloth. Did you discuss your appearance here
 [110] today with Hillary Clinton?
 [111] Ms. Thomases. I did not discuss my opinion--my [112] appearance here today with Hillary Clinton.
 [113] Senator Faircloth. Ms. Thomases. with respect to your [114] relationship with the Clinton's, would you tell me when was

[115] the first time you represented the Clintons either together
 [116] or separately in your capacity as an attorney?
 [117] Ms. Thomases. The first time I had any professional [118] dealings, when they had asked for my advice, was when [119] Hillary Clinton worked at the Rose Law Firm.
 [120] Senator Faircloth. Would you tell us what matters you [121] discussed with the Clintons? What was the advice?
 What
 [122] did you need their advice on, what it was?
 [123] Ms. Thomases. As I said earlier today, sir, I gave [124] Hillary Clinton and some of the other people at the Rose
 [125] Law Firm some accounting advice as to how they could set up

Page 133

[11] their books so that the time of those revenues from those [12] persons who were working on state business could be [13] segregated so that Hillary Clinton's earnings would in no
 [14] way reflect the earnings of the firm on their state
 [15] business.
 [16] Senator Faircloth. How long have you represented
 the
 [17] Clintons on Whitewater?
 [18] Ms. Thomases. Since the first quarter of 1992.
 [19] Senator Faircloth. Were you paid?
 [110] Ms. Thomases. No, I was not paid.
 [111] Senator Faircloth. What were your duties in [112] representing the Clintons as an attorney on Whitewater
 [113] issues?
 [114] Senator Dodd. Mr. Chairman, again I question the scope
 [115] of the area here, it seems to me. How does this relate to
 [116] the handling of the document?
 [117] The Chairman. Well, I think it goes to the entire--
 [118] Senator Faircloth. Well, Mr. Chairman--
 [119] The Chairman. Yes.
 [120] Senator Faircloth. If that doesn't relate to the [121] documents, we are talking about Whitewater documents. If we [122] can't ask her what she--when she represented the Clintons--
 [123] Senator Dodd. What does how much she got paid have to [124] do with the--
 [125] Senator Faircloth. Well that gets right back to how

Page 134

[11] intensive her work was on the documents.
 [12] The Chairman. Senator. I am going to let Senator
 [13] Faircloth continue.
 [14] Senator Faircloth. So what were your duties in [15] representing the Whitewater--as their attorney on the question. Did you discuss with anybody at the White House in any way, shape, or form, the handling of Foster's documents, that is to say, the documents that in Vincent Foster's office at the time of his death?

Ms. Thomases. You know I had a conversation with Bernie

Nussbaum about how he was going to handle the documents. I discussed that with him. He told me how he was going to do it the week before. That is the sole discussion I remember having on that subject.

Mr. Chertoff. Did you have a discussion with the First Lady about that subject?

Ms. Thomases. I do not ever remember discussing the documents with the First Lady.

Mr. Chertoff. When you say you don't remember, are you unprepared to simply tell us you never had a discussion like that?

Ms. Thomases. I'm saying that at the time proximate to

Page 46

Vince Foster's death I do not believe I had a conversation with Hillary Clinton about any documents.

Mr. Chertoff. You say at the time proximate to his death.

Did you have a conversation with her at any time about the handling of the documents ever?

Ms. Thomases. I might have in some subsequent times but I do not believe that I ever discussed them with her at that time, or anyone proximate to that time.

Mr. Chertoff. What was the discussion that you had with her at some other time about the documents?

Ms. Thomases. It probably was in the context of these hearings.

Mr. Chertoff. You mean you've discussed it with her since the hearings have begun?

Ms. Thomases. No. But you know, just when it was raised that I was coming down.

Mr. Chertoff. So you talked to her personally about your coming down to the hearings?

Ms. Thomases. This was way back when, before the first hearing.

Mr. Chertoff. Back in the summer?

Ms. Thomases. Yes.

Mr. Chertoff. What was the discussion?

Ms. Thomases. Just that I was going to have to come down, and that I didn't think that I had very much interesting to tell you, that you were still going to ask me the questions because you felt the need to ask me the questions.

Page 47

Mr. Chertoff. Did you have a discussion with Mrs.

Clinton before you came down to the first set of hearings about the telephone calls you two had had between each other during the days after Mr. Foster's death?

Ms. Thomases. No, we did not discuss that.

Mr. Chertoff. Did you make an effort to refresh recollection about that?

Ms. Thomases. No, I did not.

Mr. Chertoff. There came a point in time when you were asked to produce records concerning calls. Did you ask her whether she had any records that might help you to put together the sequence of calls on the days that we've been looking at?

Ms. Thomases. No, I did not.

Mr. Chertoff. One of the points that we're struggling with here, Ms. Thomases, is the whole question of documents, trying to find documents. An issue has arisen about certain documents that involve not Whitewater specifically but the Madison Guaranty Bank and the work that was done by the Rose

Law Firm at the Madison Guaranty Bank.

You had worked on that issue during the course of the campaign, is that correct?

Page 48

Ms. Thomases. For a brief period.

Mr. Chertoff. You were aware of the fact that there was a point in time in 1992 during the campaign that there were questions being raised about the amount of work and the type of work that Mrs. Clinton had done on behalf of Madison Guaranty, correct?

Ms. Thomases. Yes.

Mr. Chertoff. You understood that in connection with that, it would be of great interest and importance to know, to look at her time records, her time sheets, and her bills, correct?

Ms. Thomases. Could you repeat that question?

(19) but you don't recall it being near the time of the
 (20) discovery?
 (21) A Yes.
 (22) Q Did Mr. Nussbaum indicate to you whether or

Page 122

(1) not there was anything embarrassing to the First
 (2) Family or the White House in Mr. Foster's handwritten
 (3) note?
 (4) A In fact, he didn't tell me exactly what was
 (5) in the note when he told me about the note, but he
 (6) told me that it's all the kind of things that -
 (7) there was no surprises.

(8) Q And I just wanted to be a little more
 (9) specific in the question. Did you and he discuss
 (10) whether or not there was anything embarrassing to the
 (11) First Family or to the administration in Mr. Foster's
 (12) note?

(13) A We didn't specifically discuss that, but
 (14) his saying that there's no surprises implied to me -
 (15) Q It's implicit?

(16) A Yes.
 (17) Q Even though you didn't discuss it, at least
 (18) you implied that to be the case?

(19) A Yes.
 (20) MR. JOHNSON: Richard, I realize you used
 (21) to go and I think I'm generally complete on this
 (22) topic, although as we've discussed, I'll have some

Page 123

(1) more general questions of a wrap-up nature.
 (2) MR. BEN-VENISTE: Are they the usual Kip
 (3) Johnson wrap-up ones?

(4) MR. JOHNSON: The usual, which if
 (5) Ms. Thomases knew -

(6) MR. BEN-VENISTE: Call upon the witness to
 (7) do all the work.

(8) EXAMINATION

(9) MR. BEN-VENISTE:

(10) Q Ms. Thomases, my name is Richard

(11) Ben-Veniste, and I'm special counsel to the Minority
 (12) of this committee. Let me just ask you a few
 (13) questions regarding areas that Mr. Johnson covered,

(14) the first of which is your recollection of
 (15) Mr. Nussbaum's statement about had he known that
 (16) Mr. Foster's office would be considered a crime

(17) scene, he might have acted differently.
 (18) Was that statement made in a joking or

(19) other manner?
 (20) A It was far - it was a statement that was

(21) made after he already left the White House.
 (22) Q I know that you are not a trial lawyer or

Page 124

(1) much less a criminal lawyer, but did you have any
 (2) reason to believe that Mr. Foster's office was
 (3) considered by anybody as a crime scene?

(4) A No.

(5) Q So did you take his remark to mean that
 (6) people were treating the issue as though Mr. Foster's
 (7) office were a crime scene, but that was not really
 (8) the case?

(9) A Exactly. He was -
 (10) Q These things are not reflected on the
 (11) record and sometimes warrant some clarifying.

(12) A Thank you for clarifying.

(13) Q With respect to conversations with
 (14) Mr. Nussbaum on the 22nd of July prior to the time
 (15) that you left to return to New York City, I'd like to
 (16) focus on the process in the White House during those
 (17) first six months or so of the administration in terms
 (18) of whether issues were discussed by individuals in
 (19) the west wing who did not necessarily have the
 (20) responsibility for making decisions on those issues.

(21) Can you give us some idea of the process
 (22) that went on in the west wing when an issue was

Page 125

(1) thrown on the table for discussion? And I'm going to
 (2) ask you, then, about specifically with respect to an
 (3) issue like the appearance of the Park Police at the
 (4) White House.

(5) A While I was at the White House, almost at
 (6) some time every Wednesday I was not there enough

(7) to know what you are describing.

(8) Q The notion that people might be considered
 (9) or people might be discussing a particular issue,
 (10) would that strike you as being inconsistent with your
 (11) understanding of the way the Clinton Administration
 (12) was operating at that point, that there were people
 (13) who might be involved in discussing issues where
 (14) they, in fact, were not the decisionmakers?

(15) A My opinion is that's how the press has
 (16) characterized it, but I don't know whether that, in
 (17) fact, is the way -

(18) Q Did Mr. Nussbaum tell you in your
 (19) conversation with him on the 22nd what it was the
 (20) police were actually searching for?

(21) A He did not.

(22) Q In view of your assessment of

Page 126

(1) Mr. Nussbaum's emotional reaction to Mr. Foster's
 (2) death in those days immediately following the
 (3) suicide, could you describe what your mental
 (4) impression was of his state of mind at that point?

(5) A I'm not into - it's just not my style to
 (6) speculate on Bernie Nussbaum's state of mind.

(7) Q Did you get any impression? I'm not asking
 (8) you to speculate.

(9) A I mean, he was sad. He was sad. He had
 (10) not been Vince Foster's friend when he first came to
 (11) work at the White House counsel's office, and he felt
 (12) that they had become quite close, and so he felt a
 (13) certain guilt that having worked so closely with him,
 (14) that he had not noticed his state of mind, but that
 (15) may be me just projecting on him.

(16) Q Was there a point where you looked back
 (17) over your contact with Vincent Foster over the days
 (18) and weeks immediately preceding his death and
 (19) reviewed whether there were any statements that he
 (20) made to you about matters that he was working on that

(21) you felt he took more seriously than they warranted?
 (22) A I think he was - the whole Washington

Page 127

(1) experience, physically moving here and everything was

(11) not what he had hoped it would be.

(3) Q Let me ask you specifically about the
 (4) travel office investigation. Did Mr. Foster indicate
 (5) to you in substance that he was troubled by the way
 (6) that investigation had singled out people that he
 (7) knew personally?

(8) A Yes, he had expressed to me on occasion
 (9) that he was troubled by the travel office, not so
 (10) much that it had singled out people who were close
 (11) to

(12) him, but just that the whole thing was not - had not
 (13) been a happy experience.

(13) Q Did it seem to you that - let me ask this
 (14) question in a very neutral way. Did you form an
 (15) impression about whether he was ascribing to the
 (16) matters surrounding the travel office matter an
 (17) importance beyond what you might have regarded as
 (18) reasonable? Was he taking it too hard?

(19) A He saw it in the context of work, that it
 (20) was going to mean a lot more work and that he didn't
 (21) have the manpower and the resources to necessarily
 (22) handle the amount of work that went with it. That is

Page 128

(1) the context in which he spoke about it, you know,
 (2) that if, in fact, there were a Congressional
 (3) investigation, that it would mean more work.

(4) Q Did Mr. Foster ever express to you any
 (5) concern, personal concern about any aspect of what he
 (6) was working on with respect to Whitewater in the
 (7) weeks or months prior to his death?

(8) A You mean Whitewater, the transaction?

(9) Q Right, other than what you've testified to
 (10) here today.

(11) A No.

(12) Q What I'm trying to get to is whether
 (13) Mr. Foster said, in words or substance, this is
 (14) horrible, this is terrible, I can't bear this, this
 (15) is going to be so awful, did he say anything that
 (16) would give you the impression that the Whitewater
 (17) investment as it related to the tax returns or to the
 (18) disclosure materials he might have been working on,
 (19) was of grave concern?

(20) A He expressed no grave concern about it. It
 (21) was not an issue that he identified as having -
 (22) causing him concern, grave concern or anxiety or

(1) whatever.

(2) Q When you described what Mr. Nussbaum said
 (3) he intended to do vis-a-vis protecting the various
 (4) interests involved in the documents in Mr. Foster's
 (5) office, and how he might disburse those materials
 (6) ultimately, you indicated that he had intended or he
 (7) said he was intending to send the materials to
 (8) Mr. Kendall.

(9) Now, I wonder whether you are telescoping
 (10) information that you have later learned into that
 (11) conversation on the 22nd because I'll tell you
 (12) frankly that I've heard no one mention that
 (13) Mr. Kendall was involved in representing the Clintons
 (14) up to that point and the information that we have
 (15) heard involved another partner at Williams &
 (16) Connolly?

(17) A Well, I may have telescoped it. I'm not -
 (18) I may, but it was Williams & Connolly. He may not
 (19) have been the particular lawyer at Williams &
 (20) Connolly, but I know he intended to transfer the (21) documents to Williams & Connolly. So if I made a
 (22) mistake, I correct it.

Page 130

(1) Q Do you have any knowledge from any source
 (2) whatsoever that any note or other writing explaining
 (3) his reasons for suicide was not turned over to law
 (4) enforcement authorities?

(5) A I have no knowledge of any note, any
 (6) writing that existed, that does exist currently that
 (7) has not been handed over to law enforcement
 (8) authorities.

(9) Q Do you have any knowledge from any source
 (10) that materials from Mr. Foster's office were
 (11) surreptitiously removed from that office?

(12) A No, I have no such knowledge.

(13) MR. BEN-VENISTE: I have nothing further at
 (14) this time. Can we go off the record for a second.

(15) (Discussion off the record.)

(16) EXAMINATION

(17) BY MR. JOHNSON:

(18) Q Let me follow up, real quickly,

(19) Ms. Thomases, on something Mr. Ben-Veniste raised.
 (20) In your conversation with Mr. Nussbaum, whether or
 (21) not it was Mr. Kendall, you did discuss that some
 (22) documents would be sent to Williams & Connolly; is

Page 131

(1) that correct?

(2) A That's what I believe I heard.

(3) Q And this was before the review of the
 (4) documents that took place in Mr. Foster's office; is
 (5) that correct?

(6) A Again, I may have telescoped my subsequent
 (7) conversation with Bernard after the documents were
 (8) looked at into that conversation before the
 (9) document:

(9) were looked at.

(10) Q Focusing on the one that took place before,
 (11) did Mr. Nussbaum indicate to you that there were
 (12) going to be documents sent to the Clintons'
 (13) attorneys?

(14) A Yes.

(15) Q Do you have any indication of how
 (16) Mr. Nussbaum knew there would be documents in
 (17) Mr. Foster's office that should be sent to the
 (18) Clintons' personal attorneys?

(19) A I think that Mr. Nussbaum must have known,
 (20) as I did, that Mr. Foster had been working on the

March 9, 1992

Susan Thomas
Wilkie, Farr and Gallagher

Dear Ms. Thomas,

I have some further questions pertaining to the McDougal/Clinton relationship. I thought it best to put them in writing. I do not know what my deadline is, but I think we both should operate on the assumption that I will need answers by 6pm today. If that changes I will let you know as soon as I know.

Marlin Jackson, the banking commissioner in 1983, told me he warned Mr. Clinton that year about shoddy practices by McDougal and his bank, Madison Bank and Trust in connection with an action against the bank. This was one reason the Clintons moved their loan out of the bank, he said. What does Mr. Clinton remember about this? Should it have given him pause about continuing his dealings with Mr. McDougal?

You have said that Hillary recalls the Madison account being brought into the Rose firm by Rick Massey. McDougal says it came after a request from Mr. Clinton, who discussed it in Mr. McDougal's office, mentioning the couple's need for financial help. By Mr. McDougal's account, Hillary came by a few hours later and discussed a retainer arrangement with Mr. McDougal. Do either of the Clintons have any recollections concerning this?

Mr. McDougal has also said Gov. Clinton requested help in retiring his campaign debt in 1984, resulting in a dinner, which you said you had confirmed. Is there anything more you want to add about this, in light of the questions raised one year earlier by Jackson about McDougal?

The Clintons say they lost $25,000 in Whitewater? Do you have any document to back that up and if so could I have a copy? If that can be demonstrated, I would very much like to do so in print.

As I told you last week McDougal asserts that his wife is out $40,000 and he says his losses are somewhat greater than that. He has not produced any document to back that up, but the documents I have reviewed suggest he was subsidizing Whitewater through loans and payments to a far greater extent than the Clintons. Can I see any other documents you have on this issue?

The checks stubs we both have reviewed show repeated overdrafts in Whitewater's account at Madison. Were the Clintons aware of this? Do you have evidence that Whitewater paid any kind of interest or fee in connection with the overdrafts?

No copy of the Whitewater. Whitewater would raise

Evidence McD on 1: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

WEDNESDAY, MAY 15, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 9:30 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING COMMENT OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

Mr. Norton, Mr. James, would you please stand for the purpose of taking the oath?

[Witnesses sworn.]

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Norton, Mr. James, do you have any statement that you would like to give at this time to the Committee?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF GAINES B. NORTON, JR. CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANT

Mr. NORTON. No, sir.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF CHARLES E. JAMES ACCOUNTANT

Mr. JAMES. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Norton, you're an accountant?

Mr. NORTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You prepared or helped prepare the Clintons' personal tax returns for a period of years in the late 1970's and early 1980's?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What were the tax years?

Mr. NORTON. 1977 through 1983.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you put together the returns, where did you get the information you used to prepare the returns?

Mr. NORTON. From the President and Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They gave you the underlying documents, or did they give you summaries on paper?

Mr. NORTON. Summaries.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. James, you are an accountant also?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you the accountant for James and Susan McDougal for a period of time?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You'll have to move the mike a little closer. For what period of time?

Mr. JAMES. I started in 1976 and I did it to approximately 1986.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right, Mr. Norton, I would like to turn to you first, and I would like to direct your attention to the period of time in approximately 1978. Were you called to a meeting by Bill Clinton with respect to a particular investment in a project that we have come to know as Whitewater?

Mr. NORTON. I was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was Mr. Clinton who asked you to come to the meeting?

Mr. NORTON. It was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where was the meeting held?

Mr. NORTON. It was in an office on Cantrell Avenue. And I don't remember the exact address, but I believe it was Jim McDougal's office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That would be in Little Rock?

Mr. NORTON. In Little Rock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did Mr. Clinton tell you was the reason he wanted you to come to the meeting?

Mr. NORTON. He wanted me to look at an investment he was making.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And did he tell you who was going to be at the meeting?

Mr. NORTON. Other than Jim McDougal, that's all he told me. It was going to be himself and Jim McDougal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Besides yourself, Jim McDougal, and Mr. Clinton, was there anybody else at the meeting?

Mr. NORTON. There was another person.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who was that?

Mr. NORTON. I have no memory of his name.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it an accountant?

Mr. NORTON. My memory is that it was an accountant.

Mr. CHERTOFF. An accountant representing Mr. McDougal?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. James, were you the person who was at the meeting?

Mr. JAMES. Sir, I do not recall being there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know whether Mr. McDougal had another accountant that he worked with from time to time?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir, I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. So I guess that person will remain unidentified. Would you tell us what was discussed at this meeting, Mr. Norton, between yourself, Mr. Clinton, Mr. McDougal, and Mr. McDougal's accountant?

Mr. NORTON. Would it be easier if I just recounted what I remember of the meeting?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. McDougal described a transaction that he and President Clinton were going to invest in a piece of land in North Arkansas, and that land would be subdivided and sold off in pieces for a profit, to make money out of it. And that it would be structured in an S corporation, a corporation elects subchapter S status.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did they tell you where they were going to get the money for the investment?

Mr. NORTON. They said it would be borrowed, 100 percent of it would be borrowed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did they have a desire to arrange this transaction so that even though they were going to use 100 percent borrowed money, they would immediately be able to take tax deductions on a personal basis?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now when you heard about this plan to structure it this way, to be able to take personal deductions based on 100 percent borrowing, what did you say in the meeting?

Mr. NORTON. When Mr. McDougal explained that there would be no equity in the company by the individual shareholders, and that the corporation would borrow 100 percent of the purchase price, I asked him if there would be startup losses the investors intended to take on their individual returns, and he said, yes. I asked what would be used as tax basis.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the reason you needed to know what the tax basis would be? I mean, what would be the relationship between that and the ability of the Clintons let's say to take tax deductions?

Mr. NORTON. Well, in order for me to prepare the Clintons' tax return, if there was startup losses flowing through to them individually, I'd have to know whether they individually had tax basis in that S corporation in order to take those losses.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did Mr. McDougal say that their tax basis would be?

Mr. NORTON. Guaranteed debt.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was your response to that?

Mr. NORTON. I told them that you could not use as individual shareholder tax basis in an S corporation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That would not be proper under the tax laws?

Mr. NORTON. Would not be proper tax basis so they couldn't individually take the tax loss.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then did Mr. Clinton say something to you?

Mr. NORTON. Well, then there was an exchange between Mr. McDougal and myself concerning that issue, and the accountant that was there actually had said that he thought for sure there were some regulations that allowed you to use guaranteed debt.

At that time, Mr. Clinton asked me to step out of the room, and the two of us stepped out. He said that this was a partnership between he and Mr. McDougal. Mr. McDougal was the lead partner on it. It was his deal and that he had to listen to what his partner said and that he had to rely on his partner to structure it tax-wise properly, and that I was to back off and leave the issue alone.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So when you raised a red flag, so to speak, about the way Mr. McDougal was proposing to structure this deal, Mr. Clinton basically pulled you outside, said that he wanted to rely on his partner, Jim McDougal, and he told you specifically to back off and leave it alone?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it you followed his instructions?

Mr. NORTON. I kept my mouth shut.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. James, since you knew that this was a 100 percent borrowed money deal, no money coming out of the pockets of the investors, did you know the same thing about this Whitewater deal? Did you know it was going to be 100 percent borrowed money, no equity or no personal money out of the investors' pockets?

Mr. JAMES. I did not have anything to do with the—before it was incorporated.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I want to put a set of facts before you gentlemen to see whether either of you can shed light on another peculiarity that arises, another inconsistency that arises with respect to the startup of this investment. I mean, I think we've established for you, Mr. Norton, that Mr. Clinton's philosophy in this was he wanted specifically to rely upon Mr. McDougal to structure this. When you raised issues or questions about the propriety of Mr. McDougal's approach, his word for or his instruction to you is to back off and leave it alone. He kind of averted his eyes from it.

Another question has arisen as to how active Mr. Clinton was in obtaining the original financing. As recently as the last few weeks, the President testified in the trial in Little Rock, by way of video tape. He was asked certain questions about whether he had been involved in initiating this 100 percent financing that you've been talking about.

I want to read to you from pages 58 and 59, and pages 61 and 62, of his testimony, which we'll put before you in a moment. We have someone sitting behind you getting it. These are questions to the President in the trial in Little Rock. At line 23:

Question: Well, did you ever initiate or undertake an active role in obtaining the financing for Whitewater Development Corporation, itself?

Answer: No, sir, I did not.

Then as we move on to page 61, the question is put again, even more specifically. At line 18:

Question: Did you ever know or meet a Harry Don Denton that worked at Union National Bank?

Answer: I know who Don Denton was. I'm not sure I met him at that time or whether he was the loan officer on the note.

Question: Did you have anything to do with acquiring the initial financing from Union National Bank?

Answer: I'm not sure. I might have, because I had some friends who worked there and I knew the people who owned the bank, but I'm not sure.

So that's a something of a kind of a change of the position.

But then when we go to the testimony of Mr. Denton before this Committee, just last week, Mr. Denton gave a much fuller picture of Mr. Clinton's role in obtaining some of this 100 percent financing; in particular, the financing of the downpayment which was used as the leverage to get the rest of the loan. This is now at page 23 of our hearing testimony, which I'll put before you in a moment.

We have Mr. Clinton testifying that he didn't really have an active role, or at least he wasn't sure he had any kind of active role in getting the financing, although he did recognize Mr. Denton's name. Then Mr. Denton was asked the following question, and I might add, before we had received or knew what the President's testimony was. At page 23, line 17:

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now were you told by the emissary from the owner of the bank why the owner of the bank wanted you to grant this loan to the McDougals and the Clintons?

Mr. DENTON. I was informed that the basis of the loan was Bill Clinton, who was described at that point as an up and coming political star, a rising star in the State of Arkansas.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you were told that the owner of the bank wanted you to make the loan because it was to a group that included Mr. Clinton, and Mr. Clinton was viewed as having good political prospects. Is that right?

Mr. DENTON. That is accurate, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Had you not gotten that instruction, would you, in your capacity as a bank officer, have approved an unsecured loan to Mr. McDougal and to Mr. Clinton and their wives?

Mr. DENTON. No.

So we have Mr. Denton's story which is to some degree different, and suggests that not only was Mr. Clinton an active participant in obtaining the financing, but that at least with respect to that 20 percent downpayment or the $20,000 downpayment, he was the principal instrument of getting that financing.

Then we took the deposition of one of the two people who Mr. Denton had identified as the emissary who asked him to make the loan to Mr. Clinton. That's Paul Berry. Mr. Berry is a former roommate of Mr. Clinton and someone who knew Mr. Clinton quite well.

This is what Mr. Berry said at page 35 of his deposition, which was taken just a couple of days ago with respect to how it is that this $20,000 loan was obtained on behalf of the Clintons and the McDougals. This was an unsecured loan, meaning there was no property used as collateral for it. Mr. Berry is the person that Mr. Denton identified as having asked him to make the loan or having brought the request for the loan to his attention. Page 35, line 3:

Question: All right. Just to close the loop on the $20,000 loan, so it is your memory that it was Bill Clinton as opposed to Mr. McDougal who talked to you about the loan, about having the bank make that loan?

Answer: He was the one that—he discussed that he was contemplating, he and Mrs. Clinton were contemplating buying a piece of property on the White River, and I said, well, if you need to borrow any money, I'm sure we would like to handle it, which was my routine remark to all customers that I had a responsibility for when they expressed a credit need.

I don't remember ever specifically coming to understand the full scope of what that loan became, Mr. McDougal's—the overall project. In my mind, I thought that—the only thing that I ever really focused on was the original $20,000. That it became involved or incorporated in a larger project was something that I don't have any specific memory of somebody sitting down and explaining to me.

The question I want to ask you if you can shed any light on, and I don't know if you can is, we have on the one hand, the President taking the position that he wasn't active in getting the financing, or at least at some point he says he's not sure about any activity with the financing. Yet Mr. Denton testified quite positively here, both in response to a question from Senator Simon and also questions from me, that Mr. Clinton was the reason that initial $20,000 downpayment loan was made; and that Mr. Denton had received the request for the loan through an emissary of Mr. Clinton whom he described as this fellow, Paul Berry. Then Paul Berry, in fact, confirms that it was Mr. Clinton who went to him for the loan, and not Mr. McDougal.

My question to you gentlemen is, is it your understanding, if you have a basis to know, that Mr. Clinton was, in fact, actively involved in getting the financing for this project?

Mr. NORTON. I have no basis to know one way or the other.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He never discussed it with you?

Mr. NORTON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. James.

Mr. JAMES. No, sir, I have no knowledge of any of it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So what we have on the record now then is Mr. Clinton's testimony on the one hand, and Mr. Denton's and Mr. Berry's testimony on the other.

Now, I want to move to another issue, again with respect to the issue of this investment and the taxes. You are aware, Mr. Norton, that in addition to this or prior to this Whitewater investment, there was another investment or other investments that Mr. Clinton made with Mr. McDougal?

Mr. NORTON. I'm not aware of any.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you responsible for preparing Mr. Clinton's tax return for the 1978 year?

Mr. NORTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask that you look at a document that is numbered LP 1602. It's a 1040 Schedule D Capital Gains or Losses for 1978. Is this a return you prepared?

Mr. NORTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now it indicates here that there are three long-term capital gains transactions.

Mr. NORTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Or three entries for long-term capital gains. Two of the entries relate to an installment sale and one relates to a sale for 5 acres of land.

Mr. NORTON. I see that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. Do you know what your basis was for entering these transactions?

Mr. NORTON. It would have been information supplied to me by President and Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me show you another document we also have that relates to this. It is marked LP 672 and it is Installment Gain on Sale.

Mr. NORTON. I have the schedule.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you seen this before?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, I have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now did you prepare this yourself?

Mr. NORTON. Actually that's not my handwriting. One of my staff accountants would have prepared it, but I was responsible for it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And to tie it in, the taxable gain on this installment sale is listed as $886, then on the actual return, that figure appears actually, in two parts, as $788 and $98.

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now does this allow you to ascertain that there were two transactions that Mr. Clinton was involved in? One was the sale of 5 acres of land to which he reported a profit of about $2,150, and then there was an additional sale of 15 acres of land to which he reported a profit of $886, and then he deferred an additional $5,500 in profit which presumably should have been paid in future tax years?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know whether that $5,500 of deferred gain ever was reported in any future returns or taken as income in future returns?

Mr. NORTON. I can only speak up through 1983, but if my memory serves me right, there was one other year, 1980, I believe it was, that some of the gain was reported.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember how much?

Mr. NORTON. There was no gain in 1979, 1981, 1982, or 1983 years reported.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So do you know whether the $5,500 was ever reported in its entirety?

Mr. NORTON. I have no idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It certainly wasn't reported in its entirety during the years that you were responsible for the tax returns?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now still focusing on this issue, we went back and actually got the underlying agreement with respect to this set of transactions. And I want to put before you something that's been marked as LP 1547. It is a purchaser's agreement for a Division of Rolling Manor.

Mr. NORTON. I have it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you seen this before?

Mr. NORTON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This document indicates that Mr. Clinton had, in fact, purchased from Rolling Manor some property for $11,400, and a portion of that property is the 5 acres as to which he reported the sale in 1978, and the balance of the property is the property that later became part of the installment sale. Mr. James, have you ever seen this document before?

Mr. JAMES. As I stated in my deposition, sir, I don't recall seeing it, but I was doing the books and records for Rolling Manor, so there is a possibility I could have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Rolling Manor was a Jim McDougal project?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that is Mr. McDougal's signature on the bottom of this purchase agreement?

Mr. JAMES. It appears to be.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is Susan Henley McDougal's signature on the bottom of the purchase agreement?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir, it appears to be.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And the purchaser on the agreement is William Clinton?

Mr. JAMES. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me that, putting aside your memory, this agreement makes it perfectly clear that on the 25th of January, 1977, there was an agreement to purchase property for $11,400 from Rolling Manor?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir, that's a purchase agreement for that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then we can see from the tax return that ultimately this property was sold by Mr. Clinton, 5 acres of it in a single sale in 1977, and the balance in subsequent installments. You would agree with that, right?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir, according to the documents given me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now what puzzles me is this. It seems perfectly clear from the documents that the prior investment relationship between Mr. McDougal and Mr. Clinton involved an investment or purchase of 20 acres of property for over $11,000. The President has consistently stated that, in fact, his prior investment experience with Mr. McDougal was much less than that, was much more modest.

For example, in his interrogatories for the Resolution Trust Corporation, which were pursuant to an order of February 4, 1994, it starts at Bates Number 0281 and in particular, I am interested in pages 282 and 283. We will get that to you.

Here the President was asked to answer, under oath, about his knowledge as of August 1978, of Jim McDougal's experience in real estate development, including everything he knew or did with Jim McDougal. And the President answered some general things about his knowledge, indicating he hadn't heard about any of the entities except Rolling Manor, and then he said:

As reported on our 1978 tax return, a 5-acre parcel of land was sold on May 17, 1978, for $5,000, resulting in a capital gain of $2,150. To the best of my recollection, this was a real estate investment I had had with Jim McDougal, and, while small, it was a profitable one. This experience confirmed my impression that he was capable of putting together successful real estate ventures.

Mr. Norton, do you know why the President, in his response under oath, failed to mention that there had been a second part of this investment for 15 additional acres that resulted in a profit of an additional $5,500?

Mr. NORTON. I have no knowledge of what he's testified to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You would agree with me that if you look at the purchase agreement and the tax records, including specifically the tax return which the President makes mention of in his interrogatories, it makes it quite clear that there was a second investment or second part of this investment with McDougal that involved a larger piece of property and a larger profit?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So the President's answer here is incomplete?

Mr. NORTON. It appears to be.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think that makes the point. So what you're telling us, Mr. Norton, is that at least during the period of time that you were responsible for handling the tax returns, you were not aware that the $5,500 profit that had been deferred was ever fully taken as income and had tax paid on it?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Of course, you can't speak for whether that happened after 1983 when you stopped doing the tax returns?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it also that the President or the then-Governor Clinton and Mrs. Clinton never reported to you that they had a default by the purchaser and that they wanted to take a loss of some kind?

Mr. NORTON. I don't have my files to review. I don't remember ever discussing that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who did you mainly deal with on the tax issue for the Clintons? Was it Mr. Clinton or Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. NORTON. Both.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to bring you back again, Mr. Norton, to this initial introduction you had to the Whitewater investment. Your understanding was, at the time that you had the original discussion or discussions with Mr. Clinton concerning the tax effect of this investment, that Mr. Clinton was looking for some way to use these deductions to offset income that he had made in other investments?

Mr. NORTON. That really was not discussed in the way you have asked the question.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, was it discussed in some other way?

Mr. NORTON. Actually, I think I brought it up in that meeting by asking if the stockholders intended to take any startup losses that were incurred by the development.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's what led to the discussion which ended when Mr. Clinton took you outside and said to back off?

Mr. NORTON. That's exactly right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But I still want to ask you, was it your impression during the course of the discussion that one of the reasons that there was interest in taking these deductions as quickly as possible, even though the investors weren't pulling money out of their pockets to put in the investment, was because they wanted to offset income realized from some other sources?

Mr. NORTON. I think it's fair that I assumed that at the meeting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know from your discussions with Mr. Clinton on other occasions relating to this tax year, that there was income the Clintons had received from an investment that they'd made unrelated to Whitewater that they were very interested in finding some deductions to offset or to lower the amount of tax on?

Mr. NORTON. I don't remember any discussion like that with the Clintons.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You then continued to prepare the tax returns for the Clintons after the 1978 return. I want to direct your attention to the 1980 tax year. Did you become aware that in 1980, Mr. McDougal had paid off the $20,000 initial downpayment loan about which we just talked about from the Union National Bank, that's Mr. Denton's bank?

Mr. NORTON. I saw information related to that transaction when I gave my deposition. That's the first time I've seen it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you did not know in 1980 that that initial loan, which Mr. Clinton had arranged to get from Union National Bank for the downpayment on the Whitewater investment, had been paid off by Mr. McDougal using money from a loan that Mr. McDougal had taken out under his own name in order to pay that loan off?

Mr. NORTON. I have no memory of that transaction.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You do not remember being told about it by the Clintons?

Mr. NORTON. No, I don't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you this then, from the standpoint of your knowledge of the tax laws. If Mr. McDougal borrowed money in his own name and used it to pay off a loan to which the Clintons were jointly liable, essentially erasing the liability for the Clintons, would that constitute income to the Clintons?

Mr. NORTON. The answer isn't a simple, yes or no. I mean, that is one of the potential answers. If there was an obligation created by the Clintons to McDougal, then there would be no income. If McDougal was repaying an obligation to the Clintons by paying off that loan, there would be no income. But that could be one of the answers.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You would agree with me that that's precisely the kind of event that should have been brought to your attention in 1980 by the Clintons so you could make a determination about whether they had tax that they were obliged to pay for the erasing of that loan?

Mr. NORTON. I think that's a logical assumption, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yet your recollection, as best as you can give it today, is that they did not bring this to your attention?

Mr. NORTON. That is my recollection today. And that was a long time ago.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Chairman, I think this is a convenient time to stop because I see the yellow light is on.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. When was this, Mr. Norton?

Mr. NORTON. When was what?

Senator SARBANES. This thing that Mr. Chertoff was asking you about. You said that was a long time ago. We are talking what, 16 or 17 years ago?

Mr. NORTON. In 1978. Well, the transaction he asked me about on the repayment of the loan was the 1980 transaction.

Senator SARBANES. So that was 16 years ago?

Mr. NORTON. That's right, sir.

Senator SARBANES. All right.

Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to the analysis Mr. Chertoff performed concerning a comparison of President Clinton's deposition testimony and that of Mr. Denton and Mr. Berry, I guess we will await to see whether the Independent Counsel having that information puts on those witnesses in rebuttal and, if so, what the outcome is. My suspicion is that this is so arcane and unimportant that they will not do so, but we'll see.

In order to put it into proper context, indeed, President Clinton's deposition preceded the testimony, both in deposition and in hearing of Mr. Denton, if there's any confusion about that raised by the premise of Mr. Chertoff's question. And to put into further context the question of how this $20,000 loan was arranged back in 1978, 18 years ago, we have Mr. Berry's deposition on May 10, 1996, at page 18, Mr. Chairman.

Answer: Are you aware that we had a program at Union National Bank where we routinely providing unsecured loans to individual accounts? That marketing device was called "prestige banking." We identified young professionals and offered to them a $10,000 line of unsecured credit if they would open their checking accounts with us.

Mr. Clinton, at that time, was 18 years younger and I guess would qualify as a young professional.

Question: So, what you are telling me, the bank had a policy of extending $10,000 of credit to those young professionals who opened new accounts?

Answer: Yes. Many banks had that at that time that kind of a program. It generically had different names for it.

Question: Was this $20,000 loan to Bill Clinton and Jim McDougal made as part of that program you have just described?

Answer: No. It was not unusual. The loan was made to Mr. Clinton and Mrs. Clinton. I had solicited their personal banking business and we had their personal accounts. And when they had a credit need, we were—I was the one that introduced them, as I recall, to Mr. Denton.

Mr. McDougal was already a customer of the bank when that loan was made; a loan customer, too.

So all of this mystery about the $20,000 loan in 1978 is quite readily described in the testimony of Mr. Paul Berry as being quite straightforward, open, part of their policy, and in no way, shape or form sinister.

Mr. Cole.

Mr. COLE. Thank you, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. NORTON, could we go back to the meeting that you recall with Mr. Clinton and Mr. McDougal. Who, if you recall, sir, did the talking at that meeting?

Mr. NORTON. Principally Mr. McDougal, and this accountant that was there did some, and I did some.

Mr. COLE. Who explained the investment and the accounting and tax plans of the investment?

Mr. NORTON. A combination of McDougal and this accountant.

Mr. COLE. Did Mr. Clinton speak or provide any explanation of the investment at the meeting?

Mr. NORTON. I don't remember him speaking to that issue.

Mr. COLE. If I understand your testimony correctly, sir, the concern that you raised at the meeting stemmed from the use or the proposed use of an S corporation with regard to the Whitewater investment?

Mr. NORTON. Yes.

Mr. COLE. Your concern was that because of a problem with tax basis, the individuals might not be able to take the tax deductions for the interest on the land acquisition loans if an S corporation was used?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Do you know, sir, from your subsequent experience preparing the Clintons' tax returns, whether or not, in fact, an S corporation was used by Whitewater or S corporation filing status was elected by Whitewater Development Corporation?

Mr. NORTON. From the information I received from the Clintons, S corporation status was never elected in Whitewater.

Mr. COLE. Mr. James, you were the accountant for Whitewater during the time period and also the tax preparer, were you not, sir?

Mr. JAMES. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Do you have any knowledge as to whether or not an S corporation filing status was used by Whitewater?

Mr. JAMES. Sir, as I recall, from my deposition and documents shown me, there was an application made for it. By the IRS's own rules, they could not be a subchapter S corporation.

Mr. COLE. So an S corporation filing status was never used by Whitewater?

Mr. JAMES. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Norton, in that case, would the problem about which you were concerned have arisen, since an S corporation was not used?

Mr. NORTON. It would not have arisen.

Mr. COLE. So the problem that you were concerned about never really took place?

Mr. NORTON. It never took place.

Mr. COLE. But I take it you don't know whether Mr. McDougal and the other person or accountant who attended the meeting heeded your advice, or for other reasons came to their own conclusion not to use an S corporation?

Mr. NORTON. I had no follow-up conversations with McDougal on the issue, and I don't know what they did.

Mr. COLE. But you do know that an S corporation was not used; and therefore, the problem about which you were concerned did not arise?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. COLE. Then moving forward to the issue of the 1978 and 1979 tax returns that you were shown a few moments ago, and the deferred capital gains on the installment sale of the Rolling Manor property. It is my understanding that in that kind of a land sale transaction, where the property is sold on an installment basis, the seller of the property, which in this case would have been Mr. Clinton, reports the income in subsequent years as the payments are actually made by the installment purchaser?

Mr. NORTON. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. In layman's terms, is that a correct description?

Mr. NORTON. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. In that situation, the seller has tax liability in subsequent years only if, in fact, the payments are made by the installment purchaser. Is that correct?

Mr. NORTON. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Do you have any knowledge, sir, as to whether or not those payments were, in fact, made on the Rolling Manor property?

Mr. NORTON. Other than 1980, when there was a gain reported, I have no knowledge.

Mr. COLE. So absent evidence as to whether or not the payments were actually made, one can't come to any conclusion as to whether or not taxable income should have been reported?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. COLE. Is that correct?

Mr. NORTON. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Mr. James, do you recall, sitting here today, 18 years later, whether or not, on this particular piece of Rolling Manor property, the purchaser actually performed under the installment sales contract?

Mr. JAMES. I have no recollection. I can't recall, sir.

Mr. COLE. So you don't know one way or another?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir, I don't.

Mr. COLE. Well, let's step back a bit, both of you gentlemen, and look at this Whitewater investment and the accounting and tax treatment of the investment. If we really go back to basics and look at this, if I am understanding the issue correctly, there are two things that we need to look at. One would be whether income was realized from the investment and should have been reported on the tax returns, and then the other issue would be whether deductions relating to the investment were properly reported on the tax returns. Is that a fair summary of the issues we are dealing with, Mr. Norton?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Do you agree with that, Mr. James?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Let's take these one at a time, and first look at the income and then we will look at the deductions. On the income, Mr. James, the property that came to be known as Whitewater was purchased in 1978 by the Clintons and McDougals, is that your recollection, sir?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. At the time of the initial purchase, a corporation was not formed; is that correct?

Mr. JAMES. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Do you recall that the corporation was formed about 1 year later in 1979?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. At that time, the records that have been produced to the Special Committee indicate that the Whitewater land was transferred by the individuals to the corporation. Is that consistent with your recollection?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Let me ask both of you gentlemen, did that event, in and of itself, being the transfer of the land from the individuals to the corporation, and I understand the land was transferred to the corporation subject to the bank debt that had been used to acquire the land, did that event, in and of itself, create any tax liability for the individuals, Mr. James, to your knowledge?

Mr. JAMES. At this time, I do not believe so, sir. As I recall, there was not.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Norton, and I am not here fishing for a technical explanation about Section 351 of the Internal Revenue Code or something like that, but in simple non-tax professional terms, did the transfer of the land, in and of itself, result in a tax liability for the individual shareholders in the corporation?

Mr. NORTON. There wasn't a gain reported in that year, and as far as I know, there wouldn't have been one. There wasn't a gain.

Mr. COLE. As far as you know, there would have been no reason to report a gain in that year?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. COLE. You prepared the tax returns for that year and 2 or 3 years subsequent; is that correct?

Mr. NORTON. The individual returns of the Clintons', yes.

Mr. COLE. You did not report any gains?

Mr. NORTON. No.

Mr. COLE. Now isn't this kind of transaction, where individuals form a corporation and place assets that they personally own in a corporation, something that happens all the time across the country, whether we are talking about someone putting land in a corporation or a convenience store, gasoline station, whatever. People do that all the time, do they not?

Mr. NORTON. It's a common transaction.

Mr. COLE. And when people do that, they normally don't incur any tax liability?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. COLE. Well, let's take it then to the next step from a tax perspective. Once a corporation is formed, and the property is put in the corporation, and in this case the property was land and it was being held for resale by the corporation, from a tax perspective, the way this works is, at a later time, if the land is sold for a profit, then the corporation incurs a tax liability; correct, Mr. James?

Mr. JAMES. As I understand it, yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. That's the tax liability of the corporation as opposed to the individual shareholders of the corporation?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. I guess we should pause for a moment here. There's a technicality, I believe. If the land is sold on an installment basis, which is to say, the purchaser of the land doesn't pay the full purchase price at the time of the transaction, but instead agrees to make payments over a period of time, then in that case, it is reported as an installment sale and the income is reported in subsequent years as the payments are actually made; is that correct, gentlemen?

Mr. NORTON. That's correct.

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. In fact, something like that is what happened with the Rolling Manor transaction that we'll discuss later. But then following the chain of events to the next step, later if the corporation sells land for a profit and realizes a gain, it can then distribute that gain to the shareholders through a dividend or otherwise. And it's at that point that the individual shareholders in a corporation incur a tax liability. Am I correct about that?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. COLE. Similarly, if the corporation, rather than distributing the income from its operations, retains that income invested in the corporation building roads on the land, improvements, whatever, the retention of that profit does not create any liability for the individual shareholders; is that correct?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. COLE. Then finally, if in a subsequent time, the shareholders either sell the corporation or sell their shares in the corporation at a profit, then they would incur a capital gain, and that capital gain would reflect the profits presumably of the operation of the corporation?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. COLE. Now with Whitewater, that didn't happen, did it, gentlemen? Whitewater didn't make any money, to your knowledge?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir.

Mr. COLE. You were the accountant to Whitewater for at least 5 or 6 years, I believe, Mr. James?

Mr. JAMES. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. During those years, did Whitewater realize any profits from its operations?

Mr. JAMES. Not that I recall, sir.

Mr. COLE. In fact, it lost money, I believe, did it not?

Mr. JAMES. To the best of my recollection, yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Is that consistent with your knowledge, Mr. Norton, and I understand you were not the tax preparer for Whitewater, but you did prepare the tax returns for two of the investors in Whitewater?

Mr. NORTON. I am only aware of the transactions that affected their individual return, and I have no knowledge whether Whitewater made or lost money.

Mr. COLE. You do know, however, that no dividends from Whitewater or distribution of income from Whitewater were reported to you by the Clintons in connection with the preparation of their tax returns?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. COLE. Finally, Mr. Norton, the Clintons' 1979 tax return, which would have been the year after the Whitewater property was purchased and the year in which the Corporation of Whitewater Development was formed, that tax return was audited by the IRS, was it not?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. COLE. Did the IRS challenge or disallow any of the items in the Clintons' return?

Mr. NORTON. No, they did not.

Mr. COLE. So to summarize, when we started this line of questioning, I told you that I was going to focus first on income, and then turn to question of deductions, as far as income from Whitewater is concerned, there was none to your knowledge?

Mr. NORTON. To my knowledge, there was none.

Mr. COLE. To your knowledge, Mr. James?

Mr. JAMES. There was none.

Mr. COLE. Let's turn to the other side of the tax coin, and look at tax deductions. Because when you are preparing a tax return, you are first concerned with income and then you are concerned with the propriety of your deductions. Is that a fair summary?

Mr. NORTON. Yes.

Mr. JAMES. Yes.

Mr. COLE. In terms of deductions, when the Clintons and the McDougals purchased the Whitewater property in 1978, they individually borrowed money from two banks to purchase the property, to finance the purchase of the property. Is that what you recall occurred, Mr. James?

Mr. JAMES. Well, yes, sir, by documents shown me. But I didn't have anything to do with it when they first bought the land.

Mr. COLE. We have the documents. I won't take time to show you the documents now but we have the bank notes that were executed. In the case of the bank in Flippin, Arkansas, Citizens Bank & Trust, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton and Mr. and Mrs. McDougal personally executed those loan documents. And in the case of the loan from Union Bank in Little Rock, which there was some reference made to earlier, Mr. Clinton and Mr. McDougal personally executed those loan documents.

Now at this time, 1978, 1979, 1980, 1981, in this period, did the IRS permit individuals to deduct interest payments of all kinds, irrespective of who the lender was or what the purpose of the loan was, Mr. Norton?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. So in other words, if a taxpayer at that time had made interest payments, whether it was on a department store charge account or a Visa card or a bank loan to buy a house or a bank loan to buy investment property, the tax code in effect at that time permitted the taxpayer to deduct those interest charges on their individual returns?

Mr. NORTON. At that time, yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. So if the Clintons were personally liable on the Whitewater loans and they made payments out of their pocket, wrote checks for interest, they could have deducted those interest payments on their returns. Is that correct?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Is that your understanding, and we have the returns here, we can show them to you, but is it your recollection that the interest deductions that you were provided by the Clintons were properly deductible at the time?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Did they give you any checks or other evidence of the deductions that you recall?

Mr. NORTON. I don't recall any checks.

Mr. COLE. I understand it has been a long time ago. Well, let me ask you this, because this is an issue that has been raised with respect to some of these Whitewater interest payments. If the Clintons had written a check to the bank directly for the interest, there's no question that that would have been a proper interest deduction at this time under the tax code?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. If the Clintons, if Mr. McDougal or Whitewater had paid the interest, had written the check to the bank, and then the Clintons had reimbursed Mr. McDougal or the corporation with a check, is there any reason that the Clintons would not be able to have deducted that payment, so long as it was for interest?

Mr. NORTON. For their share of the interest they could have deducted it, yes.

Mr. COLE. And so even if they wrote a check to another one of Mr. McDougal's companies, so long as the purpose of that check was to pay interest, then it would have properly been deductible under the tax code?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. At the time, and I realize the tax laws have changed since that time, have they not?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir, substantially.

Mr. COLE. There was a phase out period in which you could deduct certain portions of your interest, and now the tax law is that other than home mortgage interest and perhaps a few other exceptions, interest is generally no longer deductible?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. COLE. But at the time these transactions took place, there was nothing unusual, improper, or even questionable about the deductions the Clintons took for Whitewater interest?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. COLE. In fact, people all across the country were doing it on all kinds of investments and all kinds of interest obligations?

Mr. NORTON. I'm sure they were.

Mr. COLE. Let me ask you this, not to further complicate things, but it would be a problem, would it not, if both the Clintons and the corporation took a deduction for the same interest payment. That would not have been permitted?

Mr. NORTON. That would be correct.

Mr. COLE. We have documents that indicate that in December 1993, the Clintons made a correction to their 1984 and 1985 tax returns because they learned, in the course of subsequent review of this Whitewater investment, that they had inadvertently taken a deduction for interest that, in fact, had been paid by Whitewater. Do you have any knowledge of that event, Mr. Norton?

Mr. NORTON. No, sir. That was subsequent to the years that I prepared.

Mr. COLE. Were you ever contacted by the Clintons or any representative of the Clintons regarding a correction or amendment to the Clintons' tax returns?

Mr. NORTON. I was, yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Who contacted you, sir?

Mr. NORTON. David Kendall.

Mr. COLE. Did you know who Mr. Kendall was?

Mr. NORTON. I did.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Kendall is the personal attorney for the Clintons, is he not?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Did Mr. Kendall say anything to you about correcting prior years tax returns in the course of that discussion?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. What do you recall that he told you?

Mr. NORTON. That they were correcting the 1979 tax return for some commodity transactions that had not been previously reflected.

Mr. COLE. Did he discuss with you any changes to the 1984, 1985 tax returns? Or did he say anything about a correction related to Whitewater?

Mr. NORTON. In my deposition, I said I thought he did. And I went back and reviewed the correspondence I had with him, and there was some mention in the correspondence of interest deductions, but I have no idea now whether that had to do with correcting interest deductions or Whitewater or not.

Mr. COLE. In fact, the Clintons did correct their 1984 and 1985 tax returns in December 1993, and the reason I raise it with you, sir, is that you prepared those returns, did you not?

Mr. NORTON. No, not 1984 and 1985.

Mr. COLE. You did not?

Mr. NORTON. 1983 was the last year.

Mr. COLE. 1983 was the last year that you prepared the returns, so you don't have any knowledge of the 1984, 1985 returns?

Mr. NORTON. No, sir.

Mr. COLE. For the years that you prepared the returns, Mr. Norton, including the 1979 return that you mentioned, did you have any reason to believe that the information that you were providing to the Internal Revenue Service was not correct?

Mr. NORTON. I had no reason to believe that it was not correct. I had reason to believe that it was correct because it was the information supplied to me by the Clintons.

Mr. COLE. You did everything within your professional ability to file the returns, to report income and deductions properly and file accurate returns with the Internal Revenue Service?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Now did the Clintons ever indicate to you that they intended to use the Whitewater investment to improperly claim some tax benefit or to avoid some tax liability?

Mr. NORTON. No, sir.

Mr. COLE. I'm now clear on this, you prepared their tax returns between 1977 and 1983?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. COLE. That would have been the first 5 years of the Whitewater investment, roughly the 1978 to 1983 period?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. COLE. Other than the one meeting that you have already described that you attended with Mr. Clinton and Mr. McDougal, did you have any discussions with either of the Clintons about obtaining tax benefits for the Whitewater investment?

Mr. NORTON. No, sir.

Mr. COLE. They never indicated they were trying to maximize the tax deductions from Whitewater or use Whitewater to offset their income or anything to that effect?

Mr. NORTON. I have no memory of discussions like that.

Mr. COLE. Did they ever express any particular interest or focus or concern on the Whitewater investment in the years that you prepared their tax returns?

Mr. NORTON. No, sir.

Mr. COLE. Mr. James, you were the tax preparer and the accountant for Whitewater, the corporation, during this period, were you not?

Mr. JAMES. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. What role did the Clintons play in the Whitewater investment by your observation during this period?

Mr. JAMES. As I said in my deposition, I never talked to the Clintons about Whitewater.

Mr. COLE. So you have no recollection of talking to either of the Clintons about Whitewater during the period that you were both its accountant and tax preparer?

Mr. JAMES. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Did you send the Clintons copies of the Whitewater tax returns to your recollection?

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Cole, as I stated in my deposition, I always gave one retained copy, and I gave it to Mr. McDougal. Whether I sent the Clintons one or not, I cannot remember but I always did furnish someone with the corporation a retained copy.

Mr. COLE. What was your practice with regard to companies that Mr. McDougal operated for which you prepared tax returns? Did you normally provide a copy of the return to Mr. McDougal?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. So if there were other investors in those companies, would you normally provide the returns to those investors?

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Cole, I can't remember doing that. Like I say, I might have sent them, but I don't recall.

Mr. COLE. But you do not have any memory of sending the Clintons—

Mr. JAMES. No, sir, I don't.

Mr. COLE. —copies of the Whitewater tax returns. And during the time that you were preparing the Whitewater tax returns, did you ever have occasion to consult with the Clintons, ask their advice, obtain information from them about the tax treatment of the corporation?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir.

Mr. COLE. Who, by your observation, was managing the Whitewater investment at that time?

Mr. JAMES. Mr. McDougal.

Mr. COLE. Did the Clintons play any managerial role at all to your observation?

Mr. JAMES. Not to my knowledge, sir.

Mr. COLE. Would it be fair then, Mr. James, to describe the Clintons as passive investors in the Whitewater enterprise?

Mr. JAMES. If, by passive, you mean that they had no active role that I knew about, yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. During the time period that we're talking about, did you ever have any occasion to meet with Mr. Clinton or Mrs. Clinton? Let's take them one at a time. Mr. Clinton, first. About Whitewater or otherwise?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir. You're asking me concerning Whitewater?

Mr. COLE. Let's start with concerning Whitewater.

Mr. JAMES. No, sir.

Mr. COLE. So you had no meetings with Mr. Clinton concerning Whitewater?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir.

Mr. COLE. Did you have any other meetings with Mr. Clinton during that period? I believe in your deposition, you said you ran into him in an airport once and introduced yourself to him?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir, that's correct. Only twice.

Mr. COLE. He was not someone that you had dealings with?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir.

Mr. COLE. Your dealings were with Mr. McDougal or, perhaps, Mrs. McDougal?

Mr. JAMES. That's the only two, yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. What about Mrs. Clinton, did she play any role in the Whitewater, in managing the Whitewater investment during the period you were involved in it?

Mr. JAMES. Not while I was involved, sir.

Mr. COLE. Did you have any meetings with Mrs. Clinton about Whitewater?

Mr. JAMES. In my deposition, I stated that I only met her twice, once I was introduced to her, and then when I took my records to her, when they were trying to get after Mr. McDougal and we had stopped doing business.

Mr. COLE. When did you stop doing business with McDougal?

Mr. JAMES. Sir, as I stated, I can't recall the exact year, but I believe 1985 or 1986 was the last year I did anything for him.

Mr. COLE. So the mid-1980's?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Did there come a time subsequent to that where Mr. Clinton contacted you and asked for Whitewater tax information?

Mr. JAMES. Well, according to my deposition, Mr. Clinton called me at home one night and was concerned because things had not been filed, and I explained to him that I didn't have any of those records, and I told him that I would try to help, try to find Mr. McDougal and see what was going on. But I wasn't able to do that.

Mr. COLE. This was a time when Mr. McDougal had left the Little Rock area and you were no longer dealing with him regularly?

Mr. JAMES. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. We asked you this in your deposition, and I think your answer was, you really can't recall the year, but do you have some sense of the time when this occurred?

Mr. JAMES. When I met?

Mr. COLE. When Mr. Clinton called you and asked if you could gather some tax records?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir, I cannot recall the year or the time.

Mr. COLE. And the purpose of Mr. Clinton's call was to obtain information so that the Whitewater tax returns could be filed?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. You were no longer filing the Whitewater tax returns at that time?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir.

Mr. COLE. And were you able to obtain any information for Mr. Clinton?

Mr. JAMES. As I recall, I wasn't able to get ahold of McDougal.

Mr. COLE. Where was Mr. McDougal at this time, do you know?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir. Again, that would depend on the timeframe. I know he was out of the State for awhile, and then he was also sick, so I really don't know where he was.

Mr. COLE. This would have been during the time in the mid- to late-1980's when Mr. McDougal was sick and perhaps out of State?

Mr. JAMES. As I recall, that's correct, sir.

Mr. COLE. With regard to Mrs. Clinton, did you ever have any contact with her regarding Whitewater?

Mr. JAMES. The only time was when I took my records to her office, and here again, as I told you, I don't remember if I met her once when I took the records up there, or when I picked them up, my personal files.

Mr. COLE. When was that? Was it during the 1992 Presidential Campaign?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir, it was before then.

Mr. COLE. It was before the campaign?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Norton, did you have any contact with Mrs. Clinton during the 1992 campaign relating to tax matters?

Mr. NORTON. She called me and asked me if I could locate our old tax files from when we were preparing, Foster & Company was preparing their tax returns.

Mr. COLE. Were you able to locate those records for her?

Mr. NORTON. No.

Mr. COLE. Other than that, did you have any contact with her?

Mr. NORTON. Well, she called back several weeks later and asked if I had been able to locate anything, and I said no, and that was really the only two contacts I had with her during the campaign.

Mr. COLE. Did she indicate why she needed the tax returns?

Mr. NORTON. No.

Mr. COLE. Did you know at that time that Whitewater had become an issue in the campaign?

Mr. NORTON. Yes.

Mr. COLE. I take it you could probably figure out why she needed the tax returns?

Mr. NORTON. Yes.

Mr. COLE. She was your client, and she had a right to get them if she wanted them?

Mr. NORTON. I'm sure she did.

Mr. COLE. My time's expired. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Norton, about 10 minutes ago, Mr. Cole asked you about a conversation you had in 1993, I guess it was, or 1992 with Mr. Kendall concerning unreported gains on commodities trading by Mrs. Clinton in 1979. Would you tell us about that?

Mr. NORTON. The conversation I had with Mr. Kendall really he asked me about the tax exam, in my memory, of the tax exam on the 1979 year. He sent me some information, a copy of the IRS's letter setting up the tax exam and information the IRS had requested. He had also sent me a computer printout from the IRS's records indicating the tax activity for that year, and that there had been an exam, and the results of the exam.

I helped him as best I could, I really had very little memory of that tax exam. But he told me that they had hired some accountants, the Clintons, the campaign, whoever had hired some accountants to look at the transactions in 1979 and discovered that there were I believe two transactions that were not reported, two commodity transactions that were not reported on their return. He said they were going to file an amended return on that, and wanted to inform me of that since I had prepared that 1979 return, and he asked me if I had a problem with that, and I said no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was this call with Mr. Kendall, 1993?

Mr. NORTON. I could look at the file. I don't remember the year.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it after Mr. Clinton had become President?

Mr. NORTON. Can I just look?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sure. Take a moment to look.

Mr. NORTON. February 1994.

Mr. CHERTOFF. February 1994. So to put that in perspective, that is after Mr. Fiske was appointed Special Counsel, you had a conversation with Mr. Kendall in which he indicated to you that he had discovered that the Clintons had made profits on commodities transactions which they had not reported on the tax returns?

Mr. NORTON. Actually, it was a profit and a loss. There was some of each.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So there were two transactions and commodities that had not been reported on the returns?

Mr. NORTON. That's—yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he tell you what the dimensions of the profit and loss were?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What were they?

Mr. NORTON. Give me a second and I will tell you. There was a short-term capital gain of $6,498, and a short-term capital loss of $80 that was not reported.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, if you net it out, there was about a $6,000 profit that was not reported?

Mr. NORTON. That's right. And it appears as if the loss was in the 1979 return, should have been in the 1979 return, and the gain should have been in the 1980 return.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say the gain should have been in the 1980 return, do you mean that Mrs. Clinton was doing commodities trading in 1980?

Mr. NORTON. According to this information, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That there was $6,000-plus of profits in 1980 that were not reported?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Kendall tell you why you had not been given this information by the Clintons?

Mr. NORTON. I'm not—I mean, he didn't tell me why the Clintons didn't give it to me. He stated that there was monthly statements provided by the brokerage firm, but that there was not a year-end summary of the activity provided by the brokerage firms to the Clintons.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you did the tax returns for the Clintons in 1978 and 1979 when they also did a lot of commodities trading, did you work off the brokerage statements, or did the Clintons give you a piece of paper, or a summary of the profits?

Mr. NORTON. That's a long time ago—

Mr. CHERTOFF. I know. I am just asking you, in general?

Mr. NORTON. I vaguely remember year-end summary statements from the brokerage firms that gave the profit and loss to report.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am going to ask that we show you a portion of the 1980 return, which I believe should be marked as Schedule D, that reflects a small amount of commodities' profits.

Mr. CHERTOFF. While we are locating that, let me move on to something else, but I am going to want to come back to this question of how it is that there was a significant profit in commodities trading that was not given to you to report to the IRS.

But let me come back to another issue of profit where there is a question about whether it was reported. This goes back to what Mr. Cole raised with respect to that installment sale, that 15-acre installment sale. Again, that is the piece of property, the portion of the deal that Mr. Clinton did with Mr. McDougal that was not mentioned in Mr. Clinton's interrogatory.

Oh, I'm sorry. Here it is. It is No. LP-682. It is the 1980 Schedule D. We are going to give it to you right now. I understand, Mr. Norton, and in fairness to you, for the record, you were totally captive to the client here. It is what the Clintons give you. You do not have an independent basis.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did report some activity in commodities for 1980, a loss of $449; a gain of $130, for a total loss of $319.

Mr. NORTON. I know the $449 is a commodity transaction.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You are not sure what the $130 is?

Mr. NORTON. I don't know what the $130 is—no, wait. The $130 is not—there is a schedule attached. It is not commodities.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK. So the point is that the Clintons, in fact, specifically gave you information about the fact that there was some commodities' activity, but the information that they gave you indicated a loss of $449 instead of a profit in excess of $6,000. Is that fair to say?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it is not as if they just overlooked the commodities trading altogether that year; it is that they gave you the loss, but they didn't give you the profit.

Mr. NORTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now let's go on to this other issue of profit. We have this installment sale on this other piece of property which Mr. Clinton bought from Mr. McDougal, which again he omitted to put in his interrogatory answers. Mr. Cole asked you whether it is correct that, in fact, the buyer of the property from Mr. Clinton on the installment sale never finished paying off the property, then obviously, Mr. Clinton would not have to report a profit, and I agree that that is correct. But you would agree with me that if, in fact, the purchaser had not paid off the balance of the installment sale, the Clintons would have been entitled to take a deduction. Because if they lost money, having bought the property from McDougal and then not getting the purchase price from the new purchaser, they would have taken a loss; right?

Mr. NORTON. It depends on whether they got the property back or not. If they got the property back, there would be no loss. If they did not get the property back, there would not be a loss.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, we have no evidence that they got the property back, or that they owned the property afterwards, or that they ever had another transaction in the property. So my question to you is: Did they ever tell you that there was a loss and that they wanted to take a deduction?

Mr. NORTON. I have no memory of that, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I assume if they had told you, you would have put it on the return?

Mr. NORTON. I think I would have; yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me move on to another issue. It is interesting that Mr. Cole brought up the issue of commodities, because it is in 1978, 1979, and 1980 that these—well, now we know it is 1980; we did not know that before, but in these 3 years there are the well-known commodities profits.

Also, these are the years in which the Clintons evidence an interest in getting some fast deductions from this Whitewater investment. There was a payment. I want to direct your attention to Schedule A for the 1978 return. It is LP659. You will see that it says, "Interest Expense, Great Southern Land Company, $10,131." Do you see that?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We all agree here that at that period of time payment of interest on a loan was tax deductible.

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you will also agree with me that you are only supposed to deduct interest that is due. If you prepay interest from another year, a later year, you are not entitled to deduct it in the year you pay it; right?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That is because if you allow people to deduct a year in advance, they might be able to manipulate their deductions to offset income in a way that would be favorable to them and unfavorable to Uncle Sam; right?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now do you know whether, in fact, the $10,131 in interest that was paid in 1978 was for interest that was due and owing in 1978?

Mr. NORTON. I don't know how to answer that question. I know that it was deducted, and it was given to me as a deductible by the Clintons.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So they just told you that it was interest that was due and owing and they had to pay?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you subsequently learned—and when I say “subsequently,” I mean, very recently—that, in fact, most of that $10,000-plus in interest was really for interest due in 1979?

Mr. NORTON. I have learned that in my deposition.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that it was improper for the Clintons to tell you that was interest that was deductible in 1978? That was not a proper deduction?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The effect of that was, again, fitting in with the pattern we saw earlier, it accelerated the deduction. The Clintons got to take a deduction earlier than they otherwise would be able to take if they had done this according to Hoyle?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now let me move to 1980. I would like to show you Schedule A and B from 1980, LP 678. Here we have an interest expense to James McDougal of $9,000. Again, you got that from the Clintons?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They told you it was an interest expense?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That they were paying back interest on a loan?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The law at that time, as it is now, was that principal, repaying the principal of a loan is not deductible?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I mean, there is no question about that. Even I from my brief exposure to kind of baby tax in law school remember that. Did you know at the time, as we now know, because of the reconstruction of the records that, in fact, the $9,000 payment was for principal?

Mr. NORTON. I did not know that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me that it was improper to deduct a principal payment as an interest expense?

Mr. NORTON. I agree with that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, the source of my knowledge that this is principal comes from the Pillsbury Report. The accountants that worked for Pillsbury did an analysis and reconstructed the records.

I am not going to go through the whole arcana of the tax law, and I am not going to ask you about the 1984 and 1985 deductions which have been discussed publicly, and those were not on your watch, and I want to make it clear, Mr. Norton, you were always relying on what the Clintons told you, and you made your judgment based on what they told you?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But just based on what we have seen in this last 15 minutes, there is $6,000-plus of unreported profit in 1980 on commodities. There is some portion of $10,000 of interest improperly taken in advance to accelerate the deduction. There is $9,000 in interest that is taken as a deduction that is not deductible because it is the repayment of principal. There is at least a serious question about whether this installment, the profit on the installment sale of property was ever properly reported. That may be additional unreported income. We do know that the President never mentioned this transaction with McDougal on this 15 acres when he was asked about it in his interrogatories, or even, for that matter, when he testified about it as part of his trial in Little Rock.

So, I mean, based on what we have explored in terms of the record and your recollection, I take it that when you prepared the documents, and when you gave advice, you relied totally upon what Mr. and Mrs. Clinton told you?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Any inaccuracies, or errors, or failures to report income, or taking wrong deductions, or not giving correct answers in interrogatories, that is not anything that you had anything to do with?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let's go to the issue of Mr. Kendall's call to you and the corrective measures that were taken. Mr. Chertoff seemed to raise his eyebrows in surprise to hear your answer about the two items, the profit and the loss, the loss and the gain from 1980, for the 1980 return.

Indeed, a release was issued by Mr. Kendall, according to our records, in April 1994, more than 2 years ago, where all of this was set out in detail. It talks about, among other things, the 1978, 1979 return, and on page 3 in the first full paragraph of that 2-year-old release by the President's lawyer, he says:

In the analysis of the records by the Clintons' attorneys and accountant concluded over the weekend, it was determined that a small capital loss of $80 from the Clintons' account was not reported on the 1979 return. It was also determined that a short-term capital gain of $6,498 from the ACLI account was not reported on the 1990 return.

Senator SARBANES. 1980.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I'm sorry, the "1980 return." Then he goes on to say that:

Three of the last five Presidents have been required to pay back taxes that the IRS determined were due and owing. Here the Clintons have reached back 14 years to a time long closed by the IRS and, after careful investigation, have made the determination themselves to pay not only the tax but the interest for that entire period in an amount that dwarfs the tax paid.

With respect to what the IRS's procedures are, do you know, Mr. Norton, what the statute of limitations is with the IRS with respect to failure to make payments?

Mr. NORTON. Normally, it is 3 years from the due date of the tax return.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Unless fraud is involved?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In which case it would be?

Mr. NORTON. A 25 percent misstatement of gross income would be 6 years. Fraud is unlimited.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So 6 years and 3 years. And here, according to Mr. Kendall's statement, 2 years ago all of this was fully laid out. The taxes were fully paid, even though the IRS had no ability to collect it. Is that right?

Mr. NORTON. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I am delighted that Mr. Chertoff has agreed with the Pillsbury analysis. That is the first time we have heard such a statement from the Majority side. And we can quote the exact language that was written at page 31 of the Pillsbury Report which says:

On August 23, 1980, the Clintons paid $9,000 to an unknown payee. Through a reconstruction of a Citizens Bank mortgage history it has been determined that this payment was applied as principal to the outstanding balance of the Citizens Bank. The Clintons deducted the $9,000 payment as an interest expense in their 1980 Federal Income Tax Return.

This is the transaction that Mr. Chertoff asked you whether it was appropriate to deduct a principal payment as interest. Obviously, that was an error.

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Obviously, also, this has been the subject of much prior discussion and whatever tax liability incurred has long been paid. Indeed, the Majority has employed, according to what we see in the reports, long ago on this issue, an individual by the name of Steven Bankler who has sat in on your depositions, and who was a consultant to The Wall Street Journal. Mr. Bankler's opinion of the Clintons owing more tax liability than reported has, in itself, been well documented; and now, I guess, life follows art. We now see the expression of Mr. Bankler's previously formed opinion produced in the questioning here today.

Mr. Cole.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Chertoff also asked you, Mr. Norton, about a payment in 1978 that might have covered interest for 2 years, 1978 and 1979. Do you recall that particular interest payment by the Clintons?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. That is described in the Pillsbury Report at page 28 where it states that "The Clintons paid their portion by personal check dated December 28, 1978, for $10,130.58 made out to the Great Southern Land Company." And there is a footnote that says:

Because they paid the money to Great Southern Land Company in 1978, the Clintons claimed the entire amount as an interest deduction on their 1978 Income Tax Return, even though the interest on the Whitewater debt was only partially due in 1978.

Now at this time, Mr. James, in 1978 and 1979, you have already testified that Mr. McDougal was managing the Whitewater investment, was he not?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Do you have any reason to believe that the Clintons would have known, other than from whatever information Mr. McDougal would have provided to them, whether a particular obligation was interest, or principal, or for one year or another?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir. I, you know—

Mr. COLE. They were not calling you and asking you for information, or asking you to provide them copies of the books and records of Whitewater Development Corporation, or anything like that?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir. As I stated, I didn't have any dealings with it before it was incorporated.

Mr. COLE. Now let's talk a bit about Mr. McDougal and his management style of his various real estate ventures. He had several at that time, did he not?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. About how many different real estate developments at different places in the State of Arkansas was Mr. McDougal managing then? By "then," I'm sorry, I mean, the 1978-80 time period.

Mr. JAMES. I would say five or six, at least.

Mr. COLE. Was Mr. McDougal a good and careful recordkeeper with respect to those various developments?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir. He carried a lot in his head.

Mr. COLE. He carried it in his head. In fact, at the end of the year, did he sometimes bring piles of checks, documents, and receipts in a box, hand it to you and say, "here, do the tax returns"?

Mr. JAMES. Basically, yes, sir. On most of them I got them at the end of the year.

Mr. COLE. So you would not know until the end of the year what Mr. McDougal had done during the year, and then he would just give you a kind of unstructured pile of information that you had to sort through and prepare a return?

Mr. JAMES. Yes. According to my deposition, I got check stubs, bank statements, and documents like that and had to file a return from that; plus sitting down with Mr. McDougal and asking him questions.

Mr. COLE. You were the accountant for Whitewater? You were the person who was responsible for keeping his books and records and preparing his tax returns?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Do you have any reason to believe that Mr. McDougal was more careful or provided better information to people who may have invested with him in these ventures?

Mr. JAMES. I had no knowledge of that, sir.

Mr. COLE. So in fact, they may have had even less information than you had?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. What you had wasn't very good, was it?

Mr. JAMES. That's possible.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When Mr. McDougal left Arkansas, that was in what, 1986?

Mr. JAMES. I'm not sure what year, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, whenever it was that he left, he took his "head" with him and left the shoe boxes.

Mr. JAMES. Well, I had basically stopped doing his work for him by then.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You were sort of the voice of organization, at least in terms of trying to reassemble or reconstruct these records?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you know of any other person that Mr. McDougal relied upon to provide that service?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that when Mr. McDougal left taking his head full of organization such as it was with him, and leaving behind perhaps even less in the way of documentation than you were used to assembling, it would be quite a Herculean task for somebody to make sense out of it?

Mr. JAMES. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We would cede back the time to try to move this along.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Murkowski.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR FRANK H. MURKOWSKI

Senator MURKOWSKI. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Norton, you did the Clintons records from 1977 to 1983?

Mr. NORTON. I prepared their tax returns from 1977 to 1983.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You are a CPA?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You have been in practice how long?

Mr. NORTON. Since 1967.

Senator MURKOWSKI. All right. You signed off on these returns as a CPA for the Clintons?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. When you are in discussion with your clients, as is the case, what is your approach to having documentation in case the IRS should audit the tax return? Do you encourage your clients to make sure they have documentation as a matter of course?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Why, then, in this particular 1978 itemized deduction where we have the Great South Land Company taking a deduction of $10,131, did you not caution the Clintons on the necessity of providing some documentation?

Mr. NORTON. On that specific transaction?

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, it is the largest single deduction in the 1978 return, and it is one of the items in question here.

Mr. NORTON. I do not know how to answer that question. That was a long time ago.

Senator MURKOWSKI. When you sat down and reviewed the form prior to them signing it, and as you indicated it is a matter of procedure to have documentation, did you say, well, we ought to take a look at the documentation, or do you have the documentation? Was there any reference to documentation on this particular item?

Mr. NORTON. I can't sit here and tell you one way or the other whether that was discussed at that point in time.

Senator MURKOWSKI. But you did sign off on it. You since have become aware that it is not fully deductible?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Yet, as a CPA you have kind of an obligation to your clients to look after their best interests and to protect them from making a mistake, and this is a pretty significant mistake?

Mr. NORTON. I understand your question. I don't know how to look at each item—

Senator MURKOWSKI. Let me try and help you out. I mean, we all want to take the maximum deductions and pay the least tax and do it in a legal manner, but when we have a payment of the magnitude of this that is taken as an interest deduction, one would want to make sure that that would not be questioned and would be a legitimate deduction. And I am sure you would want to ensure that for your client, as well?

Mr. NORTON. I did rely on the Clintons to know what is interest and what is not interest. I am sure, I doubt seriously—

Senator MURKOWSKI. You relied on them as to what was interest and what was not interest. Is that correct?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. But did you satisfy yourself that there was adequate documentation to protect the Clintons in the event that there would be an IRS audit? Because you would be called upon in that IRS audit to more or less defend and give the details because the Clintons, obviously, rely on a CPA to do that in the preparation of the tax return?

Mr. NORTON. It is not standard practice to review each piece of documentation when you are preparing a tax return for a client.

Senator MURKOWSKI. No, but it is standard procedure to encourage and satisfy yourself that the document exists, because you sign off on this to the best of your knowledge that this is a true and accurate representation of the material that has been provided.

Ordinarily, I think most CPA's would ensure to the client that they have adequate documentation. I am just curious to know why in an item as significant as this that that is apparently overlooked and now we find it was not an allowable deduction in its entirety?

Mr. NORTON. We do not know whether it was overlooked. No. 1, that was a transaction that occurred in 1978. My memory on an individual transaction that long ago is not that good. No. 2, my files are not available to me to know what was discussed with the Clintons, if anything. I can't say one way or the other whether anything was discussed as to the documentation on that item.

Senator MURKOWSKI. In 1980, the Clintons deducted $9,000 as interest on a tax return. However, that is the $9,000 payment to pay part of the principal to Whitewater and not interest accrued as a result of Whitewater; right?

Mr. NORTON. Yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Did you prepare that return, as well?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So we have gone from 1978 where there wasn't documentation to a situation in 1980, what was the circumstances there?

Mr. NORTON. The circumstances would have been the same. The Clintons would have supplied me a list of information, you know, like a list of interest expense, and that documentation would be in my files. Again, those files are not available. I don't know where they are at this point.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, it seems inconsistent to me, but apparently consistent in the manner in which these two itemized deductions have been taken, that you were simply satisfied with the information the Clintons provided you, as opposed to asking them for documentation, or to ensure that if there were an audit, the documentation was in your files or their files?

Mr. NORTON. In fairness, in answering that question, I do remember them, both Mr. and Mrs. Clinton, supplying me, individually, with lists of tax information. Whether there was any other documentation, I can't sit here and tell you yes, or no.

Senator MURKOWSKI. If they would have asked you if they could have taken a payment and deducted it for principal, what would have you have told them?

Mr. NORTON. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Yet clearly in both these instances, in 1978 and 1980, that is what happened, basically. I mean, we can go into what portion was interest and what was principal but clearly they were not all deductible.

Mr. NORTON. Well, one of these payments, and I do not know which one, the one that had no payee on the check—I was shown that in my deposition the other day—had on it "reimbursement of 6 months interest." Whether I ever saw that documentation before the deposition, I cannot sit here and tell you. But if you just looked at that one check and saw it was written for reimbursement of 6 months interest, I am not sure how far back I would have to go to look at documentation.

Senator MURKOWSKI. It is difficult to go back and address past documentation, but you, sir, are a CPA and clearly had you been presented with the question by your client, I have got a payment here and I would like to deduct it because it is a business expense, and a portion of it goes to principal and a portion to interest, you would have said, well, fine, we can consider the interest but we cannot consider the principal.

Mr. NORTON. You are exactly right, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. But on the other hand, with the clients we have, at that time, Governor Clinton, right?

Mr. NORTON. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Who may not have a great deal of expertise in taxes, but certainly you would expect Mrs. Clinton, an attorney, to know the difference between principal and interest and what is deductible and what is not deductible. Yet, you based these deductions on their submission to you, evidently without documentation, and how do you explain the Clintons overlooking the difference between deducting the entire amount paid as a business expense and the reality that you can only deduct interest?

Mr. NORTON. I can't explain that, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, it is difficult for me to just accept the fact that Mr. Norton can't explain the difference; and yet you would expect a lawyer in a partnership, and certainly a Gov-error, to have some idea of the difference between what virtually every American is aware of; that is, that you can deduct interest but you cannot deduct principal.

We have seen it here in two cases in 1978 and 1980. I guess I would ask one more question, Mr. Norton. Are you aware that the handwritten notes of Vince Foster that were turned over to this Committee described the Clintons' taxes as "a can of worms that you don't want to open"?

Mr. NORTON. I think I read that in one of the news accounts.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, Mr. Chairman, I think that we have opened it. It is just inconsistent with reality to suggest that people with the expertise and business acumen of the Clintons, and in a venture, whether it be commodities on one hand, or real estate and Watergate[sic] on the other, would attempt to put down on a tax return a deduction for principal, when everyone is aware that that is disallowed and should have been caught by you.

They should have had documentation. And, you know, here we are with hearings going on in this Committee relative to an item that should not have come up under any terms and circumstances simply because you cannot deduct principal for a business expense.

That is the extent of my questioning, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Norton, do you have reason to believe, or do you have knowledge that the $9,000 deduction of principal ever was paid? Whether that was ever paid back to the Treasury?

Mr. NORTON. I have no knowledge on that one way or the other.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know, as we speak here today, whether that has ever been paid back?

Mr. NORTON. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it with respect to the commodities profit in 1980, the $6,000-plus profit which I guess after the Special Prosecutor was appointed, Mr. Kendall issued an announcement about the fact they discovered this additional $6,000 profit. During that 14 years between the time it should have been reported and the time it was reported, did you have any inkling about it from the Clintons?

Mr. NORTON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, regarding the issue of the Pillsbury Report—and just to make it clear, I was reading I think from what the accountants did in reconstructing the records—did the lawyers from Pillsbury ever interview you?

Mr. NORTON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you never were able to tell them of your recollection of Mr. Clinton's "back off" instructions to you during the initial discussion with Mr. McDougal and Mr. Clinton?

Mr. NORTON. That's right, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. James, I would like to close by turning to you. I would like to give you a page of a book written by James Stuart, page 153, called "Blood Sport." There are two paragraphs that recount a discussion which the author says took place between you and Susan McDougal.

There are only three possibilities with respect to this discussion. Either the author made it up, or he got his information from you, or he got his information from Susan McDougal. So since we have you, I want to go through this with you and I want to ask you a couple of questions. This relates to an event that is supposed to have occurred in 1986. Beginning in the first full paragraph:

Perhaps the 1984 delays could be ascribed to negligence, but now in 1986 Susan felt that Hillary was being obstructionist. Susan was so upset by Hillary's recalcitrance that she called Charles James, the accountant who handled the Whitewater books and had handled the paperwork to incorporate Whitewater Development in the first place. Susan explained that Hillary was refusing to submit a financial statement, and she was desperate. What can I do, she asked? This whole house of cards could come down.

James recognized how upset Susan was and how important it was to get the financial statement. He said he would bring the Whitewater records over to her house and they would prepare some information to use with Hillary. When he arrived, James and Susan sat down and James wrote down the various payments from the McDougals and the Clintons on a yellow legal pad. Of the almost $200,000 that the Whitewater partners had had to contribute to cover shortfalls in income from the development itself, the McDougals had contributed just over $138,000. The Clintons just under $36,000. Before performing this exercise, James and Susan hadn't realized how large a discrepancy the payments reflected and James was irate. You tell her, by God, you have given all this money to this project and, by God, you want the statement.

Mr. James is this true?

Mr. JAMES. No. I don't ever recall this meeting, or any of this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now when you say you don't recall it, it is very important here because, remember, there are only three possibilities. Either the author just made it up, or it comes from Susan McDougal, or it comes from you?

Mr. JAMES. It did not come from me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are you saying you don't remember one way or the other, or are you absolutely saying that this story is untrue?

Mr. JAMES. I don't recall this meeting or this taking place at all.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you are not in a position to deny that, for example, if Susan McDougal recalls it but you can't confirm it either?

Mr. JAMES. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That is all my questions, Mr. Chairman.

Senator MURKOWSKI [presiding]. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, that is about as close to a denial as I have ever heard that anything remotely like this occurred. If something like this occurred, you would remember it?

Mr. JAMES. I would think so, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And—

Mr. JAMES. Whoever the author was of this book never contacted me.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, we have now approached a new level here. Fiorello LaGuardia read the comics to the public in New York when there was a newspaper strike, and I guess we are into a new era of reading fictionalized accounts, or narrative versions of events.

Who knows who produced this information, or how it was sliced, diced, and put in the Cuisinart to come in this form. We have dealt with other parts of this book and, as I have said before in these hearings, it is not my intention to do a book review of Mr. Stuart. But clearly in regard to his account of the Clinton's financial statements and the way the loan was classified at the bank in Flippin where, according to the testimony we have produced under oath, was grossly inaccurate and unfair.

This is another example where the proposition is put forward that a conversation involving all of these elements occurred, you were supposed to be one of the participants, and quite clearly on the basis of everything you know, that conversation did not occur?

Mr. JAMES. Not that I recall, sir. And I would think I would recall that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I think that is a fair enough note to close on.

Senator MURKOWSKI. We have come to the determination that is enough for today. We are going to adjourn the hearing, and we will reconvene tomorrow at 10:00 o'clock.

Thank you, Mr. Norton, Mr. James, I wish you a good day.

[Whereupon at 11:55 a.m., the hearing was recessed, to reconvene at 10:00 a.m. on Thursday, May 16, 1996.]

1 Q All right. Well, did you ever give Mr. McDougal
2 either expressed or implied permission to affix your 3 signature to any documents bearing -- or relating to 4 Whitewater Development Corporation business?

5 A I don't remember having such a discussion, but Mr.
6 McDougal was clearly managing the property and doing
7 what he thought that he could to move the property.

8 Q Okay.

9 A But I don't remember any specific discussion of 10 that, sir.

11 Q And you entrusted Mr. McDougal, or you trusted Mr.
12 McDougal to do what was necessary for the benefit of the 13 joint venture between yourself and your wife; is that 14 correct?

15 A I did trust him, yes, sir.

16 Q All right. And were there occasions, for instance,
17 where Mr. McDougal would send you documents to sign,
18 such as loan renewals and extensions, that you would 19 sign and return to him?

20 A Well, I signed some renewals and extensions over 21 time, perhaps he sent them to me. I don't remember
22 specifically.

23 Q Well, did you ever initiate or undertake an active
24 role in obtaining the financing for Whitewater
25 Development Corporation, itself?

1 A No, sir, I did not.

2 Q All right. As far as the initial loans that
3 Whitewater, can you explain to the jury basically how 4 Whitewater Development Corporation was initially
5 financed?

6 A Yes, sir. When we bought the 230 acres of land, we
7 -- the price was $200,000.00, and we paid $20,000.00
8 down, which we financed with a loan, I think from Union
9 Bank of Little Rock, but anyway, from another bank, and 10 then we borrowed the $180,000.00 amount from the local 11 bank in Marion County, the bank in Flippin, it has had 12 several different names over the last 15 years, I think 13 it has had three different names, but anyway, it is the 14 only bank in town.

15 Q Okay.

16 A We borrowed the money from that bank, the principal
17 amount. And it was -- and our hope, I will say again,
18 was that we could sell enough lots so that the income
19 from the lots would at least be sufficient to pay off
20 the bank notes when they came due, and then hopefully,
21 some day, we would actually make a profit.

22 Q Okay.

23 A It was a vain hope, as it turned out.

24 Q As far as the land itself, let's take it one step at 25 a time, you talked about the purchase of the land. Did

1 dreams or visions were for this particular property?

2 A Well, he told me what he hoped -- he told me what he
3 hoped would happen to the business ventures.

4 Q Okay.

5 A And I thought it was a good risk, and so I joined
6 him.

7 Q And you placed your trust, and your wife placed your 8 trust in Mr. McDougal's abilities and his integrity; is
9 that correct?

10 A Yes. But we also had an independent judgment about 11 what the market would probably do. Turned out our 12 judgment was wrong.

13 Q Now, you had a situation involving Mr. Logan's
14 property. You indicated you got some financing at Union
15 National Bank. Do you know who the loan officer was at 16 Union National Bank that made that loan?

17 A I don't remember that, sir.

18 Q Did you ever know or meet a Harry Don Denton that 19 worked at Union National Bank?

20 A I know who Don Denton was. I'm not sure I met him
21 at that time or whether he was the loan officer on the 22 note.

23 Q Did you have anything to do with acquiring the 24 initial financing from Union National Bank?

25 A I'm not sure. I might have, because I had some

1 friends who worked there and I knew the people who owned
2 the bank, but I'm not sure.

3 Q As far as the major financing from the only bank in 4 Flippin, and I'm with you, I can't keep the names
5 straight, so let's just refer to them, to the bank in 6 Flippin, as far as the major financing, did you have
7 anything to do with that major financing?

8 A Well, I knew the people at the bank, and I was aware
9 that they were willing to finance it, but I believe Mr.
10 McDougal made the contact.

11 Q Okay. So, again, you were deferring to Mr.
12 McDougal's expertise and Mr. McDougal's leadership --

13 A That's right.

14 Q -- in terms of establishing this particular
15 transaction?

16 A That's correct.

17 Q Now, let's just jump ahead. You indicated in 1981
18 there was a representation made to you by Mr. McDougal
19 that the bank, in and of itself -- I mean, the land, in 20 and of itself, was now generating enough income to 21 become self-sufficient. Do you remember that, sir?

22 A I believe, to be specific, Mr. Jahn, I believe that 23 the representation was that enough lots had been sold so
24 that the cash flow on the lots would at least cover the 25 bank notes when they came up.

1 Mr. Burge. We participated in a portion of the loan.

2 Mr. Chertoff. Is that the same thing as saying you
3 basically split the loan and another bank took up half the 4 loan?

5 Mr. Burge. Yes, sir.

6 Mr. Chertoff. What was the bank that took up the other
7 half of the loan?

8 Mr. Burge. Union National Bank of Little Rock.

9 Mr. Chertoff. How did that bank come to be the one that 10 was invited in to take in half the loan?

11 Mr. Burge. They were our major correspondent.

12 Mr. Chertoff. That means a bank in Little Rock with 13 whom you had a relationship; right?

14 Mr. Burge. That is correct.

15 Mr. Chertoff. Now, Mr. Denton, you were at the Union
16 National Bank of Little Rock in 1978?

17 Mr. Denton. Yes.

18 Mr. Chertoff. What was your position at that point?

19 Mr. Denton. Senior vice president and chief lending
20 officer.

21 Mr. Chertoff. Do you remember a time that you learned
22 about a loan that was going to be made for a real estate
23 venture to be handled by the McDougals and the Clintons?

24 Mr. Denton. Yes.

25 Mr. Chertoff. How did you first learn about that loan?

1 Mr. Denton. I was approached by one of two individuals
2 that were an emissary for the owner of the Bank, Herbert
3 McAdams.

4 I was informed that the two parties and their wives were 5 purchasing real estate; that Union Bank was being asked to 6 make a $20,000 unsecured loan for the equity in that 7 purchase.

8 At the time, I understood that the balance of the 9 purchase price would be carried by the seller. I was not 10 aware another bank was involved in the transaction.

11 Mr. Chertoff. So you were approached about the $20,000
12 portion of the loan? Is that right?

13 Mr. Denton. Yes.

14 Mr. Chertoff. Who were the two--you said there were two 15 people, one of two people who approached you on behalf of 16 the owner. Who were these people you were referring to?

17 Mr. Denton. It was either Gene Smith or Paul Berry.

18 Mr. Chertoff. And what was their function or their 19 position at the bank?

20 Mr. Denton. They were both public relations officers 21 that functioned as lobbyists, paid lobbyists on staff at the 22 bank.

23 Mr. Chertoff. You mentioned an individual by the name
24 of Paul Berry, whose name actually came up I guess earlier
25 in the year in connection with a discussion at the White

1 House about--I think it was in January of 1994--about
2 Beverly Bassett Schaffer. There was a list of people that
3 might be sent down to Arkansas.

4 Can you just tell us a little bit about Mr. Berry? You
5 said he was a lobbyist for the bank?

6 Mr. Denton. Yes. Paul Berry had--the reason I am
7 uncertain as to which of those parties approached me is 8 because Mr. Berry was employed at just about that time in 9 1978 by the bank to actually take over and learn the ropes
10 from Gene Smith.

11 Incidentally, Mr. Smith died shortly after that period
12 of time.

13 Paul Berry had previously been employed as a lobbyist
14 for, I believe, the American Medical Association, had worked
15 some for the Tyson Foods operation in Northwest Arkansas,
16 and as I recall was a former roommate of Bill Clinton's.

17 Mr. Chertoff. Now were you told by this emissary from 18 the owner of the bank why the owner of the bank wanted you
19 to grant this loan to the McDougals and the Clintons?

20 Mr. Denton. I was informed that the basis of the loan
21 was Bill Clinton, who was described at that point as an up
22 and coming political start, rising star in the State of 23 Arkansas.

24 Mr. Chertoff. So you were told that the owner of the 25 bank wanted you to make the loan because it was to a group

1 that included Mr. Clinton and Mr. Clinton was viewed as 2 having good political prospects?

3 Is that right?

4 Mr. Denton. That is accurate; yes.

5 Mr. Chertoff. Had you not gotten that instruction,
6 would you in your capacity as a bank officer, would you have
7 approved an unsecured loan to Mr. McDougal and to Mr.
8 Clinton and their wives?

9 Mr. Denton. No.

10 Mr. Chertoff. Why not?

11 Mr. Denton. I had previous banking experience with Jim 12 McDougal, all of which had been very satisfactory, but all
13 had involved the personal involvement of former Senator
14 Fulbright.

15 Senator Fulbright had guaranteed all the previous loans
16 to Mr. McDougal. McDougal had a reasonably modest net worth
17 and was not entitled to a $20,000 unsecured credit, in my 18 opinion.

19 Mr. Chertoff. Now you also indicated, Mr. Denton, you
20 did not realize at the time you were involved in a $20,000
21 loan; that there were going to be other loans and 22 participation from other banks on portions of this loan.

23 Is that correct?

24 Mr. Denton. I was not aware of that. I had understood
25 that the other loan would be carried by the seller of the 1 property.

2 Mr. Chertoff. Now did you receive financial statements
3 in connection with this $20,000 loan?

4 Mr. Denton. I don't recall if I received one
5 specifically on that loan. I had in the bank's possession
6 current financial statements from Mr. McDougal on existing 7 loans. I did not receive a personal financial statement
8 from Bill Clinton.

9 Mr. Chertoff. Was there a point thereafter that some of 10 the Bank Examiners, or regulators at some point criticized 11 the documentation underlying this particular loan to the 12 McDougals and the Clintons?

13 Mr. Denton. As I recall, within a year, perhaps a two-14 year period, that loan was lifted among other loans as being 15 one poorly documented for having the absence of financial 16 statements.

17 Mr. Chertoff. Mr. Denton, in this period of time
18 generally, I just want to ask you a question about the 19 philosophy of the bank and Mr. McAdams, the owner of the 20 bank, concerning loans to political figures, did he have a
21 philosophy or a policy, or was there a philosophy or a
22 policy at the bank about how to treat applications for loans
23 from people who were politically powerful?

24 Mr. Denton. I don't know if there was a stated policy
25 regarding political loans. I would say that there was

1 certainly not a formal, written policy in that regard.

2 Mr. Chertoff. Was there a practice?

3 Mr. Denton. The practice was fairly well described.

4 Mr. McAdams was actively involved in politics and had been 5 for a number of years, and had a number of contacts in the 6 political arena, and frequently extended credit to political 7 entities.

8 Mr. Chertoff. Mr. Burge, I want to come back to you.

9 Now at some point in 1978 the loan is out; the property
10 is acquired. Your bank, the Citizen's Bank, has about half
11 of the loan, about $90,000, and the other part of it is over 12 at Union National Bank.

13 Is that right?

14 Mr. Burge. That's correct.

15 Mr. Chertoff. And did there come a point that you
16 became concerned about the problem with the sales of the 17 property that was hopefully supposed to be providing the 18 income to pay back the loan?

19 Mr. Burge. Yes, I did.

20 Mr. Chertoff. What was your concern?

21 Mr. Burge. Well, there had been a period of time there
22 had not been any sales at all on the property.

23 Mr. Chertoff. Did you take some steps to approach the 24 McDougals and the Clintons about requiring them to start to 25 pay off the principal of the loan because you were concerned

(2) problem with that.

(3) I do have a problem with us getting into

(4) whatever business Mr. Berry maybe doing that Doesn't

(5) have anything to do with the resolution. You know, I

(6) used to lobby and I know that in some sense - in

(7) some instances, it is not appropriate to disclose

(8) what you are doing on behalf of your clients. I

(9) don't know if that's the case for Mr. Berry or not.

(10) But I don't think we need to put him in that

(11) position.

(12) MR. BARTOLOMUCCI: The resolution

Page 16

(1) doesn't - we can ask him what his date of birth is,

(2) but some questions are background and the authority

(3) to ask them are fairly implicit in other items in the

(4) resolution, and in this case, I think this fairly

(5) goes to the nature of his involvement with the White

(6) House.

(7) I have no intention of probing in any

(8) detail the - what he does on behalf of clients with

(9) the White House, but I did want to have a sense of

(10) who he talks to at the White House because then that

(11) can exclude certain possibilities later.

(12) MR. IVEY: I don't have any problem with

(1) that type of questioning. I do have a concern about

(2) asking specifically about the substance of what he

(3) may have lobbied on.

(4) MR. BARTOLOMUCCI: I had no intention of

(5) asking anything like that.

(6) THE WITNESS: The appropriate answer is I

(7) have never requested any member of the White

(8) House

(9) staff or the President to make an appointment for me

(10) anywhere in the executive branch of government.

(11) never

(12) at any time during his presidency. I have, for

Page 17

(1) information purposes. I informed different people in

(2) the White House of some of my activities, and I -

(3) when I have been asked what are you doing, Paul, well

(4) I am working on this, that and the other, I have had

(5) that kind of conversation.

(6) BY MR. BARTOLOMUCCI:

(7) Q So, are you telling me that you haven't had

(8) any conversations with White House employees which

(9) were on behalf of clients as part of your lobbying -

(10) A I have had conversations as to process,

(11) how - what the timing will be on matters, and what

(12) the process will be, with the establishment of the

(1) administration's position on the range of issues.

(2) Q Now, you told me that you do lobbying at

(3) the federal level?

(4) A Yes.

(5) Q And I assume that means some interaction

(6) with government employees, so is it members or staffs

(7) of the legislature that you have been involved with?

(8) A I have - yes, and I have also called on

(121) various branches of the administration - of the

(122) executive branch of government. I have arranged

Page 18

(1) meetings for clients, with the various officials in

(2) the executive branch. But your question was about

(3) the White House.

(4) Q That's correct.

(5) Turning your attention back to the Union

(6) National Bank.

(7) A Yes.

(8) Q During the time that you were there, were

(9) you aware of the fact that the bank had made an

(10) unsecured $20,000 loan to Bill Clinton and Jim

(11) McDougal?

(12) A Yes, sir.

(13) Q Did you have any involvement -

(14) A Are you aware that we had a program at

(15) Union National Bank where we routinely provided

(16) unsecured loans to individual accounts? That

(17) marketing device was called "prestige banking." We

(18) identified young professionals and offered to them a

(19) $10,000 line of unsecured credit if they would open

(20) their checking accounts with us.

(21) Q So, what you are telling me the bank had a

(22) policy of extending $10,000 of credit to those young

Page 19

(1) professionals who opened -

(2) A Yes.

(3) Q - new accounts?

(4) A Yes. Many banks had that at that time that

(5) kind of program. It generically had different names

(6) for it.

(7) Q Was this $20,000 loan to Bill Clinton and

(8) Jim McDougal made as part of the program you have

(9) just described?

(10) A No. It was not unusual. The loan was made

(11) to Mr. Clinton and Mrs. Clinton. I had solicited

(12) their personal banking business and we had their

(13) personal accounts. And when they had a credit need,

(14) we were - I was the one that introduced them, as I

(15) recall to Mr. Denton.

(16) Q I want to be clear on something. It is our

(17) understanding that I described, which was -

(18) A Yes.

(19) Q - granted in June of '93 was a loan to

(20) Bill Clinton and Jim McDougal, and neither of their

(21) spouses were parties to that loan. You mentioned -

(22) A I didn't see the signed loan agreement. I

Page 20

(1) thought it was to Mr. and Mrs. Clinton. I thought

(2) she was on the note also, but I have never seen that

(3) original loan document.

(4) Q I just wanted to make sure we were talking

(5) about the same thing.

(6) A Mr. McDougal was already a customer of the

(7) bank when that loan was made; a loan customer, too.

(8) Q You just said you solicited the Clintons'

(9) personal banking business for the bank?

(10) A Yes.

111 Q Does that mean you were involved in the 112 making of this loan we are talking about?

113 A I was involved in that to the extent that I
114 had asked them to bank with us, open their personal 115 banking accounts with us, and we had personal 116 accounts, banking accounts, of the Clintons, and we 117 routinely call on all our customers, if they had a 118 credit need, if they wanted to borrow money, that was 119 our business.

120 Q Now, it wasn't your idea for Bill Clinton
121 and Jim McDougal to borrow this money, right?

122 A No, they had - they were contemplating

Page 21

11 this investment that has become known as
12 Whitewater.

13 and then Attorney General Clinton, and I discussed
14 whether or not they were going to do that and I said
15 if you make the decision to do so, we would like 16 to - it would be my guess that we would like to make 17 that loan.

17 Q This is June of '78, so you are no longer
18 living with Mr. Clinton, right?

19 A No, I was not. He was the Attorney
110 General-elect - I mean, he was the Attorney General
111 at that time and was running for governor for first 112 term. He was the Democratic nominee for governor at 113 that point.

114 Q And he approached you and said, McDougal
115 and I have this business deal and -

116 A I don't know whether he approached me or - 117 we were together frequently during that period of 118 time, and in the course of a conversation, he made me
119 aware of this possibility.

120 Q What did he -

121 A I had bought a place on the White River
122 myself, lower down, and we were talking about - a

Page 22

11 number of people were interested in land in north
12 Arkansas.

13 Q What did he tell you about the business
14 deal that he was getting into with Mr. McDougal?

15 A Well, the preliminary discussion in my 16 memory was simply that he and Mrs. Clinton were 17 thinking of trying to buy a small place up on the 18 White River, for a vacation getaway place for 19 recreation. That was in the original discussion.

110 Q As we now know, that's not the form that 111 the deal took, which was in fact -

112 A No. I was never party to any discussions
113 where either of the Clintons were present with 114 Mr. McDougal. I knew Mr. McDougal during that 115 period

116 of time quite well, also.

117 Q Okay, so I just wanted to clear up one 118 thing. It was then Attorney General Clinton who 119 talked to you about the possibility of a loan, rather 120 than Jim McDougal?

121 A That's right. We discussed it.

122 Q And I assume at some point you guys decided 123 that in fact -

Page 23

11 A I thought it was a good - I thought it
12 would be a good thing for him.

13 Q And -

14 A Little did I know.

15 Q Did he tell you that he wanted $20,000?

16 How did that figure come about?

17 A I don't - there was no figure that I
18 recall in the original discussion. There may have 19 been some estimate of what a piece of land within 110 this development and some sort of cottage or house
111 would cost, but I don't specifically recall a number
112 being said.

113 Q After you -

114 A We knew it would be a relatively small
115 loan.

116 Q $20,000 being relatively small?

117 A Yes. That size loan at that point within 118 our bank was not a large loan at all.

119 Q Now, what did you do after you understood

120 that the Attorney General wanted to take out this 121 loan? Did you approach someone at the bank?

122 A Yes.

Page 24

11 Q Okay, what did you do?

12 A As I recall - I don't have specific
13 recollection of making a formal appointment. I
14 was - my office at the bank was - I was in the main 15 lobby at this point and Mr. Denton's office was in -
16 just off the main lobby on the same floor and I
17 routinely spoke to members of the loan department
18 about customers that I had solicited their business.
19 and in the course of the conversation, if they 110 mentioned a credit need, as part of my duties, I
111 reported such credit needs for existing or potential
112 customers to the loan department. And I mentioned
113 this to Mr. Denton or - and I am sure I apprised him
114 of this potential credit need.

115 Q Mr. Denton was loan officer at the bank?

116 A Senior vice president, a senior lender of 117 the bank. He could commit the bank's legal limit by 118 himself, which was probably 4-, 5- or $6 million.

119 Q And Mr. Denton is the person who formally 120 approved the loan, correct?

121 A That's my recollection. Again, I don't -

122 I don't recall ever seeing the actual loan documents.

Page 25

11 but I believe my memory is that he was the loan
12 officer of record, sir.

13 Q Is there some reason why you didn't simply 14 approve the loan yourself?

15 A I was not a loan - I was not a loan
16 officer. Well, actually I could make - I had a few 17 loans that I made, but my loan limit was lower than 18 that. I was a liability man. I did not do loans.

119 That's not my normal job.

110 Q So you didn't have the authority to make a

111 loan of that size -

1. A I didn't have authority to make a $20,000
 2. loan, and ultimately, was not in the loan business at
 3. all for the bank. That was not part of my duties at
 4. all.

5. Q Now prior to the time that you approached
 6. Mr. Denton, did you discuss the possible loan with
 7. the elder McAdams?

8. A I may have - prior to my discussion with
 9. Mr. Denton?

10. Q Right.

11. A I - I doubt that I did.

Page 26

12. Q So -

13. A In 1978, both Attorney General Clinton, and
 14. his wife, Hillary Clinton, she had joined the Rose
 15. Law Firm at that time, and their profile fit
 16. precisely the very kind of people that we were trying
 17. to get to bank with us, that he was a public figure.
 18. was - we tried to be careful to document anything we
 19. do with a public figure, maybe even more so than we
 20. did with other loan customers. Because routinely,
 21. the statements of candidates or public officials
 22. while they were not required by law, they often as a
 23. matter of campaign issues were disclosed, so we
 24. wanted to have things always ready in case they were
 25. in the public domain.

26. Q Was it your belief that it would benefit
 27. the bank to have the Attorney General as a loan
 28. customer?

29. A No more than anybody else's - yes, we
 30. charged interest. Charged him the same interest we
 31. would charge anybody else in similar credit
 32. circumstances.

33. MR. IVEY: Hold on a second, Mr. Berry.

Page 27

34. THE WITNESS: It was not discounted at
 35. all. We charged him what the going rate was.

36. MR. IVEY: Give me a second, Mr. Berry.

37. Could you read back the question and the
 38. answer, please.

39. (The reporter read the record as requested.)

40. MR. IVEY: Sorry to interrupt.

41. THE WITNESS: All right.

42. BY MR. BARTOLOMUCCI:

43. Q Now, do you remember what the - let me
 44. withdraw that and start again.

45. When you talked to Mr. Denton, did you say
 46. this is a loan that we should consider making, or did
 47. you tell him more definitively that this loan was to
 48. be made?

49. A I never told Mr. Denton any loan had to be
 50. made. I didn't have that kind of authority vis-a-vis
 51. Mr. Denton. He had much more authority than I did.

52. Q Did you tell Mr. Denton that this was a
 53. loan that Mr. McAdams wanted to be made?

54. A Never.

55. Q Did you tell Mr. Denton that -

Page 28

56. A It was obvious to Mr. Denton who Mr. and

57. Mrs. Clinton were, and Mr. Denton already had a
 58. customer relationship with Jim McDougal, who was
 59. one
 60. of his borrowing customers.

61. Q I don't suppose you saw Mr. Denton's
 62. testimony two days ago before our committee?

63. A No, I did not. I have now read a quick
 64. paragraph in the newspaper accounts, but I did not
 65. see the hearings for the last two days. I have had
 66. total distractions because of personal family
 67. matters, and I am at a serious disadvantage. I don't
 68. know what has been said.

69. Q Well -

70. A All I know to do is tell the truth as I
 71. remember it.

72. Q And obviously that's all we are asking
 73. for.

74. And I will be happy to give you a synopsis
 75. of Mr. Denton's testimony because we are not looking
 76. to hide the ball here?

77. A He has had a lot more practice at his
 78. testimony. Make sure that's in the record.

Page 29

79. MR. BARTOLOMUCCI: It is on the record.

80. MR. IVEY: It is in there.

81. THE WITNESS: You bet.

82. BY MR. BARTOLOMUCCI:

83. Q Now, Mr. Denton said he couldn't recall
 84. exactly but he was sure that it was either you or
 85. Mr. Gene Smith that approached him about this loan.

86. A Gene Smith was executive vice president of
 87. bank at that time, and Gene Smith may have spoken
 88. to

89. Mr. Denton. I have no knowledge of that. I actually
 90. worked with Gene Smith. He, from time to time, was a
 91. de facto supervisor of mine, but I was the one that
 92. spoke to Mr. Denton first. And whether anybody else
 93. ever talked to him about this, I do not know.
 94. But we routinely, in bank procedures, had
 95. every Friday morning a bank officers loan review,
 96. which was led by the loan department, marketing
 97. department. All departments of the bank had
 98. representation at that meeting so all the business of
 99. the bank was discussed, what customers we lost and
 100. what customers we had gotten, and what loans had
 101. been
 102. made.

Page 30

103. So that we tried to coordinate and
 104. everybody was informed as to what was going on, and
 105. this loan would have been discussed at this meeting
 106. at the appropriate time, so it was not unknown that
 107. this loan - within the bank this loan had been made
 108. to the Attorney General.

109. Q Na, and just to -

110. A And I was a strong advocate. I wanted the
 111. loan made. I made no bones about that. I thought it
 112. was good business, sir.

113. Q Now, it was Mr. Denton's testimony that

(112) either you or Mr. Smith come to him, to Mr. Denton
 (113) and said, approve this loan. This is a loan this
 (114) Mr. McAdams wants to be made.
 (115) A No, that would not have been what I said at
 (116) all.
 (117) Mr. McAdams was quite capable of speaking
 (118) for himself. I had been an account officer on the
 (119) bank accounts of Attorney General Clinton and
 (120) Mrs. Clinton. They had a credit need, and I reported
 (121) it to the appropriate loan-making authority within
 (122) Union National Bank.

Page 31

(11) Mr. Denton was well aware of who the
 (12) Clintons were. We all wanted that business.
 (13) Q Now, it was also Mr. Denton's testimony
 (14) that -
 (15) A And I urged that the loan be made, for both
 (16) because I thought it was good banking business and
 (17) because these were the kind of customers we wanted
 (18) at
 (19) Union National Bank. In my opinion, we wanted those
 (20) kind of customer. I know I wanted them.
 (21) Q You would have said that to Mr. Denton?
 (22) A Yes.
 (23) Q Just to make sure I have this straight, you
 (24) approached Mr. Denton. You discussed this loan with
 (25) him?
 (26) A It was routine. I frequently found credit
 (27) needs from customers that I was calling on and I
 (28) always reported all such credit needs to the loan
 (29) department.
 (30) Q And you told Mr. Denton that this was a
 (31) loan to the sort of people that the bank was looking
 (32) for?
 (33) A Yes. We already had their business. I

Page 32

(11) wanted their loan business, too. We had their
 (12) checking business. I wanted their loan business.
 (13) That was the principal source of revenue for the
 (14) bank, loans.
 (15) Q Did you tell Mr. Denton that then-Attorney
 (16) General Clinton was a rising political star, or words
 (17) to that effect?
 (18) A I didn't have to. It was obvious. He had
 (19) been elected Attorney General and was the
 (20) Democratic
 (21) nominee for governor.
 (22) Q All right, so -
 (23) A And he knew. I didn't have to talk to him
 (24) much. Get this in perspective. We already know knew
 (25) Mr. McDougal's speculation real estate business and
 (26) were loaning money to him for that purpose.
 (27) Q Those were deals that also involved former
 (28) Senator Fulbright, right?
 (29) A I don't know. Again, I did not see those
 (30) loan documents. I knew that Jim McDougal was a
 (31) borrowing customer of Union National Bank. I did
 (32) not
 (33) see those loan documents either.

(122) Q Now, did you have any involvement in this

Page 33

(11) loan after your conversation with Mr. Denton?
 (12) A Not that I recall. I may have - I may or
 (13) may not have been involved in hand-carrying a loan
 (14) extension agreement. Normally those were sent out by
 (15) mail. But Mr. Denton may well have asked me. It was
 (16) not unusual for me to - if any of my customers
 (17) needed a loan extension, sometimes we hand-carried
 (18) those to customers.
 (19) Q Now, there was another loan at Union Bank,
 (20) actually Union Bank took a 50 percent participation
 (21) in a loan, that was made by the Citizens Bank of
 (22) Flippin?
 (23) A Yes.
 (24) Q And this was the loan that was actually the
 (25) mortgage on the Whitewater property.
 (26) Did you have any involvement in Union
 (27) Bank's participation in that loan?
 (28) A No, I went to the correspondent bank
 (29) committee. That bank in Flippin was one of our good
 (30) correspondent banks, and I knew that we had taken a
 (31) participation from Citizens, but I did not know the
 (32) details.

Page 34

(11) Q And you weren't involved in the making of
 (12) that participation?
 (13) A No, no, I was not.
 (14) Q Bill Clinton or Jim McDougal neither of
 (15) them talked to you about the participation?
 (16) A No, not at all. Mr. McDougal was the only
 (17) person that I ever heard discussed as the prime - as
 (18) the principal, in these real estate deals.
 (19) Q Jumping back momentarily to the $20,000
 (20) loan.
 (21) A Yes.
 (22) Q Did you ever have a discussion about that
 (23) loan, with Mr. McDougal?
 (24) A Not that I recall. I saw Mr. McDougal from
 (25) time to time. He was in and out of the bank, not -
 (26) out of Union National Bank not infrequently, and I
 (27) would see him in passing, and I don't remember any
 (28) specific discussions about it.
 (29) Q Okay, so in your memory that it was -
 (30) A He offered my wife job at one point in
 (31) another real estate project, which she declined.
 (32) Q That was probably a smart move.

Page 35

(11) A Jim was - Mr. McDougal was very successful
 (12) in a number of his land deals up to this one.
 (13) Q All right. Just to close the loop on the
 (14) $20,000 loan, so it is your memory that it was Bill
 (15) Clinton as opposed to Mr. McDougal who talked to you
 (16) about the loan, about having the bank make that loan?
 (17) A He was the one that - he discussed that he
 (18) was contemplating, he and Mrs. Clinton were
 (19) contemplating buying a piece of property on the
 (20) White
 (21) River, and I said well, if you need to borrow any

THE TAXPAYER/HEREBY ELECTS TO REPORT THE GAIN ON THIS SALE UNDER THE INSTALLMENT METHOD OF ACCOUNTING AS DEFINED IN IRC SECTION 453.

SALTILLO HEIGHTS

A DIVISION OF — ROLLING MANOR, INC.

PURCHASER'S AGREEMENT

THIS AGREEMENT entered into this day between ROLLING MANOR INC., hereinafter called "SELLER", and WILLIAM C. TITTO hereinafter called "BUYER" WHEREAS:

WHEREAS, SELLER is the owner of the following described property situated in F. Elmer County, Arkansas: Tract Number 74, Saltillo Heights Estates as reflected by a plat of said subdivision filed with the proper authorities of said county.

WHEREAS, SELLER has this day conveyed by and said property to BUYER upon the terms and conditions hereinafter expressed:

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the premises and of the mutual covenants herein and the payment of the cash sum hereinafter mentioned, it is mutually agreed as follows:

1. BUYER agrees to pay SELLER for said property the sum of

ELEVEN THOUSAND FOUR HUNDRED ----- Dollars ($ 11,400.00)

of which BUYER has paid 400.00 cash in hand, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, and has executed one note of even date herewith to the sum of 11,000.00 appearing on the reverse side hereof, and payable according to the terms therein set forth.

2. BUYER agrees to pay all taxes and assessments due and payable now and hereafter.

3. Time is the essence of this AGREEMENT, and if BUYER defaults on the payment of any installment of principal and interest for a period of 60 days, or fails to pay any taxes, assessments or insurance premiums when due, SELLER, at its option, may either declare the entire debt with interest due and payable, or rescind this AGREEMENT, and in the event of rescission any moneys paid by BUYER shall be taken and returned by SELLER, and as a penalty, but not in lieu of the property and the relation of the parties thereafter shall be that of landlord and tenant at the rent of 150.00 per month; and thereafter SELLER, after notice, may demand possession of the property, and BUYER agrees to surrender immediately peaceable possession. No delay on the exercise of any of the covenants herein contained in a manner of such right, but same may be exercised at any subsequent time. Any notices required herein may be made by ordinary mail addressed to BUYER at unless SELLER be notified in writing of a subsequent change of address.

4. Upon payment of the entire debt with interest when due, together with all taxes, assessments and insurance premiums due hereafter, SELLER will convey to BUYER the above described property by Warranty Deed and will furnish an abstract of Title certified to the date of this AGREEMENT showing marketable title, or forward Owner's policy of title insurance.

5. It is mutually agreed that no representations whatsoever and incorporated herein shall be binding on either party, and that this AGREEMENT shall not be varied or contradicted hereafter except in writing signed by both parties.

6. This AGREEMENT shall not be sold, transferred or assigned, nor shall said property be leased, without written consent of SELLER, and in the event of any sale, assignment, transfer or lease, without written consent, SELLER shall have the right to exercise the options herein before provided in Paragraph 3. In the event of a sale, transfer or assignment of this AGREEMENT with SELLER's written consent, the assignee or grantee shall succeed to all the rights and liabilities of BUYER, according to the terms of the assignment and consent to be attached hereto.

7. BUYER shall not commit or permit waste; and shall maintain the property as in good condition as at present. Upon any failure so to maintain, SELLER may cause reasonable maintenance work to be performed at the cost of the BUYER.

8. BUYER acknowledges receipt of a copy of The BIR of Arkansas covering subject property which by reference is made a part hereof.

9. It is mutually agreed that SELLER retains all mineral rights to subject property.

INSTALLMENT NOTE

I, 11,000.00 Little Rock, Arkansas
For value received, I, My promise to pay to the order of ROLLING MANOR, INC.

JANUARY 25, 19 77

at HERAPEDIA, ARKANSAS, the sum of ELEVEN THOUSAND ----- DOLLARS

(I, 11,000.00) with interest from date until due at the rate of 10 percent per annum and thereafter until paid at the rate of 10 percent per annum, payable as follows: An installment of DOLLARS ($ 155.51) due and payable on or before the 1st day of APRIL, 19 77, and so on installment of ONE HUNDRED FIFTY FIVE AND 51/100 ----- DOLLARS

(I, 155.51) on the 1st day of each succeeding month thereafter until the full amount of interest and principal is paid in full. The interest on this note shall be 10 percent per annum, and shall be compounded annually. This Note is executed in connection with, and is made a part of the agreement of even date herewith, appearing above in which reference is hereby made, between the same parties hereto, for the sale of the property described therein.

Should payment be made in the payment of any installment of principal or interest for a period of 60 days, the entire debt, with interest at the rate of 10 percent per annum until paid, shall become due and payable at the option of the holder hereof. The maker(s) and endorser(s) waive notice, demand and presentment and consent that time for payment may be extended without notice. No delay in the exercise of the option of acceleration shall be construed a waiver of such right, but it may be exercised at any subsequent time during default. Maker(s) shall have the right to pay any multiple of the installment at any installment payment date.

ORDER OF INVESTIGATION
(Feb. 4, 1994)

INTERROGATORY RESPONSES OF
WILLIAM JEFFERSON CLINTON

Interrogatory No. 1: DESCRIBE each and every occasion before August 1978 on which YOU:

(a) Bought real estate;

In 1975, I purchased a residence at 930 California Drive in Fayetteville, Arkansas. In late 1976, my wife and I purchased a residence at 5419 L Street in Little Rock, Arkansas.

(b) Obtained bank financing for a real estate acquisition;

I financed the 1975 purchase of my Fayetteville residence with a mortgage loan from the American Savings and Loan Association. My wife and I financed the 1976 purchase of our Little Rock home with a mortgage loan from Capital Savings & Loan Association of Little Rock.

(c) Sold real estate;

I can recall no such occasion prior to August, 1978, except as indicated in the response to No. 1(d), infra.

(d) Invested in real estate (including any investments in corporations and partnerships that dealt primarily in real estate). In answering this interrogatory, be sure to DESCRIBE

000281
Sen. Ltr. Reg.

CONFIDENTIAL

the real estate transactions referred to in documents DKRT900707, DKRT900715 and DKRT900716.¹

I cannot recall very much about these transactions.

However, I believe I made a real estate investment or investments in 1977, which are reported on our 1978 income tax return. I can recall nothing specific about this investment or investments, except I believe that at least one involved the purchase of land near Jacksonville. Reviewing documents DKRT900707, DKRT900715, and DKRT900716 does not refresh my recollection. Please see also: Global Response to No. 2, infra.

Interrogatory No. 2: DESCRIBE YOUR knowledge, as of August 1978, of Jim McDougal's experience in real estate development. In answering this interrogatory, DESCRIBE everything YOU knew as of August 1978 about the activities and the success or failure of the following entities associated with Jim McDougal:

Global Response to No. 2:

As of August, 1978, I had had general conversations with Jim McDougal about his experience in real estate development, and although I can't recall specifically what I learned, I remember being of the impression that Jim had done well, that he was considering a number of projects, and that Senator Fulbright was somehow involved with him. At that time, I don't think I had ever heard of the entities listed in this interrogatory with the possible exception of Rolling Manor, and so I was not aware of their activities or their successes or failures. I cannot now recall anything I may have known about Rolling Manor. At that time, I had known Jim McDougal for about ten years, and it was my impression that he was a successful real estate developer.

As reported on our 1978 tax return, a five acre parcel of land was sold on May 17, 1978, for $5000, resulting in a capital gain of $2150. To the best of my recollection, this was a real estate investment I had had with Jim McDougal, and, while small, it was a profitable one. This experience confirmed my impression that he was capable of putting together successful real estate ventures.

(a) Great Southern Land Company;

Please see Global Response to No. 2, supra.

(b) Flowerwood Farms, Inc.;

Please see Global Response to No. 2, supra.

(c) Pembroke Manor, Inc.;

Please see Global Response to No. 2, supra.

(d) Rolling Manor;

Please see Global Response to No. 2, supra. I note that, on our 1977 income tax return, a deduction of $432 was claimed for Interest paid to "Rolling Hill Manor." This apparently was the real estate investment I had with Jim McDougal, but I have no further recollection of what it was.

(e) McDougal & Associates;

Please see Global Response to No. 2, supra.

(f) Riley-McDougal;

Please see Global Response to No. 2, supra.

(g) Fulbright-McDougal;

Please see Global Response to No. 2, supra.

(h) any and all other entities that YOU understood to be associated with Jim McDougal.

Please see Global Response to No. 2, supra.

Interrogatory No. 3: DESCRIBE what investigation YOU undertook, if any, before deciding to purchase the real estate in Marion County, Arkansas that came to be known as Whitewater. In particular, DESCRIBE how this property came to YOUR attention, DESCRIBE each and every conversation YOU had with anyone about it and DESCRIBE each and every document YOU reviewed PERTAINING to it before YOU decided to purchase the property. Also, state whether (and, if so, when and with whom) YOU visited the property before buying it.

I cannot now remember specifically what my wife and I did before deciding to purchase the real estate in Marion County, Arkansas in mid-1978. As a native Arkansan who had spent time all over the state, I had a general knowledge that there were many profitable land investments in the northern part of the state in the 1970's and that there appeared to be a market for vacation and retirement real estate in northern Arkansas, an area

Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 9:30 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING COMMENT OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.
Would you stand for the purposes of taking the oath.

[Witnesses sworn.]

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Mr. Latham, Mr. Knight, Mr. Bunch, if any of you have a statement you would like to make, we would be pleased to receive it.

[No response.]

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Just so we know who you are, Mr. Latham, in 1983, 1984, 1985, and 1986, you worked at Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF JOHN M. LATHAM FORMER CEO & CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD MADISON GUARANTY SAVINGS & LOAN

Mr. LATHAM. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You started out as Executive Vice President and then you became Chief Executive Officer, right?

Mr. LATHAM. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was Jim McDougal's savings and loan?

Mr. LATHAM. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He owned it?

Mr. LATHAM. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Knight, in the mid-1980's, you were a partner at the Rose Law Firm?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF DAVID A. KNIGHT FORMER PARTNER, ROSE LAW FIRM

Mr. KNIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You still are?

Mr. KNIGHT. No, sir, I'm not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where are you now?

Mr. KNIGHT. I am the General Counsel of Stephens, Inc., in Little Rock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. If you would just pull the mike a little closer.

In the mid-1980's, when you were a partner at the Rose Law Firm, what was your area of specialization?

Mr. KNIGHT. Corporate and securities law.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Bunch, what is your job?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF GARY W. BUNCH
PRESIDENT, MADISON BANK AND TRUST

Mr. BUNCH. President of Madison Bank and Trust.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And just so we're clear, Madison Bank and Trust is obviously different than Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes, it is. It's a bank.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. Mr. Bunch, you had that position at Madison Bank and Trust in the mid-1980's?

Mr. BUNCH. I was working at Madison Bank and Trust in the mid-1980's, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you start working at Madison Bank?

Mr. BUNCH. 1970.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you there when Jim McDougal owned the Madison Bank?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes, I was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you stayed after he left?

Mr. BUNCH. Still there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I would like to focus your attention first on an issue about which this Committee and our country has heard a lot of conflicting testimony. And although it looks sometimes as if it is a small piece of the puzzle, it is actually a very fundamental piece of the puzzle because it explores how it is that the Rose Law Firm became involved in doing work for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan.

I want to set the picture before I ask you any questions by putting up on the Elmo a portion of an answer to an interrogatory given by Mrs. Clinton to the RTC under oath within the last couple of years. It's numbers on the bottom are DKS N 800 and DKS N 801. I think you all have it in your package, and I will give you a minute to find it. It's a couple of typewritten pages. Actually, I am going to have someone come down and just hand it to you, make it a little easier.

This was a question that the RTC, as part of its investigation into the Rose Law Firm and its relationship with Madison Guaranty, felt it necessary to ask the First Lady.

Question: Was Mrs. Clinton the lawyer responsible for obtaining this business for the Rose Law Firm?

Answer: To the best of my recollection, the President of Madison Guaranty, John Latham, who was a friend of an associate at the Rose Law Firm, Richard Massey, became interested in having Madison Guaranty issue some kind of preferred stock to raise capital. Mr. Latham had spoken to Massey about doing the related legal work. In the spring of 1985, Massey came to see me because he had learned that certain lawyers at the law firm were opposed to doing any more work for Jim McDougal or any of his companies until he paid his bill, and then only if Madison Guaranty agreed to prepay a certain sum to the firm once a month to cover fees and expenses. Under such an arrangement, the firm could be assured that Madison Guaranty was staying current with regard to paying for the new work that the firm might do for it.

I believe Massey approached me about presenting this proposal to Jim McDougal because he was aware that I knew him. I agreed to go see McDougal. I visited him at his office on April 23, 1985, and told him that I understood Latham wanted Massey to do some work for Madison Guaranty, but that our firm would not let Massey proceed until the previous bill was paid and some kind of prepayment arrangement was worked out for new work the firm might do. As I recall, McDougal agreed that Massey could proceed with the work and informed me he would arrange to pay the past due bill. McDougal also indicated that he was agreeable to some kind of prepayment arrangement.

Now, Mr. McDougal, at various times gave the public a different version. McDougal's version was that he made a decision to give the work to the Rose Law Firm. I'm operating from memory. That he made a decision to give the work to the Rose Law Firm because it was in response to a request from President Clinton, who had visited him.

When we asked Mr. Massey whether he agreed with Mrs. Clinton's recollection that it was Massey who was the one who brought the work in and that Mr. Massey went to Mrs. Clinton simply to straighten out the problem of a past due bill, Mr. Massey had a different recollection.

Mr. Massey had a recollection of having lunch with Mr. Latham, but his recollection was that at the end of the lunch, he didn't come away with any promise or indication that you, Mr. Latham, wanted to have the Rose Law Firm do work. So his recollection was that he did not come to Mrs. Clinton with—

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Should we put the testimony of these people in front of Mr. Latham if you're going to use this?

The CHAIRMAN. Senator and Mr. Ben-Veniste, let me just say, Mr. Chertoff has indicated he is trying to set a framework of the background where there's given testimony. He's attempting to summarize so that after he gives the background, come to the specifics in light of these things, and he can then ask his questions. You will have an opportunity, if there are misstatements or an overstatement, to deal with him, but let him proceed.

Senator SARBANES. I don't mind him trying to set a background, but if he's going to say that so and so said such and such and so and so has been before us saying such and such, shouldn't we reference the witness to the testimony and let him look at it?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am not citing, Mr. Chairman, from these witnesses testimony. I am setting out a framework as to what others have said. I will tell you and the witnesses quite specifically, that when Mr. Massey was asked point blank whether Mr. Latham had offered him work for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, Mr. Massey's answer, and I am quoting from page 19 of his testimony before this Committee on January 11th of this year was, "I don't believe so." So we have these different stories.

We do know that there was a lunch that occurred at some point in early 1985, between Mr. Massey and Mr. Latham and I believe you too, Mr. Knight. Is that correct?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, sir. I am not sure as to the precise date but I did attend that lunch.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you tell us now, Mr. Knight, what your recollection is of that lunch?

The CHAIRMAN. Could we have a date?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I can't do any better than just——

The CHAIRMAN. On or about?

Mr. CHERTOFF. The best we can determine was that it was some time in early 1985.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. KNIGHT. I am not sure about that, sir, as to the date, but I did go to the lunch.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you tell us what happened at the lunch?

Mr. KNIGHT. The lunch followed the conclusion of a law school course that Mr. Massey and I were teaching, and Mr. Latham was a student in that class. The purpose of the lunch was to solicit business from Madison Savings & Loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What happened?

Mr. KNIGHT. We took Mr. Latham to lunch, and I can't remember certainly the specific conversation but the gist of it was we told him a little bit about the types of work that Rick and I did. Representative clients for the firm, and then asked him for business.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did he say?

Mr. KNIGHT. My recollection is that he said that Mr. McDougal was really the one that made decisions about hiring lawyers.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What else did he say?

Mr. KNIGHT. He also said that Madison regularly used another law firm and that he thought they were satisfied with the services provided by the law firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Which law firm was that?

Mr. KNIGHT. The Mitchell Law Firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That would be the firm with Jim Guy Tucker as a partner?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, that's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And John Selig as a partner?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So in this meeting, at this lunch, Mr. Latham told you it was Mr. McDougal's decision, correct?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He told you that the bank already had an outside firm that it was happy with?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was not your firm.

Mr. KNIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And would you agree with me that he wasn't encouraging at all about your law firm getting any work from Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. KNIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So when you left that lunch, you had no impression from Mr. Latham that you were going to be getting any business from Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. KNIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, as far as securities work was concerned, that was your particular specialty at the Rose Law Firm, right?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, sir, corporate and securities.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was your area.

In this lunch, did Mr. Latham say to you anything about having a securities project or some kind of project involving the issuance of preferred stock that he wanted your firm to work on?

Mr. KNIGHT. No, sir, I don't recall any discussion about such an offering.

Mr. CHERTOFF. During the course of this lunch, did you make a request to see whether you could meet with Mr. McDougal?

Mr. KNIGHT. No, sir, I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So when you left that lunch, you walked away with the impression that you had no opportunity with Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. KNIGHT. At least at that point, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was the next time that you heard about Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan in connection with work that the Rose Law Firm would be doing?

Mr. KNIGHT. I'm not sure as to a specific date but at some point, I learned that Rick Massey was working on a recapitalization plan for Madison that had been brought to the firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know how it came to the firm, do you?

Mr. KNIGHT. No, I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember after the lunch, when you came away with no sense that you were going to get any business from Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, did you say anything to Mr. Massey in the wake of the lunch about what your impression was?

Mr. KNIGHT. I have a vague recollection just discussing it with him briefly on our way back to the office, and I think maybe pointing out my observation that when a large company or a financial institution has a large outside law firm that they use as a regular firm and they are satisfied with the firm, that it is typically very hard to get business from that company. And that would have been the substance of it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So when you left that lunch—and this is consistent with Mr. Massey's testimony—you had no sense that you had been given any kind of offer or request from Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan to do work for them?

Mr. KNIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To the contrary, your belief was that the matter was closed?

Mr. KNIGHT. As far as I was concerned, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As a matter of fact, I don't know if you know this, but there is evidence that with respect to the very stock recapitalization matter that eventually did come to the Rose Law Firm, that matter was originally opened by Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan with the Mitchell Williams firm, the firm's regular outside counsel. Did you know that?

Mr. KNIGHT. No, sir, I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That fact, I take it, would tend to reinforce your impression that if a firm has already been engaged by a bank to work on a project and they are the regular outside firm for the bank, they are not likely to switch it, unless there's some unusual event, to a firm that they haven't worked with before?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, I think that's a fair statement.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Latham, do you have a recollection of this lunch that is different from that which Mr. Knight has testified about?

Mr. LATHAM. No. I don't remember the lunch. David and I were talking about that earlier and laughing about it but I do not remember the lunch with them, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You would agree with me that the decision about hiring law firms during this period of time for Madison Savings & Loan in your mind was a decision that Jim McDougal made?

Mr. LATHAM. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that even though you were the Chief Executive Officer, you believe and you were operating under the principle that this was the kind of decision Jim McDougal would make?

Mr. LATHAM. Yes. He had been using lawyers for awhile. He owned the firm or the S&L, and I felt that the hiring of lawyers to represent you is you usually hire lawyers that you know and trust. And I felt that that should be his call on who we used.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Given that you don't remember the lunch, let me ask you this. Do you know who did make the decision to hire the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. LATHAM. Jim McDougal did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know why he made that decision?

Mr. LATHAM. No, I don't. I mean, I can't speak for Jim.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he tell you something?

Mr. LATHAM. My recollection, and this is a vague recollection at this point in time, is that—well, and I don't know if he said it or if I just knew it—but I knew that he had friends at the Rose Law Firm and Hillary Clinton, of course, was one of them, and we either discussed it, or that was my assumption that he was wanting to spread his business with more of his friends, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now the second piece of this puzzle, apart from the question of whether or not Mr. Massey, as the response to the interrogatory indicates, came in with some work, and I guess the testimony we have now from Mr. Knight, Mr. Latham, and Mr. Massey is that Mr. Massey didn't have any work to come to Mrs. Clinton about.

The second piece of this is Mrs. Clinton's statement that the reason she got involved in this was because she had to get McDougal to pay off an outstanding bill for work that the law firm had done for Madison Bank and Trust, which had been Mr. McDougal's earlier financial institution before he moved to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. So that raises the question about whether there was, in fact, an outstanding bill or billing dispute with Madison Bank and Trust and the Rose Law Firm as of April 1985. And that's what I want to ask you about, Mr. Bunch.

Mr. Bunch, you had an opportunity during your deposition or during recent interviews, to look at some minutes and some documents of the Board of Directors of Madison Bank and Trust?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think you have those in the package in front of you. Let me ask you, was there an outstanding bill that was owed from Madison Bank and Trust to the Rose Law Firm in the summer of 1984?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it in the amount of approximately $5,800?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And did there come a time that Jim McDougal directed you or indicated that he wanted the bank to pay that bill and settle that matter?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was that?

Mr. BUNCH. I believe it was in October.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Actually, would it be September 25, 1984? I am sorry, October you say?

Mr. BUNCH. I thought it was October.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me help you out. You may be right. There's a document, it's been faxed to us.

Mr. BUNCH. Well, I guess it was September, and then October, December, we have another meeting showing it was paid, so—

Mr. CHERTOFF. You need to speak closer to the microphone.

Mr. BUNCH. OK. I can't really see the date on this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. Let me direct your attention to a particular page. It's a page that has at the top 273 PO3 May 14, 1996, 13:39, and the first line reads "Thornton requested letter in detail on Cease and Desist Compliance."

Mr. BUNCH. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You have that?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That is part of a report relating to the October Board Meeting, is that right?

Mr. BUNCH. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. These are documents that you're familiar with. In fact, you've had them in your possession?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Direct your attention down to three paragraphs from the bottom, it says, "Law Firm. We owe $5,000 for Huntsville move appeal according to firm. Discuss the fact that new lawyers sent to argue case." Then it says, "Mr. McDougal seconded that Mr. Bunch will negotiate settlement with firm." Is this the October Board Meeting in which Mr. McDougal indicated that this bill was to be paid?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that the agreement or decision by McDougal to pay the bill was in October 1984, about 7 months before April 1985. Is that correct?

Mr. BUNCH. I suppose.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now there is also another document you sent us which says, Debit General Ledger, Account Number 76011. Why don't you get that?

Mr. BUNCH. Pardon me?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says, Debit General Ledger, Account Number 76011. Why don't you take a look at that?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes, I am.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is this the part of the ledger record of the bank concerning its disbursements?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes, it is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Does this indicate that on October 23, 1984, $5,000 in legal fees were, in fact, paid to the Rose Law Firm which was in your mind, your understanding, payment in full for the outstanding legal fees?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes. It's $5,000 that was paid—I am assuming—we never did find the cancelled check or cashier's check or anything—that was paid to Rose, but I'm assuming yes, that it was paid.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because you have a record of the payment and you have a record of the Board of Directors that indicated you were supposed to pay that?

Mr. BUNCH. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, to further confirm that, I want to turn to the last document in the minutes. It's the minutes of a November 27, 1984 meeting. If you can pull that out.

Mr. BUNCH. Got it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The last paragraph says, "The Daily Statement was read, reviewed, and approved unanimously. It was noted that earnings were $69,048 with an L/D Ratio of 51 percent and the Capital Ratio of 7.6 percent. The reduction in earnings was attributed to heavy accounting fees for the audit and a payment of legal fees from 1983 lawsuit."

Mr. BUNCH. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Does this refer to that $5,000 payment?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So these records, the minutes, and the debit indicate that so far as we have records, there was, in fact, the payment and the satisfaction of this particular bill in October 1984.

Mr. BUNCH. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And I might add, just to further confirm that, that we have documents we received very recently from the Rose Law Firm and, in fact, they came after the Committee suspended in late February 1996, that indicates what they call a fee/credit report. It indicates a distribution among the partners for, "credit purposes," of this $5,000 payment and that that occurred in November 1984. So that's fully consistent with your testimony and with these other records.

Mr. Bunch, your understanding was, your instruction from Mr. McDougal in October was to settle up this bill in full?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes, it was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember who you talked to at the law firm about doing that?

Mr. BUNCH. No, I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you satisfied yourself that you had accomplished what you were told to do?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That the bill was paid in full in either October or November?

Mr. BUNCH. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You never heard anything to the contrary?

Mr. BUNCH. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Knight, were you interviewed by the Pillsbury Madison people working for the RTC on the investigation of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. KNIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Bunch, were you interviewed by the Pillsbury Madison people?

Mr. BUNCH. Not that I remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Latham, were you interviewed by the Pillsbury Madison people?

Mr. LATHAM. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I'd like to move to another subject, if I can, with you, Mr. Latham, and that has to do with a transaction in the fall of 1985 and early 1986 involving property that had at one point been known as the IDC property and ultimately became the Castle Grande project. Are you familiar with that set of transactions?

Mr. LATHAM. Yes, I am.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I know there's a lot on the record on this; I'm not going to get into detail, but as long as you are here, we ought to get this from you. Would you agree with me that the way that initial purchase was structured in the fall of 1985, was that the entire tract of property was split into two parts. That Seth Ward took a piece of that property in his own name as a straw man, using money that had been lent to him by Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, and that the balance of the property was taken by Madison Financial, which was a subsidiary of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan? Is that generally what happened?

Mr. LATHAM. I don't know what you mean by straw man. I will agree with everything else except that term. Yes, that is true.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know what the term straw man means?

Mr. LATHAM. I am not sure what you mean by the term straw man.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What I mean, Mr. Latham, is that he purchased part of the property on behalf of Madison because Madison could not have purchased the whole property itself because it would have been in violation of regulations had it done so.

Mr. LATHAM. My recollection is there was more than one reason for Seth to purchase part of that tract of land. I don't know that I can remember all of them now, but they read them to me in my deposition from a statement I had made to the RTC last year.

One was that I think Seth and Jim and everybody else that I heard talk about that transaction, believed that what they were buying, what Seth put together was a steal, and that they were buying the property at an immense bargain. Seth is not one to turn down a profit anywhere.

It's true—well, I'm going from memory but I would assume that we probably did not have the room to increase or to buy the entire investment in the service corporation, and so for that reason and the others that I may not be remembering right now that I stated to the RTC, are the reasons I remember for splitting that transaction in that manner.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, let me refresh your memory by going back to the first couple of times you testified about the transaction under oath. You have in your package your oral deposition, which is a sworn statement given in a case in Arkansas in 1987, Ward v. Madison Guaranty. This was a dispute between the bank and Ward over an amount that he was claiming he was owed as a commission. Do you remember that case, Mr. Latham?

Mr. LATHAM. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who actually called you as a witness in that case, Mr. Ward or the bank?

Mr. LATHAM. Madison did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me direct your attention to your oral deposition at page 7, line 11.

Mr. LATHAM. Page 7?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. It's your oral deposition on page 7.

Mr. LATHAM. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Line 8:

Question: Were there regulations that prohibited Madison Financial Corporation from making that large of a purchase?

Answer: Yes.

Question: So it would have been in violation of those regulations for Madison Financial Corporation to have purchased the entire tract of land?

Answer: I think at that time, that would have been a problem.

Question: Do you recall how Mr. Ward's part of the purchase was financed?

Answer: I believe Madison Savings & Loan made him a loan on it.

Was that testimony true?

Mr. LATHAM. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to direct you to your trial testimony in the very same case, page 95. I'm referring to the page number in the top right hand corner, line 15:

Question: Was that purchase divided between Madison Financial Company and Seth Ward?

Answer: Yes.

Question: Why?

Answer: At the time, I don't believe the service corporation, that is, Madison Financial, was able to, under the regulations, buy the entire tract. It was a piece of land that both Seth Ward and Jim McDougal were very interested in, and thought that it would make an excellent development, and Seth took one half of it roughly and Madison Financial, the service corporation, bought the other half.

Then we continue on to the next page, 96, line 6:

Question: Now, you said that there were regulations that limited what Madison Financial Corporation could invest in. At this time, was Madison Financial close to the limit of investment?

Answer: I believe it was at that time, yes.

Was your testimony true in this?

Mr. LATHAM. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Finally, I want to direct your attention to a page from a response to interrogatory in this very case that was the response provided by Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. Were you contacted by lawyers in Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan to get information from them when they prepared to defend this case against Seth Ward?

Mr. LATHAM. Yes, I was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We were not able to get the entirety of these documents, but we do have page 12 of the interrogatories, and it indicates that the Savings & Loan, took the following position in 1987:

With knowledge, the plaintiff [Seth Ward] agreed to purchase a section of the undeveloped property in his name so that Madison Financial Corporation would not exceed its investment limitation imposed by the FHLBB of 6 percent of the assets of the corporation.

In effect, plaintiff [again, Seth Ward] acted as a straw man for the real estate purchase for the mutual benefit of himself, Jim McDougal, and other individuals.

Now were you shown these interrogatories during the course of the case?

Mr. LATHAM. I may have been. I do not remember seeing them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You do not remember. Do you remember that there came a point in time that an option was executed between

Mr. Ward and Madison regarding—actually, I see the yellow light is on and it is going to take a few minutes to develop this area of inquiry, let me stop and I'll pick it up when we return.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Good morning, gentlemen.

Let me start by asking you, Mr. Latham, whether it is correct that you have been interviewed and have given a statement to the Resolution Trust Corporation?

Mr. LATHAM. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And while you were not interviewed by Pillsbury Madison & Sutro, they were working for the Resolution Trust Corporation, were they not?

Mr. LATHAM. I don't know.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That was their client. In any event, there was a point during which the Independent Counsel, to your knowledge, expressed a desire that nobody further interview you? Are you aware of that?

Mr. LATHAM. I think I've read or heard that, but I've not had—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The communication of the Independent Counsel and this Committee was that you could not be interviewed until very recently, that is, the time of your deposition, so it's not at all mysterious that the Pillsbury firm might not have gotten around to interviewing you under those circumstances.

Now, Mr. Knight, you were not involved, were you, in the actual representation of Madison Savings & Loan back in 1985?

Mr. KNIGHT. I might have done some very minor work on it, but I really wasn't actively involved in it, no, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, when Mr. Massey testified before this Committee, I have to say, and it's nothing derogatory toward you or your presence, but he did not remember that you were present at the lunch with Mr. Latham, and did not mention that you were present. Mr. Latham, do you remember a lunch with Mr. Knight being present?

Mr. LATHAM. No, I don't.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So it may have been that there were more than one lunch and more than one meeting between Mr. Latham and Mr. Massey. Would you rule that out, Mr. Latham?

Mr. LATHAM. I have no recollection of it so I can't rule it out.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And of course, one might not fault you for having a failure of recollection. These events occurred 11 years ago and presumably were not central to your life at that time. Is that correct, Mr. Latham?

Mr. LATHAM. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Knight, would that be fair to say?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, Mrs. Clinton, in her interrogatory answers, indicated that there was a problem with respect to an outstanding bill that had not been paid by Mr. McDougal or one of his entities, prior to the work that the Rose Law Firm did for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. Are you aware of that?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let's get your recollection. Is it not the case that prior to your lunch pitching the business to Mr. Latham, that you met with the senior partner of the Rose Law Firm about the anticipated lunch that you were going to have, during which you were going to pitch the Madison Savings & Loan business?

Mr. KNIGHT. Well, sir, I would not describe it as a meeting. I think I just basically walked into his office and mentioned to him that Rick and I were going to go have lunch with Mr. Latham and see if there was any possibility of doing business there.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And Mr. Giroir, was it?

Mr. KNIGHT. Giroir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Giroir mentioned to you at that time, did he not, that there was an outstanding balance on the Madison Bank account with the firm?

Mr. KNIGHT. No, sir, that is not my recollection. All I can really recall about that is he mentioned to me that there had been some sort of a billing problem on work that had been done by the litigation section, and I don't believe he went into any detail about the specific nature of the problem.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did Mr. Giroir say, in substance, that there had been a dispute or some kind of argument about fees with respect to Mr. McDougal and the Rose Law Firm and that that had to do with some past representation of Madison?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, sir. He said something to that general effect.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that was very much up front and clearly on the mind of the senior partner at the Rose Law Firm at the time when you mentioned Mr. McDougal and Madison Savings & Loan?

Mr. KNIGHT. He did mention it to me, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now it is also correct that prior to the representation of the firm of this new client, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, a substantial portion of the outstanding bill was cleaned up. You now know that, do you not?

Mr. KNIGHT. At the time, sir, I did not have any knowledge of that. That is my understanding certainly based on what we've seen here today.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We now know that at some point apparently in late 1994, that $5,000 was paid toward that outstanding bill.

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, sir, that appears to be the case.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Bunch, and again I don't mean to imply that you should necessarily have a specific recollection of this, but is it correct that the Rose Law Firm had been trying to collect on that bill for representation of your bank since 1982?

Mr. BUNCH. I'm sure they had sent us some bills, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, let me put before you a letter dated October 10, 1983, and this has been Bates stamped 9179. Can we do that? You see a letter dated October 10, 1983?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That letter is addressed to Mr. McDougal and it's signed by C.J. Giroir, Jr., the senior partner at the Rose Law Firm at the time. And that letter says:

Dear Jim, pursuant to your discussion with Hillary Rodham Clinton, I am enclosing herewith a copy of our firm's statement, dated December 23, 1981, covering services rendered in connection with the matter of First National Bank of Huntsville v. Madison Bank and Trust.

Very truly yours, Joe Giroir.

So you acknowledge that from time to time there had been attempts to secure payment of this outstanding bill, and indeed according to Mr. Giroir's letter, Mrs. Clinton had been aware of and involved in that process?

Mr. BUNCH. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now with respect to the notes that have been shown of a Board meeting at Madison Bank in October 1984, it says, "Mr. Bunch will negotiate settlement with the Rose Firm." And those were the notes that were shown to you previously. Do you have a specific recollection of negotiating with anybody at the Rose Firm?

Mr. BUNCH. No. I don't remember it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Again that is not surprising, that was 11 years ago. But in any event, $5,000 was paid on that account at some point toward the end of 1984?

Mr. BUNCH. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me, in order to put into a little better context the testimony of Mr. Massey before this Committee on January 11, 1996, when I questioned him, I asked him:

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And it was your hope, was it not, that Mr. Latham and the Madison Bank would consult you on an official basis in your private capacity as a lawyer with the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. As I testified earlier, I actually pitched the business to him. I think the pitch was basically, gee, I'm—you are asking me all these questions. Why don't you hire us and put us to work on some of these things.

Let me stop there. Mr. Latham, when you were asked about Mr. Massey and his pitch, I don't think you recalled that he was teaching a course at that point that you were taking at the law school? You seem to think that you were all in law school studying for the Bar together?

Mr. LATHAM. At the same time; that's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right. So Mr. Massey's recollection seems to be a little more specific, but he said that you were being pitched on specific matters, and that had to do, according to Mr. Massey's testimony, with the regulatory issues that eventually Rose was hired to handle. Correct?

Mr. LATHAM. It's correct that that is what Rick said?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, do you recall that?

Mr. LATHAM. No, I do not recall that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You don't recall that. Do you recall that Mr. Latham was being pitched, Mr. Knight, for business?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, I do recall having a lunch and doing that, and I recall Mr. Massey being present at that lunch.

Mr. LATHAM. Let me back up and say that I do recall that Rick pitched the business in the sense that he wanted us to hire them to do legal work for us. I do not remember the lunch. I do not remember us—I do not remember being in a class that Rick was teaching, but I do remember him pitching business, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Fair enough. And to go on with Mr. Massey's testimony, I asked him:

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So very clearly you had it in mind that all of this advice would lead someday to signing up by the Rose Law Firm of this bank client?

Mr. MASSEY. I had hoped that, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, Mr. Latham told you in words or substance that he wouldn't object to that kind of relationship but it was not his decision to make?

Mr. MASSEY. That was the sense I got from the meeting, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And if I understand your testimony, you may have had a casual conversation with Mrs. Clinton about these circumstances, knowing that she was acquainted with Mr. McDougal?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, very possibly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. McDougal was the person to whom Mr. Latham referred as the decisionmaker on retaining a client?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So putting all of this together, there's no real mystery, is there, that there was an issue relating to securities work that you were being consulted on, on an informal basis, by Mr. Latham about that work, that you wanted to regularize that relationship to be an attorney-client relationship between the Rose Firm and the bank, that you may have mentioned it to Mrs. Clinton and that eventually the Rose Firm was retained by the bank to provide the service?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

That is not inconsistent with the recollection you have, to the extent you have a recollection of those events, is it, Mr. Latham?

Mr. LATHAM. No, it is not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The fact that Madison Savings & Loan was using another law firm as its principal outside firm has all been testified to here before, and indeed that lends credence to the notion that the Rose Firm had a very limited role in representing Madison Savings & Loan back in 1985.

We understand from the records that we have accumulated that the firm received approximately $22,000 in fees over an 18-month period. Is that consistent with your recollection, Mr. Latham?

Mr. LATHAM. I can't dispute it—the only recollection that I have of working with the Rose Firm was on the broker-dealer matter. The billing records, in my understanding, indicate that they have worked on several other matters, and I do not dispute that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There were other matters, yes, and we have been through all those with the members of the firm, the partners who have come here to testify, I think three in number. Do you have any reason to believe that the Rose Firm was paid for work that was not performed?

Mr. LATHAM. No. I have no reason to believe that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Knight, do you have any such reason to believe that the Rose Firm was paid as some kind of gratuity or gift, rather than for legal services performed?

Mr. LATHAM. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The $22,000 over an 18-month period, how would you characterize that in terms of whether that was a significant amount of business for the Rose Firm during 1985?

Mr. KNIGHT. That would be a relatively small matter for a corporate area.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now is it correct that really the only thing that you have any recollection about in connection with the representation by the Rose Firm of Madison Savings & Loan and how the business came in was this limited recollection about the lunch that you had back in 1984 or 1985?

Mr. KNIGHT. I do remember the lunch. I think as I said earlier, I also generally remember learning that business was in-house. I just don't know how it arrived.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And if I understand your testimony correctly, you don't recall what matter you worked on back then, but you think you may have worked on some minor aspect of some matter?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, sir. During the course of previous testimony, I reviewed some billing records, and I had one or two small entries where it appeared that Rick Massey had asked me to look over a document for him. I just really don't recall having done that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You didn't have any independent recollection, but when you went back and looked at the billing records, it indicated that you had put in some small amount of time, and you're prepared to say that you must have, if the records said that?

Mr. KNIGHT. That is correct, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. Fair enough.

Now, Mr. Bunch, there isn't any suggestion, is there, that the $5,000 that was paid in late 1984, according to these records, was some kind of a gift to the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. BUNCH. No. Rose did the appeal.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They had worked on an appeal? Do you know which lawyers at the Rose Firm worked on that appeal?

Mr. BUNCH. I believe, from the documents, Mr. Foster.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have any reason to believe that Mrs. Clinton was in any way involved in that appeal?

Mr. BUNCH. Not that I know of.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you work with Mr. Foster in connection with that appeal?

Mr. BUNCH. No. We had a bank attorney, a local attorney, that did most of that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So in terms of the fee dispute that has been talked about, the services were incurred in 1981, I believe; correct?

Mr. BUNCH. I believe that's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The bill was ultimately paid, or the outstanding balance on the bill was ultimately paid in 1984, it appears, toward the end of the year? Is that correct?

Mr. BUNCH. Well, yeah. We agreed on a $5,000 settlement, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The whole bill was $5,000-and-change?

Mr. BUNCH. I don't think the bill was really disputed; it was just that we were a little slow in paying.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Like 3 years?

[Laughter.]

Mr. BUNCH. On that order.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There is no suggestion, is there, that you felt that you didn't owe the money?

Mr. BUNCH. No, no.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The work was performed?

Mr. BUNCH. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You might not have gotten the result that you wanted—I don't even know what the appeal was about——

Mr. BUNCH. Well, that's true.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. —or any of that arcania back in 1981, but you were a little slow in paying because you didn't get a great result, I guess?

Mr. BUNCH. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And for other reasons?

Mr. BUNCH. Well, mostly because of result, I am sure; yeah. We weren't in any hurry.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You weren't in any hurry.

Mr. BUNCH. Obviously.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I think we can all agree on that. Some of us up here are lawyers and are familiar with that syndrome, and Senator Bennett always takes the client's view so he would be on the same page as you if he were here today, I am sure, in terms of the speed with which legal bills are sometimes requested to be paid and the resulting action by the client. But there was nothing untoward about the fact that the bill was ultimately paid?

Mr. BUNCH. No. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you recall any discussions with McDougal from your own recollection as opposed to looking at records regarding the payment of the outstanding balance of that bill?

Mr. BUNCH. No, I do not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So it wasn't any major event?

Mr. BUNCH. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Latham, it is correct, is it not, that Mr. McDougal was the one to make the decision concerning the matter about which Mr. Massey and apparently Mr. Knight pitched you?

Mr. LATHAM. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I take it you don't recall whether subsequent to the lunch you requested other information, or other guidance on an informal basis from Mr. Massey on whether he continued to try to get your nose into the tent, as it were, as a client?

Mr. LATHAM. I don't recall. It sounds like he did, but I don't recall.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. According to the Pillsbury Report, Mr. Chairman, this matter was addressed in the following way. "McDougal's Madison Bank"—that was the bank that you are associated with, not Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan which has been the subject of all of this litigation and discussion?

Mr. BUNCH. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And apparently Mr. McDougal had a thing for President Madison and kept naming his institutions after that President.

Mr. BUNCH. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. "McDougal's Madison Bank had refused to pay the Rose Law Firm in full for litigation services rendered in 1981 and 1982. Given this prior experience with McDougal, the Rose Law Firm could hardly be blamed for seeking advance payment before agreeing to represent the McDougal entity once again."

And indeed, was it not the case, Mr. Latham, that a monthly retainer was agreed upon, as opposed to a system whereby the firm would bill the client, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, for services rendered after the event?

Mr. LATHAM. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now in terms of the question of the funds which were paid over the 18-month period from 1985 to 1986, do you recall that a retainer balance was returned to Madison Savings & Loan at some point, Mr. Latham?

Mr. LATHAM. Yes, I do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Again according to the Pillsbury Report, "Even if all the retainer had been earned in fees, Mrs. Clinton's share would have been less than $20 a month over that 18-month period." The report also noted: "There is no evidence that the Clintons ever received anything like $2,000 a month from this engagement, and every reason to believe that they never received more than a trivial sum of money."

That conclusion is based on the fact that Mrs. Clinton's draw as a partner as applied to whatever formula was in effect in 1985 or 1986 at the Rose Law Firm would reflect that she would get a very, very small percentage of this $22,000 in fees over this 18-month period. Is that consistent with your understanding of how the firm operated at that point, Mr. Knight?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes. I think that is true, because the net profits for the firm were basically spread over 20-something partners.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. According to Mrs. Clinton's February 4, 1994, sworn interrogatory, she stated that Massey had come to her because he had learned that certain lawyers at the firm were opposed to doing any more work for Jim McDougal, or any of his companies, until he paid his bill; and then only if Madison Guaranty agreed to prepay a certain sum to the firm once a month to cover fees and expenses. First of all, let me ask you whether Mr. Massey was present when you approached Mr. Giroir and Mr. Giroir told you about the outstanding balance?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Excuse me? I don't believe that is what the witness said, that there was an "outstanding balance." That is not my recollection of the testimony.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Mr. Chertoff.

Was Mr. Massey with you when you had this conversation with Mr. Giroir?

Mr. KNIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you recall providing Mr. Massey with any information before your meeting about your conversation with your senior partner?

Mr. KNIGHT. I may have mentioned to Rick the conversation that I had with Joe Giroir, but I really don't recall.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Would you rule out the notion that either Mr. Massey had an independent conversation with Mr. Giroir or he took from your mention of your meeting with Mr. Giroir that Mr. Giroir, as the senior partner, had raised the issue of a fee dispute, or monies being owed to the firm, as being a concern when you mentioned that you were going to pitch this business?

Mr. KNIGHT. As I said, I really don't remember whether I had a discussion with Mr. Massey about that; and I don't know whether he had any discussions with Mr. Giroir about that issue.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But in terms of simply the way these things operate, the senior partner of the firm, as soon as you mentioned the fact that you were going to pitch Madison Savings & Loan business, mentioned that there had been a fee dispute with McDougal that had been unresolved? Correct?

Mr. KNIGHT. Well—that's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Since Mr. Giroir was a senior partner of the firm, that would be something on your mind? You wouldn't simply ignore that?

Mr. KNIGHT. I will agree with that. I think the only observation about that is that Rick Massey was a very junior associate at the time, and it would be rather surprising to me to find out he was having discussions with Mr. Giroir about that issue and I was having those discussions with Mr. Giroir because I was a partner.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. And Mr. Massey, being a junior lawyer, may have even taken the remark to be more significant than you viewed it at the time?

Mr. KNIGHT. That's possible, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the notion that the firm would want to clean up the outstanding fees owed to the firm prior to undertaking a new matter with the same individual who was involved with a new entity—that is, Mr. McDougal now as owner of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan—would not be unusual, would it?

Mr. KNIGHT. Well, again, sir, I am not really sure what the problem with billing was. I don't know whether it was a slow-pay problem. I don't know whether it was an uncollected balance problem. I just know that Mr. Giroir was concerned that there had been a billing problem.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Isn't it correct that Mr. Giroir told you that before the firm could undertake a new representation with respect to the same individual who had a fee dispute with the firm, that the old matter, the matter in dispute, would have to be addressed before the firm would go forward with the new matter?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, sir. I understood that if I decided to proceed with any kind of a new engagement for the firm, that Mr. Giroir wanted to visit with me about that issue; but no business came out of the lunch, and I never pursued the matter any further.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You didn't, but the matter was obviously pursued, and the bill was cleaned up, as we now know, before the new matter was accepted? Is that fair to say?

Mr. KNIGHT. I have no knowledge of that, other than of these records that have been shown to me here today.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The records seem to indicate that, and we are trying to reconstruct that, along with people's recollections of these events. But your testimony was, if I understand it from your deposition: "Mr. Giroir thought it was fine to go ahead and have the lunch, but if anything came of it and we decided we wanted to undertake representation on something, if we needed to, I needed to look into that to make sure it wasn't a problem."

Mr. KNIGHT. That is an accurate statement, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Knight, just to be clear, because you gave a very clear statement on this in the first round: Mr. Giroir did not tell you in 1985, there was an outstanding balance on the bill?

Mr. KNIGHT. He did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact we know, because the record is clear, the bill had been paid the previous October. But since Mr. Ben-Veniste raises the question of Mrs. Clinton's statement, I have to confess to you, Mr. Knight, there is something that is really puzzling about the central thrust of her statement which I think comes to light as you appear here. You see, when you read her statement, she says that Massey has got work, or requests to take on work, after this lunch; that Massey believes there is a billing problem; and therefore Massey comes to her and asks her to straighten it out.

Now, Mrs. Clinton later gave a somewhat different version I think after some of this had been developed during the hearings in her most recent interview, and I think introduced Vincent Foster into the mix, and her latest version said it was Vincent Foster who came to her.

But what really puzzles me is this: You were at the lunch with Mr. Massey. It seems to me as a matter of plain, simple, common sense that if there had been any offer of work to Mr. Massey from Mr. Latham, either at that luncheon or even afterwards, and Mr. Massey had any concerns about it, he would have gone to you. You were the expert in corporate and securities law, not Mrs. Clinton? Correct? She wasn't a securities partner; she was a litigator, right?

Mr. KNIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, you supervised other lawyers in the corporate securities area?

Mr. KNIGHT. Associates; yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was your seniority relative to Mrs. Clinton in terms of years with the firm?

Mr. KNIGHT. She would have been senior to me, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In number of years spent there?

Mr. KNIGHT. In number of years spent; yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How much junior to her were you?

Mr. KNIGHT. That is really hard to say, because I had come to the firm with several years of practice in the securities' law area under my belt. So time at the firm doesn't quite correlate to the level of seniority.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I see. So you had had practice experience at another firm?

Mr. KNIGHT. Well, sir, I had been at the Securities and Exchange Commission, and I had clerked for a Federal Appellate Court, also.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Oh, I see. You actually came from the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, sir, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you really were an expert in securities?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Not that I was doubting that before but since we are in Washington, everything seems magnified when it occurs here. Did you supervise securities work and corporate work at the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You supervised Mr. Massey on things?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So, given your relationship with Mr. Massey, he's working under you, you are the expert in securities, you attended the lunch with him, you taught the course with him in which Mr. Latham was a student, as a matter of courtesy and common sense I would think that, even if we assumed for a moment that Mr. Massey had been offered work by Mr. Latham and that there was a billing problem, he would come to you. Wouldn't you agree with me that, from your knowledge of Massey and the way the firm works, you would have expected if any work came to Massey as a result of this lunch, he would have come to you about it?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, sir. I think that is a fair statement.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He never did come to you about it?

Mr. KNIGHT. Not that I recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I also want to pursue another issue raised by Mr. Ben-Veniste early on. Mr. Latham, Mr. Ben-Veniste asked you whether it was your understanding that the Pillsbury people did not interview you because the Independent Counsel asked them not to. Mr. Knight, do you have any reason to believe the Independent Counsel ever told or asked the Pillsbury people not to interview you?

Mr. KNIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Bunch, do you have any reason to believe that the Independent Counsel ever told the Pillsbury people not to interview you?

Mr. BUNCH. I don't even know—who are the Pillsbury people?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think that answers the question. So there is nothing that I can imagine, whether it is a matter of a request of the Independent Counsel or anything else, that should have prevented the people from Pillsbury Madison over the 2 years that they worked on this matter from talking to you in much the same way as we are talking to the two of you here. You certainly cannot think of any reason why they could not have talked to you; right?

Mr. KNIGHT. No, I can't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Knight, you weren't concealing the fact that you were at the lunch that the Pillsbury Report spent a considerable amount of effort analyzing, but they never talked to you; is that right?

Mr. KNIGHT. They never talked to me, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Bunch, in fact, you also were involved in the loan with respect to Whitewater Development, Lot 13; correct?

Mr. BUNCH. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was the loan to Mrs. Clinton personally for purposes of developing that lot?

Mr. BUNCH. I believe that was what it was for, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that was another area the Pillsbury people might have explored, but they didn't. I have to say, I mean, in the last couple of weeks by my count we have identified at least a dozen witnesses who have had direct and intimate dealings with some of the issues that make up this matter, and none of them were talked to by the Pillsbury people in 2 years. So I am sure that that is a matter the Committee will be eager to explore tomorrow when I think, with the benefit of this additional information, we assess the nature of that work.

Now let me go back to you, Mr. Latham, because we were on the issue of this transaction for Castle Grande, which was identified by Madison Savings & Loan in its own interrogatory responses as a deal in which Mr. Ward acted as a straw man. I am correct that, for Mr. Ward's participation in this transaction, he received a commission; is that right?

Mr. LATHAM. That is my recollection. At this point, I don't know if I remember that from that point in time or if I have read it somewhere; but that is my understanding, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The commission was not in the form of cash, but he was given his commission by being allowed to keep a couple of tracts of the property he had taken in his name after the rest of that property was ultimately taken back by Jim McDougal; right?

Mr. LATHAM. Again, I don't have a recollection of that. That is—in the deposition yesterday they read me something; I can't remember what it was, but it indicated that. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, let me read to you from your own sworn testimony back in 1987, if you get to your trial testimony at page 100. I am referring to the number in the upper right-hand corner. I know we have two sets of numbers.

Mr. LATHAM. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At the very bottom, line 19:

Question: Did any money actually change hands?

Answer: No. The consideration, in essence, was already given. The money was already owned to Seth as commissions. Seth did not pay cash to the Service Corporation for this. This was evidence of a debt that was already owned by the Service Corporation to Seth.

Question: Now was Mr. Ward concerned also because there were Federal examinations at Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Answer: I think that may have been of some concern to him, as well.

Question: I want you to look at now what has been introduced as Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, an option to purchase tracts 27 and 28 of Holman Acres. Can you tell the jury about the circumstances surrounding the Financial Corporation taking an option out on this property?

Answer: Yes. I know this is confusing, but the loan was done really at that time in lieu of the option. The option, more concretely or more accurately reflects the nature of the transaction, that being that the Service Corporation owed Seth $300,000 in commissions. In the initial purchase of all of that property, Seth retained tracts 27 and 28 of Holman Acres as his commission, which was later to be bought by the Service Corporation. The option allows the Service Corporation to buy the property from Seth. Thus Seth receives the $300,000 and the Service Corporation would have the property.

Now that was true testimony you gave there, right?

Mr. LATHAM. Yes. At that time I had—

Mr. CHERTOFF. A better memory?

Mr. LATHAM. I don't know that I remember it at that time, but I worked with Madison's lawyers and we went over this transaction in detail. It is pretty confusing, but that was my understanding at this point in time when I gave the testimony; that's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your understanding of the transaction was that the option was designed to be the way Seth Ward would cash in his commission; that he had held back a couple of tracts of land, and the deal was understood from the very beginning that he would then later receive $300,000 for the land which would be his commission; right?

Mr. LATHAM. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And do you know if the land was actually worth $300,000?

Mr. LATHAM. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, wasn't it really worth something more like a hundred-and-something-thousand dollars?

Mr. LATHAM. I have no idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then your answer goes on to say:

The note was done very quickly to make sure that that debt was evidenced should something happen to anybody to protect Seth. The note, however, would have left, if that was the way it was finally structured, would have left Seth with the $300,000 plus the property, which was not the intent of the transaction.

Now, I take it what you are saying here is, the original way they wanted to get that commission to Ward, for his being the straw man on this deal, was by having him hold back some property, and then he would receive $300,000 for it. But when they got nervous because the examiners were in the bank, they quickly decided to go the route of issuing a note and having him borrow money secured by the property so that if there was some problem at the bank because of the examiners, Seth would be protected. Is that the basic gist of it?

Mr. LATHAM. I think that is a fair conclusion. At this point I am in the same shoes that you are. I have to go by whatever I said at that trial because I have no recollection at this point. In fact, I don't think I did then. We spent many hours going through many documents to piece that together. So this is—I would rely on whatever was said at this trial, and what you are saying is a fair conclusion from that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you this, then. Do you know why Mrs. Clinton would have been involved in drafting this option?

Mr. LATHAM. I have no idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think that concludes it for me, Mr. Chairman, except I just wanted to observe for the record that we had originally hoped to have Mr. Henley—that would be Susan McDougal's brother—come in. The reason is because we have been exploring at some length the difference between the statement that Mrs. Clinton gave concerning how she recalled the work being brought in, the statements various witnesses have said, and of course, Mr. McDougal's original allegation that the work was arranged through a meeting he had with Mr. Clinton back in the late summer of 1984. I gather there was some evidence that Mr. Henley may have been in the vicinity of that, and Mr. Henley's lawyer indicated to us that he would exercise his Constitutional right not to testify.

I do think I want to make one last observation and maybe get any comment on this, if anybody has a comment. This bill that was paid in October 1984, was outstanding for some considerable period of time. Then, all of a sudden Mr. McDougal decided he was going to pay it off. It is interesting to look at the coincidence of dates. I mean, Mr. McDougal has maintained at least for some considerable period of time that Mr. Clinton came by to ask for some help in terms of the Rose Law Firm in late August 1984. It is not very much after that that Mr. McDougal finally indicates he is going to pay this outstanding bill.

Mr. Bunch, did Mr. McDougal ever tell you why it was that in October 1984, all of a sudden he decided he was going to pay this bill that had not been paid for some period of time?

Mr. BUNCH. I wouldn't know, other than we may have had a little more money at that time than we'd had previously.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Actually, my understanding is from looking at the minutes that you have provided us with, that in the November Board meeting someone pointed out that paying that bill actually resulted in—or was a contributing factor to a decrease in the profitability of the bank. So apparently the decision to pay the bill actually had an adverse effect on the financial picture of the bank for that quarter. Would you agree with me?

Mr. BUNCH. That was part of the reason that we hadn't paid it. We figured Rose had—we didn't have anything against Rose, but we figured they had more money than we did.

[Laughter.]

Mr. CHERTOFF. That is probably true. But something motivated him to do that in October, just within 2 months of when McDougal has told us there was a visit with Mr. Clinton. Mr. Chairman, that is the end of my questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, the fact of the matter is that the bill had been outstanding for 3 years, Mr. Bunch?

Mr. BUNCH. That's the fact.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Whether it had an impact on the bottom line or not, sooner or later you owed it and you were going to have to pay it; right?

Mr. BUNCH. Sure.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If Mr. McDougal told you this was the time to do it, that's fine?

Mr. BUNCH. It was time to do it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now in terms of what has been brought out in this last round of questioning, is it not correct, Mr. Latham, that with respect to the IDC transactions that, to the best of your recollection, Mrs. Clinton had nothing to do with any of that for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. LATHAM. With respect to that transaction?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Mr. LATHAM. I have no recollection of her involvement, no.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In connection with the option agreement that Mr. Chertoff has brought up, the conclusion of Pillsbury Madison & Sutro in their Supplemental Report of February 25, 1996, states:

While Mrs. Clinton drafted the May 1, 1986, option, nothing proves she did so knowing it to be wrong. The circumstances of the work point strongly toward innocent explanations and the theories that tie this option to wrongdoing or to the straw man arrangements are strained, at best.

And finally, with respect to all of this "who-struck-John" about bringing the client in the door 11 years ago, the conclusion of the Pillsbury Report is that:

Mrs. Clinton's recollections and Richard Massey's recollections differ in some respects, but for present purposes the differences are not material. For present purposes, it makes little difference who was right. There is no hint of fraud or intentional misconduct in either version, and the mere act of retaining the Rose Law Firm did not harm Madison Guaranty in any respect.

I have nothing further.

The CHAIRMAN. Very good.

First of all, let me thank the three witnesses.

Mr. Knight, where do you work now?

Mr. KNIGHT. Stephens, Inc., sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, the investment bankers?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are their securities expert?

Mr. KNIGHT. Well, sir, I run the Legal Department. I am their General Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, you are General Counsel?

Mr. KNIGHT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, they are very fortunate.

Mr. KNIGHT. Thank you, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Very fortunate. I have to tell you that I am very impressed with the clarity and truthfulness. This is not an easy matter, I understand that. I think we all understand that and I just want you to know.

Mr. Bunch, I want to thank you for coming in. Again, none of this is pleasant. You find yourself in here trying to recall events that go back years and years, and what did or didn't take place. We thank you for your candor and for coming forth.

Mr. BUNCH. Thank you, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Latham, you find yourself dragged in here after years and years, and it is understandable, obviously, that you can't go back and recall with definiteness those things that took place back in 1983, 1984, 1985, and so we appreciate your testimony.

I will make this comment. I found this new information as it relates to this business about the outstanding legal bill, that the records clearly indicate that that matter had been taken care of, and it was no longer an outstanding legal bill.

I think that from the testimony of both Mr. Latham and Mr. Knight in recounting what took place at the lunch, there was no business that came out, or resulted from that lunch. It is just absolutely very clear.

We have a number of matters. We will write up our reports, Counsel, on that. We have been—

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I just want to say, I don't think that that last statement is clear. Obviously, we have a differing view about it.

The CHAIRMAN. Probably we will do that, and that will be the wrap-up in our reports where we will reflect on that.

I am going to excuse the witnesses at this time.

We have two outstanding matters which I would like to try to resolve. One was the question of—

Senator SARBANES. Are we finished with the panel?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. I want to thank the panel very, very much.

Mr. KNIGHT. Thank you, sir.

Mr. BUNCH. Thank you.

Mr. LATHAM. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. We have two important matters to resolve, and I would hope that we could do that. The first is the question of getting the fingerprints from the FBI on the billing records. I would hope that we could send out a subpoena to produce all documents referred to in Attachment A. That reads:

All records, regardless of format, including, but not limited to, any reports, memoranda, correspondence, and records in any other medium, that reflect, refer, or relate to any analysis conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of fingerprints found on records reflecting the Rose Law Firm's representation of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association that were discovered in the White House by Special Assistant to the President Carolyn Huber.

I would hope that we could agree to send the subpoena without us having to convene all the Members for that purpose.

Second, there is a question—

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, shall we discuss that first?

The CHAIRMAN. That is number one. Then there is a second question with respect to a communique that we received from Mr. Hale's lawyer. I think that we should respond to that by way of asking them for a time certain before we take any further action.

Senator SARBANES. I have not seen this letter.

The CHAIRMAN. I think we are down to, in terms of who the Committee may or may not be bringing before us, or what information we are seeking, I think those are the last two. It is a matter of Hale, and it is a matter of getting these materials. So I am going to ask that—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right now, the status of things, with respect to Mr. Hale, is that a subpoena has been served on Mr. Hale for his appearance next Monday for deposition, and next Wednesday for hearing testimony. Now his lawyer has asked for additional time, and I guess that is what is pending before the Committee. He has not responded formally about whether Mr. Hale will attempt to assert a Fifth Amendment privilege.

And, Mr. Chairman, we have done some research on that issue with respect to the appropriateness, in view of the fact that he did testify at length in Little Rock on the same issues we will question him about here were he to appear.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. I am saying that we have to resolve this. I would hope that we could issue the subpoena for the fingerprints today without there being a necessity of convening all the Members, because I do not think there is any controversy. The clock is ticking. If we are not going to do it today, then tomorrow I will recommend that we hold a hearing for the purposes of issuing the subpoena.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, there is kind of a step in between that, perhaps, since we are doing this in public, that the public doesn't know about, and that is the letter we received from the Independent Counsel, which has directed the FBI in this matter, where they have refused to turn over the material to us.

Senator SARBANES. I think if a subpoena is going to be sent, it should be sent to the Independent Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. No. No.

Senator SARBANES. I do not think—

The CHAIRMAN. Well, then we will just—

Senator SARBANES. —have not seen this, but let me just make a statement.

The CHAIRMAN. We will convene the Committee for consideration of the subpoena.

Senator SARBANES. I do not think we should politicize the FBI. And I do not think you should place the Director of the FBI, Mr. Freeh, in what I would regard as an untenable position.

We sent a letter to the Independent Counsel asking for this report. I gather they have declined to respond, and therefore I think the subpoena should be addressed to the Independent Counsel. I do not think you should, in effect, play a political game with the FBI. I feel very strongly about this. I mean, I have just seen this a little bit ago, but I feel very strongly about this. I don't think the FBI ought to be politicized.

If a subpoena is going to be sent, it ought to be sent—we sent the letter to the Independent Counsel making the request. They declined. If you want to follow-up on that, I think the subpoena should be sent to the Independent Counsel. We ought not place Director Freeh in what in a sense is an untenable position and sort of portray him in some way as being uncooperative. These FBI agents are working for Starr.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes, there has not been one iota or indication that the FBI has not been cooperative. I do not understand how we could come to that conclusion, or how my indicating that it is necessary to send out a subpoena because the Independent Counsel, as indicated, really, that would be the only manner in which to proceed.

Senator SARBANES. Who indicated that?

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to ask Mr. Chertoff to respond.

Senator SARBANES. Well, no, Mr. Chairman, let me make a point.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff, would you—

Senator SARBANES. No. Let me develop the point. When we asked for the O'Neill 302 records. We asked those of the Independent Counsel. They did not furnish them. We did not make the proposition that we should subpoena the Director of the FBI. I do not want to politicize the FBI. I know a political game—I mean, obviously this has a heavy political content, these hearings, and has had all through the consideration, but at least let's not drag the FBI into that political pit.

The letter we sent on this matter was sent to the Independent Counsel. If you do not get an appropriate response from the Independent Counsel and you want to follow-up, I think the subpoena should be sent to the Independent Counsel and you ought not put the Director of the FBI in this position.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Chairman, it might illuminate this if I were to point out, first of all, that there is no intention of putting the FBI Director in any position. It is always the practice, as a matter of law, when you subpoena records that are created by an agency, the subpoena is directed to the agency that created the records.

In my years as a U.S. Attorney, if somebody subpoenaed FBI reports, even if they were in the possession of the U.S. Attorney's Office, the subpoena is directed to the agency which produces them. It is a matter of just the technical way you properly do it. It is not a matter of trying to individually make the Director come in and do something.

Let me also observe that when we have requested voluntarily that information be provided, we have sent the letters to the Independent Counsel. But when we have subpoenaed materials that were Department of Justice materials, we have subpoenaed them from the Department, whichever organ of the Department had the materials, and then with the understanding that the Independent Counsel would make the decision. There is no suggestion here that Mr. Freeh is going to make the decision, or the FBI is going to make it on their own. They clearly are going to have to get guidance and defer to the Independent Counsel.

Senator SARBANES. Then why don't we send the subpoena to the Independent Counsel?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because the Independent Counsel is not the appropriate designated recipient of subpoenas.

Senator SARBANES. No. You are setting up a stand-off between Freeh and the Independent Counsel, and you are bringing Freeh into the political arena.

The CHAIRMAN. That is not—

Senator SARBANES. I do not approve of that.

The CHAIRMAN. Excuse me. Excuse me.

Senator SARBANES. I think the FBI ought—

The CHAIRMAN. Now wait. Now wait.

Senator SARBANES. —not be politicized in this manner.

The CHAIRMAN. You know, the only person who is bringing up politics is you, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. We sent the letter to the Independent Counsel. No. The politics was brought up—

The CHAIRMAN. The politics—no, no.

Senator SARBANES. —by putting this subpoena in front of us to Mr. Freeh, the Director of the FBI.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, no. You know what, we have been discussing this matter and attempting to get a resolve of it, and we can't get a resolve of it. So I am saying to you that either we are going to get a resolve of getting these fingerprints or getting the information. We have agreed to this, but we are not getting a satisfactory resolve. That is the only reason I have been forced to say that we are going to have to come to a conclusion in the manner by which we make a good-faith effort to obtain this information. Now this is not an attempt to have—

Senator SARBANES. It certainly is.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I am sorry that you interpret it that way. Our actions are designed to attempt to get these records. We are not attempting to put the FBI or anybody else on the spot. This will have to be a decision that is made by the Independent Counsel. But since the FBI is the custodian of these records, we believe that is the correct manner in which to proceed. There is precedent for this in every other instance with every other Department, including the FBI.

This is not an attempt to politicize this. Indeed, I would suggest that Counsel call the Independent Counsel for guidance. Ask them, get a determination as to who they believe the proper party or parties would be to issue a subpoena. Now if that is something we can agree to, and if he believes that he will accept the service on the basis of that and then make a determination, fine. We will proceed in that manner. But what I am suggesting is that we have to get this done because the time is running out.

Senator SARBANES. Well, Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. Now, I have bent over backward, and I resent the Senator saying that we are attempting to politicize it. You know that is not right. I have gone to extraordinary lengths in order to move these hearings, in order to come in before the date of the 14th, to try to accommodate all the witnesses at the same time. I have also indicated that I would hope that Mr. Chertoff and Mr. Ben-Veniste would be able to deal with the other outstanding matter with respect to Mr. Hale.

I think Mr. Hale's attorney should be advised that on a particular date certain we want an answer one way or the other whether he can come in or he can't come in, and then we will determine what to do thereafter.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, the letter was sent from Mr. Chertoff and Mr. Ben-Veniste to the Independent Counsel requesting they provide the Special Committee with a copy of the report of the analysis, assuming one were done.

The CHAIRMAN. That's right.

Senator SARBANES. Now apparently they have not been forthcoming in response to that request. If that is the case, then it seems to me the follow-up should be a subpoena addressed to the Independent Counsel and not to Mr. Freeh, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which would then put Freeh in a difficult position vis-à-vis the Independent Counsel. These FBI agents, if they did this analysis, did it for the Independent Counsel. I mean, I am prepared to send a subpoena to the Independent Counsel. I am prepared to follow up on the rejection of our letter.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Senator SARBANES. But I don't want to—I am not going to be a party—

The CHAIRMAN. Don't raise your voice to me, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. I want to be very clear.

The CHAIRMAN. Don't raise your voice.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I want to be very clear about this.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. But just don't raise your voice, please.

Senator SARBANES. I am not going to be party to dragging the FBI into the political arena. I just do not think that is a proper thing to do.

The CHAIRMAN. You know that a summons is—

Senator SARBANES. I just saw this thing. It was just laid on me.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, you know what—

Senator SARBANES. The letter was sent to the Independent Counsel, and the follow-up, then, if we are not satisfied with his response with respect to a subpoena, ought to be to the Independent Counsel and not to the Director of the FBI.

The CHAIRMAN. The fact of the matter is that, for technical reasons, this is commonplace. This is done regularly. I think Mr. Chertoff has explained that this is not unusual, and I can't understand the thrust, except to attempt to make the Committee's work look like it is something that we haven't agreed on together, and that was to get whatever information that those documents contain as it relates to who may or may not have handled them. That is all it is.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. But I will—I will—I will—and we may as well get it out here now—be delighted to sign and authorize a subpoena, with your concurrence, to the Independent Counsel. If the Independent Counsel indicates to us, and I would hope they would indicate sooner rather than later because we have time, that he believes for legal, technical reasons that they have to be sent to the FBI, that we could then get concurrence not to put the FBI in a position, but rather legal counsel, the Independent Counsel, will have to make a judgment and a determination that we would then proceed with both, if that is necessary. Now, I can't offer anything more in good faith. If the Senator will join with me in that, I would proceed in that manner.

Senator SARBANES. I will send a subpoena to the Independent Counsel, but I don't think you ought to structure a situation as this subpoena to the Director of the FBI would do, by placing the FBI in an intolerable position between this Committee and the Independent Counsel. These FBI agents are working for the Independent Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. We will agree, Senator—and this is only a way to get a final determination as to whether or not the Independent Counsel is going to oppose even the subpoena.

We have to make the formal request. We have no problem with that. This is not an attempt in the final analysis, this is a decision that will be made by the Independent Counsel. But for technical reasons, you serve the subpoena on the agency that has made this report, that has this information. It is just a technical thing. Now if the Independent Counsel objects, I am willing to say that this is not a decision being made by the FBI. We will make it. I will stipulate that in the record.

Senator SARBANES. I see.

The CHAIRMAN. So maybe we have at least arrived at a determination that we will not expect the FBI to make this decision; that it is going to be made, obviously, with respect to what the Independent Counsel feels is appropriate. Would that be fair?

Senator SARBANES. I think we should direct the subpoena to the Independent Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me say to you that I have no problem with doing that—

Senator SARBANES. Let's do that, then.

The CHAIRMAN. —but technically, they may reject that. Then we will have to come back again and issue a subpoena to the Director of the FBI. I hope that they won't do that. But let me say that I will direct, with your concurrence, that we send—

Senator SARBANES. Well, then they should be clear that they are issuing these instructions to the FBI Director.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. Fine.

Senator SARBANES. The FBI Director ought not to be put in the position of appearing not to be cooperative when the basis—

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, I agree—

Senator SARBANES. —of the noncooperation is the Independent Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, we agree on that.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I am pleased to hear that.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, it took an awful lot to say that we agreed on that. But just so we have it on the record.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It is clear, Mr. Chairman, that if somebody has the report, it is clearly the Independent Counsel who has the report. We want to get the report, and we want to go by way of subpoena.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They have turned us down on that and on the 302 reports, if we want to subpoena both of those, I think we should do that.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. I believe that Senator Sarbanes and I have come to an agreement. First, we issue the subpoena to the Independent Counsel. Second, we issue a subpoena to, I would hope, to the FBI Director with the clear understanding that if they do not respond, obviously this is a determination that will be made by the Independent Counsel.

This way, at least, we have met the technical. We understand that the subpoena is being issue. I would ask, with this understanding, because it meets the technicalities of the law that require it goes to the head of the agency that has done this work. Only for those purposes. With the clear understanding that the FBI will not be placed in a position where it might be at variance with the opinion of the Independent Counsel.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, no, no, no. I don't accept the proposition that it is a technicality with regard to it going to the FBI. I think that we should send the subpoena to the Independent Counsel——

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to authorize——

Senator SARBANES. —to leave the FBI out of it, and see what response we get from the Independent Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. By the way, we have repeatedly subpoenaed the FBI for documents, repeatedly, or the Department of Justice. This is not the first time. I have to begin to think that this is an effort to stall these hearings, for whatever reason—I don't know why—and to deprive us of the information.

Senator SARBANES. I don't think we have subpoenaed the FBI, have we, for work product?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, we have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. My recollection is, all along when we have subpoenaed documents from the FBI or the Department of Justice, actually we usually send it to the Attorney General. There was an objection raised to that by Mr. Ben-Veniste because there was a concern that we were trying to make her look like she was in the middle, we then went——

Senator SARBANES. Yes, and the FBI.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —to the FBI.

Senator SARBANES. I think that we should go to the Independent Counsel. I don't think you should put these other people in the middle. I don't think the FBI, professional law enforcement agency, ought to be put in that posture. Now, you know, we have offered a perfectly constructive——

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. —path here to try to get at these records. And that is, to send the subpoena to the Independent Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. We are not saying, "Don't do anything."

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. We are saying, follow-up in that regard.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you, please.

Senator SARBANES. Politicize the FBI——

The CHAIRMAN. I guess the hearing was too tranquil for you. [Laughter.]

Senator SARBANES. Well, I am not going to be part of politicizing the FBI.

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't you stop this nonsense. Nobody has talked about politics except yourself.

Senator SARBANES. You are the one who put this subpoena in front of me.

The CHAIRMAN. You are the only person saying politics, politics, politics. I think you cry too much.

Now if the Senator wants to join with me in the issuance of a subpoena requesting this information—and I will ask both Counsels to call Mr. Starr's office and speak to them—that is fine. We will do that. If the Independent Counsel says technically, and I don't know, he may say, fine, I will make that request. I hope we do not have to come back and do this again and issue a subpoena to the FBI, for these records. But if we have to, then we will have to do that.

I will take your course. Tomorrow, then, we will have to see what the response is. And if you will join with me in asking for this information, then I would suggest that we do that and ascertain what the position of the Independent Counsel is.

Senator SARBANES. So we will issue a subpoena to the Independent Counsel?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. We will issue a subpoena to the Independent Counsel.

Senator SARBANES. Fine. Not to the Director of the FBI.

The CHAIRMAN. However, if they indicate that technically it has to go to the Justice Department or to the FBI Director, then I would hope the Senator would join with me privately in issuing that subpoena. Senator?

Senator SARBANES. I want to see what the Independent Counsel says and what the basis of his response is.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Senator SARBANES. I mean, I am not, you know——

The CHAIRMAN. I have said——

Senator SARBANES. Have you had a discussion with the Independent Counsel about this?

The CHAIRMAN. No, I have not. I would hope that they would agree. But if they say technically you have to go through this process, I hope that you would join with me again in issuing this without having to get a vote of the full Committee. I would hope that would be the case.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I want to see what the OIC says.

The CHAIRMAN. We understand.

The Committee stands in recess.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, with respect to Mr. Hale?

The CHAIRMAN. We stand in recess.

[Whereupon, at 12:03 p.m., the hearing was recessed, to reconvene at 9:30 a.m., Friday, May 17, 1996.]

[Appendix supplied for the record follows:]

CONFIDENTIAL

Interrogatory No. 17: With respect to the Rose Law Firm's representation of MADISON GUARANTY in 1985 and 1986:

(a) ~~Was Mrs. Clinton the lawyer responsible for obtaining this business for the Rose Law Firm? If not, who was?~~

The Rose Law Firm had first represented Jim McDougal in about 1981 with respect to litigation arising out of his purchase of the Bank of Kingston. I did not work on the 1981 matter, but I recall that Jim disputed the amount of his final bill and refused to pay the entire amount requested.

To the best of my recollection, the president of Madison Guaranty, John Latham, who was a friend of an associate at the Rose Law Firm, Richard Massey, became interested in having Madison Guaranty issue some kind of preferred stock to raise capital. Latham had spoken to Massey about doing the related legal work. In the spring of 1985, Massey came to see me because he had learned that certain lawyers at the law firm were opposed to doing any more work for Jim McDougal or any of his companies until he paid his bill and then only if Madison Guaranty agreed to prepay a certain sum to the firm once a month to cover fees and expenses. Under such an arrangement, the firm could be assured that Madison Guaranty was staying current with regard to paying for the new work that the firm might do for it.

I believe Massey approached me about presenting this proposal to Jim McDougal because he was aware that I knew him. I agreed to go see McDougal. I visited him at his office on April 23, 1985, and told him that I understood Latham wanted Massey to do some work for Madison Guaranty, but that our firm would not let Massey proceed until the previous bill was paid and some kind of prepayment arrangement was worked out for new work the firm might do. As I recall, McDougal agreed that Massey could proceed with the work and informed me he would arrange to pay the past due bill. McDougal also indicated that he was agreeable to some kind of prepayment arrangement.

(b) Was Mrs. Clinton the partner in charge of this work? If not, who was?

I was not "in charge" of the Rose Law Firm's work for Madison Guaranty in 1985-86, although I was the billing partner. During the early part of Massey's work, he kept me generally advised of what he was doing and may have sent me drafts of the documents he was preparing. I was not, however, an expert on securities law. I believe that Massey consulted with members of the firm's securities department.

(c) Was Mrs. Clinton the partner responsible for billing MADISON GUARANTY? If not, who was?

I was the billing partner for the Madison Guaranty representation which the Rose Law Firm undertook in the spring of 1985.

(d) Who negotiated the retainer arrangement with MADISON GUARANTY whereby, starting approximately in April 1985, it paid the Rose Law Firm $2,000 a month? See document RLF2 03062 through RLF2 03063. DESCRIBE the circumstances in which MADISON GUARANTY agreed to enter into that arrangement.

Please see my response to Part (a), supra. I don't recall who negotiated the "retainer arrangement" (this was in fact

MINUTES OF MADISON BANK AND TRUST BOARD MEETING

The regular board meeting of Madison Bank and Trust met Tuesday, November 27, 1984 at the Madison County Telephone office at 6:00 PM. All members were present, and Chairman McDougal announced a quorum was present and called the meeting to order.

The first order of business was the discussion of the Auditor's Report and Management Letter. The Payroll Procedures and the Incomplete Loan Accounts were discussed. It was suggested that the accountant instruct bank personnel in a method that would more accurately reflect withholding at each pay period.

The bond was discussed. The high rate was of concern to the members. The Board instructed President Bunch to send a letter to State Bank Commissioner to determine another possible course of action.

The FDIC Report of Examination of August 24, 1984 was discussed. This report was discussed at board meeting in September in Fayetteville Report again reviewed and discussed. Letter from Mr. Halvorson was made part of minutes on motion by Austin Smith, seconded by Julie Baldrige. It was approved unanimously.

The minutes of the September meeting were read, reviewed, corrected, and approved unanimously. The loan portfolio was produced by Mr. Bunch, with trouble loans highlighted, and reviewed by Board. With loan reserve ratio in mind, it was believed the reserve was adequate based on this.

The Daily Statement was read, reviewed, and approved unanimously. It was noted that earnings were $69,048 with a L/D Ratio of 51% and the Capital Ratio of 7.6%. The reduction in earnings was attributed to heavy accounting fees for the audit and a payment of legal fees from 1983 lawsuit. President Bunch noted it was impossible that the Bank's Capital Account could be evaluated because the accrual system on CD's was not daily. Beginning now, we will move to find a method for daily accrual. It also was noted that a $225,000 CD was accepted

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

FRIDAY, MAY 17, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 9:40 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING COMMENTS OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

I am going to ask our three witnesses if they would stand for the purposes of taking the oath.

[Witnesses sworn.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee is now in the process of concluding its public hearings, and today we will hear from three partners in the law firm of Pillsbury Madison & Sutro. The firm prepared a report for the Resolution Trust Corporation regarding the possible bringing of civil claims against persons involved in the failure of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan.

In February 1994, the RTC hired the Pillsbury law firm. I think that it is fair to say that when the White House learned that Mr. Stephens, a Pillsbury partner and former U.S. Attorney, would head the investigation, there was a storm of protest.

Today, the Special Committee will hear, among other things, what Mr. Stephens' role was as it relates to the report. We will also examine the extent to which Pillsbury's work was monitored and directed by officials at the RTC.

It also appears that there were a number of witnesses that Pillsbury could have interviewed but did not, and the Committee wants to know why and how it is that these witnesses, which may have had relevant knowledge, were not, to our knowledge, contacted by Pillsbury. These people include the bank officials involved in the loans that financed the Whitewater arrangement, the Arkansas regulators that oversaw the Madison Guaranty and Rose Law Firm attorneys and accountants for the Clintons.

Senator Sarbanes, do you have a statement?

Senator SARBANES. No.

The CHAIRMAN. If any of the witnesses have any statements that they would like to make to the Committee, we would be very pleased to receive them.

[No response.]

Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Good morning, panel.

Mr. Stephens, I would like to begin with you. You are a former U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia, correct?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF JAY B. STEPHENS
PILLSBURY MADISON & SUTRO

Mr. STEPHENS. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were a member of the Watergate Special Prosecution Team?

Mr. STEPHENS. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were a former Assistant U.S. Attorney for 5 years, I believe?

Mr. STEPHENS. Approximately.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were a Senior Member of the Justice Department for another 5 years?

Mr. STEPHENS. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you are now a partner at the Pillsbury Washington office?

Mr. STEPHENS. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now in February 1994, the Pillsbury firm was retained by the Resolution Trust Corporation to investigate whether the RTC could bring a civil cause of action in connection with the failure of Madison Guaranty, is that right?

Mr. STEPHENS. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Madison Guaranty was the S&L which was run by a man named James McDougal?

Mr. STEPHENS. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Patterson, you are the head of the litigation department at Pillsbury?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF CHARLES E. PATTERSON
PILLSBURY MADISON & SUTRO

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you are based in Los Angeles?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were the partner in charge for Pillsbury of this Madison/RTC matter?

Mr. PATTERSON. I was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And am I correct that the cost to the RTC of the investigation your firm conducted, including fees of outside consultants and disbursements, was just under $4 million?

Mr. PATTERSON. I believe that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Pillsbury prepared a number of lengthy reports for the RTC?

Mr. PATTERSON. We did. It was one report broken up into several sub-reports.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Two reports dealt with the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. PATTERSON. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Another two reports dealt with Whitewater Development Corporation?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Ericson, you are a partner in Pillsbury's San Francisco office?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF BRUCE A. ERICSON
PILLSBURY MADISON & SUTRO

Mr. ERICSON. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were the principal author of both of the Rose Law Firm Reports?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were the principal author of both of the White-water Reports?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Stephens, you are aware of substantial public attention, particularly in the media, linking the authorship of these reports to you?

Mr. STEPHENS. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Last night I looked on the computer and found 429 stories associating the reports with you. Would you be surprised to learn that?

Mr. STEPHENS. I haven't looked. I don't know.

Mr. GIUFFRA. These are not Jay Stephens' Reports, am I right?

Mr. STEPHENS. That's correct; I did not write these reports.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You did not draft the reports?

Mr. STEPHENS. I did not draft the reports.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were not the managing partner on this project; is that correct?

Mr. STEPHENS. That is correct; Mr. Patterson was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were not the billing partner on this project?

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. Ericson was the billing partner.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You did not review or comment upon any of the Rose Law Firm Reports prepared by your firm?

Mr. STEPHENS. That is correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you cannot agree or disagree with any of the conclusions or statements contained in those reports?

Mr. STEPHENS. I have no basis to agree or disagree with the conclusions of those reports.

Mr. GIUFFRA. With regard to the final Whitewater Report, which was issued in December 1995, you did not review that report?

Mr. STEPHENS. That's correct; I did not review that report.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you are not in a position to agree or disagree with any of the statements contained therein?

Mr. STEPHENS. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you conduct any depositions in connection with Pillsbury's investigation for the RTC into the failure of Madison?

Mr. STEPHENS. No, I did not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you conduct any witness interviews?

Mr. STEPHENS. I had one contact with a potential witness related to a petition we were filing to seek access to Grand Jury material which was in the possession of the FBI and the then-Special Counsel. I contacted that witness to obtain supporting factual predicate for that petition.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But statements such as "A prominent Republican, former U.S. Attorney, Jay Stephens headed the inquiry," those are incorrect?

Mr. STEPHENS. That's correct; they are incorrect.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now after——

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. Patterson headed the inquiry.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Excuse me, sir?

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. Patterson headed the inquiry.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now after public statements identified you as the author of these reports, did you discuss with your partners the need to correct the record?

Mr. STEPHENS. On one or two occasions, I believe I raised, most likely with Mr. Ericson, some concern I had that the factual record was not clear, or that I felt it was inappropriate, that somehow or other either I was getting the credit or the blame for the reports, since I hadn't written the reports. I also raised the matter with a couple other partners in our firm, including a member of our executive committee.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What were you told in response to your request that you would like to correct the record?

Mr. STEPHENS. I think as a general matter the sense I got was that the client did not want us to get involved in making public statements about the firm's involvement.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The client would be the RTC?

Mr. STEPHENS. Correct. From the beginning, our firm's position had been that this was a report or these were reports of the firm, not of any individual; that the firm had been retained, not any particular individual; and that likely over a period of time, press interest would dissipate and the reports would stand on their own.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I would like to direct your attention back to the beginning of the retention of the Pillsbury firm by the RTC. That was in February and March of 1994?

Mr. STEPHENS. February 1994.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now in that initial period in February 1994, who at the Pillsbury firm did the work at the partner level, as far as you could tell?

Mr. STEPHENS. The most immediate contact was with Mr. Ericson and myself who I think were most intimately involved during February 1994. It may have been that Mr. Patterson was involved. I believe I had very little, if any, contact with Mr. Patterson during that first month.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would you have been the Pillsbury lawyer who attended the initial meeting with the RTC about the engagement?

Mr. STEPHENS. When we obtained notice or authority that we had been retained—that initially was done orally I believe—I was advised that I should meet with I believe it was Mr. Gabrellian from the RTC to begin this process. That would have been the second week of February, probably a Tuesday; I think it was the 8th.

Mr. GIUFFRA. February 8th? I believe that's when it was.

Mr. STEPHENS. There initially was some concern because the statute of limitations with respect to any potential claims against Madison was due to expire I believe on the 29th of February of that same year. So there was some concern about an urgency to apply resources, evaluate potential claims, and begin the process.

I was on-site in Washington, and I initiated the meeting, or we scheduled the meeting; Mr. Gabrellian and I scheduled a meeting for I guess it was the 8th of February.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In fact, hadn't Mr. Gabrellian, prior to this initial meeting, contacted you about possibly having Pillsbury get involved in this engagement for the RTC?

Mr. STEPHENS. I had received a call from Mr. Gabrellian. I don't remember today whether it was a live telephone call or whether it was an extended voice mail message, but Mr. Gabrellian had called and indicated that they were interested in retaining the Pillsbury firm. He was seeking certain information regarding potential staffing, potential capacity to deal with the investigation, and asked for a call back.

Either subsequently to that call, or shortly before that call from Mr. Gabrellian, I had also received a call from Mr. Ericson essentially discussing the same general matter.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now at the outset of this engagement, did you understand that the RTC wanted someone with your prosecutorial experience to be involved in this engagement?

Mr. STEPHENS. Well, I am not sure what the RTC wanted. The sense I had, and I think the sense perhaps Mr. Patterson and Mr. Ericson had—but they can speak for themselves and the RTC can speak for itself—was this was an investigative issue; there were issues relating to a potential liaison and coordination with on-going criminal investigations with respect to Madison; and it would be helpful to have someone who had a substantial amount of investigative experience, and particularly someone who had a substantial amount of criminal investigative experience, to be part of the team in this investigation.

Mr. GIUFFRA. There was also an interest in having someone who was located in Washington, DC involved in the matter?

Mr. STEPHENS. That is correct. I think one of the interests the RTC had in retaining our firm was not only our prior work for the RTC but also the fact that we had a Washington office. The agency obviously was located here; a substantial amount of the documents were located here; and it seemed apparent that there would be a lot of back and forth with respect to a Washington base for the conduct of this investigation.

Mr. GIUFFRA. During February, did you attend meetings with the personnel at the RTC on a regular basis?

Mr. STEPHENS. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Are you aware of any meetings that were held between the RTC and Pillsbury during February and March of 1994, at which you were not an attendee?

Mr. STEPHENS. During February and?

Mr. GIUFFRA. February and March 1994?

Mr. STEPHENS. I am not aware of any specific meetings. I would have attended most of those meetings. There may have been occasions when Mr. Ericson was back, where he would have met with Mr. Gabrellian on a particular problem, or perhaps Mr. Arbit or Mr. Igo or some other staff member from the RTC. But as a general rule, I was having some regular contact with the legal staff of the RTC, along with Mr. Ericson.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I would like to put up on the Elmo, a case plan and budget that was prepared by Pillsbury. If we could just turn to the second page of that document, which is a memorandum?

Mr. STEPHENS. Do we have those documents?

Mr. GIUFFRA. You should have those in your packet. The memo is dated February 16, 1994. If you could just turn to the second page. What was the purpose of this case plan and budget, as far as you know, Mr. Stephens?

Mr. STEPHENS. The RTC required a case plan and budget before undertaking a retention of outside counsel. This was a general preliminary overview of how this matter might be staffed and the general scope of the engagement as we understood it from a very preliminary point of view.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This memorandum was from Mr. Patterson, yourself, and Mr. Ericson?

Mr. STEPHENS. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was it your understanding, at the outset of the engagement, that you, Mr. Patterson, and Mr. Ericson would be the three partners at the Pillsbury firm who would handle this matter for the RTC?

Mr. STEPHENS. It was my understanding we would be three of the partners who would be involved in the matter. I think if you look at the case plan, there's one or two other partners I believe whose names are mentioned. I think the sense was there would be three partners who were relatively involved in the—

Mr. GIUFFRA. Principally involved.

Mr. STEPHENS. Principally involved, but we would need other resources perhaps to staff various parts of the investigation.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now if I could just turn your attention to page 5 of the case plan, and it indicates, for example, that you would be on the PM&S team responsible for looking at the effect of bankruptcy discharges.

Mr. STEPHENS. That's what it says.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Also liaison with other investigations?

Mr. STEPHENS. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You would also be involved—and I think this is an important area—in depositions with regard to personnel who might be targets of your investigation.

Mr. STEPHENS. Yes, that's what it indicates.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would that be consistent with your background as a former prosecutor?

Mr. STEPHENS. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The RTC wanted the fact that Pillsbury had been engaged to remain confidential, right?

Mr. STEPHENS. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The firm did not put out a press release?

Mr. STEPHENS. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I would like to direct your attention to the third week of March 1994. Do you recall press accounts, sir, concerning the retention of Pillsbury, and in particular you, with regard to this matter for the RTC?

Mr. STEPHENS. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that, among other things, those press accounts discuss the fact that on February 25th, George Stephanopoulos, who was a senior White House official at that time, had a conversation with someone by the name of Josh Steiner who was the Chief of Staff of the Treasury Department about the fact that Mr. Stephanopoulos was angry that the RTC had hired you to conduct this Madison investigation?

Mr. STEPHENS. I believe that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put up a document which is familiar to Members of the Committee from the 1994 summer hearings, this is the diary of Mr. Steiner, the Chairmen referred to at the outset of this engagement, and I would like to turn everyone's attention to the second page of the diary entry that we have before us. I'll just read the passage which is marked in yellow:

Harold and George then called to say that BC was furious.

Harold presumably being Harold Ickes and George being George Stephanopoulos.

They also asked how Jay Stephens, the former USA, had been hired to be outside counsel on this case. Simply outrageous that RTC had hired him, but even more amazing when George then suggested to me that we needed to find a way to get rid of him. Persuaded George that firing him [presumably Mr. Stephens] would be incredibly stupid and improper.

Do you recall seeing that diary entry at the time that it was publicized in the news accounts?

Mr. STEPHENS. I may have. I don't know if I have seen it in full text. I have seen references to it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now the news accounts were approximately in the third week of March?

Mr. STEPHENS. I believe so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. They were, I think you testified at your deposition, the press had staked out your house on a weekend?

Mr. STEPHENS. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So there was a lot of publicity surrounding the fact that you had been retained. Prior to these press accounts, you were meeting with the client on a regular basis, right?

Mr. STEPHENS. I think that's fair to say. With regard to the work we were doing, Mr. Ericson and I, when Mr. Ericson was back in Washington, would meet with them. We would probably meet or talk on a regular basis because there was, as I indicated earlier, some urgency, particularly during February, because of the statute problem. There was a lot of contact to try and get up to speed and identify areas where we needed to focus our investigation and identify what documents we needed to collect in order to pursue that investigation. I think that followed through at least into the early part of March.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were also receiving internal memoranda that were being prepared by your firm with regard to the engagement?

Mr. STEPHENS. Yes, I was copied on most of those memorandum.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And correspondence with the client?

Mr. STEPHENS. I believe I was copied on that, yes. To the extent there was some—for example, the memo you cited earlier.

Mr. GIUFFRA. After those press accounts in the third week of March 1994, am I correct that your role in this matter deteriorated sharply?

Mr. STEPHENS. I think if looking at——

Mr. GIUFFRA. Diminished. Excuse me.

Mr. STEPHENS. Looking at the overall relationship to the engagement, probably half or more than half of my work on this engagement was done in February and March of 1994. Subsequent to that, it diminished substantially, and probably by the summer of 1994, I was virtually disengaged from the matter.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were no longer routinely sent drafts of the documents?

Mr. STEPHENS. I can't be sure about that. I don't know how many drafts were prepared and what I may or may not have received. Early on I would have received drafts. We had a number of meetings but my sense is that subsequent perhaps to the summer of 1994, I probably did not get copied on a lot of the analyses that were being done.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put up on the Elmo a document that the Committee has prepared from billing records that we obtained from the RTC. This document reflects the hourly billings. On the left hand, it says hours, and on a monthly basis, it goes across.

Mr. Stephens, this is a document prepared by the Committee from documents we obtained from the RTC. Mr. Stephens, you are denoted in this chart in red. Am I correct that during 1995, you billed no time on this matter?

Mr. STEPHENS. 1995?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Yes.

Mr. STEPHENS. I believe I may have billed 3 hours.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In January?

Mr. STEPHENS. In January 1995, maybe it was 3½, something like that. It would have been the first couple days of January.

Mr. GIUFFRA. From then until the Rose Report was issued in late February 1996, you billed no time on this matter?

Mr. STEPHENS. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Your time, as we can see from the red chart while you were billing, approximately 70 hours in February and over 50 hours in March, it declines then going forward. Do you see that?

Mr. STEPHENS. I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And that's consistent with your recollection of the amount of work that you did?

Mr. STEPHENS. Yes. After February and March, I had two or three discrete areas that I was asked to participate in; but particularly after the summer, as you can see, that participation became very minimal.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The work, according to this chart, was being done primarily by Mr. Ericson and Mr. Patterson for the remainder of the engagement?

Mr. STEPHENS. There were a lot of other individuals involved as well from the Pillsbury firm. I think Mr. Ericson was carrying a lot of the daily load, and Mr. Patterson was carrying a lot of the daily load, but there were a number of other attorneys from the firm that worked on this as well.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did there come a time in November 1994, when you received a draft of the preliminary report to the RTC which was entitled, "Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association and Whitewater Development Company"?

Mr. STEPHENS. I received a copy of a preliminary report in the Whitewater matter. I presume it's the same one you're referencing. I don't know for sure.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This report concerned primarily Whitewater and its relationship to Madison Guaranty?

Mr. STEPHENS. If I remember correctly, that's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You spent approximately 10 to 12 hours reviewing this report?

Mr. STEPHENS. Yes. If I remember it correctly, Mr. Ericson, who had drafted the report, sent me a copy and asked me to take a look at this; let me know if you have any thoughts; what do you think.

I was not formally copied on it, if I remember correctly, but he sent me a copy to ask for my thoughts. I read through the report, which took approximately, I guess, 10 hours or thereabouts, and then provided some comments to Mr. Ericson.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The time entries the Committee has received indicate that on November 7th and November 9th, you and Mr. Ericson had two meetings. Mr. Ericson's November 9th time entry reads: "Conference Stephens on presentation to Kulka [the General Counsel of the RTC], ways to improve interim report. . . ." Does that sound consistent with what the meetings were about that you had with Mr. Ericson?

Mr. STEPHENS. That does, but I don't have a specific recollection. My memory was Mr. Ericson was going to make a presentation; or he had come back to Washington to make a presentation to Ms. Kulka, and he either stopped in and we chatted for a little while about what he was going to do or how he was going to do it; or it may be that either at that time, or when he came back from that meeting, we talked a little bit about the preliminary report.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Your meeting with Mr. Ericson was approximately an hour?

Mr. STEPHENS. I would estimate approximately an hour.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you give Mr. Ericson some comments on the draft that you had received of the Whitewater Report?

Mr. STEPHENS. I think I provided him some general views. As I indicated, he provided it to me to give him some thoughts, and I provided some general thoughts to him.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What general comments on the draft Whitewater Report did you provide to Mr. Ericson?

Mr. STEPHENS. I remember one went to style. Mr. Ericson's very dry sense of humor was reflected in the report. I suggested that while it was interesting, perhaps from an official report point of view, he might want to tone the humor down.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you give Mr. Ericson some more substantive comments?

Mr. STEPHENS. I think I indicated two or three other general areas that I might have suggested that the report didn't necessarily address.

One I think was a general area. The report didn't necessarily reflect the totality of the issues that were related to Madison because it was looking at Whitewater in isolation, rather than looking at the mosaic of real estate transactions that Madison was involved in and how Whitewater might tie into or relate to that. That was a general issue. I think Mr. Ericson recognized this was a report on Whitewater, but my general comment or concern was that it not be taken out of context—this was only a piece or part of a mosaic, and perhaps it would be helpful to put it into that context.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you have a sense, from looking at the investigation early on, that Pillsbury should look at the pattern of activity surrounding and emanating out of Whitewater, out of Madison, and various McDougal entities?

Mr. STEPHENS. I think that was an area that we considered in examining how we should go about conducting this investigation. What was the most efficient way to do it; and then, obviously, what was the best way to do it in terms of developing legal theories.

From the inception, it appeared there were a number of real estate transactions that Madison was tied into, or Mr. McDougal in particular. Madison had financed a number of real estate transactions or helped develop a number of real estate transactions through subsidiaries or related companies.

So the question was, do you look at each one of these transactions separately and individually as a potential claim where there may be negligence—of course the standard was much higher now with the extender statute, intentional conduct or fraud—or do you try to collect all of them, analyze all of them as part of a pattern of activity, and determine whether or not you could establish a pattern of fraud by using the bank essentially as a source of capital or as a mechanism to develop investments in a variety of real estate transactions.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So if you looked at one transaction in isolation, you might not find a claim, but if you looked at it as part of a mosaic, you might have a claim that the RTC could pursue against persons associated with some of these transactions?

Mr. STEPHENS. Either that, or the claim in any particular transaction may not rise to the magnitude that you would want to file a claim on that one standing alone; but as part of a pattern, you may say, well, this does rise to the magnitude to justify filing a claim. If, in fact, the facts bore that out. Obviously, that was what part of the investigation was to determine.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you talk to Mr. Ericson about the discussion of the Whitewater transaction contained in the draft report?

Mr. STEPHENS. I believe I made some general comment that, in reading through the report, it either did not highlight or did not focus on the potential liability that might arise from a difference of equity participation by the partners in the Whitewater venture. That is, at the outset, the partners may have contributed an equal sum of money, but then over time and the development of the Whitewater venture, one of the partners continued to add capital; the other partners didn't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That would be that Mr. McDougal continued to add capital while the Clintons did not? Was that your recollection?

Mr. STEPHENS. That is correct. And in doing that, the partners still appeared to maintain the same general equitable interest, or legal interest, in the partnership; as a consequence, one partner was benefiting substantially by the financial contributions of the other; this may have really raised a question about liability.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That did not appear to you to be a normal transaction where one partner, in a fifty-fifty partnership, put in substantially more than the other partner?

Mr. STEPHENS. Well, normal is a relative term. It probably at least raised enough questions to suggest that it would merit some scrutiny.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you mention to Mr. Ericson that you thought the report was too narrowly focused on an accounting analysis of documents and did not rely sufficiently on witness interviews?

Mr. STEPHENS. My memory was, or is, that I made some reference to the fact that I thought the report was essentially an accounting analysis; that it didn't reflect what witnesses would say about these transactions; and that obviously witnesses might have some added perspective or input in terms of trying to understand those transactions. I think at that time, if I remember correctly, the witnesses had not yet been interviewed, or potential witnesses had not yet been interviewed.

Mr. GIUFFRA. From your work on this matter in February and March of 1994, did you have a sense that the RTC was closely monitoring the work of the Pillsbury firm?

Mr. STEPHENS. I can only really speak to my own activity. I would say they were relatively hands-on as a client.

Mr. GIUFFRA. For example, did they indicate to you, don't make a phone call until you check with them?

Mr. STEPHENS. There were a number of times, for example—I'm just thinking of the 6(e) petition for access to Grand Jury material—where we would sketch out a course of conduct, and then the pattern would be: Should I go ahead and call now; don't call them yet; we'll give you a call and let you know if you should call; it is OK to call; so I would call; let us know what he says; and I would call back and tell them what was said; OK, now proceed to the next step. So it was, I would say from my general experience—

Mr. GIUFFRA. It was closely controlled.

Mr. STEPHENS. —it was pretty hands-on.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you have an understanding at the outset of the engagement that Pillsbury would be the outside counsel to the RTC?

Mr. STEPHENS. Yes. That was my understanding. The RTC traditionally hired outside counsel to conduct investigations of failed savings and loans.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And the RTC wanted the Pillsbury firm to provide guidance to the agency, correct?

Mr. STEPHENS. Well, I think they also needed resources, legal resources, obviously to conduct that investigation. While they had their own legal staff, they needed additional resources to do this, in part because of the timeframe that was involved because of the potential statute of limitations problem, and in part because of the magnitude of the investigation. They needed outside counsel essentially to handle that matter for them. But they obviously were the client and it was their responsibility.

Mr. GIUFFRA. They would make the final decision about whether to bring a suit or not?

Mr. STEPHENS. They had the responsibility and the authority to do that. Outside counsel does not have that authority.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Pillsbury, at least as you understood at the outset, was not being retained as an independent counsel to the RTC?

Mr. STEPHENS. That may be a matter of semantics. My sense was we were outside counsel. We obviously weren't independent counsel in the sense that we were a public agency, an independent counsel or a special counsel or a special public body. We were operating in a private sector context. We were retained by an agency to assist them in their investigation. They had the authority and responsibility to make those decisions.

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to ask, Mr. Stephens, with the indulgence of Senator Sarbanes, that Mr. Giuffra, because the little red light is on, be permitted to ask you one more question, so that we can keep some continuity, and then come over to the Minority side.

Go ahead.

Mr. GIUFFRA. At the outset of the engagement, did you have the sense, sir, that RTC officials were feeling a substantial amount of political pressure with regard to how they were conducting their activities regarding Whitewater and Madison?

Mr. STEPHENS. I think the RTC was feeling some pressure. They had looked at a number of these transactions before. They had, I think, in many cases concluded they didn't necessarily merit civil action. Because of the press attention, the Congressional attention, and the Congressional scrutiny, I think they recognized that these transactions needed to be re-evaluated in a more comprehensive way. So they were generally feeling some pressure to undertake a subsequent examination of these transactions.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson and Mr. Ericson, I think anyone present here would note that very few questions have been directed to you. You were the lawyers in charge of this representation for the RTC. Is that correct, Mr. Patterson?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson, would you start by explaining the nature of your practice and the size and the scope of Pillsbury Madison & Sutro's law practice?

Mr. PATTERSON. At the time of this engagement, in the beginning of 1994, I believe the firm was approximately 600 to 650 lawyers. We were what was called a full-service law firm. Approximately half of those lawyers were engaged in litigation or trial work. My personal experience had been in 1994, as a trial lawyer, since my graduation in 1966 from law school.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So you had been in practice for more than 25 years at the time of this retention of Pillsbury Madison & Sutro?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, I had.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was it your understanding that the RTC was looking for a large, full-service firm which could devote its energies and resources to providing a comprehensive and reliable investigation of the issues and make recommendations to the RTC?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's one of the things that they wanted, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you have personal experience in banking litigation in representing the RTC or its predecessor the FDIC?

Mr. PATTERSON. Personally I had been involved, together with Bruce, in a case entitled RTC v. Dean, which was a case that involved the Governor of Arizona in a failed thrift. Bruce, before that, had been involved in Lincoln Savings. I had been involved in other banking matters.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The Dean and Lincoln Savings cases were two very substantial and well known cases brought regarding bank fraud. Is that fair to say?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, it is.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Both of those cases required very substantial allocation of resources?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And both of those cases involved certain political elements, it's fair to say, is it not?

Mr. PATTERSON. They were considered by the RTC to be sensitive matters in which they wanted discretion on the part of the attorneys that they hired.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, is it not fair to say, that your successful representation of the RTC and the FDIC in connection with those matters was clearly the motivating factor in the selection of your firm for this assignment?

Mr. PATTERSON. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ericson, would you agree with that?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Stephens, do you disagree with that?

Mr. STEPHENS. Both of them are very experienced and talented, and had worked previously for the RTC.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ericson, you had very substantial prior hands-on experience in litigating matters for both the RTC and the FDIC, is that correct?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes, with one correction. I hadn't done work for the FDIC. I have done work for the FSLIC, the Bank Board, and the OTS dating back to around 1986.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. These are all acronyms relating to banking-related litigation?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So, Mr. Stephens, you had never tried a bank fraud case in connection with either representation of the FDIC, the RTC, the OTS, the FSLIC, the FHLBB, or any of these other agencies relating to the Federal Government. Is that right?

Mr. STEPHENS. A civil bank fraud case?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Pardon me?

Mr. STEPHENS. Civil, criminal, both?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right.

Mr. STEPHENS. I had not tried personally a bank fraud case. I had done a number of bank fraud, or participated in or supervised, a number of bank fraud investigations.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The fraud matters that you had handled as an Assistant U.S. Attorney were they in the neighborhood of $40,000, $60,000, $80,000 frauds?

Mr. STEPHENS. The fraud cases I was involved in as an Assistant were not significant; as U.S. Attorney and at the Department of Justice, there were a number of substantial bank fraud investigations, including the BCCI case.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you try that case?

Mr. STEPHENS. I did not try the case. The case did not go to trial.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The only manner in which you represented the RTC, prior to the assignment in this case, you did not try the case, is that correct?

Mr. STEPHENS. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In that case you lost a summary judgment motion which meant the case was over?

Mr. STEPHENS. That was a case that Mr. Ericson and I were both involved in. He was the billing partner in that case as well.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And so that was your only prior experience in private practice?

Mr. STEPHENS. In the bank fraud area, correct. I had additional experience in private practice.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, you had just recently joined the firm of Pillsbury Madison & Sutro prior to this representation that the firm obtained from the RTC, isn't that so?

Mr. STEPHENS. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When did you joined the firm, in November or December?

Mr. STEPHENS. December.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In December, and the case came in February.

Mr. Patterson, in connection with the staffing decisions were you responsible for those decisions along with Mr. Ericson?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, I was.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask the bottom line question because there's been some dancing around this. The notion put forth here by the import of the questions is that in some way, your conclusions were the result of some untoward pressure from some outside force, be it the RTC, or anyone else. Can you categorically answer that, as we get started here in reviewing what your conclusions were and the basis for them?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes. Our conclusions, as reached in our reports, were not influenced in any untoward way by any outside source.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did anyone tell you what your conclusions had to be?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did anyone review your preliminary conclusions and say that they need to be altered?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you consider that the almost $4 million that was expended on this project really represented unfinished business, an incomplete report, or conclusions based on inadequate investigation?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir, I do not. I believe we did a complete report with respect to what we were asked to do by the client.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ericson, do you have any comment?

Mr. ERICSON. No. I agree with everything that Mr. Patterson said. The one thing I would note is that the almost $4 million figure is slightly inaccurate. It's closer to $3 million.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It includes work done by outside consultants and other firms, does it not, when we get up to almost four. I think $3.8 million is the figure we had.

Mr. ERICSON. I have not seen that figure. The figure I am aware of is between $3.1 and $3.2 million and that figure includes outside consultants.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson, did anyone tell you to take Mr. Stephens off the case?

Mr. PATTERSON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ericson.

Mr. ERICSON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, how would you have reacted to such a suggestion?

Mr. PATTERSON. I would have reacted to the—well, I know how I would have reacted to the suggestion. I would have said no, that staffing of this matter is up to us and that is our determination.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It is correct that given Mr. Stephens' public statements when he left the position of U.S. Attorney, that it might be anticipated that his involvement would occasion some comment in the press. Were you prepared for that, Mr. Patterson?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't think we understood, living in California, how quickly the press would take the slant that this was the Jay Stephens' investigation. Our practice in RTC v. Dean had been not to talk to the press, and not to make any statement about our representation or who was doing it, or anything of that nature. We continued that in this case. The client expected discretion and we determined to proceed that way.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, perhaps the magnitude of the reaction was surprising to you, but you knew, I take it, from decisions made in hiring Mr. Stephens that he had made some controversial statements upon his leaving the position of U.S. Attorney?

Mr. PATTERSON. We understood that. That did not have anything to do with hiring Mr. Stephens one way or the other.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I understand that. Obviously, you did, in fact, hire Mr. Stephens.

The statements that were made at the time of the revelation that Mr. Stephens was working on this project included statements that Mr. Stephens had expressed political ambition. Mr. Stephens, had you, in fact, indicated that you were open to consideration of running for the U.S. Senate from the State of Virginia?

Mr. STEPHENS. During the summer months of 1994, late spring and early summer, I considered whether or not I would be interested in serving as a candidate for the U.S. Senate in Virginia. After thinking that through and exploring it briefly, my wife and I decided with a small family that we would be better served by being in the private sector, perhaps private practice. I had served a long time in public service and my interest was to focus on my family and spend some time in the private world.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to your announced receptivity to entering the world of politics, had you not set up an exploratory committee for a run at the U.S. Senate from the State of Virginia?

Mr. STEPHENS. I'm not sure it was an exploratory committee, but there was a little exploratory effort to take a look at that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. According to The Washington Times of December 15, 1993, "Mr. Stephens has set up an exploratory committee and handed out pamphlets but he has not committed."

Mr. STEPHENS. It is fair to say that I had a little pamphlet, as we were looking at this, to have some biographical information. I am just not sure technically whether there was an exploratory committee actually set up or not, but I view that as sort of a technical point. The fact was I had taken a look at this, and people had asked me to take a look at this. I did some preliminary analysis of it, talked to a few people, and—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK, I do not think we need to go through all of that detail.

Mr. STEPHENS. —I decided that this was not really the avenue that I wanted to pursue.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What I would like to explore is the fact that you were active in Republican politics, and, indeed, you held some position in local Republican politics as a county committeeman; is that correct?

Mr. STEPHENS. I am a member of the Fairfax County Republican Committee. I am not sure exactly when I joined that, but there's about 500 or 600 people that serve on that committee, so it's hardly a small group of people.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In connection with your exploratory run for a nomination for the Senate from the State of Virginia, was Kenneth Starr also an individual who had expressed an interest in running for the same seat?

Mr. STEPHENS. I think you'll have to talk to Mr. Starr.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You don't remember?

Mr. STEPHENS. Well, my sense was there were rumors that he might have an interest as well, but I'm not sure how extensive that interest was.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was he one of the people you talked to?

Mr. STEPHENS. I probably talked to Mr. Starr at one point during the course of the summer.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In connection with the possibility of a run for the Senate seat?

Mr. STEPHENS. Well, that was one area, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And in the course of your representation of the RTC, did you have occasion to talk with Mr. Starr at any point?

Mr. STEPHENS. I think on just one occasion. Shortly after his appointment, I made a brief phone call to him in which I said either congratulations or commiseration, but good luck and do the best job you can.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Your responsibility, according to these billing records, was for liaison, to some extent, with the Office of the Independent Counsel. This 6(e) is not very mysterious. What 6(e) means is that there are materials in the possession of a prosecutor's office which may or may not have been the subject of a Grand Jury subpoena. And your job, in part, according to our review of your time records, seems to have focused in the early stages primarily on the question of obtaining records from the Office of the Independent Counsel. Is that fair to say?

Mr. STEPHENS. One of the primary activities that I was involved in during the February to May period was the preparation of a petition for access to Grand Jury records held by the Special Counsel and the FBI.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is it fair to say that after March 1994, that your involvement representing the RTC was relatively minimal.

Mr. STEPHENS. I think that's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. According to our records, you spent a total of 339 hours and some fraction billed to the Madison investigation for the RTC. Do you take issue with that number?

Mr. STEPHENS. You have the records, I don't.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What was your hourly billing rate for civil litigation at that time when you joined the firm?

Mr. STEPHENS. I think my billing rate was approximately $285 an hour.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson, is it correct that a negotiation was had with the RTC whereby reduction in the hourly billing rates was effected?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's correct. I think Bruce handled that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is that correct, Mr. Ericson?

Mr. ERICSON. Let me explain a little. We had a contract with the RTC, as does every firm that represents it, and that contract involved a discount off our normal rates.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So according to our records, Mr. Stephens was billed out at $200 an hour. Is that correct?

Mr. ERICSON. That was true for part of the engagement. Our contract expired in the normal course in October 1994, and we renegotiated it, and we renegotiated for a higher rate thereafter.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I am using a conservative $200 figure in terms of Mr. Stephens' involvement. I come to a number at $200 in dollar amounts of $67,940 that was billed and I presume paid by the RTC with respect to Mr. Stephens. If you subtract the months of February and March, after which, by Mr. Stephens' account, he did minimal work for the RTC, you're left with 293 hours at $200 an hour, again, a conservative estimate in view of the possible fluctuation in the rates, which comes to $58,650 by my arithmetic.

Mr. STEPHENS. I'm not sure those calculations are correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, they may not be.

Mr. STEPHENS. You indicated the total hours were?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. 339.75.

Mr. STEPHENS. If you subtract February and March, there was approximately I believe 135 or 140 hours in February and March?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. 146 hours, which is 193, you are right. It only proves once again my arithmetic is wanting.

Mr. STEPHENS. Approximately half of the time was spent in February and March; if the total was $67,000, about $30,000 was spent from April until December.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, maybe a little more, but April to December, let's even call it $30,000, OK.

One of the things that you all looked at was Mrs. Clinton's involvement in representing the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. There has been a challenge here to the notion that her 60 hours spent over 15 months, was not minimal. In fact, your conclusion was that clearly Mrs. Clinton's involvement in representing Madison, when she was at the Rose Law Firm some 10 or 11 years ago, was relatively minimal. Is that correct, Mr. Ericson?

Mr. ERICSON. Well, I think I tried to stay away from adjectives. It was what it was. It was on the order of the magnitude you have indicated, and that amount of time was spread out over roughly 15 months.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The total amount of her billing, 60 hours at $100 an hour was $6,000, about a tenth of what Mr. Stephens' billed out over a shorter period of time. I'm not taking issue with the question of relative minimality here, but I think we need to put into context what has been I think blown out of proportion in terms of Mrs. Clinton's involvement in the representation of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, lo these 11 years ago.

Mr. Patterson, is it fair to say that Mr. Stephens was not ignored or deliberately cut out of anything that he asked to be able to do in connection with this representation?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ericson, is that your view?

Mr. ERICSON. I have no contrary view. I should add that staffing decisions were made by Mr. Patterson, not myself.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Stephens, was there some deposition that you expressed the interest in taking, or some matter that you expressed a desire to become involved with that you were foreclosed from pursuing by your partners?

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. Patterson handled all the staffing decisions. I indicated I was ready, willing, and able to do whatever I needed to do to assist him. It was his choice as to whom he wanted to handle what aspects. I did not reach out specifically and demand that I do something. He was a senior partner of the firm, the Vice Chairman of the firm, head of the firm's litigation, and obviously someone who was in charge of this engagement.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Stephens made the point that he thought it would be a good idea to explore the totality of the different loans that emanated from Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, and not focus simply on the Whitewater transactions. Is that something you ignored doing, Mr. Patterson?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir. In fact, one of the documents that we were shown this morning, the case plan, dated February 16, 1994, on the first page, paragraph (a) says that we are going to do exactly that. That we will be looking for RICO violations and for overall connection among all of the various real estate loans. So at that point in time, 1 week into our engagement, that was very definitely our plan.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, according to what we have seen by way of your work product, you have made an exhaustive review of the transactions that emanated from Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan and have looked at the picture in its totality. Mr. Ericson, do you disagree with that?

Mr. ERICSON. No. As Mr. Patterson has indicated, from the outset we thought it important to look for a pattern.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Stephens had said something about commenting on the first draft Whitewater Report about the relative contributions to capital that were made between the Clintons and the McDougals. I take it what he meant was the contributions to the expenses as the investment matured over the years. But even taking that, he talked about contribution to a partnership. When did it stop being a partnership?

Mr. ERICSON. Whitewater was a corporation in 1979 and thereafter, so technically speaking, the Clintons and the McDougals were shareholders in the corporation, they were not partners in a partnership.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In connection with your mandate, you were looking at whether funds could be recovered through litigation or otherwise as a result of these transactions at Madison. Of course, you wanted to look at all of the transactions. Looking at the Whitewater aspect of this, at the very most, how much money could be said to have been lost by Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan as a result of anything to do with the Whitewater investment?

Mr. ERICSON. It will take me a moment to answer that as there are some complexities associated with that. That's addressed in our Supplemental Report on Whitewater in which we make two points. Maybe it would be helpful if I could just turn to that for a moment. At page 7 of the Supplemental Report from December 1995, there is a chart at the top of the page that shows two things. It shows deposits into Whitewater and then it shows disbursements out of Madison Guaranty, and I think the numbers you're seeking to get from me are indicated by that chart.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. How much then would you say that in the most conservative analysis could have been lost as a result of a Whitewater investment?

Mr. ERICSON. Well, very little money was ever traced from Madison to Whitewater. We're talking five figures at most. As we point out in the report, it might be possible to argue that losses to Madison were larger than that, and that's the thrust of this chart we're looking at. But there are a number of difficulties associated with such an argument.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I understand.

Now with respect to Mr. Stephens' point, in fact looking at the Whitewater transaction in such detail was really well beyond that which normally would have been requested if the only interest was pecuniary or financial or in getting money back. There was another element to doing an exhaustive investigation, was there not?

Mr. ERICSON. That's true.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So because of the political side of this, the importance of looking at all of this very, very carefully was justified where financially it never would have been justified without such political interest. Is that fair to say?

Mr. ERICSON. The word "political" gives me a little trouble, as I understand our client's desires. And I think as the former General Counsel, Ellen Kulka testified, the agency was concerned with its reputation. It felt it had to do a thorough job or it would be criticized here or elsewhere.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I will accept that. I used "political" maybe too broadly in that regard. But in terms of the dollars involved, quite clearly the amount that was expended to look at all of this dwarfed the amount of any reasonable recovery?

Mr. ERICSON. From Whitewater certainly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now from Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan itself, you are looking at an individual who had the primary responsibility, according to your findings for anything untoward or irregular that occurred, and that was Mr. McDougal, correct?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. McDougal, of course, had been prosecuted and acquitted once in connection with transactions associated with Madison and was impecunious certainly by the time he faced these other charges where counsel has been appointed to represent him rather than retained counsel. Is that fair to say?

Mr. ERICSON. That's right. He'd been discharged in bankruptcy. It was a no-asset bankruptcy.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Stephens, you're looking at discharge from bankruptcy issues. Were you foreclosed from doing that?

Mr. STEPHENS. Early on in the inquiry, I think we did a preliminary look at the various, the bankruptcies and settlements which might preclude recovery. But associates from Los Angeles, if I remember correctly, were assigned to that task, and that was later assumed by Mr. Patterson, or by those associates under Mr. Patterson's supervision.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ericson, viz-à-viz the conversation that Mr. Stephens has indicated he had with you after he reviewed the first draft on the Whitewater Report, what is your recollection of that conversation?

Mr. ERICSON. I remember parts of what Mr. Stephens has testified to, and frankly, I don't remember other parts of it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What do you remember Mr. Stephens saying?

Mr. ERICSON. I remember the part about my sense of humor. I also remember to some extent the part about a discussion of witness interviews. The rest of what he said I simply don't remember.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You don't remember him saying it?

Mr. ERICSON. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So what was your take-away from that conversation, which I take it occurred some time in the late fall or early winter of 1994?

Mr. ERICSON. Well, as I have just said, I took away the idea that I probably ought to tone down the sense of humor, and that it might be a good idea to talk to a few more witnesses.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did Mr. Stephens ever express any shock or alarm that you were headed in the wrong direction, that you were off course, that he felt pressure was being put on you somehow?

Mr. ERICSON. No, nothing of that sort.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson, did you ever receive such a message from Mr. Stephens?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, I did not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In connection with the conversation you had after Mr. Stephens was sent and reviewed this draft, did he follow up with a written memorandum?

Mr. PATTERSON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you ever receive anything in writing from Mr. Stephens by way of memorandum or otherwise, commenting on any draft, any conclusion, or any procedure that you were undertaking in discharging your responsibility to the RTC?

Mr. ERICSON. No. But I should add that among partners, we would not typically communicate by writing.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So this is the only instance where you recall Mr. Stephens making any suggestions with respect to the report?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson, did you have any conversations with Mr. Stephens wherein Mr. Stephens claimed that he had a problem of any nature with the way you were going about business or the tentative preliminary conclusions that you reached or indeed the final conclusions?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, I did not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I see that my time has expired. I think it is important to go into some of these conclusions and what the basis is for them, but I'll do that in the next round, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Murkowski.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR FRANK H. MURKOWSKI

Senator MURKOWSKI. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'll be brief.

Let me try and understand the structure within the organization of Pillsbury Madison & Sutro relative to who was the contact person with the RTC.

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, I would have been the principal contact with the RTC.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Who would have been the RTC counter? In other words, who contacted you with regard to the investigation that you were doing?

Mr. PATTERSON. Mark Gabrellian.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Did Mark Gabrellian specifically dictate the scope of your review?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, he did not.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Did he specifically direct or redirect activities associated with your review?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, he did not.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So you had complete authority, flexibility, control, in the manner in which you proceeded to bill 385 hours?

Mr. PATTERSON. We did not have complete control. We had control in the sense of how we went about our investigation. We would discuss with the client what our recommendations were as to how the investigation should be handled, where the focus should be placed, and in what order we should proceed.

Senator MURKOWSKI. And the client agreed with you in all cases?

Mr. PATTERSON. I believe they did, yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So you can't recall an instance where Mr. Gabrellian, on behalf of the RTC, directed you into one area viz-à-viz another area?

Mr. PATTERSON. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. This is important because your firm billed the Federal Government for about $4 million. Is that right?

Mr. PATTERSON. I would have to defer to Mr. Ericson who says it was in the neighborhood of $3.1 to $3.2.

Senator MURKOWSKI. All right, $3.1 to $3.2, whatever it was, it was a significant amount of money.

At what point did you satisfy yourselves that this investigation was complete and adequate as opposed to the realization that we have an extensive witness list of prominent people and people who are knowledgeable in various aspects that weren't interviewed?

Mr. PATTERSON. At what point did we satisfy ourselves that our investigation was complete?

Senator MURKOWSKI. That's correct.

Mr. PATTERSON. That occurred in stages with respect to different phases of the investigation.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Yes, but you had to make a decision that you felt within your organization that you had adequately satisfied yourself as to the authenticity with regard to what your job was specifically directed to do.

I find it extraordinary that we are looking at a list of witnesses not interviewed by your firm, yet we have heard from the Minority that your report is complete and all encompassing relative to the bottom-line recommendation that was made in your report, yet these people weren't contacted. I'm wondering why you didn't contact them, obviously you can't contact everybody, but why you felt your report was complete? Because I intend to go into some of the specific names here and information relative to the germaneness of information that they had that you didn't seem to see fit was appropriate or worthwhile pursuing.

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, to answer your first question first, at what time did we feel that we were complete with respect to the investigation. I would say that would have been at the end of 1995 when the Extenders Statute was running out. We had no more time, we had to make a final report and final recommendations to the RTC and either commence litigation or, as we did in the case of Jim Guy Tucker, obtain an extension of the statute of limitations.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Why didn't you request an extension?

Mr. PATTERSON. We did with respect to Jim Guy Tucker.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Just that portion. But you indicated you were up against a time sequence. Did you make a qualification in your final report, in other words, a disclaimer that this did not necessarily represent a total capability of contacting groups or some question as to the inadequacy of your report?

Mr. PATTERSON. I believe, Senator, that there are always witnesses you could talk to.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I am talking about whether or not you made a qualification.

Mr. PATTERSON. No, we did not. Because at that point in time, we had reached the conclusion that based on what we had been assigned to do, we had sufficient information to determine whether there was cost-effective litigation to be undertaken.

The CHAIRMAN. Would the Senator yield for a question?

Senator MURKOWSKI. Very briefly, Mr. Chairman, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Why wouldn't you have interviewed Beverly Bassett Schaffer? I looked at this list and this goes to what Senator Murkowski's talking about. We are not talking about some incidental—I mean, you have this thing, it's public, it's big, and it's sensitive. You didn't even interview her. Why?

Mr. PATTERSON. Senator, your first question is would Beverly Bassett Schaffer have shown us that money was spent or taken from Madison Guaranty, that there was a loss to the institution. Second, that it was the result of an intentional or fraudulent act. And finally that that act resulted in some loss to the institution. We determined that with respect to that transaction, none of those things existed.

The CHAIRMAN. You reference in your report conversations between Beverly Bassett Schaffer and the First Lady, and you have it and you do this continually, you reference certain people and you don't even interview them. You don't find an inconsistency?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, we will get into that. We are going to develop it a little further.

Senator, I thank you for your indulgence.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

You are familiar with Marlin Jackson, the Bank Commissioner who used his position and influence as Commissioner, to use his letterhead to request the transfer of the Clinton loan to the bank that he was formerly associated with?

Mr. PATTERSON. I think Mr. Ericson would be more familiar with that than I am.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, all right, Mr. Ericson.

Mr. ERICSON. I'm familiar with Mr. Jackson. I know he used his letterhead. I'm not sure I agree with the rest of what you said.

Senator MURKOWSKI. What would you agree with, because we have the actual copy of the letterhead, and the letter states, to his former associate in the bank that he formerly headed, "Please take care of the circumstances on the principal and interest on the loan." Do you think that was an appropriate thing for a Bank Commissioner to do? Do you think that's good banking business?

Mr. ERICSON. To use his letterhead in that way? No, I think that was ill advised on his part.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You think it was ill advised?

Mr. ERICSON. On his part, yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. All right. You didn't think that there was any pressure being brought to bear relative to him stating that this loan should now be taken care of at his former bank? What I am getting at is, obviously you didn't choose to interview this gentleman. It was evident that there was pressure being brought to bear, the impropriety relative to using the stationery and you did not interview him.

Mr. ERICSON. We didn't interview him. I can't see any connection between it and any losses to Madison Guaranty.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You didn't interview Mr. Norton, a Clinton accountant, either, did you?

Mr. ERICSON. That's true.

Senator MURKOWSKI. And there was no relevance there to your responsibility because I think it's fair to state that Foster, in his notes, indicated that the Clintons' tax situation was, "A can of worms." You didn't see fit to interview Norton?

Mr. ERICSON. That's true, we didn't interview Norton.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Why?

Mr. ERICSON. We had no interest in the Clintons' tax situation because again that was not something that the RTC could sue over. It's not something that the RTC could bring a lawsuit about. That's between the Clintons and the IRS.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I'm curious to know, Mr. Stephens, relative to your deposition, on page 133, this was asked:

Question: Do you know that they dictated to your firm that certain things should be looked at and other things shouldn't be looked at with regard to Madison?

Answer: I am not sure how to take your word "dictated." There would be times when they said, call these people but don't call those people. Don't make this phone call until I call you. It was a very close, hands-on, do this but wait until we give you the authority to do so.

So it was a closely controlled matter from what I saw. I don't want to characterize it—it's not fair for me to characterize it one way or the other. After all, in private practice, the client is the client. And it is their responsibility and they seek outside counsel to assist them in that. They had every right to provide guidance and direction to outside counsel. You know, Pillsbury was not an independent public agency or an independent counsel or an independent prosecutor or Congressional committee or anything else looking at this. It was outside counsel retained by an agency to assist them in doing what they wanted to accomplish.

Mr. Stephens, I can only assume you stand by this statement?

Mr. STEPHENS. This statement applies to what I saw from my relationship to the agency. It was a hands-on agency. With regard to 6(e) areas and filing the 6(e) petition, with regard to contacts with the Independent Counsel, it was very closely monitored—we don't want you to call them yet; it's OK to call them now, we'll give you the phone number now; well, wait until tomorrow to call them and then tell us what they said—it was closely monitored.

But the second part of your question goes to the broader concept, and that is simply in my view, we were outside counsel. It was their responsibility and their authority to make the final judgments. You should not necessarily assume from that comment that they exercised that authority or judgment in any way to infringe on the independence of Mr. Patterson or Mr. Ericson in making their judgments.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You know, it appears that Mr. Stephens was removed from some areas of responsibility. Is that your opinion, Mr. Stephens, in this case?

Mr. STEPHENS. Well, Mr. Patterson arranged the staffing of the matter. I participated, as I think I have testified, substantially in February and March, and thereafter in selected areas including the 6(e) petition, in interviewing or considering potential forensic accountants, and looking at a couple of other issues—the statute of limitations issues. So there were selected areas that I was asked to take a look at. But the bulk of the work was moved to the West Coast to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Were there any communications between yourself and Mr. Patterson where you suggested certain areas be pursued and Mr. Patterson suggested otherwise, or said, well, the Los Angeles or West Coast areas will take care of that?

Mr. STEPHENS. I think the answer to that is probably not; the dynamic didn't work quite that way. Mr. Patterson was the senior partner on the project. He was the manager of the project, and as it evolved, staffing was increased on the West Coast.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That was not exactly my question though. You had certain facets of this. You had it at one time, and then it gradually diminished, your activities lessened. At times, did you indicate specific recommendations to Mr. Patterson that were not followed?

Mr. STEPHENS. I think that the answer to that is probably no, not with regard to the areas that I handled.

Senator MURKOWSKI. How about other areas that you suggested?

Mr. STEPHENS. Let me correct one thing. It may be that, for example, with respect to the 6(e) petition, I probably took the position that it was important to file that or take some action relatively soon to get access to these documents. You really could not do the investigation until you got access to the documents.

Indeed, when we were retained, one of the first items we were asked to do was to prepare the arguments to get access to these documents. It did seem that after a short period of time, the pressure came off to get access to these documents. Indeed, it was not until I think June before a consent order was negotiated to get access to the documents.

I probably pushed a little harder to say why don't we move to file the petition and engage in a negotiation with the Independent Counsel more quickly so that we can get access to these documents. There may have been some dynamic back and forth on that with Mr. Patterson, who was dealing more closely at that point with the Independent Counsel.

Senator MURKOWSKI. My last question because I'm out of time. Mr. Patterson, under any set of your own personal recollections, was there any attempt by anybody in the RTC or in the Administration to influence your scope of activities associated with the responsibility of your firm to do this?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I remember a month ago we had a little discussion, Senator Sarbanes and I specifically, on the completeness of this Pillsbury Madison & Sutro Report, and to what extent the Committee should rely on the completeness and thoroughness of that report.

It is obvious for reasons that I hope this Committee will pursue, that they were very selective in analyzing and interviewing specific witnesses, and I find that troubling.

You know, as I sit here today, I am just astounded that we find specific people who have intimate knowledge of various aspects of this, the realization that the taxpayers have lost $60 million, we've paid this firm over $3 million. Why you didn't simply sit down and review the extensive Bank Examiners Reports, which suggest anything but the findings that your report shows, is beyond me.

I can only look at those in the RTC and question their motivation in the manner in which this was directed because if you go into the Bank Examiners Reports, you are going to find the real expertise associated with the analysis that is appropriate for this kind of investigation, recognizing the exposure of the taxpayers of this country with the failure of that organization.

I think your report is shameful, I think it is inadequate, I think it is a ripoff of the taxpayers' money, and I am very disturbed to find that pressure was brought to bear within your organization in directing specific activities from one partner to another.

I would like to see a further investigation of this process because there's just too many unanswered questions here, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Patterson, obviously you should be given a chance to respond to that. I mean, I think that's a gross misstatement of what the situation was, and I think you ought to, in effect, review on the public record what the charge was to your firm.

You were advising the RTC what the scope of their authority was in the situation, and my understanding is, to the extent that the RTC had any role to play, you did counsel them on the totality of the issues in a very thorough and comprehensive way.

But I think you obviously need to address that closing comment, and I'll yield you some time in order to do that.

Mr. PATTERSON. Let me say this with some background and answer the Senator's question, if I can call it a question.

We were originally contacted to do an evaluation and examination of Madison Guaranty I believe in either late January or early February of 1994. We were told that the statute of limitations with respect to any claims dealing with Madison Guaranty would run on February 28, 1994, unless extended by Congress. It was extended.

Well, at that point in time, all I could do was bring as many bodies to bear on this as I possibly could in order to get something that would satisfy Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, were we to try to file an action before February 28th.

We had six partners I think originally and I am not sure how many associates who were assigned to that task. They were in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Kansas City, Washington, DC and all over the place trying to get that done by that time.

The statute was extended by Congress, but it was extended only as to fraud or to other intentional misconduct. So from that point forward, our charge was to determine whether cost-effective civil litigation existed for the RTC in which they could recover money based on torts which were either fraud or involved intentional misconduct.

In that regard, very early on in our investigation, we did review the Bank Examiners Reports from the examinations that had been done. We reviewed the prior reports of the investigations which had been done by another law firm in, I believe it was Memphis, Tennessee, what was known as the Garrish Report. We reviewed those. During the course of our investigation, I believe we interviewed the bank examiners who were involved in the examinations. And I think that we did look into that. In fact, we were guided to a great degree by what we found in those documents.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I'd certainly draw a different conclusion.

Senator SARBANES. I don't think because you draw a different conclusion you ought to disparage the competency or the work of this law firm. I don't think it's fair to them. You know, you want to put differing interpretations on things and obviously you're going to do that if you choose to, but I don't see why you ought to try to tar them in their work.

Senator MURKOWSKI. If I may respond, I cannot understand why they did not put a disclaimer on the report that they were up against the statute of limitations so that this Committee could basically satisfy itself that the report wasn't complete and they were up against the statute of limitations to finish it. When one looks at those examinations and the results of the recommendations of this firm, Pillsbury Madison & Sutro, you're going to come to a different conclusion.

Senator SARBANES. Well, once the Congress took action, you were no longer up against a deadline, isn't that correct?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. And later I gather toward the end, when that arose, you got tolling agreements, did you not, that allowed you to continue with certain limited portions of your inquiry?

Mr. PATTERSON. With respect to that portion of our investigation, where we thought cost-effective litigation existed, we obtained a tolling agreement.

Senator SARBANES. That's right, so you were not up against that deadline as a consequence?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. If I might make an observation, and I think it is fair to say. Don't run the clock—it should not be charged to my colleagues here. I think that there are some people who took this report and heralded it as a vindication of all of the activities that took place in regard to Whitewater, in regard to the operation of Madison, in regard to all of the transactions surrounding it.

They said, well, here's this law firm investigation headed by a Republican, Jay Stephens, and it vindicates and clears everybody of wrong doing, nothing wrong, $4 million spent. Now that's basically the laymen's interpretation of the story given to the public.

Indeed, the fact is that Mr. Stephens only worked for a rather short period of time that he put any substantial time in, and that after March 1994, it would appear that there's almost no time, and certainly by early 1995, there's nothing at all, nothing. He wasn't the supervising, managing partner who approved, et cetera, as was reported. So I think that is part of the misconception that was not your fault, but that certainly was what people spun. Jay Stephens cleared everybody of wrongdoing.

I'll make this point, and I thank my colleague for going along with giving me this opportunity to express something that I have observed here. Second, there is the question that this report was very limited. You were limited to ascertaining whether or not it would be cost effective to bring a suit, not with respect to was anyone exonerated, were their actions correct, were their decisions correct, was their fraud involved. Because, indeed, there was fraud involved in many transactions. Is that correct, when you look at this?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Lots of fraud. But you determined notwithstanding that there was lots of fraud, that who do you sue and make it cost effective because of time, money, et cetera. And so you might have a whole list of people where there's potential liability but to bring a lawsuit, even if you win, what do you win; is that right?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's correct, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. So I just make that point. Then I would like to later on, on my time, get back to examining a couple of aspects that I think need to be cleared up. But I thank my colleagues.

Senator SARBANES. Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The one thing out of that discussion that I find interesting is that Mr. Stephens' work of about 190 hours or so over a 10-month period that was subsequent to February and March is being treated as minimal. Whereas it's asserted repeatedly in these hearings that Mrs. Clinton's work of 60 hours over 15 months, less than one-third the amount of that time, over a longer period, is not treated as minimal. And I think it's very helpful to have that on the record.

I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

And I might as well correct my prior arithmetic for the minimal portion of Mr. Stephens' representation of those 193.25 hours over 10 months at $200, which is a conservative rate, the arithmetic checked now by Lance Cole, my accountant, is $38,650 as compared to the $6,000 and change Mrs. Clinton—

The CHAIRMAN. How much, $38 what?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. $38,650. The total amount, if you had included all of the hours I have given before, it's $68,000 dollars. So I think when we compare legal billing in one aspect and call it minimal, we ought to have that in some kind of context. And I don't suggest that it was not relatively minimal that Mr. Stephens spent that amount of time. What was your normal monthly production in billable hours during 1994, Mr. Stephens, do you remember?

Mr. STEPHENS. Probably somewhere in the neighborhood of 140.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. 140 hours per month so—

Mr. STEPHENS. Actually, work time might have been double that, but billable time was probably about that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, there was time that you spent, and we can go through these records, discussing the final report and other aspects of this investigation representation that you did not bill time to. Isn't that so?

Mr. STEPHENS. I'm sorry, I didn't understand the question.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There was time that you spent that was not reflected in bills sent to the client on the RTC matter?

Mr. STEPHENS. To what are you referring?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We have about a dozen if you would like to go through them. I am sure you have gone through your records and the conversations and conferences that you had regarding different issues that are reflected in other lawyers' billing records, conference with Jay Stephens, meeting with Jay Stephens, discussion about so and so.

Mr. STEPHENS. I haven't seen those.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You have not seen the billing records? Maybe we will get to that a little bit later and we can go through that.

The implication again by the Majority is that Mr. Stephens was somehow pulled off the case, pulled away from the things that he wanted to do or which were appropriate but he wasn't allowed to do. Did that happen, Mr. Patterson?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, it did not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ericson.

Mr. ERICSON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The conclusions that you reached and put forward involved conclusions about activities of others and involved conclusions about fraud. Mr. Ericson, what was your conclusion about whether Mr. or Mrs. Clinton engaged in fraudulent activity or whether the Rose Law Firm engaged in fraudulent activity?

Mr. ERICSON. We found no evidence of either.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No evidence of fraud either by the Clintons or the Rose Law Firm in connection with the matters under investigation; is that correct?

Mr. ERICSON. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now with respect to witnesses who were not interviewed, there were different reasons for not interviewing different witnesses, and we can get to that. But did anyone tell you, Mr. Ericson, that there were witnesses you could not interview?

Mr. ERICSON. No, never.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson.

Mr. PATTERSON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Stephens, do you know of any example of a witness who Mr. Patterson or Mr. Ericson wanted to interview but were not allowed to interview?

Mr. STEPHENS. I have no personal knowledge of their discussions about—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask you this.

Mr. STEPHENS. Let me finish my answer.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have any reason to believe that the conclusions reached by the Pillsbury Madison & Sutro firm were not on the basis of a full, complete, and honest evaluation of the evidence available?

Mr. STEPHENS. I have no basis to agree or disagree with that statement. I know Mr. Ericson and Mr. Patterson are outstanding attorneys, they are people who conduct themselves with the highest ethical standards, but I have no factual basis to know whether that statement is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You have not read the final reports in detail, have you?

Mr. STEPHENS. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And in your deposition, you acknowledged that you had no basis upon which to challenge any conclusion because you hadn't even read the final reports, much less reviewed the underlying material. Isn't that fair to say?

Mr. STEPHENS. I was not asked to read the final—I take that back. I was asked to read the final reports. I did not read the final reports. I did not write the reports. I did not have a hands-on basis for the underlying material so I had no basis for providing comments with regard to—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I can understand why you did not want your name associated with the authorship of the reports if you did not perform the work. That is understandable and I think Senator D'Amato makes a very good point. We don't challenge that. If it was called the Stephens Report, it was not because Pillsbury Madison & Sutro called it the Stephens Report. Correct, Mr. Patterson?

Mr. PATTERSON. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And it is not because the RTC called it the Stephens Report, is that correct?

Mr. PATTERSON. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to the matters before you that you were being questioned about, Marlin Jackson, who was the Bank Commissioner, had a letter on his official letterhead as Commissioner, introduced here, but we have had the testimony that put that into context. That testimony showed that Mr. Jackson dictated a letter to his secretary and the secretary signed his name and the secretary put that on the official stationery. So to the extent that has anything to do with the price of beans here, it is a non-issue.

With respect to Beverly Bassett Schaffer, now was there anything associated with the representation by the Rose Law Firm on the regulatory matters that involved the State Commissioner of Securities, that cost Madison any money?

Mr. ERICSON. No. The preferred stock offering never occurred.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And indeed the research into that was entirely appropriate as far as you could see that was done by the Rose Law Firm under the supervision of Mrs. Clinton and performed by Mr. Massey. We've gone through all of that.

The introduction of Ms. Bassett Schaffer's name does raise a point with respect to this assertion that the taxpayers lost $60 million as a result of Madison's failure. If Ms. Bassett Schaffer's recommendation, 2 years before that the bank should be closed, had been implemented by the Federal authorities, did you come to some conclusion about what the actual loss would have been?

Mr. ERICSON. No, we did not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Can you say in rough terms whether or not it would have been a very substantial reduction of the loss that was at the end incurred?

Mr. ERICSON. It is very difficult to say. The argument is sometimes made in savings and loan cases that if an institution had been closed down sooner, the losses would have been less, but it is difficult to prove that and it is very difficult to quantify it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Fair enough. However, with respect to Ms. Bassett Schaffer's recommendation, it was established that she had, in fact, made that recommendation to Federal authorities 2 years before the bank was closed down and was told essentially, hey, take a number, we have a lot of really big institutions that are in trouble and we can't start closing down small institutions and starting a panic in the country. Is that fair to say?

Mr. ERICSON. That's fair to say. I did interview a Federal official on that subject, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And you corroborated Ms. Bassett Schaffer's account of that?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of interviewing the witnesses on this chart, and we will get into the conclusions I guess shortly, maybe in the next round. But since this has been raised, first of all, let me ask you from a general standpoint, were there any witnesses that the RTC told you that you could not interview? Was anybody off limits?

Mr. ERICSON. No, never.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson, did somebody tell you, do not touch so and so, don't interview so and so?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, they did not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If someone had told you that, would that be the type of thing, from a professional standpoint, that you would have readily acceded to?

Mr. PATTERSON. Not at all. In fact, it would probably cause us more interest.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to the individuals on this list, obviously anyone could make a long list of people, but I see the President of Madison Bank on this list, Mr. Bunch. What Mr. Bunch had to do with the price of beans as far as your investigation is concerned is illusive. Do you know what Mr. Bunch might possibly have to shed in terms of light on the areas of your inquiry?

Mr. PATTERSON. I'm sorry, I'm missing Mr. Bunch on the list.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You have Pockrus and Burge, OK.

Mr. PATTERSON. OK, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I misread that.

Mr. ERICSON, let me ask you with respect to the transactions that involved Mr. McDougal, in looking at them in the total context of all of the transactions, did you come to a conclusion with respect to how Mr. McDougal operated and who he involved in the various transactions back and forth between different institutions?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes, we discussed that at some length in the reports. We did.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What did you conclude?

Mr. ERICSON. Mr. McDougal operated in a fashion that is, for a banker, I think it is fair to say, highly unusual. It was a rather slap-dash fashion. He worked with a group of old friends and some others, but there are aspects of the way he operated that frankly are almost farcical. He would do things on a very impulsive basis. He would buy things on an impulsive basis and pay for them in odd ways.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was there any evidence that Mr. and Mrs. Clinton were included in this group of friends which Mr. McDougal used to perform these unusual transactions?

Mr. ERICSON. No, I wouldn't say so.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Patterson, let me ask you something. This report didn't give the Pillsbury seal of approval with respect to vindicating people in terms of their actions, did it?

Mr. PATTERSON. It was neither to castigate or vindicate anyone, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. It didn't vindicate anyone, didn't castigate anyone. It's directed to ascertain whether there was any cost-effective relief in seeking to recover moneys that were lost. Is that correct?

Mr. PATTERSON. That was the purpose of the report and of the investigation.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that correct, Mr. Ericson?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. I want to read you a statement by Mr. Fabiani given out just today. It says: "Republican hypocrisy has reached new lows. The Pillsbury Reports—the result of 2 years and $4 million worth of work for Federal regulators at the RTC—vindicated the President and Mrs. Clinton. . . ." Is that correct?

Mr. PATTERSON. I can again say, Senator, the purpose of the report was not to vindicate or castigate anyone.

The CHAIRMAN. So that statement by Mr. Fabiani is incorrect. Is that true?

Mr. PATTERSON. I agree that the Pillsbury Reports speak for themselves.

The CHAIRMAN. Is this a true statement?

Mr. PATTERSON. It may be his opinion.

The CHAIRMAN. But it's not your opinion?

Mr. PATTERSON. It's not my opinion or the purpose of why we did the reports, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you this. Did Mr. Stephens head this so-called inquiry, your report, did he head it?

Mr. PATTERSON. He was a part of it but he did not head it.

The CHAIRMAN. He did not head it. As a matter of fact, his involvement was rather limited?

Mr. PATTERSON. It was limited, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. There's really no involvement starting in 1995?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's correct, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. No involvement. Let me read to you from the Chicago Sun Times. As a matter of fact, if we have that, I would like to give you a copy of the Chicago Sun Times?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Dated January 21st?

Mr. PATTERSON. The Late Sports Final Edition?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. PATTERSON. I have it.

The CHAIRMAN. Headline: Facts Fight Fiction Over Whitewater.

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. What's the byline?

Mr. PATTERSON. Hillary Clinton.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me take you down to the last sentence on the first page. "Since most Americans," would you read that?

Mr. PATTERSON. Would you like me to read it, Senator?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, please.

Mr. PATTERSON. "Since most Americans never heard about this report, let me fill you in."

The CHAIRMAN. And this is referring to the Pillsbury Madison & Sutro Report. Go ahead.

Mr. PATTERSON. It reads: "It was conducted for the RTC by one of the Nation's leading law firms, Pillsbury Madison & Sutro. It took more than 2 years to complete and cost nearly $4 million. A prominent Republican and former U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens headed the inquiry."

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Stephens, did you head this inquiry?

Mr. STEPHENS. No, I did not.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Patterson, did he head the inquiry?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, he did not, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ericson, did he head the inquiry?

Mr. ERICSON. No.

The CHAIRMAN. I have to tell you that when you have the White House spin doctors and the Special Counsel to the Committee saying what Mr. Fabiani just gave out today, he is Special Counsel to the White House.

Senator SARBANES. You said to the Committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Excuse me, to the White House. "Republicans are trying to obscure the plain language of the reports in the fog of Senator D'Amato's endless hearings."

The fact of the matter is that we are attempting to ascertain exactly what was the scope of the report; and that, indeed, it was very limited, it did not make conclusions as to wrongdoing or correctness of actions or decisions that were made, but really came down to whether or not it was cost effective, you could bring a suit even against somebody who's committed and reports indicate committed all kinds of violations. And I'm talking about Mr. McDougal.

Senator Hatch, do you have any questions?

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR ORRIN G. HATCH

Senator HATCH. No, I am just very interested because I know Jay Stephens and I know what a competent lawyer he is, and I know the reputation of Pillsbury Madison & Sutro, a very, very important firm in this country. I have a lot of respect for all of you. I just think this thing has been tremendously mischaracterized through the years.

But I am interested in this statement by Mark D. Fabiani, the Special Associate Counsel to the President, dated today. It says: "Republican hypocrisy has reached new lows. The Pillsbury Reports—the result of 2 years and $4 million worth of work for Federal regulators at the RTC—vindicated the President and Mrs. Clinton. . . ." Is that true?

Mr. PATTERSON. As I've said, Senator—

Senator HATCH. Is vindicated a good word here?

Mr. PATTERSON. That may be Mr. Fabiani's opinion.

Senator HATCH. It's not your word?

Mr. PATTERSON. Senator, I don't think our dog is in this fight. [Laughter.]

Senator HATCH. Well, it's been brought into it by the media and a whole raft of other people as a vindication of the President and Mrs. Clinton. Frankly, I hope they are vindicated in the end, but I don't think your report necessarily vindicates them. Do you agree with that statement?

Mr. PATTERSON. Senator, it was not our purpose to do either, to incriminate or exculpate or vindicate or castigate.

Senator HATCH. It says, "The Republicans did not like this conclusion, so first they tried to cover up the Pillsbury Reports." In all honesty, this doesn't look like we are covering it up by asking you folks to appear here today. Is there anything to cover up there?

Mr. PATTERSON. I don't believe so, Senator.

Senator HATCH. I don't either. I think the reports have been pretty badly mischaracterized. I also think that Mr. Stephens has not been treated fairly through the process. I have no doubt in my mind he would do honorably and well and honestly whatever your firm's commitment to a reasonable and fine and perfect investigation was made. I have no doubt about that.

But this type of statement from a Special Associate Counsel to the President kind of bothers me. It says: "Now that the Reports have finally been made public, Republicans are trying to obscure the plain language of the Reports in the fog of Senator D'Amato's endless hearings." I think your being here today to review makes it very clear that nobody's trying to obscure anything. We just want to know the facts.

I personally appreciate you being here. I know it is inconvenient and I know it has been difficult, and I have personally resented Jay Stephens being mischaracterized as the media and the White House and others have done. I have heard them say, "Well, Jay Stephens' vindicated the President, your own Republican." As if an attorney is going to slant his legal work because of his own political convictions. That hasn't been my experience in the law. Has it been yours, Mr. Patterson?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, Senator.

Mr. STEPHENS. Senator, I appreciate those comments.

Senator HATCH. Well, they are true. I have a lot of respect for you, and I have a lot of respect for your firm. I have worked with it through the years. We have been opposed in some matters from time to time, and we have worked together from time to time, and I have found your firm to be honest, trustworthy, and a very good firm. I think that's why the firm has lasted for so long.

I think to the extent that this clarifies some matters and some of them may be in favor of the President and First Lady, fine. But to the extent that it clarifies the matters and some of these matters are not in favor of the President and the First Lady, that's fine too.

And I just want to personally express my appreciation to you and my high regard for the firm and for Mr. Stephens as well.

Mr. PATTERSON. Thank you, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator.

Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Ericson, you were the principal draftsman of the Whitewater and the Rose Law Firm Reports, right?

Mr. ERICSON. That is true.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall your deposition testimony? Let me just read it. This is on page 89:

Question: Did you make a judgment in your reports that the Clintons were not guilty of anything?

Answer: No, I don't think so. That's certainly not the way we phrased it. I think we were at some pains to say in our reports that we weren't exonerating anybody.

Do you remember that testimony?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And that's accurate?

Mr. ERICSON. That's what I said.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let me turn to page 93 of your testimony:

Question: Am I correct that your reports, in general, did not exonerate the Clintons of all wrongdoing?

Answer: I don't think our reports exonerated anybody of anything.

Do you recall that testimony?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Is that correct?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes, it is.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, Mr. Stephens, during this period of February and March of 1994, you had some dealings with Ellen Kulka; right?

Mr. STEPHENS. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who was Ellen Kulka during this period?

Mr. STEPHENS. Ms. Kulka was General Counsel for the Resolution Trust Corporation.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You attended meetings with Ms. Kulka; right?

Mr. STEPHENS. I attended, I believe, two meetings or, depending how you characterize them, three meetings on two separate days.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Patterson, did you have the impression that there was a personality conflict between Mr. Stephens and Ellen Kulka?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Could you tell the Committee what was the basis for that impression?

Mr. PATTERSON. It was simply based on a meeting that Jay and I had with Ellen Kulka in her office. It just seemed to me, or my impression was that there was a personality conflict. I am not certain whether it was on Jay's part, but with respect to Ms. Kulka and Jay.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Ericson, Mr. Patterson told you at the time that Ms. Kulka, the General Counsel of the RTC, disliked something that Mr. Stephens had said at a meeting?

Mr. ERICSON. I think I said I had gained some vague impression to that effect from Mr. Patterson.

Mr. GIUFFRA. There was some sort of a problem between Ms. Kulka and Mr. Stephens.

Mr. ERICSON. There had been some sort of disagreement. I don't know what it was about. I wasn't there.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now let me read some testimony. This would be August 1, 1994. This is the hearing testimony of Jean Hanson, the General Counsel at the Department of the Treasury, page 161:

Senator HATCH. In fact, Joseph Steiner, the Chief of Staff to Treasury Secretary Bentsen, had told you that he thought Ellen Kulka should be fired for hiring Mr. Stephens, hadn't he?

Ms. HANSON: Yes, he did.

So at the time, Josh Steiner, the same person who had a conversation with George Stephanopoulos, the Senior White House Aide, told Ms. Hanson, the General Counsel of the Treasury Department—and at that time Roger Altman was the Acting Officer at the RTC—that Ms. Kulka should be fired for hiring Stephens.

Now there were some questions that were raised during the very opening round by the Minority. Mr. Patterson, you have no doubt that Mr. Stephens was qualified to act as lead trial counsel in this matter; right?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Ericson, you would agree with that; right?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Stephens, with regard to the draft of the report that you read, you were concerned a bit on the Whitewater Report that it focused too much on accounting issues; right?

Mr. STEPHENS. I believe I indicated in the first or second round I had some general comments to Mr. Ericson. I don't know whether that was one of them or not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You thought that there was a need to conduct more interviews; right?

Mr. STEPHENS. As a general matter my sense was—and I may have been reflecting my background as a criminal prosecutor—it is helpful to have witness interviews in order to flesh out inferences, to give some life to documents, and to determine what the meaning of those documents may be. So I believe that I expressed some suggestion that it may add some perspective and substance to the report if there were witness interviews to support the documentary analysis.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Ericson, at your second deposition you recalled Mr. Stephens' comments to you about the need to conduct more interviews, don't you?

Mr. ERICSON. I did testify to that in my deposition. I don't think he phrased it in terms of "need," but of "desirability." I would put it that way.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He said he thought you needed to conduct more witness interviews?

Mr. ERICSON. I think what he said was that he thought it might be desirable.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now after you spoke to Mr. Stephens, did you, in fact, conduct more witness interviews?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you conduct interviews of Mr. Hale? He was not available because of the Independent Counsel, right?

Mr. ERICSON. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were never able to talk to Mr. McDougal; is that right?

Mr. ERICSON. That's right. He took the Fifth.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were never able to talk to Mr. Wade; right?

Mr. ERICSON. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. There was a brief interview that was conducted of Mr. Wade, but you were never able to talk to him; right?

Mr. ERICSON. One of my partners—I think Mr. Patterson—interviewed Mr. Wade. I later sought to re-interview Mr. Wade and, as I told you, I for a long time negotiated with Mr. Wade's counsel but ultimately he too said he would take the Fifth and he refused to be interviewed.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You never talked to John Latham; right?

Mr. ERICSON. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He was the President & CEO of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. ERICSON. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You never talked to Governor Tucker; right?

Mr. ERICSON. Well, with respect to both, we tried but were unable to do so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Seth Ward, who I think you concluded was the straw purchaser on the Castle Grande transaction; right?

Mr. ERICSON. Mr. Patterson interviewed Mr. Ward. Later I attempted to re-interview Mr. Ward but was unable to do so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. OK.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Obviously the report——

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, I understand the witnesses need a break. Do you want to wait for a round?

Mr. ERICSON. How long is a round?

[Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. Well, why don't we take a 5-minute break.

Mr. ERICSON. That would be great.

The CHAIRMAN. Five minutes, and then we will come back to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

[Recess.]

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Let's first talk about the question which you have quite properly answered, in my view, about whether this is an exoneration or a vindication, whatever words are descriptors to describe the conclusions that you reached were not used by you in connection with your report, or indeed are not appropriate to the mission that you undertook on behalf of the RTC. Is that correct, Mr. Patterson?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Exoneration may well be in the eye of the beholder, but you reached certain conclusions based on the evidence which was put forward in your report, and you stand by them?

Mr. PATTERSON. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And if the conclusions are that there was no evidence to conclude that anyone did anything improper, much less fraudulent, then someone could interpret that, if they were personally involved in that factual conclusion, as a vindication if there had been an allegation that they did something improper? Is that fair enough?

Mr. PATTERSON. I think we write the reports. We do not control how they are interpreted by other people.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The witnesses that were mentioned to you, some of them were ones that the Independent Counsel refused to allow you to interview. Correct?

Mr. PATTERSON. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Such as Mr. Hale and Mr. Latham. Others were the subject of the investigation and were ultimately tried, and the jury is quite literally out in connection with that matter; right?

Mr. PATTERSON. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now in addition, there were documents that you sought that were in the possession of the Independent Counsel. We have kind of the same situation right now, and the Independent Counsel did not allow you to review all of the documents you wished to review?

Mr. PATTERSON. In certain cases, initially. I believe we got all of the documents that we asked for through the courts in various Rule 6(e) petitions, however.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And it was up to the Independent Counsel to determine whether or not he would agree to provide those under a 6(e) Order?

Mr. PATTERSON. That is correct. There were times we had to wait in line until they had finished with the documents before we could have access to them.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I understand that process.

Now with respect to the article that the Chairman referred to, which is the report of the Chicago Sun-Times of January 21, 1996, I would like to draw your attention to that article which was entitled "Fact Fights Fiction Over Whitewater" and see whether you will comment on the conclusions that are drawn by Mrs. Clinton in that article. Referring to the report on the second page of the transcript:

It concluded that the President and I were passive investors in a failed land transaction that lost more than $40,000 on Whitewater, as we have said all along. It also concluded that we had little knowledge and no control over the Whitewater project.

Now, Mr. Ericson, is that a fair summary?

Mr. ERICSON. In part. The term "passive investor" is one that was discussed in the Supplemental Report on Whitewater. I think I said there that that was really not the issue, and I thought that was a bit of a red herring. But the rest of what you read I think is a fair statement.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. By "passive investor"—and we went around a little bit with Mr. Stephens about this—in general layman's terms, a "passive investor" would be characterized as one who did not involve himself or herself in the actual operation of the investment? Is that fair to say?

Mr. ERICSON. I think that is fair.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Using that definition, you would agree with the paragraph I read?

Mr. ERICSON. I think using that definition, I would agree. What I meant to point out here was that at pages 77 and 78 of the Supplemental Report, there is a little discussion of the concept of "passive investor." We note that it has several specific meanings in the law, as opposed to lay meanings and that—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right.

Mr. ERICSON. —those meanings simply have no relevance to this.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I agree.

Going back to Mrs. Clinton's article:

Further, it affirmed what we have said from day one: That we had no knowledge of any money flowing from Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan to Whitewater, and that we did not receive any loans or dividends from the savings and loan. Madison Guaranty was acquired by our partner in Whitewater, James B. McDougal, some years after we invested in the project.

Factually speaking, do you take issue with that, Mr. Ericson?

Mr. ERICSON. No. Except to a very trivial extent. As I have already testified, I would not use the word "partner."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And going on:

As for matters relating to Madison, the report found no evidence that I had any knowledge of any wrongdoing on the part of the savings and loan while I was at the Rose Law Firm.

Mr. ERICSON. I think that is fair.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Going forward:

Billing records located after the report was completed confirm that I did minimal legal work on Madison—an average of about 1 hour a week over 15 months, just as I have said from the beginning.

The conclusion was that the work performed was minimal.

Mr. ERICSON. As I already testified, I stayed away from adjectives and consciously didn't use a word like "minimal."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Sixty hours over 15 months.

Mr. ERICSON. The numbers are what they are.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And we have discussed what that meant in relative terms today. Finally, Mrs. Clinton pointed out that:

Despite these findings, there was no news conference, no announcement, no effort by Congressional investigators to make them public.

We, in fact, once the reports were made available to us, put them in the record, or attempted to do so. There was some problem with getting that accomplished for a number of days, but eventually they were then made public.

Now let me ask that a chart be put up that reflects the conclusions reached with respect to the retention of the Rose Law Firm. It is in the Supplemental Report on the Representation of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan by the Rose Law Firm, February 25, 1996. So this supplemented the earlier report that was issued? Is that correct, Mr. Ericson?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And under "Retention of the Rose Law Firm," the first point on our chart is the conclusion that:

Mrs. Clinton's recollections and Mr. Massey's recollections differ in some respects but for—

This is in respect to how the client came into the firm.

—present purposes, the differences are not material. . . . It makes little difference who was right. There is no hint of fraud or intentional misconduct in either version, and the mere act of retaining the Rose Law Firm did not harm Madison Guaranty in any respect.

Now is that your conclusion?

Mr. ERICSON. Those are certainly excerpts from our conclusion, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you stand by them today?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson.

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, I do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I says:

There is no suggestion that the money was to be a gratuity [as opposed to payment for work performed], nor is there any suggestion of any improper quid pro quo. Again, there is no proof of fraud, intentional misconduct, or harm to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan.

Was that your conclusion, Mr. Ericson and Mr. Patterson?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes, that is a part of our conclusions.

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you stand by those conclusions today?

Mr. ERICSON. Certainly.

Mr. PATTERSON. I do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Continuing:

[I]t is highly unlikely to find there was anything untoward, let alone fraudulent or intentionally wrongful in the circumstance of the Rose Law Firm's retention by Madison Guaranty.

Do you stand by that conclusion?

Mr. ERICSON. I do. I want to note one thing, though. You have excerpted part of a sentence. What I said was: "A trier of fact is highly unlikely to find . . ." and so on.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. So if you put yourself in the position of the trier of fact, you kind of make that conclusion?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now going forward:

[T]he alleged economic motivation makes no sense. McDougal suggests the Clintons need $2,000 a month, and the implication is that the account is for the monthly retainer in that amount, but there is no evidence that the Clintons ever received anything like $2,000 a month from this engagement, and every reason to believe that they never received more than a trivial sum of money.

By which I think you later concluded came to about $40 a month, given Mrs. Clinton's draw and the way the firm operated; right?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes, but I have to modify one thing. I think that we said it was more on the order of $20 a month. $40 would represent her share of gross receipts. $20 would be a better figure for her share of profits.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK, operating on a 50 percent profit margin as you did. That is correct. And at page 25 of your report you made exactly that point, that this would net out to a grand total of $20 a month over a 15-month period. My math would tell me that is $300, but I am finished relying on my math.

Let's turn to the conclusions that were reached in the Supplemental Report on the Representation of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan by the Rose Law Firm from the February 25, 1996. This Report was issued after the discovery of the billing records at the White House, the time records of the law firm, plus additional billing records.

You had some billing records and the new discovery provided additional billing records and detailed time breakdowns for attorneys from the Rose Law Firm who worked on Madison Guaranty matters. Is that correct?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes. We had very little before the discovery of those records. So the records added considerably to what we had.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The conclusion that you reached was, reading from page 42 of that report:

The billing records found at the White House and other newly acquired evidence add considerably to the sum of knowledge with respect to this matter. Taken as a whole, however, the new evidence does not change the conclusions stated in the Rose Report.

This was your report filed before you had the billing records.

Mr. ERICSON. Yes. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It continues:

The new evidence weakens to some extent the conclusion that Ward was a straw man or nominee and that the acquisition therefore was wrongful, although those remain propositions that one could reasonably advocate. The new evidence has very little effect on the analysis of what the Rose Law Firm knew and did before the acquisition of the IDC property closed. The new evidence shows that, after the acquisition closed, lawyers at the Rose Law Firm [and in particular Mrs. Clinton] had more contact with Seth Ward and performed more services for Madison Guaranty than previously was known, but there remains no substantial evidence that these lawyers knew of or intended to aid and abet McDougal's apparent misconduct.

Do you stand by that conclusion?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you stand by that, Mr. Patterson?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, I do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now going on in the Supplemental Report on the Representation of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan by the Rose Law Firm, reading from pages 163 and 164:

It would simply not be persuasive to argue that, for $21,000, McDougal corrupted the Rose Law Firm and convinced half a dozen lawyers, most of whom he did not know, to join him in a scheme to violate the law. Odd as he might seem, McDougal did not involve large groups of strangers in his schemes. Indeed, McDougal typically involved a close group of long-time friends and trusted associates in his plans, and nobody else. And typically it was the same people, over and over, friends and vassals who dated back to McDougal's youth.

Now is that your conclusion, Mr. Ericson?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you agree with that, Mr. Patterson?

Mr. PATTERSON. I do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And as I think we covered earlier, the Clintons were not in this close group of long-time friends who were used by Mr. McDougal in that respect?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. ERICSON. That's our conclusion.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Going forward:

The conspiracy theory is hopelessly flawed. The Independent Counsel already has alleged a different conspiracy—the conspiracy with Tucker—involving the same property, IDC/Castle Grande. Without prejudging the results of that forthcoming trial, let us grant that the conspiracy alleged in the [McDougal-Tucker] indictment does not violate common sense. The principals were cut in the deals, and relatively large amounts of money changed hands. . . . Whatever one thinks of that, however, it strains common sense to place a second set of conspirators on the same property—a set that included half a dozen lawyers who had never met McDougal before, a set that was not cut in on the deals, a set whose senior members stood to gain something upon the order of $20 a month.

Is that your conclusion?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And are you comfortable with that today?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson, do you agree with that?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, I do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Stephens, you don't know anything about the facts?

Mr. STEPHENS. I have no basis to agree or disagree with this, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I see my red light is on.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me come back, if Mr. Giuffra has something that I can deal with. I think we are about finished. Let me ask a summary question in that respect, without going through all the conclusions in all of the reports. Mr. Patterson, is there any reason that has a foundation in facts that has come forward since the issuance of the reports, or in connection with any other evidence that you have seen that makes you feel that the conclusions reached in your reports are not accurate as we sit here today?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, there is not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ericson.

Mr. ERICSON. I am not aware of anything.

The CHAIRMAN. You had an opportunity, I think, to look at and examine some of the reports made by the Federal Bank Examiners with respect to a number of the transactions, in particular, the Castle Grande transaction didn't you?

Mr. ERICSON. We did.

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. In particular, there was one in I think 1987 in which they characterized that transaction which cost the bank about $3 or $4 million where Mr. Ward was a straw man? Do you agree or disagree with that?

Mr. ERICSON. As I indicated in the report, I think a jury probably would find he was a straw man, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Who represented him at that time? Was it the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. ERICSON. I'm sorry? At what time?

The CHAIRMAN. During that transaction he was involved with.

Mr. ERICSON. In my opinion the Rose Law Firm represented him in that transaction, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. So if you have a law firm that is aware of an improper transaction that its client is engaged in, is there any liability that might be ensuing to that firm?

Mr. ERICSON. There could be, but we did not find any evidence of such an awareness here.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, if you knew that the client was indeed participating in a sham transaction, would you say I would be mischaracterizing that transaction where Seth Ward was holding the property as a real transaction or as a sham transaction?

Mr. ERICSON. I think, as I said, the jury would conclude that he was acting as a straw, and that is the way I prefer to phrase it.

The CHAIRMAN. If the law firm was aware of that, would there be potential liability?

Mr. ERICSON. As you phrase it, I would agree with you; yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Would that not create and cause concern on the part of that law firm as to whether there was potential liability?

Mr. ERICSON. If there was such awareness, it might.

The CHAIRMAN. Sure, and I just wanted to ask so that we are not operating in this vacuum, and that this is not some pie-in-the-sky theory. Sometimes through no fault of the authors of a particular report, there is a characterization, for example, "Jay Stephens headed this." Jay Stephens, your billable hours were about $38,000. That is what you billed for, approximately. Would you say that, Mr. Patterson?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was more like $70,000.

The CHAIRMAN. I thought it was $38,000.

Senator SARBANES. $68,000.

The CHAIRMAN. So if it was $68,000, and we are not really sure, but say if there is a question of whether it is $38,000 or $68,000, or $70,000—all right, $68,000, that would hardly represent a major share of the billable hours, the legal billable hours, would it, Mr. Patterson, on this matter?

Mr. PATTERSON. Not on this matter; no, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. As a matter of fact, that would be about 4 percent of the total billable hours, if you charged $1.9 million?

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, Mr. Chairman, your math is a lot faster than mine.

The CHAIRMAN. It would be in that area.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I am staying out of this.

[Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. I just thought that I would touch on this.

Mr. GIUFFRA.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Ericson, the witnesses that are set forth on our chart there, those are names that you are familiar with; correct?

Mr. ERICSON. Most of them, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. They were people you chose not to depose or interview, right?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And to some extent when you made the decision as to whether to depose or interview those people, you discussed it with the RTC; right?

Mr. ERICSON. To some extent. I would also discuss it with Mr. Patterson and others I was working with.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could just very briefly go through some of the testimony that the Committee has received from some of these witnesses, and this is testimony that is not reflected in your report.

Now Citizens Bank of Flippin was what, Mr. Ericson?

Mr. ERICSON. It was a bank in Flippin that made the mortgage loan on the Whitewater property.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So that was the initial $180,000 loan; right?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Burge testified at our hearing on May 8th, at pages 19 and 20 that neither Governor Clinton nor Mr. McDougal had told him that the $20,000 Whitewater downpayment was borrowed from Union National Bank, and therefore that the Clintons and the McDougals were not putting any cash into the deal; that it was a 100 percent finance. Is that something you would have at least made note of in your report, that testimony?

Mr. ERICSON. Well, I am not familiar with this testimony because I have not seen it. I think it occurred after we finished our reports, although I am not sure of that. I think we did address the issue of the lack of equity of the Clintons and the McDougals in this. So that is something that we discussed in the report.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now here is more testimony that the Banking Committee obtained. We asked Mr. Burge whether it was the policy of his bank and a sound banking practice to make a 100 percent loan. And Mr. Burge said, no. Would you have made reference to that in your report?

Mr. ERICSON. I might have.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's just look at Mr. Ritter. Mr. Ritter was also at Citizens Bank of Flippin, and there was a question as to the extent of the Clintons' knowledge or control with regard to what was going on at Whitewater. In his testimony before the Committee, Mr. Ritter—and we can get you the actual testimony, but I will paraphrase it from pages 34 and 35, he testified that he had two meetings between 1979 and 1982 with Mrs. Clinton and Susan McDougal where Mrs. Clinton asked several questions about the Whitewater loan and interest rates. Mr. Ritter testified that he believed that Mrs. Clinton was knowledgeable about the Whitewater investment. Now that is something you would have wanted to include in your report, that testimony?

Mr. ERICSON. I would have probably noted that in the report, but I would not have regarded it as very material.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Paul Berry. Did you consider deposing him? Do you know who he was?

Mr. ERICSON. That is not a name I recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He testified that Governor Clinton personally approached him at the Union National Bank, which was the bank that provided the $20,000 downpayment loan, about making this loan on the Whitewater property; and that Mr. Denton stated that he had been instructed to make that loan.

Senator SARBANES. Where are you referring to now?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Focusing on pages 65 and 66 of Mr. Denton's hearing testimony, and on page 35 of Mr. Berry's deposition.

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't you tell Mr. Ericson and Mr. Patterson who Mr. Berry and Mr. Denton were, so they will have a frame of reference, at least.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Well, Mr. Berry was a lobbyist for Union National Bank, and Mr. Denton was Senior Vice President & Chief Lending Officer of that bank.

The CHAIRMAN. So they were officers, or they were working for the Union National Bank. Is that correct?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Yes.

Mr. ERICSON. Mr. Denton we are quite familiar with, and I believe Mr. Patterson talked to Mr. Denton on numerous occasions.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you were not able to obtain the testimony from Mr. Denton that he had been instructed by other persons at the bank to make the unsecured loan to Governor Clinton and also to Jim McDougal, and that—

The CHAIRMAN. Let me interrupt. Mr. Patterson, were you aware of that?

Mr. PATTERSON. With respect to Mr. Denton?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. PATTERSON. I believe I was aware that Mr. Denton had been involved in the loan; yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you aware of what Mr. Giuffra just indicated that Mr. Denton testified to here? Tell him what Mr. Denton testified to?

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. I think what we should do is give the witnesses the testimony to which Mr. Giuffra is making reference.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly. Can we send that down to them?

Senator SARBANES. Because, for example, on Mr. Berry the question was:

Question: Just to close the loop on the $20,000 loan, so it is your memory that it was Bill Clinton as opposed to Mr. McDougal who talked to you about the loan, about having the bank make that loan?"

Answer: He was the one that—he discussed that he was contemplating, he and Mrs. Clinton were contemplating buying a piece of property on the White River, and I said, well, if you need to borrow any money, I am sure we would like to handle it, which was my routine remark to all customers that I had a responsibility for when they expressed a credit need.

Question: At what point—

Answer: I didn't want them to go to some other bank. We would lose their business.

Now that is not the way the question was put to Mr. Ericson in terms of characterizing it.

The CHAIRMAN. Sure.

Senator SARBANES. It was put to Mr. Ericson in terms of the Clintons seeking the loan from Mr. Berry; whereas, Mr. Berry is very clear that he sort of proffered the loan when he heard they might engage in some real estate transaction.

So I think there may be a nuance, but it is an important nuance, a very important one, and I think if Mr. Giuffra is going to refer to testimony just taken recently—I mean, this was May 10, 1996, at his deposition. Of course, you had concluded your report, when, in February?

Mr. ERICSON. The last report was February 1996.

Senator SARBANES. But I think we should put the testimony in front of them.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You did not talk to Mr. Berry, right?

Mr. ERICSON. That is true.

The CHAIRMAN. So Mr. Berry's testimony speaks for itself, and we do not—

Mr. GIUFFRA. We do not have to debate this.

The CHAIRMAN. I think that the Senator was right in making that observation.

Mr. ERICSON. If it saves time, we can stipulate that we did not talk to any of the people on this list. There is no issue about that.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, the question is, if you had known and had had this information, what, if any, impact would this have had in your decisionmaking? I guess that is the relevance of asking you these things.

Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Chairman, if I could just sum this up.

Mr. STEPHENS, you did not write these reports; right?

Mr. STEPHENS. That is correct. I did not write these reports.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You gave some preliminary comments to Mr. Ericson; is that right?

Mr. STEPHENS. I gave some preliminary comments to Mr. Ericson with regard to the preliminary report that I was provided in either late October or early November 1994. That was my last comments on any of these reports.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You did not bill any time in 1985 or 1986 except for a few hours in January?

The CHAIRMAN. 1995.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Yes, 1995 and 1996, with regard to this matter?

Mr. STEPHENS. That is correct. I think I had 3 hours in January 1st, 2nd, or 3rd of 1995, but essentially my work concluded probably in the fall. Mr. Ericson asked me to review this report, or take a look at it and give him some comments, so arguably you could say my work concluded with those comments.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You did not review any of the other reports? For example, the Rose Report that was discussed previously—any of the Rose Reports?

Mr. STEPHENS. That is correct—neither drafts nor finals—that is correct; I was not asked to do that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. On the Supplemental Whitewater Report, you did not review any drafts; you did not review the final; is that right?

Mr. STEPHENS. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. When you spoke to Mr. Ericson, you gave him some comments, and those included one that you thought that perhaps his initial draft did not sufficiently cover the range of fraud that Mr. McDougal was involved in at Madison Guaranty?

Mr. STEPHENS. I will just stand by my prior testimony as to my comments. I think it sufficiently stated my views.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you were concerned about the fact—

Senator SARBANES. That was not a statement of your prior comments; correct?

Mr. STEPHENS. That is correct. That was a bit different from my prior comments.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were concerned about whether the pattern of activity that Mr. McDougal was engaged in was being reflected in the report; right?

Mr. STEPHENS. Not necessarily Mr. McDougal, but Madison Bank and the various real estate transactions that Madison was involved in. My concern was essentially that the Whitewater Report not be viewed in isolation from all the other transactions because it might not provide a complete picture.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And with regard to the Whitewater transaction, you were concerned that the report did not appear to take into account sufficiently what appeared to be a difference in the equity input into Whitewater by the Clintons and the McDougals; right?

Mr. STEPHENS. Yes, in a general way. I think it didn't really focus on whether or not there would be any issue of potential liability that would arise from that difference of participation with the same potential benefit between the parties.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You thought that the report, the draft you saw, focused too much on accounting issues and not enough on witness interviews?

Mr. STEPHENS. That was my general sense—I conveyed that it would be helpful and instructive to interview witnesses. I believe witnesses add a lot to a document case, and it is very difficult to draw inferences from documents.

It is easier if you have some witnesses' testimony. There may be reasons why you cannot interview witnesses, in which case obviously then you can't; but if you can, I think it is obviously helpful, and those witnesses should be interviewed.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And at least during the period you worked on this matter, the RTC, the client, was very hands-on; right?

Mr. STEPHENS. With regard to my work, I would think that is a fair characterization.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Ericson, you would agree that they were a fairly active client; right?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes. In this matter, and in every matter I have ever worked with the RTC on, I would agree.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In connection with that "hands-on" nature of the client relationship, if there is any suggestion that means that you were told to reach a specific conclusion, or told not to interview a particular witness, let me give you the opportunity to respond.

Mr. Patterson.

Mr. PATTERSON. We were never told that. Had we been told that, I assure you we would have not had acceded to that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ericson.

Mr. ERICSON. I agree with what Mr. Patterson said.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now to Mr. Ritter's testimony, Mr. Berry's testimony, and Mr. Denton's testimony, with respect to the making of the $20,000 loan to the Clintons and the McDougals that was unsecured which was used for a downpayment on the purchase of the original Whitewater tract back in 1978, the testimony is that unsecured loans were made regularly by these banks. They were quite interested in getting the Clintons to become customers of the banks, and offered and volunteered the opportunity to lend them money. They had a prior lending relationship with Mr. McDougal which was a quite satisfactory one. In the context of all that, does that information add or subtract from the conclusions that you reached?

Mr. ERICSON. No, it really doesn't.

I would like to add one further thing. 1978 is 4 years before McDougal bought Madison Guaranty, so there is no nexus whatsoever between that and any possible injury to Madison Guaranty.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Of course. And even if the financing had occurred while Mr. McDougal had a controlling interest in Madison Guaranty, that would not affect a conclusion about whether the Clintons were passive investors or hands-on investors? This was obtaining the financing for the investment, as compared with managing the investment. Is that correct?

Mr. ERICSON. Again, I have not read this testimony. I have listened to various of you describe the testimony, but if I take as accurate your description of the testimony I would say it would affect none of our conclusions.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, the question of how money was obtained to go into an investment prior to the inception of the business of that investment would not affect whether an individual was hands-on in running the business that was invested in?

Mr. ERICSON. I think that is true.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It's pretty elementary stuff.

If we could put up the chart to address this point, again, since it has been brought up about Mr. Ward. First, the conclusion that you reached, Mr. Ericson, about Mr. Ward being a straw man, and, of course, that issue was the subject of a civil trial in Little Rock back in 1987.

Mr. ERICSON. Not really. The transaction was the subject of a civil trial, but the issue in that trial was whether he was entitled to certain commissions. So far as I could tell—and I have read the transcript of the trial, and I have talked to trial counsel for Madison Guaranty—the issue of him being a straw or not being a straw entered that, if at all, only very tangentially.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Tangentially. And because the parties themselves did not think it was terribly relevant?

Mr. ERICSON. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let's look at your conclusions:

[W]hile Mrs. Clinton drafted the May 1, 1986 option, nothing proves she did so knowing it to be wrong, the circumstances of the work point strongly toward innocent explanations, and the theories that tie this option to wrongdoing or to the straw-man arrangements are strained at best.

Now is there anything that has occurred since you came to that conclusion in February of this year that would make you modify or change that conclusion, Mr. Ericson?

Mr. ERICSON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson.

Mr. PATTERSON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Further:

[I]t is doubtful that the option caused any harm. It was never exercised. It did not cover up anything, nor did it prevent the FHLBB examiners from roundly criticizing the IDC/Castle Grande Project in their 1986 Report of Examination. While it became an issue in Ward v. Madison, neither Ward's counsel nor Madison Guaranty's counsel thinks it was very important to the result, and a review of the trial transcript leads to the same conclusion.

Again, simply carrying forward the point that you had just made that you had talked to the people involved and had come to this conclusion on the basis of accumulating the facts.

Mr. ERICSON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Of course, you looked at the Bank Examiners Reports in response to an earlier question that suggested that you might not have done so, and it is quite clear from your earlier responses and from the conclusion here stated that you looked at the Bank Examiners Reports. Indeed, I believe, interviewed the Bank Examiners?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes. In fact, that was one of the very first things we did in this investigation back in February 1994, was look at the Bank Examiners Reports and we made constant reference to them throughout the investigation.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now when did it appear clear or apparent that the Clintons had not engaged in any wrongdoing in the course of when you went through this material? Would that have been by the first draft of the Whitewater Report that we have talked about?

Mr. ERICSON. I have a little difficulty with the question as it is phrased. I worked on different parts of this at different times—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to Whitewater.

Mr. ERICSON. With respect to Whitewater.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right.

Mr. ERICSON. I certainly was of the view that there was no case to be brought against the Clintons as of the time I prepared the first draft.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that was the draft that Mr. Stephens reviewed?

Mr. ERICSON. Yes. Well, he reviewed several drafts, as I think he has testified, and I certainly will testify, but that was the first one he reviewed.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What were the other drafts that Mr. Stephens reviewed?

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Stephens, were you going to say something?

Mr. STEPHENS. I was just going to add, that does not comport with my memory. I reviewed one draft of the report, if I remember correctly, in early November.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ericson.

Mr. ERICSON. Let me put it this way. I only recall discussing with Mr. Stephens the first draft. I believe I sent him one or two later drafts, and I think his timesheets reflect that he at least briefly may have looked at one or two of the later drafts, but I don't think that he and I ever discussed them.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was there any effort to—

Mr. STEPHENS. May I respond to that? That would probably account for the 3 hours in January of 1995. There may have been a second draft that I spent 3 hours looking at at one point.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. After looking at that draft, apparently you did not convey any further comments to Mr. Ericson?

Mr. STEPHENS. I do not think I finished reading that draft, if I remember correctly. Three hours probably would not have been sufficient to read it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So you read it, billed for it, and put it down?

Mr. STEPHENS. I didn't read—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You didn't finish it.

Mr. STEPHENS. Right. Mr. Ericson didn't ask for any comments.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You billed $600 bucks for partially reading the report; is that right?

Mr. STEPHENS. I read part of the report for 3 hours and did not provide any comments. I was not asked for any comments, and it did not seem that any comments were appropriate in that circumstances.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did anyone prevent you from giving any comments you might have had?

Mr. STEPHENS. It was not my role in the engagement at that point in time to volunteer comments because I did not have a factual predicate upon which to base those comments.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did anyone prevent you from volunteering any comments, Mr. Stephens? Anyone from the RTC? Anyone from the firm of Pillsbury Madison & Sutro, or anyone else on the planet?

Mr. STEPHENS. Well, in fact the RTC asked me to read all the reports when the reports were filed in December. I declined to do that because I had not been involved in the engagement. I thought it was improper and inappropriate for me to review those reports simply so the RTC could have my imprimatur on those reports.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did anyone prevent you from providing any comment on the reports that Mr. Ericson sent you?

Mr. STEPHENS. I was not "prevented" from doing something, Mr. Ben-Veniste, but in the dynamic of how the engagement was structured, it certainly wasn't something that I would reach out and do my own private investigation and then provide comments to Mr. Ericson and Mr. Patterson.

If they had wanted my comments, if they had asked me to review certain materials, if they had wanted me to look at the predicate to review those reports, I probably would have responded to that, as I did earlier, that I will do anything you want me to do to assist. But it really wasn't appropriate for me to reach out and start providing comments based on suppositions that I might read in press accounts or something.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, you weren't exactly——

Senator SARBANES. Why did you bill the RTC for partially reading a report?

Mr. STEPHENS. I billed them because at that point there was a question of whether I should review this report. It probably was sent to me by Mr. Ericson. At some point it was apparent that nobody was going to ask me for comments, so I just stopped reading the report.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So it was your view——

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. Ericson could have written it off, if he had wanted to.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So you were just sort of passive there, that the people had to ask you for comments for you to give any. Did anyone ask you for comments the first time you gave the comments?

Mr. STEPHENS. In November, yes. Mr. Ericson in a casual way, said, would you take a look at this and give me your thoughts, give me any thoughts you have, or ideas you have.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And then when you got the second draft, you thought that those instructions were inoperative and that you ought not to give any comments if you had any?

Mr. STEPHENS. It may be that there were no comments asked for in the second draft. I got it, started reading it, and realized that there was no reason for me to read this. Maybe it would have been appropriate for me to write that time off.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you have any comments?

Mr. STEPHENS. I don't remember what that report said.

Senator SARBANES. I am not sure why you billed for it under the facts your are outlining for us.

Mr. STEPHENS. Pardon?

Senator SARBANES. It is not clear to me why you billed time.

Mr. STEPHENS. I spent 3 hours reading that report.

Senator SARBANES. I understand that, but why did you bill for it on the basis of what you are now telling us?

Mr. STEPHENS. I spent the time on the client matter. I reviewed or read the report for 3 hours, and I think it was appropriate. If the billing partner did not see any value in that, it was his option of course to write that time off.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Of course, he would not know that you did not regard, having been sent the draft as an invitation to comment?

Mr. STEPHENS. It was his report. He was the billing partner.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ericson, what was the purpose of sending that report?

Mr. ERICSON. You know, I don't have any specific recollection. I think I just sent Jay a draft in case he had any comments or suggestions for me, and I probably just put it in an envelope and sent it to him. And, when I didn't hear back, I assumed he had nothing of substance to pass along and didn't think any more of it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That seems pretty straight-ahead. And then if I understand your comments, Mr. Stephens, when a client asks you specifically to review the reports later on, you decline to do so? So then, rather than anyone telling you not to do something, you were invited to comment and you declined to do so because you had not participated—

Mr. STEPHENS. If I remember correctly in December 1995, shortly before the Pillsbury Reports were filed with the RTC, the client called one of my partners and asked that I review these reports. The client apparently was concerned that I might differ with them, or that the client—I don't know all the client's reasoning—wanted my blessing, somehow or other, so that there would be no differences of views about these reports.

We discussed that, Mr. Ericson, Mr. Patterson, and I. I said I thought it was inappropriate. I did not have the factual predicate. It did not seem appropriate for me to go back and get up to speed on the entire factual predicate simply to review the report from the RTC. I felt, frankly, it was inappropriate to ask me to read those reports. As a consequence, I declined.

I think Mr. Patterson discussed that matter with the client and advised the client that the better part of discretion here would be that there was no reason to involve me in reading those reports or to get my imprimatur on those reports.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson, what is your recollection?

Mr. PATTERSON. I think that is substantially correct, Mr. Ben-Veniste. The client had asked—I think it wasn't, did not ask for Jay's imprimatur on the reports, but rather asked if Jay was "all right" with these reports; and could I ask that he review them so they would know what his position was. Jay declined to do so; felt that he did not want to do so. I called the client back and said, that's what the situation was. They said, no problem.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did Mr. Stephens at any time during this time period indicate to you that he took issue with the conclusions that were reached in the draft reports?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, he did not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ericson.

Mr. ERICSON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, Mr. Stephens, you did not take issue with the conclusions that were reached because you claim you didn't have the basis?

Mr. STEPHENS. That is correct. I did not have a basis to comment appropriately on these reports.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you. Who was "the client"? Who at the end called and said, how does Jay Stephens feel about this, or whatever he or she said, and you can use your own words?

Mr. PATTERSON. Mark Gabrellian would have called me and asked if Jay was all right with all of these reports, and would have asked me—or it could have been Bruce and I both—whether Jay could review the reports. We talked to Jay. He declined to do so. We advised the client, and that was the end of it.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Stephens, you felt that this would be putting your imprimatur on this without having had the opportunity to really be involved in the product itself?

Mr. STEPHENS. I think we all agreed that the individuals who had written the reports, who had done the vast majority of the investigation, they should review those reports; that it would be somewhat, simply a perceptual exercise for me to review those reports; and that it really was not a fair use of the time and that it really was not appropriate to proceed that way.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did anyone withhold from you, Mr. Stephens, the reports of interviews, depositions, or other materials associated with—had you made any request to review materials that was turned down?

Mr. STEPHENS. No, Mr. Ben-Veniste, but in the context of doing a matter, it would be rather unusual, frankly, for the partner down the hall from me to make that same request: Can I see the depositions, and the interview notes.

While I was assigned to the matter, frankly I wasn't doing any work on it of any substance certainly after November 1994, and it would have seemed rather strange for me to reach out and say, give me all those interview notes, I want to do my own little investigation. I think that would have been inappropriate in the context of the dynamic of the way it was staffed. Mr. Ericson and Mr. Patterson are both very talented and very experienced, and they had conducted the investigation. It seemed rather inappropriate for me to reach out and try to do my own investigation.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The bottom line is that you did not make any request, and, therefore, nobody turned you down.

Mr. STEPHENS. I think you are trying to characterize it unfairly. I stand by my comments.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So, if I were going to characterize this from a standpoint of you distancing yourself, I certainly could think of things much more extensive than have been brought forward here, Mr. Stephens.

Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. We could go on and on and on. I have to tell you, though, this last matter I think takes on a certain light in terms of how some, indeed, without Mr. Stephens having signed off, so to speak, on this report, have used the fact and have even characterized this report as one being headed by Mr. Stephens.

It would appear that there was an attempt to get his stamp of approval as it related to the work product that eventually became the report. As a matter of fact, to read the report, not even the work product, I think Mr. Stephens has given his testimony as to what he felt would have been necessary, and that would not have been appropriate. Indeed, you, Mr. Patterson, Mr. Ericson, and Mr. Stephens, discussed it. Was that right?

Mr. PATTERSON. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. See, I don't know whether or not the RTC was attempting to get a situation where there could be no correction, if Mr. Stephens read this; just, you know, after all then he agrees. He agrees with what happened, how it was done, how it was conducted, in the "Stephens Report."

Look, we could go back and forth on this. I believe that all of you have been straightforward and candid. Mr. Patterson, Mr. Ericson, and Mr. Stephens, we thank you for coming in and attempting to explain what you attempted to do in this report, what the report did, what its conclusions were, and how you arrived at them.

Anything as extensive and as controversial as these matters, and where subjective views from people enter in, you are always going to have people who are going to second guess. That is not our role here. Our role was to determine what you did do, and the interpretations and the spins that various people place on these reports that certainly don't reflect, necessarily, what your conclusions were or what you meant by them. So I think that is a fair statement.

Let me comment at this time with respect to two witnesses. Mr. Hale, the potential of examining him, we are sending a letter out to his lawyer suggesting a time of, I believe, next Friday in order to depose him; and the following Wednesday, June 4th because of the recess, for possible public testimony.

In addition, we have been informed by Mr. Watkins' lawyer that he is still under a doctor's care and I will let Counsels speak to that, about what if anything we will do about that.

Again, I want to thank the witnesses for appearing, and I want to thank them for their candor.

We stand in recess.

Mr. ERICSON. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. PATTERSON. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. STEPHENS. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

[Whereupon, at 12:47 p.m., on May 17, 1996, the hearing in the above-entitled matter was recessed, to reconvene subject to the Call of the Chair.]

Re: Resolution Trust Corporation - Investigation of Madison Guaranty S&LA, Little Rock, Arkansas - Case Plan and Budget

Dear Mark:

As requested, I enclose a case plan and budget for this matter. Needless to say, many things remain uncertain (such as the documents that may or may not become available in Little Rock), but we have done the best we can to plan a realistic and cost-effective investigation.

Very truly yours,

I. CASE PLAN.A. Overview.

We think the investigation should break down into three discrete subject matter areas: real estate deals; check kiting; and overall pattern and practice of misconduct.

The real estate deals include Castle Grande, Castle Water & Sewer Company, Campobello, Maplecreek Farms, Goldmine Springs, 1308 Main and 13th and Main (and possibly others, such as Eden Park, Brittany Point and Fair Oaks). Issues include self-dealing, fraudulent conveyances at inflated values (land flips), and improper and excessive payments to affiliates and cronies. To the extent they may rise to the level of intentional misconduct, issues also include regulatory violations, violations of the 1984 Supervisory Agreement and the 1986 Cease and Desist Order, and other unsafe and unsound practices that appear (a) to be intentional and (b) to have resulted in substantial losses to the institution or personal gain.

We know relatively little about the check kite, apart from the information set forth in the criminal referral. It appears to involve approximately 12 entities. Here too a major question is whether the kite, even if proved, resulted in substantial losses to the institution or personal gain.

Finally, the issue of overall patterns and practices arises for several reasons: First, regardless of the types of claims that may be asserted, we need to demonstrate that any wrongful conduct that occurred was intentional misconduct, and not an isolated incident or inadvertent error. Second, some of the alleged wrongful conduct is not specific to any one deal. Third, we may wish to consider asserting civil RICO claims and, if so, we will need to establish a "pattern of racketeering activity" within the meaning of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961(1), (5).

B. Real estate deals.

These, by their very nature, are document-intensive. They also are the subject of previous investigations (e.g., Gerrish) and previous litigation (e.g., the McDougal criminal case and the Dixie Continent, Files, Frost & Company, Hale, Bill Henley, Tucker, Ward and Whitener civil cases). To avoid re-inventing the wheel, we need to start by reviewing, understanding and thoroughly analyzing the very extensive documentary record of these matters, both for what assistance it offers us (e.g., collections of key documents, interview notes) and for what problems it presents (e.g., possible preclusive effect of previous settlement agreements and releases).

1. The applicable statutes of limitations probably limit us to such claims. The statutes applicable to negligence and gross negligence apparently have expired. See 12 U.S.C. § 1441a(b)(14), as modified by the Resolution Trust Corporation Completion Act of 1993, Pub. L. No. 103-204, 107 Stat. 2369, and by section 4 of the emergency earthquake relief act signed February 12, 1994.

We propose to assign a team, typically consisting of a real estate transactional lawyer and a litigator, to each of these matters, as follows:

1. Castle Grande and Castle Water & Power.

Document volume and location:

D.C.: Ward litigation (three boxes); portions of Gerrish and Ingersoll & Bloch reports (10 boxes and growing); portions of the OTS files (eight boxes).

K.C.: Approximately 64 files, of which 27 appear to be the most pertinent.

Little Rock: Unknown.

Potential witnesses or defendants: Lisa Aunspaugh; George Betts; Steve Cuffman; William Darby; Don Denton; Paul Eckert; Davis Fitzhugh; J. William Fulbright; David Hale; Dwight Harlan; David Henley; James Henley; Larry Kuca; John Latham; James McDougal; Susan McDougal; Mitchell law firm; Robert Palmer; Dean Paul; Charles Peacock III; R. D. Randolph; Jim Guy Tucker; Seth Ward; Freddie Whitener; and Bob Wilson.

Special issues: Legislative and regulatory issues re Castle Sewer and Water Company; backdating of documents; tax fraud (Ward); effect of settlements and releases.

PM&S team: John Garrett; Louis Raymond; Michael Finnegan.

2. Campobello, Maplecreek.

Document volume and location:

D.C.: Portions of Gerrish and Ingersoll & Bloch reports (10 boxes and growing); portions of the OTS files (eight boxes).

K.C.: Approximately 214 files, of which 89 appear to be the most pertinent.

Little Rock: Unknown.

Potential witnesses or defendants: Lisa Aunspaugh; George Betts; Eugene Pat Harris; David Henley; James Henley; Larry Kuca; James McDougal; Susan McDougal; Robert Palmer; Charles Peacock III; R. D. Randolph; Sasaki Associates; Chris Wade; and Bob Wilson.

Special issues: Heightened difficulty of proving intentional misconduct with respect to these early (pre-Supervisory Agreement) deals; violation of Interstate Land Sales Act (Campobello); file-stuffing (Maplecreek).

PM&S team: Chris Curtis; Vicki Randall; Kent Goss.

3. 1308 Main, 13th & Main, Goldmine Springs, Eden Park, Brittany Point and Fair Oaks.

Document volume and location:

D.C.: None, other than a few memoranda, such as three criminal referrals and the exhibits thereto.

K.C.: Approximately 62 files, of which 23 appear to be the most pertinent.

Little Rock: Unknown.

Potential witnesses or defendants: Lisa Aunspaugh; Eugene Pat Harris; Bill Henley; James McDougal; Susan McDougal; Jim Guy Tucker; Freddie Whitener; and Greg Young.

PM&S team: John Garrett; Faith Kelly.

- C. Check kiting.

Document volume and location:

D.C.: None, other than several criminal referral and the exhibits thereto.

K.C.: Unknown.

Little Rock: Unknown, but we understand that most documents relevant to this topic should be in Little Rock, perhaps in the hands of the special prosecutor.

Potential witnesses or defendants: Bill Clinton; Hillary Clinton; J. William Fulbright; James McDougal; Susan McDougal; Stephen A. Smith; Jim Guy Tucker.

PM&S team: Kathleen Collins; Ethan Feffer; Marvin Bartel.

- D. Overall patterns and practices.

1. Appraiser malpractice.

The appraisal work performed by George Betts and Robert Palmer appears to be seriously deficient and possibly the result of intentional misconduct. Possible hurdles here may include statutes of limitations and, at least in the case of George Betts, an inability to pay any judgment (Betts went through a chapter 7 bankruptcy). Still, the appraisers could prove to be useful witnesses.

2. Title company wrongdoing.

Madison Guaranty set up its own captive title company, Quapaw Title, using two employees lured from Mid-South Title (Clark and Tanner). Quapaw's practices appear to be seriously deficient and possibly the result of intentional misconduct. Quapaw Title no longer exists.

Document volume and location:

K.C.: Unknown (the views expressed above are based largely on a review of specific transactions rather than files maintained by Quapaw itself).

Little Rock: Unknown, except that the Arkansas Insurance Commissioner may have documents on microfilm relating to Quapaw's existence and dissolution.

3. Attorney misconduct.

Both the Mitchell firm and the Rose firm issued "clean" opinions to Madison Guaranty's auditors indicating that counsel were aware of no actual or potential claims against Madison Guaranty. At least in the case of the Mitchell firm, issuance of such an opinion is very difficult to reconcile with facts of which the firm's lawyers must have known, given their involvement in some of the real estate deals mentioned above.

Potential witnesses or defendants: Hillary Clinton; Jim Guy Tucker.

4. Self-dealing and fraudulent conduct.

A pattern of self-dealing and apparent insider abuses seems to run through these transactions. We should investigate the idea that Madison Guaranty was run essentially to facilitate such misconduct. We are struck, for example, by Madison Financial's articles of incorporation, which appear to contemplate and indeed bless self-dealing.

Document volume and location:

D.C.: OTS records (eight boxes) and other supervisory documents.

K.C.: Articles of incorporation, by-laws, board minutes and records, and other general corporate documents. As noted, we have uncovered some oddities in the articles of incorporation of Madison Financial. These suggest that self-dealing was contemplated from the outset.

Little Rock: We suggest subpoenaing Deloitte & Touche, as Madison fired Deloitte in 1984. Some review of corporate financial records may be needed. We also suggest review of files pertaining to key witnesses (e.g., Tucker, Ward). Many of the key players borrowed money for personal reasons from Madison Guaranty.

Potential witnesses or defendants: In addition to those listed above, Karen Bruton, Paul Castleberry, Steve Cuffman and Pat Heritage, and auditors from Deloitte & Touche.

Special issues:

Effect of bankruptcy discharges: Betts; McDougal; Latham.

Effect of settlements and releases in prior civil cases: Dixie Continent. Files, Frost & Company, Hale, Bill Warley, ~~Harold~~, ~~Ward~~, ~~Ward~~ and ~~Whitener~~ civil cases.

PM&S team: Jay Stephens; Ed Kolto; our real estate team.

E. Liaison with other investigations.

We need to avoid friction with other investigations (e.g., the special prosecutor) and, where possible, effect economies by cooperating.

PM&S team: Charles Patterson; Jay Stephens.

F. Depositions and financial condition discovery.

To the extent desired by the RTC, once targets are identified, we need to subpoena their personal financial statements and depose them on these and merits-related subjects.

PM&S team: Charles Patterson; Jay Stephens; Bruce Ericson.

G. Legal research.

A number of issues have appeared already, and more will emerge as we progress. The issues that already have appeared include:

1. Effect of discharges in bankruptcy.
2. Effect of settlements and releases in prior civil litigation.
3. Construction of statute of limitations extender legislation.

4. Statutes of limitations and tolling doctrines applicable under Arkansas law (counting backwards from February 28, 1989), including fraudulent concealment and adverse domination.

5. Elements of causes of action under Arkansas law sounding in fraud and "intentional misconduct," and related theories of liability such as civil conspiracy and aider and abetter.

6. Control of documents and access to evidence (e.g., Fed. R. Crim. P. 6(e)).

PM&S team: Bruce Ericson; J. Daniel Davis; Marta Beckwith.

H. Drafting of recommendation and related papers.

PM&S team: Bruce Ericson.

III. TIME LOGS.

We anticipate working in accordance with the following rough schedule, bearing in mind that, as always in litigation, many things may be outside our control:

Date	Event
03/15/94	Complete basic document review
03/15/94	Serve subpoenas on third party witnesses
04/30/94	Complete third party interviews
05/31/94	Complete target subpoenas and depositions
06/30/94	Complete recommendation

III. BUDGET.

Our proposed budget is attached. There are, of course, considerable uncertainties here that could affect the cost of this investigation. We have no idea what, or how many, documents we will find in Little Rock. We also have no idea how negotiations with the Special Prosecutor will progress.

On the budget itself, please subtract from the totals the "overhead/contingency" and "overhead/diag." numbers (lines 100 and 101). The software automatically adds in these numbers, but they have no meaning and should be disregarded.

Attach.

Transaction	Chart	Disbursement Out of Madison Guaranty or Affiliate	Deposit Into Whitewater
1	8	$ 50,545	$ 7,500
3A	9	12,650	12,000
3B	10	68,574	5,566
6	11	46,000	1,000
8	12, 12A	900,949	24,456
9	13	112,872	7,500
Bonus	14	30,000	30,000
Totals		$1,221,590	$88,022

As can be seen, there is not necessarily any relationship between the dollar amount of the disbursement out of Madison Guaranty and the dollar amount of the associated deposit into Whitewater. There are several reasons for this:

First, the movement of funds among McDougal-controlled entities and from them to Whitewater is not unique but only one example of a broader pattern of funds transfers by the McDougals between and among entities they owned or controlled. In these years, the McDougals lacked the money needed to pay their debts, so they moved money between entities as needed to pay obligations to third persons.⁷ A desire to deposit money into Whitewater for Whitewater's ultimate benefit cannot be assumed to be the primary rationale behind a particular transaction; other debts may have loomed much larger.

Second, a disbursement out of Madison Guaranty cannot be assumed to have resulted in a loss or damages to Madison Guaranty. Typically, these disbursements were not loans that went unpaid. Instead, typically they were payments to vendors or employees (including McDougal).⁸ Because these disbursements were not loans, Madison Guaranty had no expectation of repayment. Therefore, these disbursements caused a loss to Madison Guaranty only if the vendors or the employees were not entitled to receive the 7 Preliminary Report at 5.

8 Among the nine transactions and the McDougal bonus, the only disbursement out of Madison Guaranty that took the form of a loan was part of transaction 8. As the table shows, however, the dollar amount of that loan ($825,000) exceeds the sum of the other disbursements.

DIARY OF JOSHUA L. STEINER

I. 12/2/93 - 1/9/94, lines 1-3: Whitewater (Clinton's real estate investments) and Madison S&L dominate the news. Clear lesson: release everything right away.

II. 1/24-2/12/94, lines 1 forward: Two extremes: In DC spent long hours w/ RA going over how he should handle the RTC's investigation of Whitewater. The statute of limitations on Madison Guaranty cases was supposed to expire 2/28. Should RA recuse himself or should he stay involved. The hurdle was so high (fraud) that it seemed unlikely the RTC would bring suit or seek a tolling agreement from BC/HRC, but the chance existed. RA originally decided to recuse himself but under intense pressure from the White House, he said he would make the final determination based on a recommendation from Ellen Kulka, the GC. The GOP through D'Amato began a countdown to the 28th which was particularly ironic since he had voted against extending the statute during the RTC reauthorization period. As it turns out, RA's problem will probably pass when the Congress decides to extend the statute once again. Pressure on RA will certainly mount next week when Congress holds hearings on the RTC given that Ricki Tiegart the FDIC nominee declared that she would recuse herself from all Madison related issues due to her friendship w/ the Clintons. The WSJ also got into the act w/ a scathing attack on RA and Gene Ludwig.

III. and IV. 2/13-2/27/94, line 7 forward: Every now and again you watch a disaster unfold and seem powerless to stop it. For weeks we have been battling over how RA should handle the RTC investigation of Madison Guaranty S&L. Initially, we all felt that he should recuse himself to prevent even the appearance of a conflict. At a fateful WH mtg w/ Nussbaum, Ickes and Williams, however, the WH staff told RA that it was unacceptable. RA had gone to brief them on the impending statute of limitations deadline and also to tell them of his recusal decision. They reacted very negatively to the recusal and RA backed down the next day and agreed to a defacto recusal where the RTC would handle this case like any other and RA would have no involvement. We are very concerned that at the RTC oversight hearings the GOP would hammer away at the recusal issue so we renewed discussions w/ the WH about what RA would do when his term expired on March 30. Once again they were very concerned about him turning the RTC people they didn't know so RA did not formally commit himself to stepping down (he could stay on if we had formally nominated a successor). At the hearing, the recusal amazingly did not come up. The GOP did hammer away at whether RA had had any mtgs. w/ the WH. He admitted to having had one to brief them on the statute deadline. They also asked if staff had met, but RA gracefully ducked the question and did not refer to phone calls he had had. The next day, the NYT ran a front page story on the mtg. The heat was on. We spent a tortured day trying to decide if he should recuse himself. I spoke w/ Podesta to let him know of our deliberations. Very frustrating that he was the chosen point of contact since he clearly was not in the complete confidence of George and Harold. After Howell Rains from the NYT called to say that they were going to write a brutal editorial, RA decided to recuse himself. Harold and George then called to say that BC was furious. They also asked how Jay Stephens, the former USA, had been hired to be outside counsel on this case. Simply outrageous that RTC had hired him, but even more amazing when George then suggested to me that we needed to find a way to get rid of him. Persuaded George that firing him would be incredibly stupid and improper. The NYT ran a very mean editorial which referred to the "bone headed conclave convened by RA." Lessons: Do what you think is the right thing early (recuse); remember that everything might eventually be asked about under oath; don't let the WH get involved in any way.

V. 2/13-27/94: Such an incredible city. Been battling w/ the RTC/Madison. Wrote two pages about what's been going on, suddenly realized that I could be subpoenaed like Packwoods and the most innocuous comments could be taken out of context. So on that subject, nothing.

STATEMENT

Mark D. Fabiani
Special Associate Counsel to the President

May 17, 1996

Republican hypocrisy has reached new lows. The Pillsbury Reports -- the result of two years and $4 million worth of work for federal regulators at the RTC -- vindicated the President and Mrs. Clinton. The Republicans did not like this conclusion, so first they tried to cover up the Pillsbury Reports. Now that the Reports have finally been made public, Republicans are trying to obscure the plain language of the Reports in the fog of Senator D'Amato's endless hearings. The Pillsbury Reports speak for themselves, and they support what the President and First Lady have said all along. No amount of Republican hypocrisy can change that fact.

Ms. HANSON. No.

Senator MURRAY. Do you know of anybody or have you yourself ever seen the criminal referrals?

Ms. HANSON. I have never seen the criminal referrals.

Senator MURRAY. Thank you.

Mr. Chairman, from my unique perspective, way down here, it seems to me that the chairs are getting empty and the yawns are getting larger so I'll yield back my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Do I understand you need to take a short break?

Ms. HANSON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't want your lawyer deciding it. I want you deciding it, and there's a big difference between the two. I mean, I'd gotten an indication that you needed one, but if that's his thinking and not yours, we're going to continue, no disrespect to him.

Ms. HANSON. Let's continue for a few minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Very good.

Senator Hatch, you're going to finish your line of questioning now.

Senator HATCH. I'll try to finish this time.

Ms. Hanson, when we finished before, you had called Mr. Nussbaum on February 8, 1994, and I wasn't quite sure what your answer was, but as I understand it, at the time you called him, you were of the view, personally, that the RTC civil case would not be handed over to Mr. Fiske at that time.

Ms. HANSON. I don't remember what my view was, at that point, sir. I've told you what I understood from Ms. Kulka.

Senator HATCH. You don't recall conveying that to Mr. Nussbaum?

Ms. HANSON. I don't.

Senator HATCH. You're not denying that you may have conveyed it to him at that time, are you?

Ms. HANSON. I'm not denying it. I don't recall.

Senator HATCH. Let me jump ahead a few weeks to February 24, 1994, the day that Mr. Altman testified before the Banking Committee. On that day, you received a call from Neil Eggleston. Is that right?

Ms. HANSON. That's correct.

Senator HATCH. On February 24, 1994. He was an attorney in the White House Counsel's Office. Correct?

Ms. HANSON. Correct.

Senator HATCH. He was, then, working for Mr. Nussbaum?

Ms. HANSON. Yes.

Senator HATCH. And Mr. Nussbaum called to ask you whether former U.S. Attorney, Jay Stephens, was the lead outside counsel representing the RTC in the Madison Guaranty matter?

Ms. HANSON. This was after the hearing on February 24, 1994, yes.

Senator HATCH. It was clear to you that Mr. Eggleston viewed this as a problem, wasn't it?

Ms. HANSON. He just asked me the question.

Senator HATCH. He wasn't the only Administration official who complained to you about the RTC's hiring of Mr. Stephens, was he?

Ms. HANSON. He was the only White House official that I spoke to about the matter.

Senator HATCH. But he wasn't the only one who complained to you about it, was he?

Ms. HANSON. There were other people in the Treasury Department that I spoke to.

Senator HATCH. Anybody else in the Administration?

Ms. HANSON. In the White House, no.

Senator HATCH. In fact, Joshua Steiner, the Chief of Staff to Treasury Secretary Bentsen, had told you that he thought Ellen Kulka should be fired for hiring Stephens, hadn't he?

Ms. HANSON. Yes, he did.

Senator HATCH. Michael Levy or Levy—I don't know how you pronounce it—who also works at Treasury, was part of this discussion you and Mr. Steiner had with Treasury. Is that correct?

Ms. HANSON. That's correct. I had several conversations with Mr. Steiner, but there was one where Mr. Levy was present.

Senator HATCH. Mr. Levy pointed out that lawyers hire lawyers based on their expertise as lawyers. Isn't that, basically, what he said?

Ms. HANSON. That's my recollection.

Senator HATCH. You agreed with him. Right?

Ms. HANSON. That's right.

Senator HATCH. Around this time, either Mr. Altman or Mr. Steiner telephoned you to ask how Jay Stephens had been hired. Is that correct?

Ms. HANSON. I was asked. I don't recall if it was in a telephone conversation.

Senator HATCH. Do you remember whether it was Mr. Altman or Mr. Steiner who called you at that time?

Ms. HANSON. I don't recall. I believe that my conversations were with Mr. Steiner, but I don't recall.

Senator HATCH. You told Mr. Altman or Mr. Steiner that Mr. Stephens was hired through the normal RTC contracting procedures. Isn't that what you said?

Ms. HANSON. That's correct.

Senator HATCH. In fact, you said that you were certain this was the case.

Ms. HANSON. That's correct.

Senator HATCH. But Mr. Altman or Mr. Steiner, nonetheless, insisted that you check to see if there was anything irregular in the process in which Jay Stephens was hired.

Ms. HANSON. I was asked to check—

Senator HATCH. Double-check it.

Ms. HANSON. To double-check how he was hired.

Senator HATCH. You understood, at the time, Mr. Steiner was extremely unhappy with the fact that Jay Stephens had been hired. Isn't that right?

Ms. HANSON. I wouldn't say—I wouldn't characterize it as extremely unhappy, but yes.

Senator HATCH. He was unhappy.

Ms. HANSON. Yes, he was unhappy.

Senator HATCH. In another conversation with Mr. Steiner, he asked you whether the RTC civil action could be given to the Whitewater Independent Counsel, Robert Fiske, rather than Ellen Kulka or Jay Stephens. Isn't that correct?

Ms. HANSON. I understood the question was whether the Independent Counsel could assume jurisdiction of the RTC investigation.

Senator HATCH. That was in another conversation with Steiner, he asked you whether the RTC civil action could be given to the Whitewater Independent Counsel instead of the other two, Kulka or Stephens.

Ms. HANSON. I understood it to be Stephens.

Senator HATCH. Right. You also knew, didn't you, that Mr. Steiner was receiving calls from the White House about Jay Stephens?

Ms. HANSON. I understood that.

Senator HATCH. Let me go back to that other question. In another conversation with Steiner, as I understand it, according to your deposition, he asked you whether the RTC civil action could be given to Whitewater Independent Counsel Fiske rather than to Kulka or Stephens. Do you remember stating that in your deposition?

Ms. HANSON. Rather than Stephens?

Senator HATCH. Rather than Fiske—excuse me, Fiske rather than Kulka or Stephens.

Ms. HANSON. Rather than Stephens, not Kulka—

Senator HATCH. Kulka and Stephens.

Ms. HANSON. She's the General Counsel of the RTC.

Senator HATCH. I mean Kulka and Stephens, yes. I think your deposition says, "I also recall a conversation with Mr. Steiner in which he asks whether the Independent Counsel could take over the civil investigation in lieu of Mr. Stephens," and it goes on from there. Do you remember saying that?

Ms. HANSON. Do I remember saying what?

Senator HATCH. In your deposition that I just read to you.

Ms. HANSON. Yes, I do.

Senator HATCH. And that's accurate?

Ms. HANSON. To my recollection, yes.

Senator HATCH. You also knew, didn't you, that Mr. Steiner was receiving calls from the White House about Jay Stephens?

Ms. HANSON. Yes, sir.

Senator HATCH. In fact, Mr. Steiner told you the people at the White House wanted to see if they could get rid of Jay Stephens. Isn't that correct?

Ms. HANSON. That is correct. He did say that. He said—what I recall him saying is, "Do you believe that they want to see if they can get rid of Jay Stephens and everyone agreed and understood that was ridiculous."

Senator HATCH. Do you recall what dates those conversations took place?

Ms. HANSON. It's my recollection that they took place after the testimony—the end of the day—later in the day, on February 24, 1994, possibly running over to the morning of February 25, 1994.

Senator HATCH. And others may have been several days earlier?

Ms. HANSON. Others?

Senator HATCH. With Steiner?

Ms. HANSON. No, they were all within a very close time frame.

Senator HATCH. But some of them may have taken place on February 25, 1994.

Ms. HANSON. I just don't recall, sir. It all happened within a very brief time frame.

Senator HATCH. Just a couple other questions. Ms. Hanson, would you agree that one of the concerns underlying the confidentiality of criminal referrals is that the premature disclosure can jeopardize the prosecution itself?

Ms. HANSON. That's correct, sir.

Senator HATCH. Did you not run such a risk when you informed the White House of the proposed Madison referral on September 28 and 29, 1993?

Ms. HANSON. I know Mr. Nussbaum to be a man of great integrity, an able lawyer. That was the person that I was giving that information to. I expected that he would use that information only for the proper governmental purpose that I gave. In fact, every piece of information that I was given by Mr. Roelle has appeared in the newsprint somewhere so, if there was a problem with jeopardizing the prosecution, it happened from the leaks out of the RTC and not from my conversation with Mr. Nussbaum. Mr. Nussbaum and I are two officials of the Executive Branch who are both bound by the Office of Government Ethics regulations.

Senator HATCH. Ms. Hanson, I was very interested in your statement to Senator Gramm, that the reason you contacted Bernard Nussbaum regarding the criminal referrals was that Mr. Nussbaum was the person at the White House in charge of investigations. I think that was the word you used.

Ms. HANSON. I don't believe that's quite what I testified, sir.

Senator HATCH. That was my recollection, maybe I misconstrued it, but that's—if that was so, then, that may be a breach in the well-orchestrated claim by the Administration—

Ms. HANSON. What—

Senator HATCH. —that all actions were taken in anticipation of press leaks. I'm just noting that for the record. If you didn't, that's OK, but that was my recollection.

Ms. HANSON. What my testimony was, if I could just clarify it, please, is that the internal White House procedures designated Mr. Nussbaum, the Office of Counsel to the President, as the contact for any discussions relating to anything involving an investigation, so as a—he was, as I understood it, with respect to the internal White House policy, the person who was the appropriate person to contact.

The CHAIRMAN. I just want to take a moment here. I was reviewing two documents that were given to me by the Counsel on the Republican side. We'll put the coding numbers in the record. One, is this list of talking points for Roger Altman's informational meeting with Mack McLarty, dated 2/2/94, at the bottom of which was this briefing point where Mr. Altman indicated that he had decided he was going to recuse himself from the decisionmaking process as Interim CEO of the RTC and so forth.

Then, there is a subsequent briefing document, which, apparently, was used by you and others up here on the Hill, that has the same items, although it drops off the last item, which is the recusal item. You made a passing reference, a few moments ago,

HEADLINE: Fact Fights Fiction Over Whitewater

BYLINE: Hillary Clinton

BODY: In 1992, in the midst of the presidential campaign, a story was reported about land in Arkansas that my husband and I invested in during the late 1970s.

Now, four years later, the Whitewater matter has been investigated by two congressional committees, two independent counsels, the Resolution Trust Corporation and scores of reporters. There have been 45 days of hearings in the Senate and House. The White House and our lawyers have turned over 50,000 pages of documents, and the president and I have answered every question put before us.

I personally have been interviewed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the independent counsel, and have answered questions in writing submitted by the RTC and Sen. Alfonse D'Amato's committee.

Close to $ 30 million in taxpayer money has been spent investigating Whitewater. But none of these exhaustive inquiries has turned up evidence that we did anything illegal, unethical or wrong.

Still, the questions keep coming. And so do the allegations and insinuations, even though we continually knock them down.

I want to assure the American public that we will continue to cooperate with all reasonable inquiries, as we have in the past. Nobody wants to end this controversy more than we do. But it becomes increasingly difficult to do so when the facts are lost in a blizzard of innuendo and shifting accusations. Let me give you an example of what I mean.

An independent inquiry, completed last month, found no evidence of wrongdoing on our part and called for an end to the RTC's investigation of Whitewater. But weeks passed before congressional investigators were willing to release these findings to the public. They did so only after heavy pressure from Democratic members of the Senate committee.

Since most Americans never heard about this report, let me fill you in. It was conducted for the RTC by one of the nation's leading law firms, Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro. It took more than two years to complete and cost nearly $ 4 million. A prominent Republican, former U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens, headed the inquiry.

It concluded that the president and I were passive investors in a failed land transaction and lost more than $ 40,000 on Whitewater, as we have said all along. It also concluded that we had little knowledge and no control over the Whitewater project.

Further, it affirmed what we have said from day one: that we had no knowledge of any money flowing from Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan to Whitewater, and that we did not receive any loans or dividends from the savings and loan. (Madison Guaranty was acquired by our partner in Whitewater, James B. McDougal, some years after we invested in the project.)

- As for matters relating to Madison, the report found no evidence that I had any knowledge of any wrongdoing on the part of the savings and loan while I was at the Rose Law Firm.

Billing records located after the report was completed confirm that I did minimal legal work on Madison -- an average of about one hour a week over 15 months, just as I have said from the beginning.

Despite these findings, there was no news conference, no announcement, no effort by congressional investigators to make them public.

This detailed and impartial report was finally released last week, but only after one member of the committee told his colleagues, "The committee makes much ado about supposed failures of the White House to turn over documents, while it refuses to release voluminous documents that strongly buttress the Clintons' statements about Whitewater."

With each new round of allegations, we have responded with documents and facts. And each time we do, more questions are conjured up, shifting the ground once again.

As one veteran columnist observed, the investigations "promise horrors and prove nothing."

What will happen next during this presidential election year? I don't know what to expect. But I do know that we will continue to cooperate and give answers to questions about events that took place 10 to 20 years ago.

I also know that the American people are fundamentally fair. And in the end, I'm sure they will be able to separate fact from fiction, and to tell the difference between truth and scandal-mongering.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE
THE WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

Hearing on

INVESTIGATION INTO THE WHITEWATER

DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION, AND RELATED MATTERS

Washington, D. C.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 8, 1996

1 Mr. Burge. Yes, sir, it was.

2 Mr. Chertoff. And just so we are clear, this property
3 that the McDougals and the Clintons were financing through 4 your bank, they were not buying it for their own house, or 5 houses, they were buying it--it was raw land that they were 6 going to subdivide and try to sell?

7 Mr. Burge. That's correct.

8 Mr. Chertoff. So it was kind of a speculative real
9 estate venture? They were essentially hoping to make money
10 on the sale of the property; right?

11 Mr. Burge. That is correct.

12 Mr. Chertoff. And their ability to finance it, or to 13 pay back that debt depended significantly upon how well that 14 project was operated; right?

15 Mr. Burge. That is correct.

16 Mr. Chertoff. Now did you know that the down payment,
17 the $20,000 down payment, was itself borrowed from another
18 bank at the time you made the $182,000 loan?

19 Mr. Burge. No, sir.

20 Mr. Chertoff. That was not disclosed to you at all?

21 Mr. Burge. I didn't know about it.

22 Mr. Chertoff. Would that have made a difference to you?

23 Mr. Burge. All factors being considered, it may have 24 had an impact on our decision.

25 Mr. Chertoff. So had you known the fact that the down

1 payment that you received, the 10 percent, was itself a loan
2 from another bank, that would have had some impact on your
3 thinking?

4 Mr. Burge. It may have.

5 Mr. Chertoff. Certainly it is something you would have 6 wanted to be told?

7 Mr. Burge. I'm sure.

8 Mr. Chertoff. Now, Mr. Burge, am I right that the 9 $182,000 loan was actually too big a loan to a single--for a,
10 single project for your bank to make?

11 Mr. Burge. Yes, sir; that's correct.

12 Mr. Chertoff. Explain why that is.

13 Mr. Burge. At that time in Arkansas, most state banks
14 were under a legal loan limit of capitalization at 20
15 percent of total capital. Again, the amount of the capital
16 in the bank escapes me at the present time, but our legal 17 loan limit was probably about $150,000 to $160,000.

18 Mr. Chertoff. So you were really not in a position as a 19 bank to make the entire value of the loan within your own
20 bank?

21 Mr. Burge. That's right.

22 Mr. Chertoff. $182,000 was more than you were allowed
23 to make?

24 Mr. Burge. That's correct.

25 Mr. Chertoff. So how did you deal with that?

1 loan to a 17 percent loan, or an 18 percent loan.

2 I remember the discussion about it. There was a little
3 bit of humor that went with it: after all the work that was 4 done on changing the usury statute, we have to pay this
5 higher rate of interest?

6 But I assumed at that time it was more of an in-jest
7 type of thing.

8 Mr. Chertoff. Who said that?

9 Mr. Ritter. I don't remember if it was Mrs. Clinton or 10 Mrs. McDougal, but I think it was Mrs. Clinton.

11 Mr. Chertoff. So it is clear to you, at least in your 12 discussions with Mrs. Clinton, you had had discussions about 13 the amount of interest; she was aware of the terms of the 14 loan; she was aware of the interest rate; and you had a
15 conversation with her about it?

16 Mr. Ritter. I presume she was aware of all that. I
17 believe that she signed the document in my office, along
18 with Mrs. McDougal.

19 Mr. Chertoff. And she appeared generally knowledgeable
20 to you about financial matters, Mrs. Clinton did?

21 Mr. Ritter. There was nothing that indicated
22 differently.

23 Mr. Chertoff. Would you agree that--and I am going to 24 refresh your memory from your deposition--

25 Mr. Ritter. Okay.

1 Mr. Chertoff. --at page 52.

2 "Did both ladies appear to be knowledgeable about the
3 loan, about the real estate deal?

4 "Answer: They seemed to be, and they seemed to be
5 knowledgeable about the interest rate and everything else.

6 Mr. Ritter. That is true.

7 Mr. Chertoff. Did you also have telephone contact with 8 Mrs. Clinton about the loan?

9 Mr. Ritter. Yes, sir.

10 Mr. Chertoff. And on how many occasions?

11 Mr. Ritter. I don't remember how many, but at least 12 once. And through her staff occasionally there was 13 documents that was needed, so the follow-up would have been 14 through there.

15 Mr. Chertoff. Would you agree with me that you thought
16 Mrs. Clinton as well as Mrs. McDougal were both pretty 17 sharp, and they were fairly knowledgeable about real estate
18 and the transactions?

19 Mr. Ritter. I had that impression; yes, sir.

20 Mr. Chertoff. Now I want to ask, still focusing on this 21 loan, did you--what is the concept of loan-to-value?

22 Mr. Ritter. Well my opinion of course is probably 23 different than my predecessors simply because I viewed it as 24 speculative land for one thing, and probably would have 25 expected more of a down payment than that, but be that as it

1 Mr. Denton, Senator Simon asked you a question earlier
2 about whether the President asked you to do something
3 illegal, indirectly.

4 Could you elaborate on that, sir? What did he ask you
5 to do, and through whom?

6 Mr. Denton. Sir, I was attempting to make sure I
7 understood the question. I did not recall that it was 8 limited to being illegal.

9 My thought process was that many times transactions
10 occurred that the instructions or requests did not come
11 directly from Bill Clinton.

12 As an example, the $20,000 loan that Union Bank made
13 came to me through an emissary, and perhaps through a couple 14 of them before I received it. That was my point I was 15 attempting to make.

16 In my opinion, that was not an acceptable banking
17 practice in extending that loan.

18 Senator Faircloth. Who asked you to extend the loan?

19 Mr. Denton. An emissary for the owner of the bank asked
20 that that loan be granted.

21 Senator Faircloth. An emissary for the owner of the 22 bank came to you as Executive Officer of the bank?

23 Mr. Denton. That is correct.

24 Senator Faircloth. Let me follow this now.

25 The owner of the bank sent you word that you ought to

1 extend this loan?

2 Mr. Denton. That is correct; yes.

3 Senator Faircloth. But you didn't, as executive of the 4 bank, didn't think the loan ought to be extended?

5 Mr. Denton. I'm sorry? I did not understand the last 6 words.

7 Senator Faircloth. You did not really think this loan
8 should be extended?

9 Mr. Denton. The point I make, in distinction, sir, is 10 that had it been an arms' length loan by a client walking 11 in off the street, I likely would not have granted that 12 loan.

13 Senator Faircloth. In other words, if the orders had 14 not come down from the owner of the bank, you would not have 15 extended the loan; you would have foreclosed?

16 Mr. Denton. A number of circumstances would have 17 entered into that picture. The loan, with the information
18 that I had in hand ^{and} with the financial information of the 19 borrowers that was supplied to me, under those conditions
20 that loan would not have been granted.

21 Senator Faircloth. Who came to you?

22 Mr. Denton. It was either Gene Smith or Paul Berry who 23 were employed by the bank and worked directly for Herbert
24 McAdams, the owner.

25 Senator Faircloth. Did the people that came to you, Ms.

IN RE: WHITEWATER

DEPOSITION OF PAUL C. BERRY

C O M M I T T E E C O N F I D E N T I A L

Washington, D. C.

FRIDAY, MAY 10, 1996

1 A Jim was -- Mr. McDougal was very successful
2 in a number of his land deals up to this one.

3 Q All right. Just to close the loop on the
4 $20,000 loan, so it is your memory that it was Bill
5 Clinton as opposed to Mr. McDougal who talked to you
6 about the loan, about having the bank make that loan?

7 A He was the one that -- he discussed that he
8 was contemplating, he and Mrs. Clinton were
9 contemplating buying a piece of property on the White
10 River, and I said well, if you need to borrow any 11 money, I am sure we will like to handle it, which was 12 my routine remark to all customers that I had a 13 responsibility for when they expressed a credit
14 need.

15 Q At what point --

16 A I didn't want them to go to some other
17 bank. We would lose their business.

18 Q At what point did you come to learn that 19 the loan was not to finance the purchase of a piece
20 of property for Mr. and Mrs. Clinton, but was in fact
21 part of this larger deal to buy land and then sell
22 lots?

I. INTRODUCTION.

Pillsbury Madison & Sutro LLP ("PM&S") was retained by the Resolution Trust Corporation to assist in the investigation of possible civil claims against individuals and entities associated with Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association of McCrory, Arkansas ("Madison Guaranty"). As part of this investigation, PM&S was asked to investigate certain issues with respect to the legal services rendered to Madison Guaranty by the Rose Law Firm of Little Rock, Arkansas. The results of that part of the investigation are set forth in two reports dated December 28, 1995: A Report on the Representation of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan by the Rose Law Firm (the "Rose Report"); and A Report on the Rose Law Firm's Conduct of Accounting Malpractice Litigation Pertaining to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan (the "Frost Report").

On December 21, 1995, it was learned that the Rose Law Firm (and, in particular, Hillary Rodham Clinton) had prepared an option agreement for a portion of the land associated with the Castle Grande real estate project undertaken by Madison Guaranty's real estate subsidiary, Madison Financial Corporation ("Madison Financial"). The same day, a set of interrogatories pertaining to that subject and related matters were sent to Mrs. Clinton. The interrogatories were lengthy. It was not expected that Mrs. Clinton could answer them fully by December 31, 1995, the date which marked both the end of the RTC and the expiration of the statute of limitations applicable to most possible claims that the RTC could conceivably assert against the Rose Law Firm.

Because of this imminent deadline, the RTC's Acting Chief Executive Officer directed PM&S to negotiate a tolling agreement with the Rose Law Firm pertaining to Castle Grande. PM&S did so, obtaining a 30-day agreement (later extended to March 1, 1996).

Originally it was contemplated that the additional time would be used chiefly to analyze and follow up on the interrogatory answers. The discovery of Rose Law Firm billing records at the White House and the ongoing hearings before the Senate Special Committee on Whitewater both provided new information, however, that made it advisable to investigate certain matters more fully.

This supplemental report summarizes the scope and results of the investigation conducted since December 28, 1995.

immediately put Hillary Clinton's Rose Law Firm on retainer for that amount.

"I hired Hillary because Bill came in whimpering they needed help," McDougal told The Times. He said he had no specific legal work in mind when he hired Hillary Clinton.

McDougal said he recalled the event vividly because he was so uncomfortable in the meeting — not over the retainer issue, but because throughout that morning conference, Clinton sat sweating in McDougal's new leather desk chair, an expensive gift from his wife.³⁰

4. Analysis.

Mrs. Clinton's recollections and Richard Massey's recollections differ in some respects, but for present purposes the differences are not material. Mrs. Clinton's interrogatory answer gives the impression that Massey brought in the work and Mrs. Clinton simply resolved a dispute over unpaid fees. Massey agrees that he initially "pitched" the work, but he does not believe he brought in the work, he did not discuss the subject of fees with Latham or with his colleagues at the Rose Law Firm, he never met McDougal and he does not recall asking Mrs. Clinton to be billing partner.

For present purposes, it makes little difference who was right. There is no hint of fraud or intentional misconduct in either version, and the mere act of retaining the Rose Law Firm did not harm Madison Guaranty in any respect. At worst, Mrs. Clinton may have neglected to tell her partners about her other business dealings with McDougal, but that would not have harmed Madison Guaranty, which, in the person of McDougal, knew all about those dealings.

McDougal's version of the retention obviously differs sharply from that of either Mrs. Clinton or Massey, but it too, even if credited, does not give rise to a cause of action. It is not a tort to ask a friend to retain one's wife as a lawyer. There is no suggestion that the money was to be a gratuity (as opposed to payment for work performed), nor is there any suggestion of an improper quid pro quo. Again, there is no proof of fraud, intentional misconduct or harm to Madison Guaranty.

In addition, there are a number of reasons to disbelieve McDougal's story.

30 William C. Rempel and Douglas Frantz, Fallout From Collapse of S&L Shadows Clinton, Los Angeles Times, Nov. 7, 1993.

First, McDougal may not be a reliable witness. In January 1996, McDougal's psychiatrist testified that McDougal's recollections are not trustworthy, although this one might be.³¹

Second, the statement that McDougal had no specific legal work in mind when he retained the Rose Law Firm obviously is wrong. The preferred stock issue had arisen at least a week before Mrs. Clinton met with McDougal on April 23, 1985, and work on this project began the same day as that meeting.³²

Third, and perhaps most significantly, the alleged economic motivation makes no sense. McDougal suggests that the Clintons needed $2,000 a month and the implication is that this accounts for the monthly retainer in that amount, but there is no evidence that the Clintons ever received anything like $2,000 a month from this engagement, and every reason to believe that they never received more than a trivial sum of money.

As a partner in the Rose Law Firm, Mrs. Clinton was paid a percentage of the firm's profits.³³ The percentage she received varied from year to year, in accordance with a formula, but it averaged roughly two percent:

Q I'd like to ask you a few questions now about your compensation from the Rose Law Firm, again, focusing on 1985, 1986, 1987.

Could you explain for me briefly the basis

31 According to a press account, on January 16-17, 1996, a psychiatrist testified that McDougal suffers from severe mental problems and no longer has a reliable memory of events. The psychiatrist said McDougal is bipolar and has a blocked carotid artery that deprives him of the normal flow of blood to the brain. He is being treated with lithium and Prozac but has a memory loss about 50% greater than normal for a man his age (55). The psychiatrist said that McDougal has a better memory of events involving people with whom he has emotional ties (such as the President). In that regard, the psychiatrist said he had reason to believe McDougal's story about the $2,000 retainer. Sara Fritz, Doctor Says McDougal Has Memory Loss, Los Angeles Times, Jan. 10, 1996, at A10.

32 RLF2 03746-48; DKRT11 000836. On the other hand, it is not clear why Madison Guaranty retained the Rose Law Firm rather than its regular outside counsel, the law firm then known as Mitchell, Williams, Selig, Jackson & Tucker. The Mitchell, Williams firm had opened file no. 5615-9, entitled "Madison Guaranty - Sale of Stock," on February 6, 1985. It also had opened file no. 5615-10, entitled "Madison Guaranty - Broker-Dealer," on March 27, 1985. Both files are essentially empty. It does not appear that the Mitchell, Williams firm did much of substance with respect to either of these matters. Billings for matters 5615-9 and 5615-10 totaled $155.35.

on which you were compensated.

A Well, the Rose Firm, during those years, had a method of compensation that relied upon a five-year moving average of the percentage of an individual attorney's collections as a percentage of all of the firm's collections. And so you would do the work. You would bill for it. It would be collected and at the end of the year, all of the collections would be totaled up. And then each attorney's percentage would be calculated and then five years' worth of percentages would be averaged, and so that would determine what your percentage of the profits at the end of the fiscal year would be.³⁴

Q In these years, do you have any recollection as to what your percentage of the net profits was roughly?

A I don't have any specific recollection, but it was during this period of time somewhere around 2 percent.³⁵

Thus, if all $2,000 a month had gone straight to the bottom line, Mrs. Clinton's share would have been approximately $40 a month.

Even this overstates the situation. Part of the retainer was never earned and was returned to the client. Also, a law firm's revenues never go straight to the bottom line. Like any other business, a law firm has expenses (rent or mortgage payments for office space, salaries for associates and staff, and expenditures for law books, typewriters and all the other equipment required to set up a practice). These expenses must be paid before the partners can share what is left over. In the case of the Rose Law Firm, expenses consumed roughly half of each dollar of revenue.³⁶ Therefore, even if all the retainer had been earned in fees, Mrs. Clinton's share would have been less than $20 a month.³⁷

35 Clinton Interview, Feb. 14, 1996, at 26.

36 Clinton Interview, Feb. 14, 1996, at 25-26.

37 These numbers are approximations, for illustrative purposes. According to counsel for the Rose Law Firm, Mrs. Clinton's actual share of net income attributable to Madison Guaranty (continued...)

In some law firms, "rainmakers" (people who bring in business) are compensated for bringing in that business, whether or not they do the actual work. There is no evidence, however, that this was true of the Rose Law Firm in 1985 and 1986.³⁸ To the contrary, the compensation system then in force created only a very indirect link between new business and compensation. A partner's percentage of the profits was determined not by looking at the business he or she brought in but at the money received for work actually performed by that partner, regardless of who brought in the matter.³⁹ Furthermore, the percentage was not determined solely by the current year's results but by averaging the partner's fee credits over the past five years. Thus, new business brought in during the current year, even if it materially increased the partner's fee credits, would have only an attenuated effect on that year's percentage. For all these reasons, the suggestion that the Madison Guaranty business was economically significant to the Clintons (or, for that matter, to the Rose Law Firm) finds no support.

Thus, regardless of which version of the retention one credits, a trier of fact is highly unlikely to find that there was anything untoward, let alone fraudulent or intentionally wrongful, in the circumstances of the Rose Law Firm's retention by Madison Guaranty.

B. The Rose Law Firm's efforts to help Madison Guaranty obtain permission to issue preferred stock and acquire a broker-dealer.

1. Introduction.

In 1985 and early 1986, the Rose Law Firm represented Madison Guaranty in an effort to obtain permission from Arkansas regulators to issue preferred stock (Rose's "matter 1") and to acquire and operate a broker-dealer firm (Rose's "matter 2"). The Rose Report concluded that the RTC did not have a basis consistent with the statute of limitations extender on which to assert claims against the Rose Law Firm relating to matters 1 and 2.⁴⁰ Nothing

Fee credits essentially represent hours work times standard billing rate less any sums not paid by the client, although the billing partner has discretion to make adjustments. While Massey may have gained a passing acquaintance with the rule itself, he apparently had no reason to think that Madison Guaranty was in violation of the rule. He was advised by Madison Guaranty personnel and on that basis represented to the Arkansas Securities Department that Madison Guaranty was not in violation of Rule V(C) as of May 31, 1985. The information provided by Massey to the Securities Department suggested that Madison Guaranty could invest approximately $900,000 more in its service corporation before any violation would occur. As the acquisition of the broker-dealer itself represented an expenditure of $5,000 or $6,000—in any event, nowhere near $900,000—Massey probably had little occasion to give Rule V(C) any deep thought.⁹⁷

At most, the evidence suggests that Massey (and possibly others) had some actual or constructive notice of Rule V(C), which notice occurred when the rule was temporarily a concern with respect to the broker-dealer application.⁹⁸ Given such notice, it is hypothetically possible that someone might have recalled the rule some months later when working on the Castle Grande issue. Even if this occurred, however, there would be no aiding-and-abetting liability unless the person with notice then realized that a violation of Rule V(C) was about to occur and, with that realization in mind, went ahead and substantially assisted in the commission of the violation.⁹⁹

C. The Rose Law Firm's work on the IDC/Castle Grande project.

1. Introduction.

Between August and October 1985, while the Rose Law Firm was representing Madison Guaranty in matters 1 through 4, Madison Financial and Seth Ward acquired approximately 1,050 acres of land in southern Pulaski County (Little Rock) from a company called Industrial Development Corporation of Little Rock ("IDC").¹⁰⁰ At the time, Seth Ward was working as a consultant to Madison Financial.¹⁰¹ (Ward is the father-in-law of Webster Hubbell, then a partner in the Rose Law Firm.) Madison Guaranty fully financed Seth Ward's acquisition of a portion of the IDC property. That acquisition took place pursuant to an agreement between McDougal and Ward that gave McDougal an option to obtain Ward's part of the property at cost, plus effective control of the entire property.

⁹⁸ Whether constructive notice will suffice in this context is discussed at page 156 below.

⁹⁹ Rose Report at 46-47.

In the months following the acquisition, virtually all of Ward's land and portions of Madison Financial's land were sold to friends of Jim McDougal in transactions that, like Seth Ward's original acquisition, were fully financed by Madison Guaranty. A portion of the Madison Financial land that remained unsold was named "Castle Grande" or "Castle Grande Estates" and was developed for mobile homes.

As stated in the Rose Report, the principal issues are:

1. Was Ward a bona fide purchaser, or simply a straw man or nominee for Madison Financial?
2. If Ward was a straw man or nominee, was the acquisition fraudulent, or did it intentionally violate Rule V(C), the Arkansas regulation that limited the size of the investment that Madison Guaranty could make in Madison Financial—a regulation that management thought prevented Madison Financial from buying all of Castle Grande?
3. If fraud or intentional wrongdoing on the part of Madison Guaranty or Madison Financial did occur, was the Rose Law Firm legally responsible for the wrongful aspect of the acquisition and, if so, does it have any liability to the RTC (now the FDIC)?

The Rose Report concluded, on the evidence then available, that:

100 The land, most of which was undeveloped land, was located 15 miles south of Little Rock at the intersection of Highway 65/167 and 145th Street. IDC had owned the land since 1974. IDC had financed its acquisition through several Little Rock banks, including Union National Bank, Worthen Bank and Trust Company and First Commercial Bank, N.A. By 1985, these creditors were pressuring IDC to dispose of the property. Wilson Interview, May 10, 1994, tape 2, at 1.

101 Ward sued Madison Guaranty in 1987, after McDougal had left. Ward v. Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Financial Corporation, No. 87-7580 (Pulaski Cty. Cir. Ct.) (hereinafter "Ward v. Madison"). Ward sought to recover almost $400,000 in commissions that he said he had earned in connection with Castle Grande. The trial transcript and discovery from this case are cited frequently below. The trial transcript is cited as "Ward v. Madison R.T." Depositions are cited by the name of the deponent, e.g., "Ward Deposition."

1. Ward probably was a straw man or nominee.

2. The RTC reasonably could state a claim against McDougal for fraud and for breach of his fiduciary duties in connection with the acquisition.¹⁰²

3. There was no substantial evidence that the Rose Law Firm aided and abetted whatever wrongdoing McDougal might have engaged in.¹⁰³

To some extent, the discussion with respect to this matter (and especially issue 3) was hampered by the lack of contemporaneous documents (the Rose Law Firm had virtually nothing) and clear recollections with respect to the acquisition. The billing records found at the White House and other newly acquired evidence add considerably to the sum of knowledge with respect to this matter. Taken as a whole, however, the new evidence does not change the conclusions stated in the Rose Report. The new evidence weakens to some extent the conclusion that Ward was a straw man or nominee, and that the acquisition therefore was wrongful, although those remain propositions that one could reasonably advocate. The new evidence has very little effect on the analysis of what the Rose Law Firm knew and did before the acquisition of the IDC property closed. The new evidence shows that, after the acquisition closed, lawyers at the Rose Law Firm (and in particular Mrs. Clinton) had more contact with Seth Ward and performed more services for Madison Guaranty than previously was known, but there remains no substantial evidence that these lawyers knew of or intended to aid and abet McDougal's apparent misconduct. For these reasons, the following conclusion, taken from page 78 of the Rose Report, remains valid:

The evidence taken as a whole does not amount to convincing proof that the Rose Law Firm knowingly aided and abetted a fraud, or a scheme to circumvent the Arkansas investment limitation regulation. This conclusion does not necessarily mean that the evidence exonerates anyone; it simply means, given the applicable legal standards and the statutory mandate under which the RTC [and now the FDIC] operates, that no reasonable basis has been found to recommend the filing of a claim relating to the acquisition of Castle Grande against the Rose Law Firm.

102 Rose Report at 55-61. The Report also noted that such a claim would not be cost-effective because McDougal has no money. McDougal filed for bankruptcy in September 1991 and obtained an order of discharge on January 17, 1992 (PMS0532, PMS0552), well before the enactment of the RTC Completion Act of 1993. The order of discharge could be set aside only if the RTC could prove a fraud on the bankruptcy court; proof that McDougal defrauded someone other than the bankruptcy court would be of no avail.

2. The principal actors.

Before describing the acquisition and development of the IDC/Castle Grande property, it might be helpful to list the principal actors and describe each briefly.

Mrs. Clinton was a partner in the Rose Law Firm. She and her husband had invested with McDougal back in the late 1970s (Whitewater). She had represented the Little Rock Airport Commission, of which Seth Ward was a member, since roughly the same time. A litigator and not a real estate partner, she was the billing partner for all Madison Guaranty matters. She recorded no time to matter 5 until November 14, 1985, over a month after the acquisition was completed.

Charles Cook worked at First Commercial Bank, a creditor of IDC. The Rose Law Firm had represented First Commercial and two other banks with respect to this debt.

Harry Don Denton was Madison Guaranty's chief loan officer. He had worked with Robert Wilson at Union National Bank (where for a time he had been Jim McDougal's principal banker), and he introduced Seth Ward to McDougal. Denton served as loan officer with respect to Madison Guaranty's loans to Ward.

Richard Donovan was an associate in the Rose Law Firm's litigation section. After the acquisition of the IDC property, he, working with Mrs. Clinton, researched several legal questions with respect to the property's development. These questions concerned whether the property was within a "dry" township and therefore could not become the site of a brewery and tasting room, and whether the sewer and water facility need become a public utility and could provide sewer and water services to customers off the property.

Darrell Dover, a lawyer, represented IDC in the sale of its property to Madison Financial and Seth Ward.

Webster Hubbell was a partner in the Rose Law Firm's litigation section. He is Seth Ward's son-in-law. He did not record any time to matter 5, but Mrs. Clinton consulted with him briefly on two occasions and R. Davis Thomas, Jr. apparently wrote him a memorandum on the sewer and water issue.

R. A. "Brick" Lile was president of IDC, having succeeded Everett Tucker, who died.

William Lyon briefly showed some interest in buying a portion of the IDC property from Madison Financial for use as a brewery. Concerns about the legality of this usage prompted legal research by Mrs. Clinton and Richard Donovan. Between ca. 1980 and early 1984, Lyon had served on the Arkansas State Bank Board until Governor Clinton sought his resignation, an event Lyon blames on Jim McDougal.¹⁰⁴

Jim McDougal was the principal shareholder of Madison Guaranty. By 1985, he was no longer an officer or director of Madison Guaranty, but by most accounts he still controlled it and directed its daily operations, and he remained the chairman and president of Madison Financial, Madison Guaranty's real estate subsidiary.

Michael Schaufele was Seth Ward's accountant. He has known Webster Hubbell since childhood and they remain close friends today.

R. Davis Thomas, Jr. was an associate in the Rose Law Firm's real estate section and he worked briefly on the acquisition of the IDC property, exchanging one draft of a purchase agreement with Dover.

Thomas P. Thrash was a partner in the Rose Law Firm's real estate section. He also worked briefly on the acquisition.

Seth Ward, a semi-retired businessman, was a consultant to Madison Financial and purchased part of the IDC property in a transaction fully funded by Madison Guaranty. He is Webster Hubbell's son-in-law and had worked closely with Mrs. Clinton on Little Rock Airport Commission matters since the late 1970s.

Robert M. Wilson, a lifelong friend of Seth Ward, was a senior officer at Union National Bank. The Bank was a creditor of IDC, a client of the Rose Law Firm with respect to that debt, and a creditor of Jim McDougal personally. After retiring from Union National Bank at the end of 1985, Wilson worked for Madison Financial as a consultant and loaned money to Madison Financial as well.

These short sketches should not leave the reader with the impression that all these people were close to one another or knew each other equally well. Some of them knew each other quite well, but others were comparative strangers. In particular, it bears mention that McDougal and Ward were not close, having never met before Denton introduced them, and McDougal had no close ties to any of the people associated with IDC.

¹⁰⁴ Lyon Senate Testimony, Jan. 23, 1996, at 5-8, 16.

so, this would not have put the lawyers on notice that Ward would have no equity in the deal, would give Madison Financial a 270-day option to buy all his land back at cost and would receive commissions on everything that was sold. Thrash and Thomas both say they knew none of these things and a number of circumstances support their testimony.¹⁷² Furthermore, even if they had known some of these things, it does not follow that they knew anything about Madison Guaranty's Rule 17(C) problem, and both men deny knowing anything about the rule or Madison Guaranty's problem with it.¹⁷³ As shown in the next section below, there is no evidence that any Rose Law Firm lawyers (other than Hubbell) knew of these terms, and little reason to think that they had anything to do with this aspect of the deal.

c. The deal between McDougal and Ward.

Except for the discussion of the meeting among McDougal, Schaufele and Ward on McDougal's birthday, the presentation thus far has focused on the negotiations with IDC. The presentation now turns to the agreements between

MR. GIUFFRÀ: And you met with Mr. Ward on the 19th, correct? That's what your billing records show.

MR. THRASH: Yes, that's correct.

MR. GIUFFRÀ: Now, do you know whether you made this change in the draft after meeting with Mr. Ward?

MR. THRASH: What I think happened, counsel, is on the 9th I sent a draft agreement over to Mr. Dover which contained the affiliate language. I believe I was getting tied up in other transactions, and I asked Dave Thomas to come on and assist me in this transaction. Dave came on, he made some changes, he had several telephone conferences with Mr. Dover, I believe one with Seth Ward. This is - I'm speculating a little bit, because I don't remember Mr. Ward contacting us asking us to make this change. But I think that's probably what happened. Mr. Ward asked us to make this change and probably asked Dave Thomas and he made that change.

McDougal and Ward. As stated earlier, the main issue here is whether anyone at the Rose Law Firm knew of or worked on these agreements. The evidence just discussed strongly suggests that Thrash and Thomas had no such knowledge and did no such work. This leaves the others, who knew Ward far better than Thrash or Thomas did, and who and might reasonably have been expected to help him--namely, Mrs. Clinton and Hubbell.

The terms of the deal between McDougal and Ward are ambiguous, were sharply disputed and resulted in litigation that lasted for years. Those terms were set forth in five documents dated in September and October 1985, as well as in a host of documents executed the following spring. The five documents from September and October 1985 are:

Date	Document
Sept. 3, 1985	Memorandum from McDougal to Ward dividing the land and giving Madison Financial an option to buy Ward's part.
Sept. 13, 1985	Assignment of real estate to Ward.
Sept. 24, 1985	First letter from Ward to McDougal, countersigned by McDougal; marked "void"; gives Ward a commission; gives Madison Financial an option but places no price on the option; does not give Ward any real estate to keep after exercise of the option.
Sept. 24, 1985	Second letter from Ward to McDougal; backdated to Sept. 24, 1985; gives Ward a commission; pays Ward $35,000 for the option; gives Ward 22.5 acres ("Holman Acres") to keep after exercise of the option.
Oct. 15, 1985	Loan of $1.15 million from Madison Guaranty to Ward, purportedly to finance Ward's acquisition of his part of Castle Grande, entered into 11 days after IDC sold the real estate to Ward and Madison Financial. ¹⁷⁴

¹⁷⁴ Evidently Madison Guaranty financed the sale on its own before documenting the loan to Ward. The loan, once documented, showed that Ward had borrowed the entire purchase price of $1,150,000 on a non-recourse basis; Ward put no money of his own at risk. IG Ex. III-48; Ward v. Madison R.T. 24-25.

Q Going back to tab 36 for a moment, just a couple of questions -- just one really. At the bottom here, Rick Massey has written a note, the last part of which says "Madison has continually had regulatory net worth problems."

Was that something you knew at this time?

A Well, I knew the idea behind the preferred stock offering was to try to raise money for Madison to be able to meet its capital requirements. I knew that back when the representation was undertaken by Mr. Massey.

Q And you knew also, didn't you, that unless and until Madison met its capital requirements, the securities department was not going to let Madison go ahead with the broker-dealer action?

A That's right. The securities commissioner had conditioned Madison's being able to go forward on its meeting its regulatory requirements.

Q Looking at tab 38 just for a second, is there any particular reason you would have cc'd Vince Foster on this July 17 memorandum?

A I believe that Mr. Rule mentions Mr. Foster in his memorandum that we were just looking at in the last sentence. "If you have any other questions, give me or Vince Foster a call." Mr. Foster was the attorney I worked for on the FSLIC representation and I assume that because he was mentioned in Mr. Rule's memo, I cc'd him.³⁴⁶

D. Analysis.

1. Matters 1-4 and 6.

The Rose Report found no basis to bring a claim based on the Rose Law Firm's work for Madison Guaranty with respect to these matters. As noted above, nothing in the new evidence changes that analysis. In addition, the tolling agreement does not cover these matters.

346 Clinton Interview, Feb. 14, 1996, at 91-96.

2. Matter 5.a. Introduction.

The investment in Castle Grande has been questioned on numerous grounds, but most of these have nothing to do with the Rose Law Firm. The acquisition of Castle Grande did, however, involve the Rose Law Firm to some extent. The acquisition can be questioned on the theory that Ward, having given Madison Financial an option on the land and having placed no money of his own at risk, was really a straw man purchaser for Madison Financial pursuant to a scheme to circumvent Arkansas law. This theory seems first to have been advanced in the Ward v. Madison litigation, in which Madison Guaranty and Madison Financial (two years after McDougal and Latham had been removed) stated the following in an answer to an interrogatory asking about their "unclean hands" defense:

Plaintiff [Seth Ward] personally profited from the transactions with Jim McDougal. With knowledge, the Plaintiff agreed to purchase a section of the Undeveloped Property [Castle Grande] in his name so that Madison Financial Corporation would not exceed its investment limitations, imposed by the FHLBB, of 6% of the assets of the corporation. In effect, Plaintiff acted as a straw man for the real estate purchase for the mutual benefit of himself, Jim McDougal and other individuals.³⁴⁷

Arkansas law (Rule V(C)) limits the amount of money that an Arkansas savings and loan may invest in real estate to six percent of assets.³⁴⁸ At the time of Madison Guaranty's last examination before the Castle Grande transaction, in 1984, Madison Guaranty had been criticized for violating this limitation, and in response Madison Guaranty's Board of Directors had promised to bring it into compliance with this limitation.³⁴⁹

347 Defendants' Responses to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories and Requests for Production of Documents, dated June 2, 1988 in Ward v. Madison, answer to Interrogatory No. 18, at 11-12. Defendants did not do much with this theory at trial. Also, the regulation at issue is a state regulation, not an FHLBB regulation.

348 Rule V(C) of the Rules and Regulation of the Arkansas Savings and Loan Association Board. See Ward v. Madison R.T. 119; Latham Deposition at 7. See also IG Ex. III-50, at 2, minutes of Madison Financial's board of directors dated Jan. 21, 1985, which authorize McDougal to make any acquisitions he deems necessary, with the requirement that such acquisition not cause the Savings and Loan to exceed its 6% of assets limitation for investment in the Service Corporation

349 According to the Report of Examination as of January 20, 1984, Madison Guaranty's total investment in Madison Financial was $2,386,590, or 14.1 percent of assets. PMS0331.

According to Madison Guaranty's Chief Financial Officer, Greg Young, the investment limitation meant that Madison Guaranty could not purchase the entire Castle Grande parcel itself.³⁵⁰ McDougal and Ward developed the idea of having Seth Ward purchase part of Castle Grande, so that the purchase price of the remainder to be purchased by Madison Financial would not exceed the limit. According to John Latham, there were at least three attractions to structuring the transaction this way:

- o Complying with the Arkansas statute.
- o Providing Ward with an opportunity to make some money.
- o Obligating Madison Financial only to purchase the portion of the property that it really wanted—the portion it hoped to use for a residential development, as opposed to the portion set aside for industrial development.³⁵¹

Two issues are apparent: Did the structure, rather than complying with Arkansas law, unlawfully seek to circumvent it, or was it even fraudulent? If creation of the structure was fraudulent or intentional misconduct, did the Rose Law Firm have anything to do with its creation, and therefore any responsibility for the illegality?

b. The legality of the acquisition.

The first question is whether the acquisition of Castle Grande was fraudulent or otherwise intended to violate Arkansas law. The short answer is that a court might hold that the acquisition, as structured, was fraudulent and violated Rule V(C) of the Rules and Regulations of the Arkansas Savings and Loan Association Board.

Fraud: McDougal seems to have concealed the terms of his agreement with Ward from Madison Guaranty's and Madison Financial's Boards of

349(...continued)

The board said it would comply with the regulation and had taken steps to do so by collecting on a loan made to Chns Wade in connection with Campobello. PMS0357.

350 Ward v. Madison R.T. 121. For reasons explained below, Young may have been wrong in supposing that Madison Financial could lawfully buy any of Castle Grande.

351 IG Ex. III-29, at 3. Latham recalled these three general objectives but could not recall any specific conversations on the subject or, for that matter, who developed the structure. The Rose Law Firm's Response to the Reports of the Inspectors General, dated Sept. 12, 1995 ("Rose Response to IG"), suggests that Latham himself developed the structure and flatly asserts that "Madison masterminded the structure of the purchase . . ." (Rose Response to IG at 52-53) but the cited evidence does not establish either proposition.

Directors; at the very least, Latham and Strayhorn testified that the Boards had not approved the terms, that they did not know the terms and that they could not find the relevant documents (notably the second version of the September 24, 1985 letter) in Madison Guaranty's files or Madison Financial's files.³⁵² This evidence, if credited, would establish concealment by someone who, as a director of Madison Financial, had a duty to disclose the facts. It would not, however, establish fraud on the part of anyone else. Ward as a consultant did not have the same duties as McDougal as a director. No evidence has been found suggesting that Ward knew McDougal would conceal the terms of this deal from McDougal's Boards.

An alternative theory of fraud is that the use of Ward as a straw purchaser was itself fraudulent, because it concealed Madison Financial's intent to acquire the entire parcel. That theory is best explored in light of the issue of whether the acquisition violated the Arkansas regulation and if so whether the use of Ward was designed to conceal that violation.

Violation of the Arkansas regulation: Rule V of the Rules and Regulations of the Arkansas Savings and Loan Association Board pertains to service corporations. Rule V(A) permits their creation and lists their permitting activities, which include "[a]cquisition of unimproved real estate lots, and other unimproved real estate for the purpose of prompt development and subdivision" Rule V(C) limits a savings and loan's investment in its service corporations. It provides:

C. Limitations:

An association may make any investment under this section if its aggregate outstanding investment in the capital stock, obligations, or other securities of service corporations and subsidiaries thereof (including all loans, secured or unsecured, to service corporations, or any subsidiaries thereof, and to joint ventures of such service corporation or subsidiaries, whether or not the association is a stockholder in such service corporations) would not exceed thereupon six (6%) percent of the association's assets. For the purpose of this section, the term "aggregate outstanding investment" means the sum of amounts paid for the acquisition of capital stock or securities and amounts invested in obligations of service corporations less amounts received from the sale of capital stock or securities of service corporations and amounts paid to the association to retire obligations of service corporations.

352 Ward v. Madison R.T. 196; Latham Deposition at 18-19, 33-34.

To read the testimony of Latham, it would appear that the issue here is whether Madison Guaranty's investment in its service corporation Madison Financial includes the $1,115,000 loaned to Seth Ward to pay for his portion of the IDC property as well as the $600,000 that Madison Financial paid for its portion of the IDC property. Ironically, Madison Guaranty may have violated the regulation regardless of how it structured the deal.

With one exception (from May 1985), the weekly reports prepared by Greg Young and entitled "Investment in Service Corporation" have not been located. Therefore, it cannot be said with assurance what Latham and McDougal knew about their Rule V(C) situation when it came time to close the IDC acquisition. The most that can be said is that financial statements as of September 30, 1985 show that Madison Guaranty was roughly $360,000 in excess of the limit as of that date, five days before the closing.³⁵³ Therefore, whether Madison Guaranty's investment includes only the $600,000, or the $1,115,000 as well as the $600,000, the acquisition of Castle Grande would violate Rule V(C).

Be that as it may, the parties seemed to think that by reducing the investment to $600,000 they would have avoided a violation of Rule V(C).³⁵⁴ As intent matters, the analysis turns on whether Seth Ward should be deemed 353 Madison Guaranty's assets totaled $93.2 million. Madison Guaranty's Monthly Report to the FHLBB as of September 30, 1985, line 050. Six percent of this is $5.6 million. According to Madison Guaranty's Monthly Report to the FHLBB as of September 30, 1985, Madison Guaranty's investment in Madison Financial totaled $5.96 million, or roughly $360,000 in excess of the limit. Id., § K, line 005.

354 Alternatively, Madison insiders might have thought the transaction did violate the rule. Davis Fitzhugh suggested as much in his recent testimony when he was asked why McDougal had pressured him to buy the Levi Strauss building:

SEN. GRAMS: No, you're an employee of Madison and you said you were instructed to buy this parcel. Mr. McDougal told you to buy it. Did he explain why he wanted you to buy it again, because he had to shift some notes or dollars away from Madison; they were overbooked; so to speak, on land, and that they needed to move some of this land around, flip-flop, so to speak? Was that the way the instructions came to you?

MR. FITZHUGH: Well, it was well known at Madison at the time that because of this land purchase, they had more money -- or not more money; more assets in the financial corporation than they should. And this Levi Strauss Building was only one of many pieces of property that the savings and loan sold off. So I was not singled out to purchase something. It occurred with several other people and several other parcels.

Fitzhugh Senate Testimony, Jan. 31, 1996, at 37.

a bona fide borrower in his own right, separate and distinct from Madison Financial, or whether he should be deemed a straw man or nominee, who is simply holding the land for Madison Financial, so that the land did not show up on its books as a violation of Rule V(C). There are no reported cases construing Rule V(C). Nevertheless, the situation is similar to that presented by the federal regulation limiting loans to one borrower.³⁵⁵ That regulation limits total lending to one borrower to a percentage of an institution's assets. The pertinent issue is whether a borrower that appears to be separate and distinct actually is a straw or nominee.

A case from the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, United States v. Brown,³⁵⁶ is instructive. An Oregon thrift, State Federal Savings & Loan Association, had financial difficulties—in particular, a lot of foreclosed real estate (in savings and loan parlance, "real estate owned," or "REO") on its books that earned little revenue. New management wanted to get this REO off of State Federal's books. Management agreed with a real estate developer and borrower, Nevis, to loan him money so that he could buy the REO. State Federal's loans to Nevis, however, already exceeded the limit imposed by the loans to one borrower regulation. Therefore, State Federal's management entered into a series of transactions designed to put money into Nevis' hands while concealing that fact. One such transaction involved defendant Brown. The Court of Appeals described that transaction as follows:

He [Brown], in effect, had one of his companies (Marin Federal) purchase certain property from Nevis and obtain a loan from State Federal to finance that purchase. The money went to Nevis, and Nevis retained possession of and the right to repurchase the property. Brown guaranteed the loan but Nevis agreed to pay it off. The sale would not have been made had repurchase not been agreed to in advance. Brown and his company were quite clearly no more than nominees and vehicles for getting cash from State Federal to Nevis.³⁵⁷

355 Now 12 C.F.R. § 563.93 (1995). At the time, it was 12 C.F.R. § 563.9-3 (1985). An even closer analogy would be presented by the FHLBB's direct investment regulation, which, like the Arkansas regulation, limited investment in service corporations. 12 C.F.R. § 563.9-8 (1985), later renumbered 12 C.F.R. § 563.98 (1990), expired July 13, 1990.

357 United States v. Brown, 912 F.2d at 1041.

On these facts, the Court of Appeals affirmed Brown's conviction for aiding and abetting bank fraud and false entries by management, but reversed his conviction for conspiracy.³⁵⁸

Compare the situation in Brown with the situation here. Madison Guaranty funded 100 percent of Ward's acquisition of his portion of Castle Grande, and did so weeks before Ward's loan application was approved. The loan was nonrecourse; Ward placed none of his own money at risk.³⁵⁹ Madison Financial had an option to buy back all of Ward's land, save perhaps for 22.5 acres. Madison Guaranty acted in all respects like an owner: It took charge of selling Castle Grande, including Ward's part, and sold the land; Ward probably did not have a chance to approve the sales prices. It conveyed parcels to the purchasers; typically, the deeds reflected Madison Financial, not Ward, as the vendor. Until parcels sold, Madison Financial, not Ward, collected the rents and paid all taxes, insurance and fees. On these facts, it seems highly probable that Ward would be deemed a straw. Indeed, Madison Guaranty alleged as much in defense of Ward v. Madison.³⁶⁰

As noted above, the use of Seth Ward as a straw has some of the earmarks of a fraudulent or intentional attempt to violate the law. Madison Guaranty's books and records were made to reflect a loan to a third person, not a straw. The terms of Ward's agreement with McDougal seem to have been hidden from others. Latham and Strayhorn say they knew nothing of the second letter of September 24, 1985, and Strayhorn says no copy of it could be located in Madison Guaranty's or Madison Financial's files.³⁶¹ At a minimum, it would seem that McDougal handled the transaction in a manner designed to mislead FHLBB examiners and regulators.

Even if this conduct were not deemed fraudulent, however, it seems likely that it would be deemed an intentional violation of the Arkansas regulation, and that would be actionable as an intentional breach of McDougal's fiduciary duties.

358 Id. at 1042-45. The court found ample evidence that "Brown engaged in activities which misrepresented the true borrower and true purpose of the loans, all with the intention of deceiving State and Federal officials, FSLIC, and FHLB," and therefore affirmed the aiding and abetting count. On the other hand, the court found no evidence that Brown, who participated in only one transaction, knew of the other defendants' broader conspiracy, and therefore reversed the conspiracy count.

359 In contrast, Brown had guaranteed Nevis' repayment.

360 Defendants' Responses to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories and Requests for Production of Documents, dated June 2, 1988 in Ward v. Madison, answer to Interrogatory No. 18, at 11-12.

361 Latham Deposition at 16-20, 34-36; Ward v. Madison R.T. 194-95.

A fiduciary is not automatically liable for violating the law. Good faith attempts to manage a corporation's affairs may not give rise to liability even if a statute or regulation is violated.³⁶² But conversely, a fraudulent or intentional effort to violate a statute or regulation will almost certainly constitute a violation of a fiduciary's duty of care—indeed, as the Brown case illustrates, it may be criminal. Thus, while the business judgment rule is recognized in Arkansas,³⁶³ the rule obviously has no application to fraudulent or intentional attempts to violate the law.³⁶⁴

While this transaction looks like an intentional effort to violate the Arkansas regulation, and to cover up that violation, some evidence suggests that the parties might have thought the acquisition as structured would be lawful. Neither side in Ward v. Madison seriously urged that the transaction was unlawful. Hubbell, who paid some attention to the Ward trial and attended the closing arguments, doubts that Ward was a straw, at least as Hubbell understands the term:

Q. In 1985, did you give any thought whatsoever as to whether, given the terms as you understood them, Mr. Ward might be considered a straw man or nominee?

A. Yeah. You know, you use the word, and I remember it back in law school. But I didn't give it any consideration, you know. "Straw man" means, to me, somebody who you clear title through. So I don't think that's the way I would look at it, if I sold property, and you're trying to clear it to sell it through a straw man.³⁶⁵

In addition, the question was put to Latham, who testified in deposition that he believed the transaction was lawful:

Q. You said that Madison Financial could not have taken a deal as large as the I.D.C. deal that Mr. Ward brought because of regulations.

362 E.g., FDIC v. Benson, 867 F. Supp. 512, 521-22 (S.D. Tex. 1994) (applying Texas law).

363 Hall v. Staha, 303 Ark. 673, 678, 800 S.W.2d 396, 399 (1990); RTC v. Eason, 17 F.3d 1126, 1133-34 (8th Cir. 1994) (applying Arkansas law).

364 3A William Meade Fletcher, Cyclopedia of the Law of Private Corporations § 1040, at 51-52 (rev. ed. 1994). No Arkansas case on point has been located. To establish liability under Texas law, however, a plaintiff must show that the fiduciaries "participated in acts that they knew were illegal at the time." FDIC v. Benson, 867 F. Supp. at 522.

365 Hubbell Interview, Dec. 27, 1995, at 22:17-26.

A. I think at that point in time that was correct.

Q. Madison Financial could have taken the deal, could it not, if it had received financing from someone other than Madison Guaranty?

A. Yes.

Q. And there was no violation of the regulations from Mr. Ward to receive financing from Madison Guaranty?

A. I don't think so, as long as Seth had the financial ability to assume that obligation on his own.³⁶⁶

Given the apparent attempts to conceal the substance of the arrangements between McDougal and Ward, one may question whether Latham seriously believed what he said. In any event, the conclusion he reached is of doubtful merit. One can assume that Seth Ward had the ability to assume the obligation on his own.³⁶⁷ Even so, two problems remain with Latham's position. First, factually speaking, Ward had no reason or incentive to pay the loan unless he could profit by doing so, for the loan was nonrecourse. Second, legally speaking, Ward's "financial ability to assume that obligation on his own" is not a defense where the transaction is structured to conceal a violation of a regulation limiting the ability of the financial institution to make the loan.

An Arkansas case decided a few years before the Castle Grande transaction, United States v. Parsons,³⁶⁸ illustrates the second point. Parsons was the treasurer of a school's credit union. He needed more money than the credit union could lawfully loan to him. Therefore, he convinced several teachers to take out loans in their own names and deliver most of the proceeds to him.³⁶⁹ On appeal from his conviction for misapplication of credit-union funds and false entries, he argued that the jury should have received an instruction that he could be convicted only if the prosecution proved that he knew the other teachers lacked the ability and intent to repay their respective loans. The court rejected this argument, holding that where the straw is used to conceal violation of a legal limitation on lending, the financial condition of the putative borrower is irrelevant.³⁷⁰

The analysis in this section to this point parallels that in the Rose Report. Having reached this point, however, it must be conceded that the argument that Ward was a straw is weaker than it seemed on December 28, 1995. Notwithstanding the Parsons case, one must grant that Ward's recent testimony about his desire to buy the IDC property himself, and his ability to do so, might well influence a trier of fact to find that Ward was not a straw. Certainly a man who was ready, willing and able to buy a property, but did not do so because he recognized that he owed a duty of loyalty to his principal,³⁷¹ seems much less like a straw than someone who never had the slightest interest in a property but simply was doing the bidding of another.

Even so, the evidence suggests that the RTC could reasonably state a claim against McDougal for fraud and for breach of his fiduciary duties. Greg Young recently described the transaction as a "straw transaction," adding that Madison had "made him [Seth Ward] the loan to park that land" until Madison had the ability to buy it.³⁷² Ward himself summed it up in his recent deposition when he said to the young attorney examining him:

Q. But you were offered a transaction that was basically risk free to you by Mr. McDougal?

A. Yeah, and I took that. And you would have too.³⁷³

Perhaps McDougal could defend himself by arguing that he had a good-faith belief that the structure was lawful: at this point it is hard to determine how persuasive such a defense might be. In any event, such a claim, if brought against McDougal alone, would not be cost-effective.³⁷⁴

The evidence as to Ward is much less compelling than the evidence as to McDougal. There is no clear evidence of an intent to conceal. Ward says

374 McDougal filed for bankruptcy in September 1991 and obtained an order of discharge on January 17, 1992 (PMS0532, PMS0552), well before the enactment of the RTC Completion Act of 1993. The order of discharge could be set aside only if the RTC could prove a fraud on the bankruptcy court; proof that McDougal defrauded someone other than the bankruptcy court would be of no avail.

he had no idea that the transaction might violate Rule V(C).³⁷⁵ One might argue, however, that the nonrecourse financing coupled with the other terms looked too good to be true. Thus, based on Brown, perhaps a rather weak claim might be stated for aiding and abetting in a fraud or for an intentional violation of the Arkansas regulation. The strength or weakness of such a claim need not be considered further. Such a claim cannot properly be brought against Ward because he has been released.³⁷⁶

For purposes of this report, the ultimate question is not whether McDougal or Ward could profitably be sued, but whether the Rose Law Firm aided and abetted them in what looks like fraudulent or intentional misconduct.

c. The role of the Rose Law Firm.

Despite the new billing records, the extent of the Rose Law Firm's involvement in the IDC acquisition is not well documented, and it has been further obscured by faulty memos. Seth Ward, who negotiated the acquisition for Madison Financial, denied that the Rose Law Firm had any involvement in the purchase of Castle Grande either on behalf of Madison Financial or himself—a statement that is demonstrably incorrect.³⁷⁷

I have been specifically asked whether I had any discussions with anyone from Rose concerning the Industrial Development Commission (IDC) property acquisition while I was at Madison. I would think that we used some lawyers, but I do not recall who it may have been, and do not believe it to have been Rose. I do not recall speaking to any lawyers concerning water issues in that project, and certainly had no discussions with anyone concerning delivering water services off-site. I have no knowledge of ever discussing at all any issues concerning a

Ward was not alone in denying the Rose Law Firm's role in the transaction. When asked about Castle Grande, other Madison Guaranty directors and officers did not mention the Rose Law Firm as having any involvement in the sale. brewery, liquor licenses or a question of whether a particular jurisdiction was wet or dry.³⁷⁸

He is not the only one who seems to have forgotten things; the Rose Law Firm lawyers who handled the transaction also have little or no recollection of it.³⁷⁹

The documents that Darrell Dover and the Rose Law Firm have produced do not deal at all directly with the arrangements between Ward and Madison Financial.³⁸⁰ As discussed above, the disappearance of the Rose Law Firm lawyers during the drafting phase of the IDC acquisition is peculiar, but nothing convincingly demonstrates that the lawyers knew Ward was a straw and with such knowledge substantially assisted with improper aspects of the deal. The agreement, in any of its various drafts, is an innocent-looking document that would place nobody on notice of a Rule V(C) violation. Even the change in the language from "affiliate" to "entity or individual" is not the sort of thing that would have suggested incipient wrongdoing. To the sellers, this was an all-cash deal. IDC and the banks really could care less to whom Madison Financial might assign part or all of the property.

One can assume that Ward told Thrash and Thomas that he was the assignee and therefore needed to have the language encompass him, an individual but not an affiliate.³⁸¹ Even so, this would not have put the lawyers on notice that Ward would have no equity in the deal, would give Madison Financial a 270-day option to buy all his land back at cost and would receive commissions on everything that was sold. Thrash and Thomas both say they knew none of these things; circumstances support their testimony.³⁸² Furthermore, even if they had known these things, it does not follow that they knew of Madison Guaranty's Rule V(C) problem; both men deny knowing anything about the rule or Madison Guaranty's problem with it.³⁸³ There is no evidence that any Rose Law Firm lawyers (other than Hubbell) knew of these terms.

Hubbell, however, stands in a different situation. While he says he did not work on this matter, he also says that he knew of the arrangements between Ward and Madison Financial, at least in broad outline, and he knew them shortly after the transaction closed. Hubbell knew of these matters because Ward discussed the transaction with Hubbell with some frequency. For example, Ward acquainted Hubbell with the terms of the September 3, 1985 memorandum:

Q. Let's turn to the next page, which says "Defendant's Exhibit 31" and also says "SW1-004." It's a memorandum dated September 3, 1985. Again, let me ask you if this is a document you saw in 1985 or 1986.

A. I may have seen it after the closing. Seth may have brought a copy home. So I can't say that I haven't seen it. Okay?

Q. Okay.

Do you have any recollection of discussing the terms of this document with Mr. Ward?

A. He discussed everything. So I mean -- I mean this specific document, no. But his deal with Madison, he talked about it all the time.

Q. Approximately how often would you see your father-in-law in this time period?

A. Fairly regularly. Not as often as after his accident. But fairly regularly.

Q. Again, focusing on '85, '86, could you be any more specific as to "fairly regularly"? Do you mean once a week?

A. At least once a week.³⁸⁴

384 Hubbell Interview, Dec. 27, 1995, at 16:25-17:22.

Through these conversations, Hubbell came to know the terms of the arrangements between Ward and Madison Financial:

Q. You mentioned that you learned that Madison was going to lend him [Ward] the money to buy a part. Did you know anything beyond that, about the terms in which the money would be loaned to your father-in-law?

A. I learned that later on.

Q. But in 1985, you did not know those terms?

A. I probably did after it closed; but, you know, exactly when, I couldn't tell you.

Q. When you say you probably did after it closed, why is that? Is there a particular event that brought it to your attention?

A. Well, I mean the deals changed, you know; and so he would have told me that he was borrowing the money, you know, as opposed to Madison just buying it all and him getting a commission.

Q. At the point at which you learned he was borrowing the money and was buying part of the property, did you have any understanding as to whether he was borrowing 100 percent of the money needed to buy his part of the property or some lesser amount?

A. My understanding was it was always 100 percent.

Q. Did you have any understanding as to whether it was recourse versus nonrecourse?

A. I believe -- you could tell me, but I believe it was nonrecourse. I believe that's been an issue. I can't tell you when I learned.

Q. What was your understanding as to the arrangement with respect to commissions on the sale of the property?

A. If I remember right -- but I may have learned this later on -- there was a written agreement between McDougal and my father-in-law. And I think in general it was 10 percent on anything he sold, 10 percent on any commercial real estate; and then a lesser percentage on residential real estate.

Q. When do you think you learned those facts?

A. It had to be sometime after the closing. My impression was that initially he was going to get paid when the deal closed, you know, like most real estate people. At some point, that changed.³⁸⁵

MR. BEN-VENISTE: Now, what was your understanding about how it was that he came to take a portion of the IDC property in his name?

MR. HUBBELL: In my understanding, and that's again based on conversations, was that when it came close to closing that there was some concern about Madison taking all of the property in its name and that Mr. Ward offered to take a portion in his name until it was sold, if Madison would lend him the money to do so.

MR. BEN-VENISTE: And was that the extent of your knowledge?

MR. HUBBELL: It was all kind of after the fact.

MR. BEN-VENISTE: Right. And do you recall discussing that knowledge with anyone at the Rose Law Firm?

MR. HUBBELL: I might have, but I don't have any recollection of it.³⁸⁶

Hubbell also understood that Madison Financial could not buy all of the property in its own name:

Q. At this time, September 1985, what was your understanding, if any, with respect to the reasons why Madison was not going to buy the entire property itself?

A. My understanding was based on what Mr. Ward told me, that maybe whoever closed the loan was -- was that Madison had limits on what it could own in its own name, and so Mr. Ward was going to own part of it until it could be sold.³⁸⁷

386 Hubbell Senate Testimony, Feb. 7, 1996, at 13-14.

The foregoing is fairly consistent with what Hubbell told the RTC's Inspector General, as summarized by an investigator:

HUBBELL said that WARD told him that he was negotiating on behalf of MADISON to buy the IDC property, which would then be split up between MADISON and WARD. HUBBELL said that Ward may have told him that MADISON could only buy a portion of the money [sic], and that the limitation may have been regulatory. HUBBELL recalled that Ward was negotiating the purchase as if he was the sole purchaser because the purchase price would have been higher if the sellers thought that McDUGAL was the actual purchaser. WARD also had told HUBBELL that his part of the purchase would be financed with money borrowed from MADISON GUARANTY.³⁸⁸

Exactly when Hubbell acquired all this information is unclear. He says he gained most of it after closing (October 4, 1985), but that might be incorrect. As shown by the passage quoted above, on at least one occasion Hubbell said he had such information in September 1985. In addition, Hubbell, in the conversation with Schaufele after McDougal's birthday party in August 1985, declined to assist Ward with the transaction, citing conflicts. That statement provides a basis to infer that Hubbell knew something of the terms of the transaction at this time.

It is much harder to prove what other Rose Law Firm lawyers knew (if anything) about these matters. Other than Hubbell, all of them have denied knowing the salient terms that arguably make Ward a straw.

d. The elements of aiding and abetting.

To be liable for aiding and abetting, one must be generally aware of his role as part of an overall illegal or tortious activity, and one must knowingly and ³⁸⁸ IG-Ex. III-69, at 6-7. Regarding his role in the acquisition, Hubbell wrote a letter to the FDIC in June 1989 stating that he had "not represented Mr. Seth Ward in connection with any issue or matter relating to his disputes with Madison Guaranty." substantially assist the ~~principal violation~~³⁸⁹. There may have been a principal violation here, but there is no substantial evidence that the Rose Law Firm knowingly and substantially assisted in its commission.

Knowledge: Mrs. Clinton, Thrash and Thomas, all of whom recall very little about the transaction, say they had no savings and loan experience, did not know of the Arkansas investment limitation regulation, did not know of the 1984 FHLBB Report of Examination or Supervisory Agreement, and did not know the terms on which Seth Ward purchased his portion of Castle Grande.³⁹⁰ No substantial evidence to the contrary has been found except possibly as to Hubbell.³⁹¹ Hubbell knew in 1985 the essential terms of the transaction, including the aspects that arguably make it a straw-man arrangement, but he says he did not learn these things until after the transaction closed.

If Hubbell had knowledge at a relevant time, it is possible that this knowledge might be imputed to the Rose Law Firm. As a matter of partnership law, that may happen if the partner who knows something but is not acting in the particular matter "reasonably could and should have communicated it to the acting partner."³⁹² Even so, it is unclear that the imputation of Hubbell's knowledge to the firm would mean that otherwise-innocent acts performed by other lawyers in the firm, who lacked actual knowledge of these matters, would somehow become "fraud" or "intentional misconduct" within the meaning of the statute of limitations extender. There is no relevant case law under the extender statute, nor much by way of analogy in cases construing the Uniform Partnership Act.

389 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 876 (1979). See generally Rose Report at 46-48. It should be noted that somebody has given a copy of the Rose Report to the Rose Law Firm and somebody associated with President and Mrs. Clinton. Rose Law Firm Chief Operating Officer Ronald Clark has read the Rose Report. Clark Senate Testimony, Jan. 18, 1996, at 16, 23. Mrs. Clinton had it described to her, but not in any detail. Clinton Interview, Feb. 14, 1996, at 106: Were the FDIC to institute litigation against the Rose Law Firm, it would not help to have the Rose Report in the hands of the other side.

390 Thrash Interview, Dec. 1, 1995, at 4:20-5:12, 7:23-26, 23:25-24:25, 24:26-25:20, 31:13-22, 32:1-12. Thomas Interview, Dec. 19, 1995, at 5:4-12, 17:13-19:10, 23:3-7, 28:15-29:12. Letter from Alden L. Atkins to Bruce A. Encson, Feb. 2, 1996, at 1-2.

391 Mrs. Clinton might well have seen references to Rule V(C) in Massey's correspondence with Beverly Bassett and Charles Handley, but even assuming she cast her eye over this letter, there is no reason to think it so much of an impression on her that it would have come to mind months later in a different context. Also, Massey's letter demonstrated, apparently to Handley's satisfaction, that Madison Guaranty was not close to being in violation of Rule V(C) at the time.

392 1 Alan R. Bromberg and Larry E. Ribstein, Bromberg and Ribstein on Partnership § 4.06, at 4:73 (1994), quoting Uniform Partnership Act § 12 (1914).

~~Substantial assistance: The argument here also is weak at best, although the reasons for this weakness differ as between the two principal documents.~~

~~The September 24, 1985 letter: Hubbell says that he did not draft the September 24, 1985 letter,³⁹³ and he told the Senate that he "wasn't party to the representation of Madison and my father-in-law in that acquisition, but I was aware of it generally."³⁹⁴ The evidence summarized above is not entirely consistent with Hubbell's declaration that he "wasn't party to the representation of Madison and my father-in-law in that acquisition," but it suggests at most that Hubbell may have cast a fairly casual eye over the September 24, 1985 letter.~~

Mrs. Clinton also says that she did not draft the September 24, 1985 letter. To disbelieve her, one must adopt a whole series of fairly implausible assumptions about when the letter really was drafted and what Mrs. Clinton was working on in November 1985. As already stated, a trier of fact is highly unlikely to find that these assumptions are supported by the weight of the evidence.

~~The May 1, 1986 option: This option has less immediate significance than the September 24, 1985 letter. The option did not assist in the closing of the acquisition. It, unlike the letter, was created many months after the transaction closed. The option, unlike the letter, does not prove any awareness on the part of its author of Ward's arrangements with Madison Financial. Such awareness could be inferred only if one credits the Latham/Young "complex theory" that the option was an attempt to obtain capital-gains treatment for Ward's commissions. If, instead, one credits Ward's view that the option had nothing to do with the commissions (as the jury in Ward v. Madison obviously did), then the author of the option need not have known anything about Ward's commissions, let alone his 100 percent financing or the other terms embodied in the September 24, 1985 letter. For these reasons, the option seems, at most, tangentially related to the acquisition itself.~~

Of the two theories, the simple theory probably is the more believable; the jury accepted it and it has the virtue of being simple and consistent with the September 24, 1985 letter. Nevertheless, the complex theory has its attractions, too: in some respects it looks like just the sort of thing that McDougal would attempt. Be that as it may, there is no evidence that Mrs. Clinton had any information that would have put her on notice of the facts underlying the complex theory. She has denied having such knowledge, and the circumstances support her. It is highly unlikely that, even if she had been 393 16 G. Ex. 111-69, at 6-7.

394 Senate Hearing Transcript, Dec. 1, 1995, at 102:22-103:2.

so inclined, she would have drafted a document having a complex (and highly dubious) tax purpose in two hours.³⁹⁵ It also is unlikely that, had she known that purpose, she would have described the wrong property. For these reasons, a trier of fact is highly unlikely to conclude that Mrs. Clinton either knew of any wrongful purpose connected with the option (if there was one), or had the intent to aid in the commission of that hypothetical wrong.

A third theory might be suggested. The option might be related to an effort to document Ward's rights. Ward and others have testified to such an effort, noting the need to have some written evidence for the FHLBB examiners to see of Ward's entitlement to the commissions.³⁹⁶ In addition, a lawyer (such as Mrs. Clinton) working on FSLIC matters might have gained familiarity with the D'Oench Duhme doctrine and thereby developed a concern that an oral or inadequately documented arrangement might not prove enforceable should Madison Guaranty fail.³⁹⁷ Hubbell says that Ward was anxious about whether he would be paid.³⁹⁸ In such circumstances, it would not be unusual to ask a lawyer to help reduce one's rights to writing.

On analysis, however, this theory is really only a variant of the "complex theory." The theory that Mrs. Clinton might have been helping Ward to avoid a D'Oench Duhme problem makes sense as applied to the option only if one credits the view that the option bore some relationship to Ward's commissions. If this view is accepted, then the option might be deemed a rather opaque and perhaps misleading means of documenting Ward's entitlement to commissions. But, as noted, this is a theory the jury in Ward v. Madison rejected, and it suffers from a number of problems, starting with its inconsistency with the September 24, 1985 letter and going on to its dependence on Latham and Young, witnesses whom it would be easy to impeach.³⁹⁹

In any event, Mrs. Clinton does not recall being asked for such advice or rendering such services:

395 DKRT11-000922. The timesheet entry does not suggest that Mrs. Clinton spoke to anyone else at the firm, e.g., a tax lawyer, and Mrs. Clinton usually was meticulous about recording such intra-office conferences.

398 As noted above, Seth Ward told Webster Hubbell in the spring of 1986 that he "had some sense Madison was having trouble" and was "very anxious" about whether he was going to be paid the commissions he was owed. Hubbell Interview, Dec. 27, 1995, at 43:21-44:12.

399 Latham pled guilty to bank fraud. Young's problems as a witness are much less serious but there are a number of inconsistencies in his testimony.

Q . . . At the beginning of this, I asked you a little bit about the D'Oench Duhme Doctrine and you described your understanding for me. Let me ask you this.

With respect to the option you prepared, the May 1, 1986 option, is it possible that was prepared because -- I'm just asking -- I'm not suggesting this as evidence -- I'm just asking the question. Because you had advised Mr. Ward that he needed to document his compensation arrangements with Madison Guaranty, that he was undertaking certain work for Madison, evidence which you indicate you don't recall and perhaps never knew about that he was to be paid some commissions. Is it possible that he had come to you and said "look, I don't know if I'm going to get paid or not. It's been six months. I haven't been paid, and the examination is underway. I'm a little concerned about whether or not I'm going to get paid."

Is it possible you advised him you ought to reduce this to writing? If you don't have it in writing, you may not get paid and if the institution is ever taken over, you could be out of luck because there's no written record? Is it possible you gave him such advice?

A I don't recall giving him such advice. I don't recall knowing enough about Mr. Ward's personal dealings with Madison to have had any basis to give him such advice. I don't recall Mr. Ward ever seeking my advice about his personal financial arrangements with anyone, including Madison.

Q Do you recall him indicating any -- let me put it this way.

Mr. Hubbell has said to me at least that Mr. Ward expressed to him, starting in the spring of 1986 what Mr. Hubbell described as a state of anxiety about affairs at Madison and how -- I think he goes into more detail -- but expressing anxiety worrying about whether or not he's going to be paid.

I take it what you're saying, is that didn't come to your attention that Mr. Ward had anxiety of that sort?

A Mr. Ericson, I don't recall Mr. Ward ever expressing anxiety about anything to me. Mr. Ward's demeanor and dealings with me were always filled with confidence, ~~not anxiety~~, to the best of my recollection, in the years that I had any dealings with him.⁴⁰⁰

Several other facts support Mrs. Clinton's recollections:

First, she may not have known much about the D'Oench Duhme doctrine. When asked a blind question about it, she answered by describing an unrelated legal issue.⁴⁰¹

Second, the theory that Ward or McDougal wanted to have the Rose Law Firm document the terms that (arguably) make Ward a straw man is hard to reconcile with the fact that in other respects McDougal and Ward seem to have resorted to self-help rather than advice of counsel. Certainly, the series of loans that they entered into in the spring of 1986 ($400,000 from Madison Guaranty to Ward; $300,000 from Ward to Madison Financial; and approximately $70,000 running in both directions) reflect an unusual approach to documenting Ward's entitlement to commissions. There is no evidence that the Rose Law Firm had a hand in these loans. ~~It is hard to imagine that any~~ competent lawyer could have recommended this course of action.

Finally, even if a trier of fact did find liability, it is doubtful that the option caused any harm. It was never exercised. It did ~~not cover up anything~~, nor did it prevent the FHLBB examiners from roundly criticizing the IDC/Castle Grande project in their 1986 Report of Examination. While it became an issue in Ward v. Madison, neither Ward's counsel nor Madison Guaranty's counsel thinks it was very important to the result, and a review of the trial transcript leads to the same conclusion. For all these reasons, the May 1, 1986 provides no basis for any sort of claim against the Rose Law Firm.

The money received by the Rose Law Firm: The amount of money paid to the Rose Law Firm for its matter 5/IDC/Castle Grande work is not substantial. Work was performed for the money, at least with respect to the liquor and sewage issues, and the initial review of the purchase agreement.

400 Clinton Interview, Feb. 14, 1996, at 103-05.

401 Clinton Interview, Feb. 14, 1996, at 22, 102-05, 107.

As noted, for a time the ~~Rose Law Firm~~ received a $2,000 a month retainer from Madison Guaranty. The press has suggested that then-Governor Clinton personally solicited this retainer from McDougal and picked up the money monthly.⁴⁰² The suggestion is made that the retainer was paid because the Clintons wanted the money, rather than for services rendered.

This suggestion seems wrong for at least three reasons:

First, the retainer was treated as an advance fee payment for services to be rendered rather than a "true" retainer (a fee paid regardless of whether services are rendered, in effect, a fee for remaining available).⁴⁰³ Consistent with this interpretation, the Rose Law Firm deposited the retainer into a trust account, at least starting in February 1986.⁴⁰⁴ A "true" retainer need not be deposited into a trust account, because it is a payment for being available rather than an advance on services.

Second, services were rendered and, when the representation was nearing an end, the unused portion of the retainer was returned to Madison Guaranty (indeed, perhaps while Madison Guaranty still owed the Rose Law Firm some money for the Babcock and Tulsa Econolodge matters). Thus, the suggestion that the retainer was some sort of gratuity, or was handled improperly, lacks foundation.

Third, as described above, McDougal's Madison Bank had refused to pay the Rose Law Firm in full for litigation services rendered in 1981 and 1982. Given this prior experience with McDougal, the Rose Law Firm could hardly be blamed for seeking advance payment before agreeing to represent a McDougal entity once again.

Missing documents: The Rose Law Firm did not have a centralized system of opening or maintaining files; instead, matters were left to the discretion of individual lawyers.⁴⁰⁶ The "bright line" approach taken to the statute of limitations in Arkansas has made long-term document retention by law firms less customary than might be true elsewhere. In Arkansas, as in some other states, the courts have been reluctant to develop exceptions to the statutes of limitations. While in some states (e.g., California), various tolling doctrines make it exceedingly difficult to render advice on how long one must keep documents, in Arkansas this is not true. As recently as 1991, the Arkansas Supreme Court, in a legal malpractice case, refused to adopt a variety of tolling doctrines, stating as follows:

There is yet another significant reason we do not retroactively adopt the "discovery rule," "date of injury rule," or "termination of employment rule." Many abstractors, accountants, architects, attorneys, and other similar professionals surely have relied on our traditional and long-standing rule. In doing so, they had no reason to keep records for longer than three (3) years. As a consequence, if we retroactively changed the rule, they might easily have no materials to use in their defense.⁴⁰⁶

The new evidence shows that the Castle Grande files were discarded in 1988, long before Whitewater in any form became an issue. The discarding occurred in a seemingly innocent context, as part of a general effort to discard unneeded files.⁴⁰⁷ There is no evidence that Mrs. Clinton knew anyone might need the files. The Ward case was then going to trial and she had a file labeled "Ward Option" but she says she does not recall being aware of the case, much less knowing that the option was at issue.⁴⁰⁸

406 Chapman v. Alexander, 307 Ark. 87, 817 S.W.2d 425, 427 (1991). Of course, nothing in this opinion, or elsewhere, would justify spoliation of evidence, should that be proved. The only point being made here is that discarding files before investigations began and subpoenas were issued might be justifiable. Therefore, without more, the non-existence of certain files today is not proof of actionable wrongdoing.

Compare RIC 000007G through RIC 000007I, produced under cover of a letter from Alden L. Atkins to Bruce A. Ericson dated Feb. 3, 1996. The handwriting on RIC 000007G, indicating that files should be discarded, is not the same as the handwriting on the document behind tab A, which is otherwise identical. Mrs. Clinton thinks a staff person must have copied her directions onto another copy of the original memorandum. Clinton Interview, Feb. 14, 1996, at 99-101.

408 Clinton Interview, Feb. 14, 1996, at 101.

The worse that might be said is that Mrs. Clinton should have checked with her client before discarding files that belonged to it.⁴⁰⁹ If she did not do so, that arguably was an error on her part, but it is one thing to deem it an error and quite another thing to deem it spoliation. Besides, in Arkansas there is no general duty, in the absence of ongoing proceedings, to preserve evidence.⁴¹⁰

Conspiracy theories: Of course, one might reject all this and argue that the documents were destroyed in 1988 for a nefarious reason and that all the witnesses have testified untruthfully. Such an argument, however, would be highly unlikely to persuade any trier of fact.

It simply would not be persuasive to argue that, for $21,000, McDougal corrupted the Rose Law Firm and convinced half a dozen lawyers, most of whom he did not know, to join him in a scheme to violate the law. Odd as he might seem, McDougal did not involve large groups of strangers in his schemes. Instead, McDougal typically involved a close group of long-time friends and trusted associates in his plans, and nobody else. And typically it was the same people, over and over, friends and vassals who dated back to McDougal's youth.

Rather than find a conspiracy here, a trier of fact presented with all the evidence is far more likely to end up thinking something like this:

The Clintons (like Senator Fulbright) were not old cronies, like R.D. Randolph, instead, they fell into a different group. They were not confidantes but people who McDougal wanted to claim as friends. Sitting on the periphery of politics, McDougal wanted to be known as someone who had friends in high places. In the Clintons' case, he wanted to say something like this: 'They are friends of mine. We go way back. They have invested with me. I worked for the Governor. His wife is my lawyer.'

In all probability, after Massey sought to obtain legal work from Latham, Latham raised the issue with McDougal, and McDougal thought something like this: 'What a good idea. I already have Jim Guy Tucker in my stable of lawyers. Why not add the First Lady as well? I will send her some fairly prosaic assignments and see how she does. Meanwhile, it certainly won't hurt to let people know the Governor's wife represents me.'

In contrast to this, the conspiracy theory is hopelessly flawed. The Independent Counsel already has alleged a different conspiracy—the conspiracy with Tucker—involving the same property, IDC/Castle Grande. Without prejudging the results of that forthcoming trial, let us grant that the conspiracy alleged in the indictment does not violate common sense. The principals were cut in on the deals, and relatively large amounts of money changed hands (six figures, it is alleged). Whatever one thinks of that, however, it strains common sense to place a second set of conspirators on the same property—a set that included half a dozen lawyers who had never met McDougal before, a set that was not cut in on the deals, a set whose senior members stood to gain something on the order of $20 a month.

Summary: The only solid evidence tying the Rose Law Firm to the IDC/Castle Grande acquisition is evidence of the innocent activity of participating in the drafting of the purchase agreement. While some evidence suggests that Hubbell could have had a role in the drafting of the September 24, 1985 letter, Hubbell denies it, as does Ward, and nothing proves Hubbell drafted the letter, much less that he did so knowing it to be wrong. Similarly, while Mrs. Clinton drafted the May 1, 1986 option, nothing proves she did so knowing it to be wrong, the circumstances of the work point strongly toward innocent explanations, and the theories that tie this option to wrongdoing or to the straw-man arrangements are strained at best.

IV. CONCLUSION.

The evidence taken as a whole does not amount to convincing proof that the Rose Law Firm knowingly aided and abetted a fraud, or a scheme to circumvent the Arkansas investment limitation regulation. This conclusion does not necessarily mean that the evidence exonerates anyone; it simply means, given the applicable legal standards and the statutory mandate under which the FDIC operates, that no reasonable basis has been found to recommend the filing of a claim relating to IDC/Castle Grande against the Rose Law Firm.

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

EXECUTIVE SESSION

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:26 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING STATEMENT OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. I apologize for getting started late, but the Members have been meeting. The Committee is going to discuss the possibility of examining Mr. Hale, which is of great importance and the manner in which that is done.

Let me say that it was a bipartisan effort of this Committee, the Minority joining the Majority, that has attempted to bring Mr. Hale in. We sought by way of subpoena to examine him, to depose him, and then have the opportunity to hear his testimony. We encountered resistance by the Special Prosecutor because of the pending trial in Little Rock. After the trial, we once again joined in an effort to bring Mr. Hale before the Committee. First, to depose him; and then, to examine him publicly.

We were responded to by his lawyer, Mr. Olson, in a May 23rd letter, that we have made available, in which he indicates that Mr. Hale respectfully declined to appear before the Committee for a deposition or public testimony. He goes on to say:

Mr. Hale has been explicitly threatened, in writing, with prosecution in Arkansas by Arkansas State authorities. There are ample bases for believing that such threats and any such prosecution would constitute retribution against Mr. Hale for his cooperation with the Independent Counsel. He has been advised that any testimony that he may give before the Committee may be used against him by Arkansas prosecutors in such future proceedings. Under the circumstances, Mr. Hale feels that he has no choice but to avail himself to the protection afforded to him by the Constitution.

Mr. Hale's attorney advised the Committee that he would not come in without getting protection from self-incrimination. The Committee reached out to Judge Starr, wrote to him on May 30th, asking whether or not he would be opposed to our request for what we call "use immunity," a limited immunity, which means Hale could no longer successfully raise the threat against incrimination and raise the Fifth Amendment as a defense against testifying.

It would provide him with limited-use immunity, which means that any testimony he gave could not be used against him. It would not, in any way, permit him an early exit from prison nor would it permit any crimes that he committed from being prosecuted and pursued. If, indeed, evidence has been gathered and a prosecution may be undertaken in the State of Arkansas or any other place against Mr. Hale for actions that he has undertaken, he can still be prosecuted and his testimony before this Committee is the only thing that could not be used against him.

We were mindful of not having a repeat of some of the problems that have taken place in the past. That is why we went to extraordinary lengths in accommodating the legitimate concerns of the Special Counsel.

That was an understanding the entire Senate reached and understood in enabling legislation that authorized the Whitewater Committee to undertake its work. We are now here today for the purposes of considering enacting a Resolution which would give us the ability to grant limited-use immunity to Mr. Hale.

I want to announce that a quorum has been established. I know that there are various questions that my colleagues have and want to raise with respect to this matter.

This is a serious matter. It's a question of having an opportunity to hear, admittedly, an important witness and to judge his veracity and credibility, both by the Committee and the American people.

Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, this requires some very careful analysis and discussion. I believe that Mr. Hale is seeking to abuse the Committee by this proposition his counsel has put forth for what really amounts to blanket-use immunity.

Once Hale comes in, if he's given immunity, anything he says at the witness table, even if not responsive to a question put to him, he gains immunity for it. Mr. Hale is a bad actor and that is being charitable in the description of him in terms of the practices he has engaged in and the abuses he has committed.

He apparently remains subject in Arkansas to prosecutions—the one we know about apparently that has been put forward is the abuse of the burial insurance scheme in which poor people put money aside for burial insurance. They were ripped off in the scam. That's the allegation with respect to Mr. Hale's conduct.

Why should he be able to come into the Committee and obtain immunity that offers the opportunity to, in effect, shield himself from accounting for those activities is beyond me. I don't think that should happen.

It seems to me some thought should be given to bringing him in here without immunity and getting his testimony with the possibility of finding some way that he will not be questioned on that particular area. Then he couldn't abuse the Committee by moving into that area and by doing so gaining immunity for himself, which I think is a very real danger, given the kind of person he is.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR ORRIN G. HATCH

Senator HATCH. Please, would the Senator yield just for a second on that point?

Senator SARBANES. Certainly.

Senator HATCH. It's my understanding that nobody is going to go into that. I mean, these certain——

Senator SARBANES. Hale can voluntarily——

Senator HATCH. This is going to be limited just to——

Senator SARBANES. Let me say to the Senator, you run the risk that Mr. Hale will simply volunteer it in the course of his answers. Once he lays it on the record, he gets immunity.

Senator HATCH. They can prove that case without his testimony.

Senator SARBANES. Pardon?

Senator HATCH. They can prove that case against him from what those facts are whether he testifies or not.

Senator SARBANES. I don't know that that's the case. But I don't think Hale ought to be able to take a question from you and then just completely move in another direction and lay out an answer and obtain immunity for the material——

Senator HATCH. The Chairman is going to stop him.

Senator SARBANES. —he could put on the record. I really don't think that ought to happen.

The CHAIRMAN. I think that the Senator should be permitted to do everything possible to cut off any line of testimony as it related to that area, recognizing two things. First, that it was outside of the scope of what we are inquiring into; and second, we would not give him an opportunity to act and use this Committee as a shield from criminal prosecution. We will not permit that line of testimony. I mean, that would be my intent. I would hope the Committee would join in with me.

Senator Bryan.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR RICHARD H. BRYAN

Senator BRYAN. Mr. Chairman, isn't there an easier way to go? Rather than to let him control the Committee, why don't we all agree that we will not ask any question relevant to this National Savings matter under which he faces potential prosecution; we all agree, and you have the ability to rule us out of order?

The CHAIRMAN. Absolutely.

Senator BRYAN. So under those circumstances, why should he be granted immunity? His concern is the prosecution at the State level. I understand that.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, let me say this to you: Again, we have, in an effort to pursue this, reconfirmed yesterday, and his lawyers have indicated quite clearly that he would not waive immunity.

There may be something that none of us are aware of. I am not speaking on behalf of David Hale, but every citizen who obviously has broken the law, been convicted, and is in prison for lots of misdeeds, there is no way to get him to waive that which is a limited use, which says any testimony he gives can't be used against him.

Senator BRYAN. My concern is that Mr. Hale and his lawyers are very cleverly trying to manipulate this Committee. That is to say, if he blurts out something in the course of a question, even though it is unresponsive to the question, he then has expanded his own immunity.

Senator KERRY. He would even be immune as to the perjury that he might commit here.

Senator BRYAN. For example, if he says, "And by the way, I also have to tell you that I have perpetrated fraud against a couple of other Federal institutions." He, thereby, secures immunity by expanding his response. I mean, that's a great risk, it seems to me, for this Committee to take; whereas, the simple course of action is you simply rule us out of order if we ask any questions that relates to the National Savings case, which is the case that he ostensibly is concerned about that is subject to the local prosecution.

That seems to me a reasonable approach.

Senator SHELBY. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, Senator Shelby.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR RICHARD C. SHELBY

Senator SHELBY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Chertoff, what are we really asking for and what is the scope, and what are Mr. Hale's options, if he would comment on that? As a former prosecutor and U.S. Attorney, he understands all that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To answer the question, Mr. Chairman, there is nothing that Mr. Hale could do, in answering your question, that would give him immunity from prosecution based on any evidence that has been gathered by the State prosecutor in Arkansas. Whatever the State prosecutor has in his hopper now is, and will always be, available to the State prosecutor in order to make his case.

All that use immunity does is say that anything that is said here cannot be used to build a case. Therefore, even if he were able to blurt something out before the Chairman cut him off, all that would mean is that the prosecutor in Arkansas could not use what was blurted out in making the case. It would not undo or erase any evidence that the prosecutor can independently develop.

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman, with all due respect to the——

Senator SHELBY. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Kerry, if you would wait for just a moment I will come to you.

Senator Shelby.

Senator SHELBY. I would like to follow up and ask Mr. Chertoff this question: During the Watergate proceedings, how was immunity granted and used, if it was?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I think in Watergate, as well as in a number of other proceedings, use immunity, was given out to witnesses. I think over the past years, over 300 witnesses have been granted use immunity by the Senate.

Even since Oliver North testified, I think that there have been approximately a dozen. Mr. Chairman, I would say that this is different than the North case for the following reasons:

First, the prosecutor in the Oliver North case objected to the granting of use immunity. Here, of course, the prosecutor and the Independent Counsel, who was the only prosecutor that the Resolution requires the Committee to be concerned about, has said that this will not affect the prosecution. In fact, Mr. Hale has already been convicted and is serving his sentence.

Second, what we are proposing to deal with here with questions is not the subject matter of the State prosecution. So there is really no risk that the kind of taint problem that arose in the North case could arise with respect to the separate State case.

This individual, as with the case of others who have told the Committee they would plead the Fifth, such as Mr. Wade, who was the real estate broker for Whitewater, has an absolute right under the Supreme Court rule to assert his Fifth Amendment right with respect to any question, even if, on its face, it's an innocent question that might in any way, shape or form be a piece of evidence that could be used in a prosecution. Therefore, in terms of the ability of the Committee to require his testimony, it is essentially up to the witness.

Mr. Hale's lawyer, as late as yesterday, told the Counsel on both sides that he was greatly concerned about the whole area of examination in terms of his Fifth Amendment right.

Senator SHELBY. Since the Oliver North case, I understand the Senate has granted immunity 12 times, in other words, 12 witnesses, since then; is that correct?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's correct.

Senator SHELBY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Kerry.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR JOHN F. KERRY

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman, there are a couple of questions that come up. I tend to share Senator Bryan's view, that there is a sense of abuse of the Committee here for the following reasons.

First, let me comment on the Oliver North situation. What the court has said, and I think most people have come to the conclusion, is that the North case has raised sufficient doubt about granting immunity. No one can predict with certainty what is going to come out in the course of testimony or how that statement here, or evidence elsewhere, is going to cloud or impact the perceptions of another case.

It is an absolute certainty, that the course of justice in the case will be affected by his appearance here with immunity, because no lawyer worth his salt is not going to file an appeal based on the claim that, in fact, the entire prosecution was tainted. So you have, to a certainty, the fact that you are going to tie up the court process, the legal system with the assertion of that complaint.

Second, we can predict that there will be a convoluted set of arguments. The ability of any jury or any judge to draw, the conclusion that, in fact, what he says here somehow has an impact on some evidence in the State trial conceivably.

Now that's one point.

The second point is that the State trial involves ripping-off African-Americans in an insurance scheme for funerals. There is a legitimate question here whether we ought to, in any way, provide any leverage against his ability to be prosecuted for that when we have a very simple solution provided by Senator Bryan, which is that we all agree we are not going into that area.

If you do not go into that area, then the entire question of a tainting doesn't have to be broached because this man has already testified for 9 days in a court of law without immunity. By what rights should he go to the Arkansas Court, cut a deal and agree to talk in court, get a lesser sentence and now come up to the Senate and bamboozle the Committee by coming in here and saying absolutely anything he wants whatsoever with the notion that for whatever he says here he can never be prosecuted?

We would be inviting the possibility of any kind of broad condemnation that has no basis whatsoever when he has already gone to court, testified in front of a jury, and been judged guilty. Why should we not act exactly as that court did and say, "You were willing to testify before the court. Now come and tell the country the very same things you told the court."

Senator BOXER. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you want an answer to that?

Senator KERRY. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The answer is that his attorney has indicated that he is not going to waive his right. We have to now consider whether or not we want to take his testimony.

As it relates to the question of the insurance company fraud that he may be involved in and may be charged in, particularly if this Committee agrees that we will not raise any issues, I think that becomes academic. We are not immunizing him from any crimes.

Last, but not least is, if he lies before this Committee, he is subject to a charge of perjury, and, we will pursue that. He has to understand this is not a "get out of jail free card." This is not saying that for any crime that he may or may not have committed that he now has absolution. This is a very narrowly defined immunity. We have no other recourse if we want to hear from him but to grant this limited-use immunity.

Senator BOXER. Mr. Chairman.

Senator SARBANES. Well, Mr. Chairman.

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman, the only subject that he faces the Fifth Amendment issue on is the insurance issue. If we agree not to ask him a question about it, there is no Fifth Amendment issue and you do not have to grant immunity.

The CHAIRMAN. What you are saying is that, from our perspective, why would he be doing this. I do not know what he may be concerned about testifying to, that could be used against him. Obviously, this is a right that his attorney has indicated, as recently as yesterday, he is going to pursue. So we have to make a judgment.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, our concern is, given what Senator Bryan and Senator Kerry have said, that he's out to abuse the Committee in terms of the use of this process. In other words, if we take out the burial insurance, why would he need immunity? His insistence upon obtaining immunity leads one to the question or the suspicion that it is to accomplish a purpose that ought not to be accomplished and to use this Committee. I want the Chairman to know that we have really worked hard at this and given it a lot of serious thought, because we have consistently all along said that he ought to come in and be heard from.

The question here really is this assertion on their part that they have to get immunity in order to do that. I am going to ask Mr. Ben-Veniste just briefly to give us the benefit of some analysis that he has made. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

As Senator Sarbanes has pointed out, we have consistently been trying to bring Hale before this Committee. We have correspondence between the Majority and Minority about this subject, where back in November and December we started to request that Hale be subpoenaed. No subpoena was forthcoming, so naturally, he didn't appear. Then we come to the extension of time for this Committee's work and a subpoena is issued for Hale. This occurs after the trial where he has now testified for 9 days under a plea bargain agreement with the Independent Counsel's Office but without any blanket-use immunity.

In response to our subpoena to appear for deposition, he asserted a Fifth Amendment privilege and in the letter of that assertion raised the specter of Arkansas prosecution. With the Chairman's and the Ranking Member's blessing, we had a meeting with Mr. Hale's lawyer to try to flesh out what it was that he was principally concerned about. The only specific thing that he mentioned that he was concerned about was the prosecution that is contemplated against him in Arkansas State Court. I wish to emphasize that this is only an allegation, but we need to discuss it so we have what's on the table before us.

In that matter, the allegation is that in 1993 Mr. Hale committed a fraud with respect to a company called National Insurance, which was a burial insurance company, taking money from lower-income persons, as little as $1 a month to insure that they would be buried upon their death as opposed to being put in a Potter's Field somewhere in an unmarked grave. It appears, on the basis of the news reports relating to that allegation, that some $150,000 was removed from that company, which was controlled by Mr. Hale.

In a surprise audit, the State insurance inspectors came in and looked at the books of the company and saw that this money had been removed. They demanded that Mr. Hale repay the money. A check was forthcoming in the amount of $150,000 and put back into the company. That information was provided to the insurance regulators. It was immediately removed after the documentation was provided to the insurance regulators. The company was taken over by the State. It collapsed and was in receivership.

Now it gets a little more complicated, because the company was apparently purchased by Mr. Hale with the proceeds of the CMS fraud, the company that he had run and which was the subject of the trial in Little Rock, had generated profits to him. Among those profits was money which was used by Hale and, again, allegedly to purchase this company.

So that is the area that he has specific concern about and the only area that he has specific concern. But, the request that he has made is for blanket-use immunity. He has indicated he will not give anything other than name, rank, and serial number without blanket-use immunity.

The issue before us, as I see it, is having testified for 9 days in Little Rock, what has changed to require a grant of immunity from this Committee which, as has been stated here, could pose a problem to the successful prosecution by State authorities? The issue of whether the Independent Counsel doesn't have a problem with our granting immunity doesn't really address the question of the State prosecution. That is not the Independent Counsel's prosecution that is a State of Arkansas prosecution.

This immunity that we are discussing is the same exact immunity that was given to Ollie North, John Poindexter, and others. In that regard, the law has evolved somewhat from the days of Watergate. I was very familiar with the problems that were associated with the grants of immunity in Watergate. At that time, the law was that if you segregate your evidence in advance of a grant of immunity, you were pretty much assured that you could use that segregated evidence in a trial of the individual who was given us immunity.

The North case changed that. The burden was then placed on the prosecution. This case would place the burden on the prosecutor in Little Rock, who is not a part of these proceedings. The law would require that he prove that nothing that came out of this hearing if it were the subject of a use immunity granted to David Hale or a blanket basis, that nothing directly or indirectly came to his attention, went through his mind, was used in any way, shape or form in connection with that prosecution.

That is a stunningly different test than the Castaguard test that was in place during Watergate and a much more difficult case as is reflected in the North decision where it was impossible for the prosecution to meet that burden, even though they had segregated their evidence themselves. So what we are faced with, really on a common sense basis, is whether there is some benefit that is being sought here by Mr. Hale that this Committee will confer on him that will interfere with prosecutions that are projected against him in the State of Arkansas.

From a very practical standpoint, one would have to ask why after 9 days of testimony on the stand without a blanket-use immunity, he would now need it from us. I think, in analyzing Senator Bryan's proposal and listening to Senator Kerry, I'm struck by the fact that this is a very common sense way of going forward. The protection is not diminished by Mr. Hale asserting a Fifth Amendment privilege or letting us know he would assert a Fifth Amendment privilege to areas of legitimate concern. Then we wouldn't get into them. That is a self-regulating way of going forward.

Senator BOXER. Mr. Ben-Veniste, would you yield to me, through the Chair, to just ask one question of counsel here?

That is: Would it not be fair to say that Mr. Hale wants a special deal that no other witness that came before us ever got before? In other words, he's getting immunity. Neither this Majority or Minority has ever granted that to any other witness.

We have clear evidence that there is a prosecution pending against this man. Would it not be fair to say that under the plan proposed by Senator Bryan, we get everything we want? We get Mr. Hale here with a promise by us that we won't ask him about his ripping-off poor people in a burial scheme, and he comes forward. Also, is it not true that we never granted immunity to any other witness?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We did not grant immunity in the 14 months that I've been involved with this Committee. However, let me make one correction, if I may in what you said.

Senator BOXER. Please.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In fairness to Mr. Hale, he has not been indicted on the charges we are talking about relating to the burial insurance company. We are operating on the basis of news reports that indicate that there was an emissary sent to the local prosecutor from the Independent Counsel arguing that Hale should not be prosecuted. They did not accept that point. And they had indicated that they would defer indicting Mr. Hale until after the conclusion of the McDougal/Tucker trial.

It is our understanding that the statute of limitations in bringing such charges would expire at some point in July.

Senator SARBANES. If Hale appeared without—

The CHAIRMAN. Might I make an observation?

Senator SARBANES. Certainly.

The CHAIRMAN. The fact of the matter is that the Fifth Amendment has been asserted. This is the only witness that we have thought that we would consider granting immunity so that we could hear from him for obvious reasons.

It has been asserted by Chris and Rosalie Wade. We should consider whether to grant them immunity and get them in to testify. Jim and Susan McDougal. For obvious reasons, we weren't going to look to immunize them, particularly before the trial.

Senator BOXER. You granted them immunity? No.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The reason we have not been able to hear their testimony or to get documents is because they have asserted the right against self-incrimination. The question is: Do we believe that it is important for the American people and for this Committee to get at the truth, as best we can, from Mr. Hale. If we believe it is, then we grant him limited immunity against prosecution for anything that he testifies to, that it cannot be used against him, just his testimony. Obviously if he perjures himself, or has committed other crimes, that immunity does not keep him from being prosecuted.

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Faircloth.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR LAUCH FAIRCLOTH

Senator FAIRCLOTH. We are talking about this indictment and possible indictment, the prosecution of Hale, as if it were some clean, high, above-board indictment. The man, Stoddal, that's talking about indicting him, is running for Congress. I mean, he is not after Hale. He is trying to get elected. Let me read to you an article from The Wall Street Journal this morning. It says:

If elected, Mr. Stoddal will become the de facto head of a diminished but still dangerous political machine in Arkansas. A long-time Clinton ally, Mr. Stoddal last week signaled that he is still willing to play bully boy for the power elite when he restated his intention to use his prosecutorial power to bring State insurance fraud charges against key Whitewater witness, David Hale. The message in any such Hale prosecution would be that new Whitewater witnesses are on notice that the State still has the power to punish them.

I mean, we are talking about this man—we talk about common sense. Common sense is, he's trying to get elected to Congress and he will use David Hale or any other method he can to get elected. So let's be realistic about who the prosecutor, the district attorney, is that's talking about prosecuting him.

Senator KERRY. Can the Senator tell us what Mr. Starr is running for?

[Laughter.]

Senator FAIRCLOTH. As far as I know, Mr. Starr is not running for Congress unless he announced it recently.

Senator MACK. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Mack.

Senator DOMENICI. Thus far, he has been right, incidentally.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Mack.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CONNIE MACK

Senator MACK. Yes, just one short comment at this point, because I have a feeling this is going to go on for some time. There is one minor flaw in the plan that my good friend, Senator Bryan, has proposed to us this morning. That is, if we accept his plan, we don't hear the testimony from Mr. Hale.

Senator SARBANES. Well, you don't know that.

Senator BRYAN. If I might be permitted—

Senator SARBANES. I mean, Hale ought to be put to it. If we indicate that we won't ask Hale about the burial insurance measure, Hale retains his ability to take the Fifth Amendment, so we are trying to protect him to begin with. He has his ultimate protection, in any event, because he insists upon immunity in order to come before the Committee.

If there is not in prospect the abuse of the immunity grant in order to gain protection from some prosecution to which he ought to be subjected.

Senator KERRY. Well, Mr. Chairman, if I could add to that—

Senator MACK. Mr. Chairman.

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Kerry, I will come back to you.

Senator Mack.

Senator MACK. The bottom line is that Hale understands that there is no way he can be brought before this Committee. Whether we like it or not, he is in control of what the circumstances are for his testimony before this Committee.

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman, I want to address that.

If we were to put a subpoena out and ask him to come here and he comes here, we are certainly permitted to ask him questions.

First, we ask him his name, where he comes from, and then what he does. He can only assert his Fifth Amendment privilege as to a question where he can raise that, because that's going to then be tested as to whether or not he has Fifth Amendment privilege as to that question.

If we are not going to raise any questions where he has a remaining legitimate right, there is not going to be an assertable Fifth Amendment privilege. This is the main point here.

My colleagues on the other side are hungry for this testimony, and so we are happy to have this testimony. We would like to have

Mr. Hale invited to come here and testify. He has already spent 9 days in a court testifying under oath, and been subjected to cross-examination. That testimony is already in our record.

There is no great mystery about what he is going to say except what he might say if he had a blanket-use immunity, under which he can say anything. The question here is if we are legitimate, let's invite him. Let's have him come up here. If he has no assertable Fifth Amendment privilege, let's put that to the test. Let the system work the way it ought to work. But let the Committee not be bamboozled and bullied by a legal scheme into giving an immunity that we don't need to give.

Let us proceed to have his testimony. It seems to me that otherwise the Committee is just playing into the hands of a lawyer who has already put his client on the stand in a court of law. Everyone of you has read his testimony. This is just a question of how many cameras we can get and get everybody to listen to it again.

So we can do that again. If Hale is the good citizen who wants to come here and be honest all of a sudden, what is to prevent him from coming here and telling us what he already told the court of law? Nothing. Nothing unless we play into his hands and give them what his lawyer is scheming for, some opportunity for an appeal, or to obscure the record. We should not play into that game.

Senator DOMENICI. Mr. Chairman.

Senator MACK. Mr. Chairman.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PETE V. DOMENICI

Senator DOMENICI. Could I just take 2 minutes? Frankly, I am kind of amazed at what I am hearing. I have before me a letter——

Senator BOXER. We can't hear you, Pete.

Senator DOMENICI. I said——

Senator BRYAN. Your mike isn't working.

Senator DOMENICI. Excuse me. It's not on?

Senator BOXER. Now, I can hear you.

Senator SARBANES. It's all right now.

Senator DOMENICI. I am really kind of amazed at what I am hearing. I have before me a letter, dated May 23, 1996, from the counsel who represents this witness. In it, he says:

This is to inform you that based on the rights guaranteed to him under the Fifth Amendment, Mr. Hale declines to appear before you for a deposition or for public testimony.

The important sentence that causes me to be rather concerned about all of this is:

As you may know, Mr. Hale has been explicitly threatened, in writing, with prosecution in Arkansas by Arkansas State authorities. There are ample bases for believing that such threats and any such prosecution would constitute retribution against Mr. Hale for his cooperation with the Independent Counsel. He has been advised that any testimony that he may give before the Special Committee may be used against him by Arkansas prosecutors in future proceedings in Arkansas.

It seems to me that we have too many people complaining too much about what a bad fellow this guy is. It seems to me that you all are saying, on that side, "Nobody ought to believe this guy. You know, he's a felon."

Somehow or another, the prosecution in Arkansas seems to be saying, "You dare testify. We will sock it to you. We are waiting here in the wings to put it around your neck."

Now what is all the fuss about? Why don't we hear from him under this immunity? The immunity means nothing. You all know that. We have done 300 of them under this statute already. It seems to me that, on the one hand, you seem to be saying, "We want to hear from him. Since you Republicans want to hear from him, we would just love to hear from him." You are saying that on your side. Well, why are you preventing him from testifying, then?

Senator BOXER. We are not.

Senator DOMENICI. What's the issue?

Senator BOXER. We are not.

Senator DOMENICI. You are preventing him.

Senator BOXER. No.

Senator DOMENICI. You know that time is about to run out.

Senator BOXER. Let me correct—

Senator BRYAN. Mr. Chairman, could I respond?

The CHAIRMAN. Let the Senator—that's a rhetorical question.

[Laughter.]

We will get back to Senator Domenici.

Senator DOMENICI. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I have nothing further to say.

The CHAIRMAN. I have to make an observation because what we are doing is an exercise that will not change anybody's mind that has been predetermined. Everybody has to vote his or her conscience and take their steps accordingly. We all are accountable. Maybe I am being judgmental, and if so, I apologize.

It appears to me that my colleagues on the Democratic side are going to take the position that somehow we are conferring some special right on this individual. We are not conferring any special right. He has an absolute right, as anybody else, to raise his Constitutional right against self-incrimination.

Senator KERRY. Then why didn't he do it in court?

Senator DOMENICI. Senator, that doesn't have a thing to do with it. You know, as a prosecutor, he entered into a plea bargain agreement that if he cooperated, if he testified—

Senator KERRY. And he did.

Senator DOMENICI. And he did.

Senator KERRY. And he got a deal.

Senator DOMENICI. We can't force him to come in.

Senator KERRY. But he has no further liability as to what—

Senator DOMENICI. Now, we have—

Senator KERRY—he will testify about.

Senator DOMENICI. Now wait. I would love to get him in here without conferring any kind of immunity and hear from him.

I would like to get Mr. Wade, the real estate agent, who paid off the Whitewater debt, who was in bankruptcy, and I don't know where he got the money. I would love to hear from him. Do you want to grant him immunity? I will grant him immunity. How about that? How about we consider him and we will schedule a hearing for tomorrow to consider whether we will bring Chris Wade in here? I would vote to confer immunity on him just like this fellow. I mean, the American people have a right to hear this.

Now the fact of the matter is, you can say, "Well, he testified in other places without it. He wants it here." That is his right. We can't take that away. We can't change it. Do I wish we could get him to agree to come in? Yes. Do I wish we could have gotten him to come in sooner? Yes. Do I wish that the Special Counsel would not have indicated his opposition to testifying before the trial? Yes. That's a fact.

If the Committee decides, in its wisdom, that they do not want to hear from him because you feel somehow his testimony will possibly jeopardize the criminal prosecution with respect to this insurance fraud, that is a judgment that you have to make. I do not believe that it should carry the day. You may agree differently. I don't believe it should carry the day, because he will not receive immunity from any criminal wrongdoing that he has participated in. That's clear.

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Just simply that you cannot use his testimony here against him.

Senator BRYAN. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. So why should we torture ourselves? We know the way we are going to vote. Let's do it.

Senator BRYAN. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bryan.

Senator BRYAN. Mr. Chairman, I will be brief. The Senator from New Mexico cited what Mr. Hale's counsel had to say. I think we ought to consider what the Senate Legal Counsel has to say. Mr. Hale has no right to refuse our subpoena. There is no right to a blanket Fifth Amendment. I want to cite as authority for that proposition a statement made by the Senate Legal Counsel in a June 3 memorandum:

Hale's well-founded fear of State prosecution for those alleged crimes, however, does not permit him to assert a blanket Fifth Amendment privilege against appearing before the Special Committee. He may only assert the privilege on a question by question basis before the Committee so that the Committee may evaluate the validity of each claim in the context of the precise question asked. To our knowledge, Hale has not yet articulated a basis for refusing to testify about the topics that are within the scope of the Special Committee's jurisdiction or about which he already testified during the recently concluded Tucker/McDougal trial.

Again, I say, let's subpoena the witness, let's bring him here before us. He retains only the right on a specific ad hoc basis to assert the Fifth Amendment. He does not have a right to assert the Fifth Amendment against appearing here to testify.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Senator BRYAN. Then we can see.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Murkowski.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR FRANK H. MURKOWSKI

Senator MURKOWSKI. Let me make a point. Everybody seems to indicate that at one time or another we wanted Hale to be before this Committee. Now, we are talking about under what terms and conditions. We have to maintain the interest in the bottom line and that is to get him here. To get him here, we can proceed without immunity and he won't come.

Senator BRYAN. Oh, he has to come.

Senator KERRY. Let's subpoena him today and make him come.

Senator MURKOWSKI. If he comes, then the question is—

Senator DODD. He has to come.

Senator KERRY. He has to come.

Senator MURKOWSKI. All right. If he has to come, then he's here. We could begin the questioning. Then the question is how to limit it. And you are not satisfied with the prerogative of the Chairman to disallow any testimony relative to the National Insurance.

Senator KERRY. He will limit it by any legitimate assertion of his Fifth Amendment right. That is the process we could go through. We all know he doesn't have a Fifth Amendment right as to what we want to ask him. So this is a non-issue.

The CHAIRMAN. Now can I just make an observation? It seems to me that we have no right to determine for a witness when he wants to raise, or when his counsel will advise him to raise, his right against self-incrimination. For us to prejudge and to say that he won't do this or he has no right to do this, I mean——

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman, that's the legal process. Let him do that, because we all know——

The CHAIRMAN. Will we do that for Mr. Wade as well? We have tried not to make a show of this. Will we do this for Mr. McDougal, who has indicated that he has raised a Fifth Amendment? Do you want to come in here and swear him in at the same time, only to have him take the Fifth Amendment? Do we want to turn this into a real circus?

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't think that should be the purpose of this Committee.

Senator KERRY. The point is that there is a huge distinction between them and this witness. The distinction is that this witness has already cut a deal, has already pled guilty, is already in jail, and has already testified in court. The only area of our inquiry purportedly is that area to which he has already testified and has no Fifth Amendment privilege. There is a huge distinction between our arguing about bringing in somebody who really doesn't have a Fifth Amendment privilege and then somebody who does.

Let's bring him in. Let's put him in front of us. He has no legitimate right to take the Fifth Amendment as to anything you guys want to ask him with respect to what he has already testified to. This is not a big issue, and we shouldn't be making it one.

Senator BENNETT. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, Senator Bennett.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR ROBERT F. BENNETT

Senator BENNETT. Having been unburdened by virtue of the fact that I didn't go to law school, I have some observations here.

[Laughter.]

I am willing to follow the procedure suggested by Senator Bryan and Senator Kerry as the first step, because they are so confident that the witness is going to be completely forthcoming in all these areas and we are not going to have any problems. But I would ask that if we take that first step and we find out they are wrong and the witness does, indeed, start to abuse his right, that we be prepared at that point on the spot to offer him immunity and say, "Well, it turns out you are behaving the way the Republicans predicted you would behave instead of the way the Democrats predicted you would behave."

Senator KERRY. Let me say to my friend——

Senator BENNETT. We will go in that direction.

Just one more comment. We are not talking about an ax murderer or a child abuser.

Senator KERRY. We think we are not.

Senator BENNETT. We are not talking about somebody who——
[Laughter.]

Senator KERRY. We don't know what we may learn.

[Laughter.]

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Does that apply to most of the Arkansas crowd?

Senator BENNETT. Well, I will take Mr. Ben-Veniste's position, which he has held consistently throughout this whole circumstance. He has always corrected everyone who has tried to impugn somebody who has not been convicted with reminding us all that they are innocent until proven guilty. I'm one that he has reminded of that. I've seen him evenhandedly remind people on his side of that. And I will take that position.

Senator SARBANES. Actually he did it this morning.

Senator BENNETT. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Senator Bennett, you are correct. But in this case, David Hale has been convicted and——

Senator BENNETT. That's the point I'm going to make. He has not been convicted of ripping off the burial insurance people——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That's correct.

Senator BENNETT. —which was the point you made this morning.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That's still to come.

Senator BENNETT. Here's my point: This is a guy who is in jail, and who has been thoroughly discredited. His career is over.

Senator KERRY. That is a great reason to call him as a witness.

Senator BENNETT. To say, "Well, we are worried that in some way, some conceivable, possible blurring out might in some fashion, nobody can be sure of, damage a case against this man; therefore, we are not going to hear what he has to say." My reaction is that, frankly, I don't care if it damages the case against this man, because his career is over anyway. He is in jail now.

We are not talking about putting an ax murderer back on the street if the prosecution in Arkansas doesn't go forward. We are talking about a man whom both sides have wanted to hear from in a whole series of areas and whom we have not heard from except in a very carefully controlled circumstance of a trial. I think we are being derelict in our duty of trying to get the whole story out if we don't take the opportunity to have him here. And I'm willing to run the risk.

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman, could I just say to my friend that none of us are predicting what he is going to come here and do. I'm not predicting he's not going to come here and take the Fifth Amendment. I haven't said that. He may decide to do that. But we have the right to put each of those assertions to the test, is what I'm saying.

Then there's the second question of whether or not it is legitimate under these circumstances to grant him immunity. I think he should know ahead of time that most people here, at least on our side of the fence, for various reasons relating to the nature of what he has done and to the fact that he has already testified will have a hard time believing that we ought to now give him a leg up on the legal system, given the kind of person that he is.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Yes, but, Mr. Chairman, you will never get the facts out if you don't have him here.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me say this—

Senator MURKOWSKI. The bottom line is we are both interested in the facts. We will never get them unless we find a way to bring that man in.

Senator BRYAN. Senator Murkowski, he has to respond to our subpoena. He has to be here.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Yes, but he can plead the Fifth.

Senator BRYAN. He cannot plead the Fifth on a blanket basis. He has to plead the Fifth with respect to each question. Then the Committee has the power and the ability to determine whether that is a valid exercise.

The CHAIRMAN. That is not quite accurate. Let me say that for approximately 25 to 30 years, we haven't brought a witness to any proceeding that I know of to actively plead the Fifth when his lawyer has advised a committee of the Congress that his client intends to plead the Fifth. We haven't done it.

Senator KERRY. Well, can I—

The CHAIRMAN. That takes us back to McCarthy days. Back then they would bring someone in and he would take the Fifth as it related to his name, his address, et cetera.

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman, could I ask you a question?

The CHAIRMAN. There is an opinion which states: Lawyers for Congressional committees summon witnesses who know it is known will decline to answer any questions on the claim of privilege. We have been asked to advise whether it is proper for Congressional committees whose Chairmen, staff, and several Members are attorneys to require a witness who is a target of a pending Grand Jury investigation to appear at a televised hearing to be questioned when the committee has been notified in advance that the witness will exercise his Constitutional privilege not to answer any questions.

At the outset we note that it is unethical. It has been the practice of the Congress for the past 25 to 30 years not to do this when we have been advised that a client will. Let me say to you that if the Committee and my colleagues say they want to do this, I don't feel comfortable.

Senator KERRY. Well, Mr. Chairman, can I—

The CHAIRMAN. The first process is to vote to do this, then go to the Special Counsel to get his formal opinion, and then go to the court. You cannot bring in a person who raises the claim of immunity and then this body decides to grant him immunity.

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman, could I say to you advisedly—

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, in light of that ethics ruling, it's not our intention to ask Hale about the matter of which he is a target, if he is a target, in which he is fearful of prosecution in Arkansas. We have no intention of putting those questions to him and requiring him to invoke the Fifth Amendment publicly in order not to answer those questions. That's not the objective.

On the other matters, Hale should testify. He doesn't really have a valid Fifth Amendment privilege. The fact that he's seeking an immunity leads one to ask why does he want this immunity, since he doesn't need it and since we have no intention about asking questions to which his privilege would apply. If, somehow it happened, he could invoke his privilege at the time. But I don't think it would happen. Once again, we are back to the fact that I think Hale is seeking an opportunity to manipulate the Committee to his advantage.

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman, it is my understanding that this wouldn't happen in public, because I understand he was going to be deposed. If that is true, it would be a private session. That is where these could be asserted. On a quick process to the court, the court will determine very rapidly if he has a legitimate right to any Fifth Amendment privilege on any of the questions asked. And he could appear here very rapidly with a court determination that he doesn't.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me say that maybe we have made some progress. Are my colleagues on the Democratic side suggesting that we vote out the subpoenas, bring in Mr. Hale for depositions, and ascertain what his position will be?

If, indeed, he asserts his right to the Fifth Amendment, then will it be your position that in order to get him to testify that we apply to the Special Counsel and the court for an order to immunize him from prosecution against—

Senator KERRY. No, sir.

Senator BOXER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your position then?

Senator SARBANES. No. That's an invitation for Hale to improperly assert the Fifth Amendment in order to get the immunity.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your position then?

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman, the position is that we go through the standard procedure of the Senate. I believe we would have to take a vote in order to have Senate Legal Counsel represent us before the court. There would be an expedited hearing that could be arranged on the subject of whether or not he has a right to assert the Fifth Amendment privilege with respect to the issues we intend to raise with him. The court will make a determination and either assert he has the Fifth Amendment privilege or order him to testify. At that point he could testify here without our ever giving him immunity or creating a whole new legal avenue for him.

The CHAIRMAN. What year would this finally be decided?

Senator KERRY. This could be done on an expedited procedure.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, let me say this to you, I believe that we will be talking about 1998. And it is not the intent of the Chairman of this Committee to attempt to extend the timeframe by which we said we were going to conclude.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You might ask the Democrats if they would agree to extend the time commitment of this Committee, then, after June 14th if it became necessary.

Senator KERRY. This can be done on an expedited procedure.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, not before June 14th.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Simon, you have been very patient.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL SIMON

Senator SIMON. I believe we are going to come down to one question. Should this Committee give a special reward to a convicted felon because his testimony is that valuable? I would like to see him testify. But frankly, I am very reluctant to start handing out special benefits to convicted felons. I do not think that makes very good sense.

Senator MACK. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, Senator Mack.

Senator MACK. Could I ask Counsel whether, in fact, he believes that this is a special reward?

Senator BOXER. Which Counsel?

[Laughter.]

Senator MACK. I think my colleagues know which individual I was addressing that to.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Chairman.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, let him answer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me answer the question. This limited immunity—there is no such thing, to my knowledge, as blanket-limited immunity; it is limited-use immunity—is the only way that you could require a witness who wants to exercise his Constitutional Fifth Amendment right that he has, the same as every other citizen, the only way you can force that person to come and testify.

In response to the question, I will say that we received a letter from Mr. Hale's lawyer, and yesterday we had an extensive meeting with Mr. Hale's lawyer. He gave us a firm and unequivocal statement that his client would exercise the Fifth Amendment right with respect to questions, including those relating to the Madison matter.

I think one of the reasons is evident from Mr. Ben-Veniste's statement, that Mr. Ben-Veniste has a theory or a notion, based on what he has read in the press, that the burial insurance purchase was the product of some of the profits of Capital Management which was part of the very thing that we are looking at. It is not my place or anybody else's to tell a citizen of the United States what they can and can't do with their Fifth Amendment rights.

Both the Fifth and Sixth Amendments, I think, teach all of us that is a matter between the person and their own counsel. If the question arises whether this is a good faith basis to take it, I have to say, based on the discussion I heard yesterday, that it is absolutely based on the kind of evidence that could be put into that prosecution, it is absolutely sound advice for a lawyer to raise for a client to be concerned about anything that we raise being used as evidence in some prosecution, whether it's a good or a bad faith prosecution. This immunity is provided for by law. It is not special immunity. It is provided by statute. Hundreds of witnesses have received it. It gives him no more or no less than what every other citizen is entitled to receive as the price for giving up his Fifth Amendment rights.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Chairman.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman.

Senator BRYAN. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Wait a second, please.

Senator BRYAN. Could I ask our Counsel——

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to recognize a Senator who has not been heard from. Then I will recognize a Senator on this side.

Senator Dodd, do you wish to be heard?

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER J. DODD

Senator DODD. No, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bryan.

Senator BRYAN. Mr. Chairman, could I ask Counsel a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Senator BRYAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, if the Resolution of Immunity that is before the Committee today were adopted and during the course of that testimony, either in response to a question or his expanding a response to another question, Mr. Hale indicated other acts of fraud which would constitute a felony unrelated to the State prosecution, would his testimony with respect to those other acts of fraud confer an immunity upon him?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What would happen, Senator, is that it would make it almost impossible under the teaching of the United States v. North to prosecute him for such cases, in my view. The question was asked whether this immunity would confer some special benefit on Mr. Hale.

Senator BENNETT. May I ask a question there?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Sir, if I could finish for a moment?

Senator BENNETT. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me respond, if I might, to the Senator from Florida's question.

Senator BENNETT. Sure. This is where I am going to law school. So I want to ask some questions.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Sure. First of all, in this regard, Mr. Hale has testified extensively for 9 days in Little Rock. I think that is a fact that we cannot ignore. This is not like a situation where a witness has refused to give any testimony at all without a grant of immunity. There is an issue as to the legitimacy of a claim of immunity when we are questioning him about the exact same thing.

The issue of whether somebody is or is not hiding testimony, the fact is there is an extensive transcript which we have all read. It is not from reading about a connection between the CMS, Madison fraud, and the burial insurance in the press. It's from reading the trial transcript that I get that information.

I am delighted that Mr. Chertoff has traded in his hat as Inspector Jovier to now be Clarence Darrow on behalf of David Hale. But quite correctly, the question is asked, "What has changed since the weeks ago in Little Rock when David Hale gave his testimony without blanket-use immunity?" The immunity that is proposed in this Resolution is exactly the same kind of blanket immunity that was conferred on Oliver North and John Poindexter.

Senator BENNETT. May I ask a completely innocent question?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, Senator.

Senator BENNETT. I assure you, this is for my understanding.

Your opening statement, which is when the question came up, was that if he were to say something under immunity that would apply in the trial, that meant that it would be very difficult, if not impossible, for you then to get a conviction in the trial because of the immunity? You quoted United States v. North. Is that correct?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There would be a burden placed on the prosecution by the courts, presumably an appellate court, if there were a conviction; whereby, the prosecutor would have the burden of proving they never heard the testimony, no one ever brought it to his attention, no one ever discussed it with him, and it didn't influence him in one iota in connection with the way he proceeded to prosecute David Hale.

Watergate was enough of a burden, but the North case was even different from that. The people who we prosecuted who had been immunized were the only people who pleaded guilty. We did not take one individual to trial who had been granted immunity by the Senate in Watergate.

Senator BENNETT. Here is my question: If the prosecutor has a case in the can right now and it is built on various types of outside information and sources unrelated to Mr. Hale, and then Mr. Hale comes here and makes a statement under immunity, does that invalidate the prosecutor's existing case?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It places the burden on the prosecutor to show that nothing that occurred in the immunized testimony influenced him in the slightest in connection with his strategy of how to prosecute, in connection with any questions that were asked of Hale or any other witnesses or any leads that he might have gotten. It is an enormous burden after North that a prosecutor has to shoulder in order to make that showing.

Senator, in the North case where they put that package together, they still were not able to satisfy that burden. Those convictions, as you know, were overturned.

Senator BENNETT. Would you be offended if I sought a second opinion?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Senator, the short answer is no, it would not invalidate the evidence in the can. The North case does not apply in Arkansas because it's the D.C. Circuit case and the general law on the subject is stated by the Supreme Court in the Castaguard case. North was much different because of the amount of material that got to the public from immunized testimony, including witnesses who had heard the testimony of other immunized witnesses, so that everybody was bathed in days and days of immunized testimony is totally different from what we are talking about here. Which is a witness who comes up for 1 day, who, in the worst situation, blurts out one answer to a question before it's possible to shut it down and with a prosecutor in the State who is forewarned about North and Castaguard and is perfectly capable of taking steps to make sure he can demonstrate that he is untainted by any of this information.

Senator BENNETT. Let me——

Mr. CHERTOFF. The short answer is prosecutors deal with this all the time across the country, and it is something that can be dealt with without any insuperable problem.

Senator BENNETT. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Senator Bennett, may I add to your inquiry. Over these months, I have enjoyed these dialogues, which will be coming to an end shortly. In addition to the specific substantive information regarding the burial insurance, the prosecutor would have to prove, were Hale to come here under a grant of immunity, that nothing else that Hale said gave him a lead for other areas of inquiry, that it didn't refresh any other witness' recollection who might be used against Hale to think of some other thing that they would testify to about Hale.

The North case is a very good analogy, because it was the televised nature of North's testimony which was so important in the decision saying how powerful the televised testimony was in connection with having an affect on other witnesses and the prosecution itself, a burden which was impossible for the prosecution to discharge.

Senator BENNETT. Thank you.

Senator BOXER. Mr. Chairman.

Senator BENNETT. I thank both the Counsels for their effort to educate me in the law. I appreciate it.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Boxer.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR BARBARA BOXER

Senator BOXER. Mr. Chairman, thank you so much. I will just take a moment of the Committee's time. I think the Chairman is right. We are going to take responsibility for the way we vote.

I have to tell you, Mr. Chairman, for me, after giving this a great deal of thought, I come down to a very basic common sense question. Why would we want to give David Hale a special deal that no other witness had when, in fact, Senators Bryan and Kerry have given us another route in which the Committee will not be manipulated, will not be used?

I want to put into the record the fact that David Hale is a convicted felon who pled guilty to two counts of defrauding taxpayers through the Small Business Administration of $2 million. He is a convicted felon who admitted under oath that he had not planned on paying Federal taxes on about $60,000 in cash he received from the FBI for living expenses while cooperating with the Independent Counsel, a convicted felon who told the Federal judge accepting his guilty plea in March 1994, that he never profited from his illegal loans but admitted in another Federal courtroom that he did use the money, a convicted felon who admitted lying to FBI agents combing his records in 1989. And it goes on.

I think it's fair to say that we don't know if he will be indicted, but if this is true and this is a person who stole from the poorest of the poor who wanted to bury their loved ones, for me to play a party [sic], in essence, granting a pardon in advance because, in a sense, that's what it is when you grant immunity. I don't trust him not to blurt something out. You are not dealing with someone who has a record of honesty here.

Senator DODD. Would my colleague yield?

Senator BOXER. I think it would be a mistake. I would be happy to yield to my colleague.

Senator DODD. There are two facts that people may not be aware of. That Mr. Hale is a former prosecutor and judge. This individual knows very well what he's up to. For a former prosecutor and judge to be in here taking immunity and the Fifth Amendment to avoid the kind of prosecution that a State prosecutor is apparently seeking in Arkansas, I find reprehensible.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Faircloth.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Chertoff said before it is fairly simple, and Mr. Ben-Veniste indicated Capital Management is connected with the Arkansas Insurance Company—the burial association. Mr. Hale won't answer any question that relates to Capital Management, because they do relate to the Arkansas burial association. The Minority is throwing up a block to prevent David Hale from coming here and thinking of anyone they can that will block him from coming, because they don't want the American people to see what the jurors in Arkansas saw. We simply don't want the American people to see that David Hale was believed by the jury and the President was either not believed or ignored by them. That's what all the talk is about.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to go from one side to the other. Senator Moseley-Braun and then Senator Murkowski.

Senator Carol Moseley-Braun.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CAROL MOSELEY-BRAUN

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Thank you.

To my colleague, if I can just kind of make this plain, nobody has a problem with David Hale coming here. In fact, we should invite him to come.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Then give him immunity and let him come.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. The objection, sir, is to giving him a pardon in advance for any of the nefarious deeds that he may decide to tell us about. In fact, given the fact that he is a former prosecutor and judge, he might well pull off the biggest joke of the century by sitting at that table and letting it all hang out so that he can't be prosecuted for anything that he decides to talk about.

That is one of the reasons for the reticence on this side to give him carte blanche, just an open page, and say, "Here, have at it." We would like to have this handled in a way that serves the interest of justice, full disclosure, and that gets to the truth of the matter that's before us. Our only objection is to proceed in a rational way to do that. I don't know how to make it any clearer. The Minority wants him to come in. When he says, "I'm not going to tell you anything, because I want to take the Fifth Amendment." Then I think we ought to take up the particulars of what kind of immunity would be appropriate and not reach overboard.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. As I understand it, we've only talked about use immunity.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Murkowski.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I would encourage the Chairman to direct, if you will, the flow into the recognition that we can't have this two ways. The American people and this Committee are only going to have the facts it; indeed, Hale is brought before this Committee.

Now, I am sensitive to the concerns of any type of immunity that would provide Mr. Hale with protection from the charges on the National Insurance issue. But if that is the legitimate concern of the Minority, then they ought to make a specific proposal so that we can consider the technicalities to ensure that we get the facts.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. We did.

Senator MURKOWSKI. And either propose——

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. We did that.

Senator MURKOWSKI. No, not necessarily, because we are subjected, under your proposal to Mr. Hale stating that he will not talk about certain things. He could take exception under the Fifth Amendment. Then the inability of this Committee to get the facts associated with that could be redirected.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Will the gentleman please yield?

Senator MURKOWSKI. Yes. Just let me finish my statement.

I would suggest, if you will, that perhaps Counsel for the Minority and the Majority try and pursue this area, because obviously they have a familiarity with it and they have a legitimate concern over a situation occurring that would benefit Hale, which none of us want to see happen.

Mr. Chairman, if we could get a concurrence from the Minority on their willingness to bring Hale in and then try and work out the circumstances, we could conclude this without it lasting all day.

Perhaps we could come back a little later to adopt or reject or consider their proposed agreement so that we can get on with this process; because, if, indeed, as I have heard over and over, the Minority has indicated a willingness to bring Mr. Hale here, then the question is how can it be structured in such a way as it doesn't benefit Hale from the pending charges associated with the National Insurance case.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. To my colleague, we don't want to let him benefit and take advantage of this Committee by giving him the power to cover himself from any of his nefarious deeds over time. He could do that based on the proposal that we've had so far.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I understand. That is why I am suggesting that the Counsels get together and try——

Senator SARBANES. It's to Hale's advantage to play that game.

The CHAIRMAN. I would like——

Senator SARBANES. In other words, Hale will come in, take the Amendment, then he will say, "Now, you have to give me immunity." Then he will abuse the immunity. The way you avoid that is Hale comes and testifies without immunity, we don't ask questions about the Arkansas matter. If, in fact, questions get asked about it, Hale can then take the Fifth Amendment and protect himself. In the meantime, you don't run the danger that because he has been given a blanket immunity he can abuse the process and free himself from accountability for potential criminal acts.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask my colleagues: If we were to go forward with the subpoena requiring him to come before the Committee to give testimony Friday in private and if he were to assert the Fifth Amendment as it relates to a number of questions that might be asked—and we have every reason to believe, that he would do that—we would then go to court to get a ruling with respect to whether or not that was proper. I would hope that we could get into court and get an expedited hearing on Monday.

Let me say, so that we can deal with each other and the public in good faith: Suppose the court rules that he is within his rights to assert the Fifth Amendment, and if we feel we want to hear from him, will we go forward with providing limited-use immunity? Will we take that question up on Tuesday if we can get a hearing, because we would have to vote on it, get the Special Counsel to sign off on it, get into the court to ask them to grant that limited-use immunity and then be back here on Wednesday or Thursday to hear him. I would like to know if we are prepared to agree with that, because if we agree with that, let's go forward.

It may be burdensome. We are out of the business of who is right and who is wrong as it relates to when a person can raise the Fifth Amendment. If you are willing, then I would recommend that we move forward, bring him in on Friday.

If he raises the various points that he indicates that he will, then we will go to court, seek an expedited hearing, hopefully the court recognizing the exigencies of the situation would give us a ruling one way or the other. If the court says that he's not within his right, why, then we would attempt to go forward without that. Of course, he could raise an appeal. If the court says that he is within his right, then would my colleagues be willing to provide use immunity. It's not a get out of jail free, or a pardon, because it has been characterized in that manner, but that his testimony could not be used against him so that the American people and this Committee get an opportunity to hear?

Senator SARBANES. Well, Mr. Chairman, I am not going to make that commitment, because it's an open invitation to Hale to invoke the Fifth Amendment in a plan or in a scheme to get immunity.

The CHAIRMAN. Wouldn't the court be deciding?

Senator SARBANES. So that's not—

The CHAIRMAN. Wouldn't the court be deciding whether or not he has the right to raise this?

Senator SARBANES. By lining it up that way, you are just making an open invitation to Hale at that deposition—

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman.

Senator SARBANES.—to take the Fifth Amendment, because then he says, "Well, if I take the Fifth Amendment"—

The CHAIRMAN. He has already indicated he is going to do that.

Senator SARBANES. Well, then—

The CHAIRMAN. My colleagues want both sides of the argument.

Senator SARBANES. No.

The CHAIRMAN. You say he is not entitled to it. We say, "Well, they indicate that he's going to raise it. Oh, he's not entitled to it." You say, "Let's test him." Well, let's go with the assumption that we will proceed in the manner in which you have suggested. If we bring him in and test him, let's follow what he can do. He can agree to testify. Then we have no problem. If he raises the Fifth Amendment, we go to court. I don't know how the court is going to rule. But I will bet you just about anything that the court is going to say he has that right.

Are we kidding ourselves? All of a sudden, you say that the person doesn't have the right to say, "I refuse to testify on the grounds that whatever I testify to may incriminate me?" We are going to take that right away from him? Do you think he is not going to exercise it?

Senator BOXER. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is kidding who? You can't have it two ways.

Senator BOXER. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. If you want a determination of the court and we will be bound by that, we will find out whether or not he can do that, then will we agree to immunize him or are we then saying we really don't want to hear from him?

Senator BOXER. Mr. Chairman, could I respond to your question, which I guess was a little rhetorical.

The CHAIRMAN. No, it wasn't rhetorical.

Senator BOXER. Let me be specific on how I feel about it. I think we have a good case to be made, laid out by Senators Kerry and Bryan, that if he asserts the Fifth and it's not appropriate, we will win that case. So I would like very much to test that.

The CHAIRMAN. Good.

Senator BOXER. What you are saying is, depending on what happens you will allow this guy, with a past that I'm sure his mother would be ashamed of, to come up here and to use this Committee so that he gets out of jail free for anything he might have done in the past. That is a question that is at the heart and soul of this side's objection.

I think you have a good path to go on. Asking us in advance of any court decision to grant this man something you have granted to no other witness, I don't think that I would lose one minute's sleep over this.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. You don't think it's right for me to ask you to prejudge?

Senator BOXER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Fine.

Senator SHELBY. Mr. Chairman.

Senator HATCH. Mr. Chairman.

Senator BOXER. To prejudge what the court says?

The CHAIRMAN. Let me say that I am inclined to take the recommendation of my Democratic colleague.

Senator Shelby.

Senator SHELBY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, I have a few observations here this morning. Like most people, I think I can read the tea leaves. And the tea leaves mean that there is going to be a lot of disruption and delay here.

Who is protecting who here, and why? It is obvious that some people on this Committee are afraid of the testimony of David Hale before this Committee. Why? Who are they trying to protect? It is obvious they are trying to protect President Clinton from David Hale's testimony.

Senator BOXER. You already have his testimony.

Senator SHELBY. I have the Floor.

Senator BOXER. But you already have his testimony.

Senator SHELBY. Mr. Chairman, I have not yielded any time to the Senator from California.

Senator BOXER. I apologize.

Senator SHELBY. I thank you. But who is afraid of David Hale's testimony? Why shouldn't we grant the limited immunity? Earlier, Senator Domenici said that we have granted it over 300 times in Congress. It is my understanding that it was granted 26 times in Watergate; 27 times on the Joint Committee dealing with the hearings on Iran-Contra; and, 12 times, I think, recently.

What has come out of Arkansas in the last week? Twenty-four convictions, was my understanding, 24 convictions based on a lot of documentary evidence and the testimony of David Hale.

Why not give David Hale limited-use immunity? He's not going to abuse the Committee. I think we have great Counsel here and smart people. But what people are trying to do here is disrupt the Committee, not let any testimony come that would inure to the detriment of the President of the United States. That's the bottom line. And I think everybody here knows it.

Senator HATCH. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, Senator.

Senator HATCH. This is a good idea. What you are saying is: Look, we will defer to your desire to have the court make the determination if he invokes the Fifth Amendment. Sure, he is going to invoke it. Is there any doubt in anybody's mind that he is going to invoke the Fifth Amendment? Let the court determine it. Frankly, we ought to go from there. There is a cloud over this Administration caused by Whitewater and it is never going to go away unless we bring the guy in to testify.

Our Counsel on the other side has said that they could not wait to get David Hale before the Committee. If I recall correctly, he said, for example, that he wanted to question "that crook." Now look, it's important for him to come. If he invokes the Fifth Amendment and the court says that he has a right to do it, then we have to get him in here one way or the other to get the cloud dispensed.

Senator MURRAY. Mr. Chairman.

Senator HATCH. Frankly, it has got to be done. There is no other way around it.

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to make a motion that the Committee be reported as voting, and then, be recorded as voting unanimously that a subpoena be issued to require his appearance this Friday morning for a private deposition where we can then proceed on this matter. All in favor?

[A chorus of ayes.]

Senator SARBANES. A private deposition is no different from a deposition.

The CHAIRMAN. I want the record to show it is for a deposition. It carries unanimously. A subpoena is issued.

Hopefully, we can work our way through and possibly set the framework and the groundwork for a proper appearance or one that my colleagues feel comfortable with with Mr. Hale.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I want to yield for just one moment to Mr. Ben-Veniste, because I think it is important to put certain of this matter in context.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I think my—if I may call you my friend—

Senator HATCH. Did I misquote you? I don't know.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Not at all, Senator Hatch.

Senator HATCH. I didn't think so.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. As you know, we have been trying to bring David Hale before this Committee.

Senator HATCH. And it ought to be done.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What we tried to do was to get him here even before he testified in Little Rock. There is a very substantial record for everyone to see of what he said. That has changed matters somewhat.

The real issue is not whether, on a very technical basis, he might assert a privilege that might be upheld to a wide variety of questions. I think the question that this Committee is struggling with is if David Hale is immunized and testifies publicly before the cameras, whether that immunized testimony can or is likely to interfere with the ability of the State prosecutors to bring the proposed prosecution against him. A court, considering the question of the Fifth Amendment claim, will not answer that question for us.

Senator HATCH. Would the Senator yield on that point? This is a man that has already been sentenced to 28 months in prison. He is already in jail. It seems to me it's more important to get rid of this cloud one way or the other than it is to worry about whether he's going to be prosecuted.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, that's the question.

Senator HATCH. If I just—I don't mean to interrupt you——

Senator MURRAY. Mr. Chairman.

Senator HATCH. Let me just finish this. You and I both know that those prosecutors have enough documentation and information that they can prosecute him regardless of what he says here.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, unfortunately, Senator, we may disagree on the interpretation of the North case in terms of the burden.

Senator HATCH. No, no. I agree with you that the——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. How it satisfied——

Senator HATCH. —North case did probably change the law. But I am saying we know that they have enough documentation if they want to take him to court.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They do. The question is whether his immunized testimony before this Committee would interfere under the teaching of North with their ability to prove their case. And you may be right.

Senator HATCH. If you would yield one more time. The question is: Is it more important to get rid of this dark cloud over the President of the United States and the First Lady?

Senator DODD. Oh, please. Come on now, please.

Senator HATCH. Well, there is a cloud there.

Senator DODD. Bringing in a dark cloud to do it?

[Laughter.]

Senator HATCH. He may be a dark cloud, because if the American people see it and they believe him, then it's another matter.

Senator DODD. Come on.

Senator HATCH. But I am hopeful that you will be able to tear him apart.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Senator Hatch has really identified the issue.

Senator BOXER. Thanks for caring.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Senator Hatch has really identified this issue, because——

The CHAIRMAN. There has been one Senator who has not been heard from, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Senator SARBANES. Well, let Ben-Veniste finish.

The CHAIRMAN. And that is——

Senator KERRY. That's the smartest Senator here.

The CHAIRMAN. That is Senator Murray. She has been waiting very patiently and I apologize to the Senator.

Senator Murray.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PATTY MURRAY

Senator MURRAY. I appreciate that, Mr. Chairman. I have not said anything at this point. I have tried to listen very carefully to all the assertions from the attorneys. I am not one to try and figure out what the real question is that we are dealing with here today. I have heard the assertions that it's some kind of cover-up for the President. I keep coming back to the basic question here, which is whether or not we should grant immunity to someone to come here and testify, not whether we don't want to hear him but whether this Committee will take the responsibility of granting immunity to a man who is in jail.

I have to ask myself why is he asking us for immunity? What doesn't he want us to know after testifying for 9 days in Arkansas? What is it that he obviously wants to say to us without fear of being put in jeopardy for having said that?

I, as a U.S. Senator, do not want to give away our rights in the jury system because we want so desperately to hear testimony again that has been given for 9 solid days. And we are willing to give away the rights of this judicial system?

What does this man want immunity for? We had better be very careful and cautious in granting immunity to a man who is serving a jail sentence, who is demanding immunity from this Committee. What is it that he wants to say that he does not want to be prosecuted for? I think we had better be very careful as we proceed.

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman, let me say one thing after that. I want to emphasize what Senator Hatch said, because the Senator has really summarized the choice for this Committee, ultimately, if Mr. Hale does not cooperate. What the Senator said is we have to balance the possibility of interfering with the prosecution, which he agrees might exist, against what he has called the dark cloud. And different people will choose to interpret how big and dark the cloud is, that's the balance.

I think it is an important statement by the Senator because it acknowledges precisely what Senator Murray just said in her argument, that she is not willing to make that balance the other way. But that balance is before the Committee.

Senator SARBANES. I would point out to the Senator that this dark cloud is already out there. Hale has testified 9 days at the trial. He has made extended statements to the media, which have been published. So it's not as though you are talking about a witness who hasn't laid out a lot of this material.

Senator HATCH. Mr. Chairman, I just want to make a remark, since Senator Kerry brought this up.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Senator HATCH. Number 1, I think the cloud exists—interpret it whichever way you want to.

Number 2, I think it is more important for us to have cross-examination rights here in an open forum for the whole country to see. I think it's important that Mr. Ben-Veniste have that right. If we have to, I would be for giving Counsel enough time to be able to do this. Let's have it out and get it out. Do what needs to be done rather than just not do it and let the cloud exist.

Number 3, with regard to limited-use immunity, I remember the language—if I could have Mr. Ben-Veniste's attention. I remember the language in the North case, where basically the court said: "We only said this burden may be met by canning the testimony beforehand." It went on to say: "Just as wise prosecutors meet their burden of showing independent investigation by 'canning' the results of the investigation before the defendant gives immunized testimony." I have no doubt that they've done that; and, they know that this is likely to happen.

The man is in jail. He has a 28-month sentence. It seems to me that it's very important for you, Mr. Ben-Veniste, to have a crack at him so that everybody can see it. Now it may be important for our side, too, in the sense that the truth ought to come out, whatever it is. You can't just say the guy is a crook; therefore, he's not worth listening to. That may be, but the fact is you can't resolve this matter without having him appear.

Now if he comes in here and he says, "I take the Fifth," then we have given you another step that ordinarily you would never even have to ask for in Congress before. Then I think, at that point, we ought to just vote to grant him limited-use immunity and let you have at him rather than just keep playing around with this and act like it has gone away because he doesn't testify.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Senator, may I respond?

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to limit you to 1 minute.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I apologize.

The CHAIRMAN. OK, 2 minutes.

[Laughter.]

Senator HATCH. Maybe even 2½.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Senator Hatch—

The CHAIRMAN. You have just doubled your time.

[Laughter.]

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You know me as a trial lawyer.

Senator HATCH. I do, and I have confidence—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And you know that as a trial lawyer, looking at David Hale and the various perjuries that he has confessed to already and the crimes he has committed, his motivation to lie, provides me, as a person who likes to cross-examine with an opportunity. But I think from a personal, selfish standpoint, I would love to do that.

Senator HATCH. I would love to see you do it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When we posed the issue—and I think you've done a splendid job of posing the issue before this Committee in terms of what the choices are—the choices are whether to examine him, still again replicating essentially what has happened before but under a grant of immunity which may interfere with the ability of the Arkansas prosecutors to bring their case, canning the evidence or what have you. The burden then shifts to them to prove that nothing that happens before us in any way influences them or any of their witnesses in any way with respect to that hearing.

Senator HATCH. But here, Richard, he does not have the benefit of the Rules of Evidence. That is the difference. You guys can ask some tough questions. You will have every opportunity to do so with the Counsel on our side. I think both of you should be interested in the truth, whatever that is.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We are and have been.

Senator HATCH. I know that. I didn't mean to imply you weren't.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Just a brief observation. I think Mr. Ben-Veniste made the reference to Hale's record of perjury and lying. I would also remind Counsel that 8 of the 24 convictions were as a consequence of Mr. Hale's testimony.

Senator DODD. Whoever said that?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I think the Senator means there were 8 counts out of the——

Senator MURKOWSKI. Eight of the 24 convictions.

Senator DODD. Well, the jurors didn't say that.

Senator SARBANES. One juror called him an unmitigated liar.

Senator MURKOWSKI. The point is there were 8 convictions.

Senator DODD. Not based on his testimony.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, partially. Now, we can differ over just whose testimony. I think it's appropriate that there is some credibility associated with his testimony and those convictions.

If I could have the attention of Mr. Chertoff, isn't it true that all this Committee wants is to inquire about the illegal $300,000 loan of which $50,000 went to the Whitewater Development Corporation? This is the area of our concern with Mr. Hale?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Senator, I can say that that and the surrounding circumstances relating to the transaction including, as I understand, meetings; that there are press accounts that Mr. Hale alleges he had with then-Governor Clinton that were not the subject of the testimony in the trial because there were certain evidentiary limitations.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, that——

Mr. CHERTOFF. But what is quite clear is we are not interested in burial insurance.

Senator MURKOWSKI. All right. Now with regard to the limited immunity question, which has been raised by the other side: Can you identify specifically whether this precludes immunity from prosecution? I'm not clear relative to the arguments prevailing on the other side. While they are somewhat convincing, what assurances can we have or how can you craft with Minority Counsel to safeguard the situation from becoming advantageous to Hale?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think there are 3 assurances. First, nothing that Mr. Hale does here can undo or erase any evidence that exists against him. Second, everybody in the Committee and policed by the Chairman of the Committee can make sure that we do not get into the area of the burial insurance; and he can be cut off if he raises it. Third, it may very well be, as a matter of law, that if he were to volunteer or insert extraneous matter into his answers that that wouldn't be protected under the grant of immunity, that the grant would only apply to responsive material. We are going to look into that. I think that no one here is interested in interfering with the State prosecution. We can eliminate all but the most hypothetical possibility.

Senator DODD. Can I be heard, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, Senator Dodd.

Senator DODD. No one on this Committee may, but I'm sure Mr. Hale is interested if he can. This is a former judge and prosecutor. He knows what he is doing. This guy is a scurrilous character and he knows just what he is up to. I don't doubt the motives of my colleagues in terms of what they are interested in. Nor do I have any doubts about what Mr. Hale is interested in.

The reason that we passed the law that gave the Independent Counsels veto power over requests for immunity in the past was because we saw what happened in the North case. We didn't extend that to State prosecutors and other courts around the country. We did it because we saw what happened in the Iran-Contra case where someone abused the process and then avoided prosecution because of it. Maybe we should have drafted the law in a broader way to include anybody out there who had a concern about it. The reason they did it was exactly for what happened and the result.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't think so.

Senator DODD. Someone used the process here, testifying before a Congressional committee, and avoided prosecution. I don't think any of us want to sit here and say that we are going to allow this character—here there are 2,000 pages of testimony which are in the record now, his entire testimony. And you place in jeopardy a prosecution at the State level involving innocent people who were defrauded by this character if, in fact, those allegations are proved true. Yet, that's the risk we run for the mere benefit of having a public testimony of what is already available in written testimony. And so our concerns are not illegitimate.

We want him to come here. Let's do it under the way that Senator Bryan suggested. That is, none of us will ask the questions about that case. Let him come here and answer questions without using the judicial process as a way to avoid prosecution. In my view that would be a huge error on our part.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And—

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, I get the last word.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I'm sorry.

The CHAIRMAN. We will attempt to go in the manner in which the Committee has voted. And that is to examine Mr. Hale, take his deposition on Friday. If he refuses, we will go to court and see if we can't compel. I feel we will possibly be back here Tuesday.

The question will then be raised again as to whether or not at that point in time we will want to hear his testimony. We will have to make that decision. But we will go that extra step to ascertain if we can get his testimony in the manner which satisfies all of my colleagues.

Senator MURKOWSKI. What if you can't get it by the June 14th?

The CHAIRMAN. That's it. That's the name of the game.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, if you can't get it by the 14th—

Senator SARBANES. Could I—

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I think you ought to reflect on that a little bit more because, you know, we may be setting an unachievable timetable here. We don't know how the court is going to proceed.

The CHAIRMAN. The Senator is right, because we have to go to the Floor to seek enforcement of the order. There are a dozen ways procedurally. I hope if we are operating in good faith that my colleagues will join in a bipartisan effort. I assume that they want to examine Mr. Hale and find out how truthful or untruthful he is, to discredit him and also to open him up to charges of perjury. I am not going to be deceiving myself as it relates to what I think the outcome will eventually be, and I'm not going to prejudge now. Next week I will say to you I told you so.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I have one suggestion for the deposition on Friday. In fact, I press it very hard. The pattern, as I understand it, in the depositions has been for the Majority to go first and to question as long as they want and at the end of that for the Minority then to have a chance to question. In some instances, that has meant that the Minority questioning has come at the end of the day under a lot of pressure to conclude the deposition.

It would seem to me that it would make more sense to proceed the way we do in the Committee here on the questioning, where we go back and forth. I don't know that every half hour is necessarily the right time, maybe there could be an hour of questioning by the Majority and then an hour by the Minority.

Senator DOMENICI. Do you think he's going to testify at this deposition?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We are going to make a record.

Senator DOMENICI. That's what this whole argument is about. If he would testify, we are in clover.

Senator SARBANES. In any event, I don't see a problem. I would like to get some assurance that we will have a time period and a back and forth movement in the questioning.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, let's take that under consideration. I will leave it to Counsel to attempt to work out. If they don't work it out, then you and I will discuss it.

Senator SARBANES. All right.

The CHAIRMAN. All right?

Senator SARBANES. All right.

The CHAIRMAN. I think it's all going to be academic. OK?

Senator SARBANES. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. We stand in recess.

[Whereupon, at 12:45 p.m., Wednesday, June 5, 1996, the Committee was recessed.]

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

EXECUTIVE SESSION

TUESDAY, JUNE 11, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:10 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato, (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING STATEMENT OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. Good morning.

This morning the Special Committee is meeting to consider the question on whether to vote a grant of limited-use immunity to David Hale so that the American people can hear and see Mr. Hale's testimony.

The Senate has charged this Committee with the responsibility for investigating matters involving Madison Guaranty and David Hale's company, Capital Management Services. The question has to be asked: How can the Committee complete its investigation without hearing from Mr. Hale?

David Hale was a key witness at the recently concluded trial in Little Rock of James and Susan McDougal, the Clinton's business partners in Whitewater, and Arkansas Governor Jim Guy Tucker. He testified that the then-Governor Clinton pressured him into making a fraudulent $300,000 loan to Susan McDougal. The jury convicted Susan and Jim McDougal on the 8 counts directly involving this loan. Fifty thousand dollars from this loan was funneled into Whitewater. In view of the verdicts in the Tucker/McDougal trial, the American people have a right to see and hear Mr. Hale testify.

It appears that my Democratic colleagues and the White House are afraid to let the American people judge for themselves whether Mr. Hale is telling the truth. Mr. Hale has not testified about two other alleged meetings he had with President Clinton about this loan. One was supposedly at the State capital and another was at a shopping mall. This Committee must question Mr. Hale about these meetings in order to present a full and fair picture to the Senate and to the American people. The American public needs to judge Mr. Hale and his testimony.

Last week, the Democrats suggested that we ask a court to decide the issue of whether David Hale is asserting a valid Fifth Amendment privilege. Senate Legal Counsel informed this Committee that we could not get a court decision prior to the June 17th expiration date, so we offered a compromise. Let's put partisan politics aside and ask an independent third party, a retired judge, to advise the Committee on whether Mr. Hale had a valid privilege. We proposed three prominent Democrats. Retired Supreme Court Justice Byron White, former Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti, and former Attorney General Griffin Bell. But my Democratic colleagues would not agree to this proposal.

Unfortunately only one conclusion is possible in my opinion, and that is that my Democratic colleagues do not want Mr. Hale to testify and their so-called legal arguments are simply an excuse to hide the truth concerning what took place.

I believe that is unfortunate. I think this Committee, obviously, would have been in a much better position to judge the truth or falsity by having Mr. Hale testify, by examining him, by cross-examining him, and by impeaching him, if necessary, with respect to statements that he might make, and also recognizing that he would still be held accountable for any crimes that he has committed and, indeed, for any perjurious statements that he might make.

I think the American people have a right to these facts and I am not under any illusions as to what the outcome of our vote will be today, but I am prepared, after everyone has an opportunity to make his or her opinions known, to proceed on the Resolution we initially offered, and that is to immunize him from prosecution as it relates to testimony that he may give before this Committee. I think that a copy of the Resolution has been distributed to my colleagues.

Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Well, Mr. Chairman, we had this debate of course last week at some extended length, and I don't know that it's necessary here this morning to repeat it all. Let me just make the following observations.

In my view, the game of Mr. Hale's lawyer was clearly revealed in the letter that he sent to you and me on June 6th, and I just want to quote from that letter on the first page, last paragraph:

In the absence of a court order to testify and a grant of immunity as provided by Federal law, any testimony by Mr. Hale regarding any matters before the Special Committee may be used against him in some fashion in connection with an announced criminal prosecution of Mr. Hale in Arkansas and any other State or Federal prosecution.

Now let me just underscore a couple of things.

First, this statement by Mr. Hale's lawyer made it clear that they would require a court order in order to testify, and that, in effect, rendered the notion of a special master to rule on the matter, I think, obviously something that was not feasible or practical.

Second, they have been very clear in laying out that they want blanket-use immunity. It says, "Any testimony by Mr. Hale regarding any matters before the Special Committee." Any testimony on any matters before our Committee may be used against him in some fashion in connection with an announced criminal prosecution of Mr. Hale in Arkansas. That is those allegations that have been made with respect to the burial insurance, where poor families were taken advantage of.

But then the lawyer goes on to say, "and any other State or Federal prosecution." Obviously, Hale's lawyer seeks an immunity. In fact, Senate Legal Counsel made it clear that there is substantial risk that, in effect, the Committee could be manipulated to give Mr. Hale an immunity bath. And I don't think we should do that.

We have tried earlier and throughout the year to get Mr. Hale in to get his deposition, to get his testimony. That is not the issue. The issue is whether he should be given immunity. And it is clear from his lawyer's letter that they are seeking the very broadest immunity possible. I think, as I indicated last week, that they are seeking to manipulate the Committee in order to gain protection for themselves against other possible legal action. Therefore, as I indicated last week, I don't think the Committee ought to allow itself to be used in that fashion.

Senator SHELBY. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Shelby.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR RICHARD C. SHELBY

Senator SHELBY. Mr. Chairman, the time of this Special Committee on Whitewater is about to expire. The Democrats are so acutely aware of this it appears they are joining in a cover-up of the White House with total disregard of their responsibilities to the American people. They make excuses about "use" immunity, but they know very well that Congress has granted immunity to more than 300 witnesses since 1970.

Unencumbered by the facts and evidence presented, the Democrats have deemed themselves the gatekeeper of information and have unilaterally decided to lock the testimony of David Hale far and away into a vault so the American people can never hear Mr. Hale's testimony. The opposition party does not want Mr. Hale to testify because they know very well, Mr. Chairman, that Mr. Hale would testify about two additional meetings with then-Governor Clinton, now President Clinton.

After 37 convictions and several resignations from top Administration officials, why, Mr. Chairman, won't the opposition party let the American people hear the testimony of this witness and decide for themselves the value of what he has to offer? What are they scared of, Mr. Chairman?

If David Hale is not allowed to testify, we will never, ever hear the testimony regarding the two meetings between David Hale and then-Governor Clinton. Yet, I believe it is the responsibility and duty of this Committee that demands we investigate this matter.

Mr. Chairman, we do not live in the old Soviet Union. This is not the Kremlin. It is not our position to censor what the American people should hear. They are smart enough to decide for themselves what they should and should not believe. Our objective is to find the facts and with 3 days to go the Democrats are relying upon procedural roadblocks to deny the American people rather than articulating a position based on the facts.

On June 7th, The Wall Street Journal ran an editorial entitled, "Senators Join Cover-Up." The editorial concluded by saying:

The misuse of law enforcement powers—threatening a prosecution witness to punish Mr. Hale as an adverse witness and using the excuse to avoid public scrutiny—is corruption of an especially sinister cast.

Today is truly an historic day in Washington, Mr. Chairman. Today is the day the Arkansas Democratic Machine blocks the U.S. Senate and the American people from hearing the testimony of David Hale. Today the American people lose and they lose big.

The CHAIRMAN. Chris.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER J. DODD

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, just very, very briefly, if I may on this matter. As Senator Sarbanes has said, we went through a lengthy discussion last week on this, and it seems to me the situation has not changed. One might argue, in light of the letter from Mr. Hale's attorney, in fact, made the point that any prosecution on any matter.

I would point out that the Committee, either before us or in deposition, has heard from 270 witnesses in the last 2 years. This is the first person ever to seek immunity out of the 270 witnesses we have had before us. And this man, let's be quite candid, knows what he's doing. You are talking about a former judge in Arkansas, a former prosecutor in Arkansas, he knows very well how to work this system.

He is trying to do one of several things. One, he is either trying to weasel out of a potential State prosecution in Arkansas, which is probably what he is up to in this instance; or two, he wants this Committee to give him a license to lie, that's all.

We have 1,600 pages of testimony and 9 days of trial in the State of Arkansas, all of which is available for people to go over. He did not get immunity for that. So it is obviously other matters they are concerned about.

I just don't think at this point, Mr. Chairman, with all due respect, that this Committee ought to be a participant in a process that would allow Mr. Hale to escape either prosecution in his own State for allegations that are very serious, or to be able to avoid prosecution on matters of which this Committee may not be aware at this particular point. So I think it is unwarranted to grant him that immunity, and I hope that the Committee would move on and finish up our work here.

Let me just last point out and say to my colleague from Alabama, it's the hyperbole that does damage to this process. There have not been 37 people from this Administration that have been indicted or found guilty of anything, not a single one. Yet when statements are made like that by Members, it does serious damage to the process. When someone says 37 high-ranking White House officials, that is just not the case, there isn't one. So I would hope that in these waning days and hours here, Mr. Chairman, we could kind of tone it down in a sense, make our points and move on. But those kind of statements don't do justice to the process.

Mr. Chairman, I would just ask to yield a few minutes, if I may, to Mr. Ben-Veniste, to make some comments on the remaining time that I have available.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. May I make only two points.

First, in terms of the statement of cover-up. Obviously, as a professional whose dealt with cover-ups, I am sort of sensitive to how that term is thrown around. And I will say that rather than being locked up in a vault, kept away from the American people, David Hale's testimony is available for anybody who wants to read it. It is here. This Committee has reviewed it, the staff certainly has. It is 1,600 pages of testimony. This is not a cover-up. This is David Hale's record under cross-examination where the jury concluded, according to its members, that David Hale was not truthful in terms of his testimony relating to President Clinton.

The second thing I would like to address is that although every single news article and every person talking about David Hale refers to the fact that he has alleged that President Clinton, then-Governor Clinton, pressured him into making a loan, the facts are otherwise. In fact, David Hale in a televised interview, refuted the notion that President Clinton pressured him. He said he did not feel that President Clinton was pressuring him. That is why the prosecutor in the McDougal/Tucker case told the jury, in his rebuttal argument, and I am quoting: "There've been no allegations of wrongdoing on the part of David Hale directed to the President, and there was never any suggestion, for instance, of any pressure."

I went back through 9 days of testimony and not once was there a suggestion that David Hale testified he was put under any pressure. Now those are the facts.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Domenici.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR PETE V. DOMENICI

Senator DOMENICI. Mr. Chairman, I will be very brief.

First, I want to take this opportunity to congratulate you on the effort that you have put forth in this very, very difficult, sometimes one might have even called it an ordeal. I believe the Committee has done its job in an excellent manner, and much of that is attributable to your leadership and your desire to get the facts, and I congratulate you in that regard.

Mr. Chairman and fellow Senators, I think the real issue is almost brought more to the surface by the Counsel for the Minority putting that voluminous pack of paper up there and saying, here Americans, you can find out what Hale says and what he has done, just take the liberty of reading this. Nobody's going to believe that, in all deference to the distinguished Counsel. What we really needed was to have the American people hear him with every opportunity to cross-examine him. That was the issue, not a transcript that took you 9 days to review or however long you said, excuse me, how many hours to review this, Counsel?

The CHAIRMAN. We have reviewed it carefully. It took 9 days for Mr. Hale to give that testimony.

Senator DOMENICI. Nine days for him to state it.

The CHAIRMAN. All of which was covered by the press.

Senator DOMENICI. But that is not the issue. None of it was covered for the American people to see, as they have seen the other witnesses come before this Committee and testify where everybody could watch them and see them.

The issue is very plain and very simple. You all talk out of both sides of your mouth. We really would love to hear him, we would love to cross-examine him, he is a liar, and then you do everything humanly possible to avoid his testimony.

There is something strange about that. It doesn't ring true that, indeed, you wanted to tear him up because he's such a bad actor, and then you avail yourself of your rights to say he shall not testify before this Committee and he shall not do that ever. You used excuses like he isn't entitled to the Fifth Amendment, and you knew that he was. You said, let's go find out, and we went and found out. Then the Chairman offered you another approach; and you turned that down.

So actually the issue is very, very simple. We were here to get the facts. We got the facts except we didn't hear from Judge Hale. And the American people are going to have to understand, before we are finished, that there was something very, very sinister about this. Why could we not hear him? It has nothing to do with this exaggerated claim, on his part, of immunity. Any lawyer would tell him to claim immunity before this Committee.

How many lawyers are there here? You go in the back room and search your conscience and say, would you let him appear without claiming immunity? Maybe one or two of you would. But frankly, I don't believe many lawyers would tell him to do that, especially when he is being hounded in the State, at least prior to this conviction, to keep his mouth shut in these hearings, or he would indeed have some trials, he would get indicted. Now all that's out there, everybody knows that.

So, Mr. Chairman, while we could have had a total record, including an affirmation to the American people we have heard from every relevant witness, we're just going to have to say, except we haven't heard from one of the most significant witnesses for you to judge, Americans, whether you believe him or not. I think that's what you've been trying to do Mr. Chairman, and I commend you for it. And although you have failed, I think the public understands the real situation.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Senator Kerry.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR JOHN F. KERRY

Senator KERRY. Mr. Chairman, let me speak directly to the comments just made by the Senator from New Mexico. He asked the question, why will David Hale not be heard before this Committee. The answer to that question is because David Hale, lawyer, judge, prosecutor, knowledgeable in the law, has decided not to come here and repeat the testimony that he has already given without immunity in a court of law subject to cross-examination.

So the question before the American people is, why should this Committee be asked to take this former judge, lawyer, and prosecutor and reward him for his unwillingness to say before this Committee what he has already said in a court in this country? The answer to that question is very clear. He's weaseling and dealing and bamboozling and working hard to cut a deal.

The question was put by Senator Hatch very, very aptly a few days ago in our discussion here, when he said: You know, really what you have here is a balancing ultimately and the balancing is whether or not his testimony is so valuable that he ought to be given immunity against any crimes that he has committed.

Now why should this Committee give him what the court didn't give him? Why, if he was willing to go before the court and speak, subject to cross-examination, should we suddenly give a greater value to the testimony that he has already given, simply because it is going to be here in front of the television cameras with a license to come in and say whatever he wants?

I am not willing to reward a scumbag who has already violated the law and admitted that he is a liar, and let him come up here in front of the Committee and have immunity from the crimes that he has committed, particularly from a State prosecution alleged to have involved ripping-off a whole lot of African-American poor folks for an insurance scam. I mean, is that what we ought to do?

It is not as if any Senator that is a Member of the Committee can't go and read these documents and make a judgment about who is doing what in this particular case. There is nothing being hidden from us, there is no vault, there is no refusal of this Committee to be able to get at the issues.

I think people are just upset because they can't have another media circus, or because they can't come in here and let this guy come in and do whatever the heck he wants to do. He is denying this Committee that right, not us. He and his lawyer have made a choice to try to cut a deal. And on balance, because his testimony is already available to us, I choose not to reward him for his criminal activity. I choose not to give him the ability to get what he could not get from the prosecutor, to get what he could not get from the court, and to somehow come here and be rewarded for his whatever alleged criminal activities may be.

I think that would be an enormous mistake for this Committee and I think that to use these terms, you know, I mean look at these documents. It is not as if we don't know what he is going to say. We have just had the Senator from Alabama tell us what he's going to say. I mean, what's being hidden from this Committee? It's the most ridiculous set of assertions I have ever heard.

David Hale is the only person responsible for what is happening here, and since he chose once to testify, he can chose again, but he wants the deal and I'm not willing to give him a deal and reward him for his history.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Faircloth.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR LAUCH FAIRCLOTH

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You know, we are doing a lot of talking this morning, and having a good time doing it. We are talking about what is the question before the American people, and a lot of legal terms and a lot about use immunity and what kind of immunity.

And we keep talking about what is the question before the American people, what do they see?

Well, they are not interested one whit in David Hale. They are not seeing David Hale. He is not really an issue here. What they are seeing is the use by the Democratic Members of this Committee to continue to struggle to cover-up Clinton. That's exactly what we are talking about. We are not hiding Hale, we have referred to him as a scumbag. I would use that word carefully in view of the adage that birds of a feather flock together.

David Hale is not the issue. The issue is the same thing we have been going through and I have said from day one, trying to get information from this Administration, wherever it can be blocked, as I said, is like eating ice cream with a knitting needle or whatever you want to say, it is a continued roadblock and refusal to do it.

What we are doing now is to struggle to try to keep this thing down until November. We don't want David Hale here testifying because he'll embarrass the President. We are not rewarding Hale, we are attempting to reward the President by keeping as much as we can under cover until the blessed day of November comes.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask a question. On July 6th, the statute of limitations will expire on David Hale on the State charges. I have great curiosity. Would the Democratic Members of the Committee be willing to extend the life of this Committee until some time immediately after July 6th, and if we can get David Hale to come then, would they be willing to do that and prove that they're not trying to cover-up the President and hide what went on in Arkansas, but really would like to get the truth out? I think that would be a good question to ask, and that's all I have to say.

Senator SIMON. If my colleague would yield, would you like to extend it to November 5th?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. No, the 6th is the——

Senator SIMON. I understand, but you want to extend it until November 5th?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. No, I said immediately after July 6th, Senator Simon. If it is not a cover-up of the Clintons, why can't we go ahead and do it? Why can't we hear David Hale? Nobody here is interested in David Hale?

Senator SARBANES. Well, it's an easy question to answer. I mean, if you look at the letter from Hale's lawyer, he makes reference not only to the announced criminal prosecution in Arkansas but any other State or Federal prosecution.

The real question is whether you're going to give David Hale an immunity bath. And many of us feel very strongly he ought not to obtain immunity. We've been seeking his testimony over a number of months, but to bring him in and give him immunity and then allow him to walk away scott free from any of these other charges that may be brought against him, we don't know what there are, but his lawyer obviously has something in mind. He has written this paragraph very carefully, and I've been over it very carefully.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I haven't been over what the lawyer wrote, but aren't we talking about by not giving David Hale immunity, we are giving the President of the United States immunity by not getting the full answers out. We are granting immunity to the President of the United States by refusing it to David Hale.

Senator SARBANES. That is assuming that what Hale has to say hasn't been heard. There's 1,600 pages here of Hale's testimony in the trial in Arkansas, and there are other statements that Hale's made on the public record over a sustained period of time.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Well, if we have heard all that David Hale has to say, why are you so afraid of him coming here and saying something else?

Senator SARBANES. Because we don't want to give him immunity and let him get a get-out-of-jail-free card.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. No, we want to continue the immunity of President Clinton.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bryan.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR RICHARD H. BRYAN

Senator BRYAN. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

I don't think that the American people ought to be confused this morning. This is all about partisan politics, an attempt on behalf of the Majority to seek to embarrass the President by prolonging this hearing. It's gone on for many, many months.

I might say that I think our Chairman actually was somewhat prophetic when he said on November 28, 1995, and I quote him:

If this matter is dragged out into February or later, I believe, legitimately, questions can be raised as to why we are bringing him in so late and getting into next year and the political season, and I think that's a very legitimate concern of this Committee, both Democrats and Republicans, and I would like to avoid that.

Well, unfortunately we haven't avoided that. We are right in the middle of it. I think some context needs to be placed. First of all, the Democrats ought to have had Mr. Hale testify last year. That did not occur. Now this is a twice-convicted felon and, as my colleagues will recall, there was a proposition advanced at our last hearing that purported to seek limited-use immunity for him. That was what was being discussed, very limited use.

A number of us felt that this Committee was being maneuvered and manipulated not into a limited use, but a blanket immunity or an immunity bath, as Senator Sarbanes has just characterized it. Well, shortly after our last meeting on Thursday, the letter which Senator Sarbanes has shared with us, was sent to our Chairman and the Ranking Member, and I think it's worth reading the operative paragraph again.

In the absence of a court order to testify, and a grant of immunity as provided by Federal law, any testimony by Mr. Hale regarding any matters before the Special Committee may be used against him in some fashion in connection with an announced criminal prosecution of Mr. Hale in Arkansas and any other State or Federal prosecution.

So the concern, obviously, of his counsel is not just the Arkansas prosecution which has been discussed or alluded to at some reference here, but to potential other State or other Federal prosecution. Why in the world would we give a twice convicted felon an immunity from other crimes, State or Federal, the circumstances of which we know not?

I believe really what is involved here is that what we are not prepared to do on our side of the aisle is to give a twice-convicted felon a get-out-of-jail-free card to further the partisan interests of the Majority.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Grams.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR ROD GRAMS

Senator GRAMS. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

For the second time in 2 weeks, this Committee has been called to vote on allowing David Hale to testify in public on the pressure applied to him by then-Governor Clinton to make a fraudulent loan to Susan McDougal. I fully expect that for the second time in 2 weeks, the Democrats in this Committee will say no. The question is, what is so important that they have decided to play this fourth quarter game of beat the clock?

Now the Democrats have tried to make the case that they aren't hiding anything, that they want to see David Hale testify as much as anyone. But actions, Mr. Chairman, speak louder than words and by their actions, the Democrats have made one thing quite clear. They don't want David Hale to testify in public, not today, not tomorrow, not ever. And so it will be. David Hale won't testify before the public. This Committee will file its report without all the evidence. Many dirty little Arkansas secrets will be kept hidden from public scrutiny.

So today, as the White House whispers orders from the sidelines, the clock will run out on this investigation.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Boxer.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR BARBARA BOXER

Senator BOXER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I think we have to ask ourselves why we are in this debate. I think the answer is because the Senate, in its wisdom, has a rule that says the Majority of any Committee cannot grant immunity by itself. And if ever we saw the need for such a rule, it is in these proceedings.

Now the fact is granting immunity is very serious. That is why the Senate, in its wisdom, has this rule. It protects the Senate from itself. It protects the Senate from granting immunity in a situation just like this when it would be used for political purposes. A pardon in advance, that is what my colleague from Illinois called it. And that's very serious.

So you have to ask yourself why you want to do that, and without repeating all the facts of the case, let me just say, what are you granting this pardon in advance for? For testimony that already has been heard.

My friend from New Mexico says, yes, but reading the newspaper about this and reading the documents, we want to bring this David Hale forward, right here, so that the American people can hear him say what he already said. My friend from New Mexico, who is my Chairman on the Budget Committee, for whom I have a great deal of respect, is willing to give a pardon in advance to this man.

Who is this man? Let's see what the jurors in Arkansas said about him. And everyone is praising the jurors for their work. I think across the board it was a fair jury. Juror Colin Kapp said, "The jurors considered Hale an unmitigated liar." Juror Ernest Williams said, "I didn't believe a thing Hale said." These are people who have made an informed judgment. For us to give a pardon in advance to an unmitigated liar, a twice convicted felon, is something I am simply not going to do. And my people in California did not send me here to do that. Now if my friends on the other side think it's worth doing that, that's their decision. But it certainly isn't mine and others on this side.

So I think we are just in many ways reiterating the debate we already had. We should just move forward because I think that is the basic conscience question. Do you give a pardon in advance to a man like this? You answer it your way.

Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bennett.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR ROBERT F. BENNETT

Senator BENNETT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I have nothing really new or exciting to add to the dialogue, but I must make a few observations just to make it clear where I am on this.

We have already heard from him, there is nothing new to learn. Statement number one that has been thrown out here. I disagree with that. He testified in a court situation, very controlled. The judge ruled out of order some of the testimony that the prosecutor wanted on the record.

He said he has had three meetings with President Clinton. He testified about one of them in the trial. I would like to ask him about the other two. I would like to ask him questions about the things he was not allowed to testify to in the trial.

If it would make the Minority feel happier, I would be happy to stipulate that we wouldn't ask him any questions about the things he testified to in the trial, and we would spend our entire time with the trial reading that testimony, and restrict our questions entirely to other matters.

To me, it is very clear that there is a lot he can tell us that had nothing whatever to do with what he testified to in the trial in Little Rock. The statement that we've heard what he has to say, and all we need to do is read the testimony and have nothing further to learn from him, is not a statement I accept.

Number two, we can't give a pardon in advance to a criminal. As I've said before, the man's in jail. The man's career is ruined. The speculation that you might damage the efforts of a prosecutor who is trying to pile on doesn't impress me very much.

If he were on the street, if this use immunity would give us the possibility that he would remain on the street, that he would continue depredations against the common good by virtue of what we were doing, then I would be a little more sympathetic to it. But I'm not sympathetic to the idea of giving, once again, not blanket immunity, not an immunity bath, but use immunity only to a man who has seen his career destroyed and who is in prison, does not strike me as any threat to the public safety or the public good.

Now let's get to statement number three about this immunity and the immunity bath and the get-out-of-jail-free card, and a pardon in advance. These are all wonderful sound byte phrases, but the fact is we are not doing something special for David Hale if we do this. Since the use immunity statute was passed in 1970, Congress has granted it 300 times. Oh, I get told, you have to take into consideration the way Ollie North and his lawyers changed the law and turned use immunity into an immunity bath. And by the way, Ollie North got off on a technicality after his testimony.

Since the prosecution of Ollie North, the Senate alone—I don't have numbers for the House—has given use immunity to 12 additional witnesses and somehow the republic has survived. Somehow we've been able to get on without having everything crumble in giving this use immunity since Ollie North.

So, Mr. Chairman, if it comes to a vote, I will vote to grant use immunity, as the Congress has done over 300 times before. I would be willing to agree not to question Mr. Hale in a redundant fashion about anything he has already testified to under oath, and restrict my questions entirely to new material that I think we have a right to hear.

I reject the notion that we are in fact giving a pardon in advance when we are dealing with somebody whose career has been destroyed by virtue of his own actions, and then the law enforcement procedures that followed those actions, by giving use immunity to a man who is already in jail, and not likely to get out. I reject the notion that that's an immunity bath. To me, it would be the proper, prudent, public thing to do.

I recognize that the votes are not going to be there. I am sorry that we are not going to be able to ask Mr. Hale those additional questions and find out those additional things that we don't know, but instead those will be forever left in the realm of speculation and newspaper reports because we won't be allowed to put him under oath. I think, ultimately, that does not serve the cause of truth or exposure in this whole debate either. But we are where we are, Mr. Chairman, and let's proceed.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator.

Senator Moseley-Braun.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR CAROL MOSELEY-BRAUN

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, there's been some harsh words this morning and I couldn't help but think, when one of our colleagues was using words, strong words to describe the opposition of the Minority to a blanket immunity, I couldn't help but be reminded of a poem that I learned as a child. It went, and I paraphrase: As I was climbing up a stair, I saw a man who wasn't there, he wasn't there again today. I wish, I wish he'd go away.

Well, the fact of the matter is, I think it's a disservice to use the words "cover-up" after some 276 depositions, after some 51 public hearings, and after 300 hours worth of work by the Members of this Committee.

Some of the Members of this Committee found no there there. We did not find a man atop the stair. Quite frankly in any event, we are not prepared to give Mr. Hale, which is the specific discussion here today, a get-out-of-jail-free card under the circumstances. Give him the chance or take the chance that he can never be prosecuted for illegal acts that he may have committed.

We have been there. We went there with United States v. North. In that case, the court was very clear, and I want to quote:

If the Government chooses immunization, then it must understand that the Fifth Amendment in Castigar means that it is taking a great chance that the witness cannot be Constitutionally indicted or prosecuted.

Some of us, Mr. Chairman, are just not prepared to take that great chance, which doesn't make sense. The Castigar decision, and I quote the North decision further:

Castigar does not prohibit simply, "a whole lot of use or excessive use or primary use of compelled testimony. It prohibits any use, direct or indirect."

Since David Hale has sought the same immunity that was conferred on Oliver North, what we are looking at is a situation in which he, Mr. Hale, has plea bargained a deal for himself in a trial. His testimony is there but that was as a result of a plea bargain. Now, he wants to plea bargain here regarding anything and everything else. Mr. Chairman, I don't think that's the Committee's job.

Specifically, in the March 1994 plea bargain, the government promised Mr. Hale, and I quote:

If David Hale fully complies, he will not be further prosecuted for any crimes related to his participation in the conduct of Capital Management, Diversified Capital, and Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, and any other crimes to the extent that David Hale has disclosed such criminal activity to this office as of the date of this agreement.

So he cut himself a really sweet deal with regard to the trial there. The result is all that testimony, Mr. Chairman, that's sitting right there. And that testimony's been reviewed and there is no there there either.

Mr. Chairman, some of us do not believe that it makes sense to turn this hearing into a man-hunt or a witch-hunt or whatever you want to call it. We've done our job, we've followed the direction that was taken with the Resolution that set up this Committee, we have gone over hundreds of thousands of pages of documents, and we have listened to enough witnesses. Mr. Hale's testimony on the things for which he was granted immunity is before us, and to give him, again as my colleague says, a pardon in advance, a get-out-of-jail-free card, or alternatively, allow him to take an immunity wash, does not comport with our view of our responsibility.

So I would just say to my colleagues, it really does a disservice to the work that everybody has put in here. I mean, we may have different positions, we may see this differently, and we may reach different conclusions. It is a disservice, however, to deprecate, diminish, and demean the work of the Minority Members of this Committee, who, as much as anybody else, have sat here dedicated to trying to get the truth out, dedicated to fulfilling our responsibility under the Resolution, and dedicated to trying to do our jobs as elected representatives of the American people.

Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Murray.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR PATTY MURRAY

Senator MURRAY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

It seems to me ironic that 245 individuals have been deposed by this Committee and not one of them has asked to have immunity. Every person who has been deposed or come here as a witness will be held accountable for their words.

It seems really strange to me that the one person who's serving a jail sentence for the next 2 years is asking this Committee to grant him immunity for anything that he says when he comes before this Committee. He will be out in several short years. He doesn't have a great life ahead of him, I agree with the Senator from Utah, but he will be out of jail in 2 years.

I don't think it's piling on for the Arkansas prosecutor to want to go after Mr. Hale if he chooses on behalf of poor African-American families in Arkansas who were robbed of burial insurance that they had bought for their family members in a scam that involved David Hale.

Certainly, this Committee ought to be aware of those families, and granting David Hale immunity to come before this Committee is asking for blanket immunity. He's clearly, in this letter, saying to us that he wants blanket immunity. For us to grant him that does a disservice to all of those families and anything else that he wants to bring before us, accidentally, otherwise, whatever.

I just do not believe that this Committee should be responsible for granting this one person, out of all of the hundreds of people who have been deposed by this Committee, the one person who is serving a jail sentence, to be giving him immunity and not to be held accountable for what he says in front of this Committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Murkowski.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR FRANK H. MURKOWSKI

Senator MURKOWSKI. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I guess this thing's on. You know, I think it is really unfortunate that we are down to this situation where right now we have the source. He's right here in Washington, DC. David Hale has been transported to Washington, and approval has been secured from the Independent Prosecutor, but the Democrats are preventing his testimony.

Let's not kid ourselves, Mr. Chairman, about the importance of David Hale's testimony. We've had the Democrats and the Counsel loudly declare the importance of that testimony, and the Committee has questioned numerous witnesses about their contact with David Hale. Bottom line, it has been second- and third-hand information. So here he is now, and yet we are being prevented from hearing him. And the American people aren't going to let this Committee or the Minority on this Committee or the Minority Counsel, forget that.

I'm disappointed in what I see as one party vigorously defending the President instead of vigorously trying to complete a duty to this Committee. And I'm not alone in that observation, Mr. Chairman. I would like to quote yesterday's Washington Post where writer Robert Novak comments on the standstill in this Committee:

In 39 years of watching Congressional investigations, I have never before seen members of the President's party so unwavering in defending him. Thus, they [the Democrats] have been rigorous in following the White House script on Hale.

Mr. Novak ends his article by stating:

Keeping Americans from hearing Mr. Hale's accusations under cross-examination constitutes a tactical victory for the White House.

Well, Mr. Chairman, I don't know about a tactical victory, but as a Member of this Committee, I feel that we have been derelict on one hand in the sense of not being able to obtain enough support from the other side to allow this most important of all witnesses to be heard and that's the bottom line. We're not hearing the main witness, and we have to bear that responsibility as we respond relative to the excuse that somehow this immunity question is relevant. It is not relevant, Mr. Chairman. What is relevant is the testimony of David Hale. That's what is relevant to this Committee, and we all know it.

So I think it is probably a voice crying in the dark, but I would again ask my colleagues on the other side to allow this Committee to complete its Constitutional duty, allow this Committee an opportunity to question and cross-examine Hale and allow the American public an opportunity to judge the veracity of this man, and allow the White House and the President, once and for all, to get this issue behind them. Because it will not, Mr. Chairman, clear the air, it will leave the air stale as a consequence of the inability of this Committee to come together and have David Hale before us as he should be.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Faircloth.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Chairman, I sit here and I listen again. We've been going here for a long time and it's been a pretty strong Committee. We've heard the exhausted cliché, "No there there." Well, I don't know what "there there" means but we've had 9 guilty pleas, 3 convictions, 4 resignations, and numerous demotions and other people awaiting trial, so if that isn't there there, I don't know what there is there. But what we are doing here today is simply perpetuating a cover-up by refusing to let this man come testify.

We're in a struggle to withhold information and to perpetuate a cover-up from day one. We aren't granting immunity by refusing to let David Hale come here, we aren't granting any favors to David Hale, we are granting the favor to Bill Clinton. That's who we are granting the favor to. It's not something we are doing for David Hale. It is the further protection of Clinton. It is time to come forth and quit the cover-up.

Mr. Chairman, I have one thought on it. If Mr. Hale will agree to come voluntarily after the statute of limitations runs on his charge, potential State charges, this would be some time after July 6th, now if you're saying you're not trying to protect a cover-up and protect Bill Clinton, if you're saying David Hale is really the target you're trying to go after, why don't we find out if the Committee would agree to allow David Hale to come after July 6th, if he will come voluntarily.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, the Senator propounds a question that has really become academic as it relates to this Committee, because we will be finished on the 17th. It does not become academic, however, if there are other Committees of the Congress who want to pursue that. We will not, as the Special Committee on Whitewater, because our charge is very explicit, and on June 17th, we will be out of business.

Of course, there is always the possibility that another Committee of the Congress, either in the House or the Senate, can consider the question. Maybe Mr. Hale's lawyer and Mr. Hale, at that point in time, would not seek the so-called use immunity, given the fact that he apparently has received immunity from other prosecutions, and it would appear that the only question outstanding—and I don't know for certain—is that question with respect to the Arkansas prosecution.

But as it relates to this Committee, I can tell the Senator while the proposition is quite intriguing, we will be terminated and we will submit our reports on the 17th. Unfortunately, it would appear, we will not have the benefit of that opportunity. As Senator Murkowski indicated, one of the shortcomings will be that a key witness will not have the opportunity to testify and to be examined by this Committee, and by the American people in terms of what he may or may not have to offer.

But I thank the Senator for his inquiry.

Senator Simon.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL SIMON

Senator SIMON. Yes. Just a brief comment about David Hale, and that is that his counsel makes clear it is not only the State prosecution but potential Federal questions, and so that he wants immunity not only from State but also from Federal prosecution. I think the two-thirds rule is going to apply and I think this Committee properly makes the judgment not to give immunity.

Since this is going to be the last meeting, Mr. Chairman of this Committee, which I voted against creating, I think we ought to ask ourselves where we are, what have we found.

I think there are two basic questions. The first question: Was there an abuse of power by Bill Clinton as Governor of Arkansas? I have seen no evidence to suggest there was an abuse of power. The second question: Has this whole matter been mishandled by the White House? I think here you have to say there was a mishandling. They would have been much better being forthcoming, providing all the material right away. But that seems to me, after all the hearings, all the depositions, that's kind of where we are.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator.

Let me recognize Senator Mack. He hasn't spoken yet.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR CONNIE MACK

Senator MACK. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

First, let me say that I am surprised and disappointed frankly with my colleagues on the other side of the aisle. When we began these investigations some time ago, I think there was a recognition by most of who were observing that we were acting in a bipartisan manner. That there truly was an effort to get to the bottom of things. But it seems to me, again from my observation, that the more that has come to light, if you will, the more that we have focused on the target, there's been less cooperation.

Now, we're down to the point where we have an opportunity to hear from David Hale. And while my colleagues on the other side of the aisle want to keep saying that we want to give this man a pardon, that we want to wash him in immunity, that simply is a false statement. We are talking about a use immunity, limited immunity, specific immunity. And so they are raising a smoke screen in my opinion.

So again, I say, I am disappointed because I believe that they have now been drawn into, in fact, assisting this Administration in covering up what has happened in this Whitewater affair.

As a result of the action by my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, we will be denied and the American people will be denied the opportunity to listen to David Hale on two conversations that were not covered in the trial. And because of the cover-up actions of the Democrats, we will probably never have sworn testimony about those meetings.

A moment ago, my friend from North Carolina responded to the no there there, and I, just to make the point once again, I would remind folks that Roger Altman resigned as a result of these investigations. Jean Hanson resigned as a result of these investigations. Two others have resigned. Nine individuals have pleaded guilty. Three others have been found guilty, as we all know, from the actions in Arkansas.

It is interesting again to me that at a moment where I thought that things could, the development of the billing records on the third floor of the White House, that my colleagues on the other side of the aisle would have said, you know, there is something very, very strange here. We really need to assist the Committee in getting to the bottom of this. Instead, they took the other course and have been, in my opinion, participating in what I have referred to for a long period of time now as the Clinton Administration's active engagement in a continuous effort to interfere with the investigation of this Committee.

So, I say as I began, Mr. Chairman, I am disappointed in my colleagues on the other side of the aisle. I expected more from them in my working relationship with them over the years than what I have seen in these last two hearings.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Senator SHELBY. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't know if any of my other colleagues want to speak, but why don't we recognize Senator Shelby, and then I think we're at the point now where we have discussed this. I think people know our feelings on this, and it would be my intention then to move to a vote.

Senator Shelby.

Senator SHELBY. Thank you.

Mr. Chairman, I want to thank you for your leadership on this Committee, this investigative committee. It has been tough and it has been arduous, but we have had some successes here. We have also had some failures, such as what is going to happen today unless somebody changes their mind.

So when one of my colleagues said, yes, where are we, well, it's about 3 minutes to midnight on this clock in this Committee. And this is going to be the last meeting, I suppose, Mr. Chairman.

In this Committee several months ago, some of you might recall that I raised the issue that there were parallels between this Administration's action and the Watergate era of President Nixon. Make no mistake about it, there were a lot of parallels. You can get your own list. I have a list of them and I won't bother the Committee with them now. But think about the parallels of stonewalling, obstruction, continuing to obstruct committees, and it is continuing to obstruct investigations. This Administration's done a good job on stonewalling. I have to give them credit for it. But the parallels are there.

Look at what has happened in the last few days, if you don't think there are parallels between this Clinton Administration and the Nixon Administration. When you look at when they requested the nearly 340, 339 FBI background checks on people including the former Secretary of State, Jim Baker, including the former Chief of Staff at the White House, Kenneth Duberstein, even James S. Brady, who was President Reagan's Press Secretary. Think about it. Raw material, three or four hundred.

That is what President Nixon did. You know it and I know it, among other things. And you know what the outcome was. He was wrong, and this Administration's wrong.

Now, my colleague and friend from Nevada, Senator Bryan, he mentioned something, paraphrasing, that this is all about politics. Maybe, maybe not. Isn't it deeper than just politics? Isn't it more serious than just politics? Doesn't it go to the very heart and soul of this Administration or any Administration if you're involved in possible obstruction of justice, stonewalling, getting the FBI to do all these raw checks on things?

There's a lot missing in this Administration, and I think that the judge of this Committee's vote today, and the judge later of the Administration's action will be history, will be the American people. But I believe it's not just about politics, it's about letting the American people know, to the best of our ability, what's going on.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, just let me say very quickly, first of all, on the matter that's pending on the House side, Chairman Clinger himself has said that he's not sure exactly what happened and that's what they're trying to find out, but there's been an explanation offered that is not insidious and that has it as a perfectly honest mistake, and we'll discover that. I gather that Director Freeh is now looking into the matter and is expected to give a report by the end of the week.

Our issue here today is whether we should give Hale immunity and therefore protect him from any possible prosecutions for other misbehavior, and it's our view that that ought not to happen, that we have his testimony from the trial, we have extended statements that he's put on the public record, and that the giving of immunity is no light thing, and that I think frankly, as Hale's lawyer's letter indicates, that there is a very carefully calculated effort on their part to gain immunity from the Committee, in other words, to manipulate the Committee to their advantage, and I don't think we should be party to that.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Hatch.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR ORRIN G. HATCH

Senator HATCH. Well, Mr. Chairman, I will only take a second.

But if the prosecutor in Arkansas, for instance, is a good one and is pursuing a legitimate prosecution instead of engaging in political retaliation, then he will can his evidence and will avoid any Castigar problems. I don't think there's any question about that.

As I said last week, Whitewater is sitting over this Presidency like a cloud. It is threatening the success of his Presidency. We want to dispel this cloud, the American people want to dispel this cloud. And the only way we can do it is to try and get to the truth.

I would just say one other thing. As Justice Brandeis once put succinctly, "Sunlight is the best of disinfectants." Frankly, I don't see why the other side is even concerned about having this man come. You'll have every opportunity to question, and it would be a good way of putting this thing to rest one way or the other. I just can't imagine, you know, if you look back at Watergate, you look back at Iran-Contra, I was on the Iran-Contra Committee, there was bipartisan support for use immunity.

All I can say is that I hope my colleagues on the other side will vote to do this, but if they don't, I'll never understand it.

The CHAIRMAN. Then I move the adoption of the Resolution. The Clerk will call the roll.

The CLERK. Chairman D'Amato.

The CHAIRMAN. Aye.

The CLERK. Mr. Shelby.

Senator SHELBY. Aye.

The CLERK. Mr. Bond.

The CHAIRMAN. Aye by proxy.

The CLERK. Mr. Mack.

Senator MACK. Aye.

The CLERK. Mr. Faircloth.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Aye.

The CLERK. Mr. Bennett.

The CHAIRMAN. Aye by proxy.

The CLERK. Mr. Grams.

Senator GRAMS. Aye.

The CLERK. Mr. Domenici.

The CHAIRMAN. Aye by proxy.

The CLERK. Mr. Hatch.

Senator HATCH. Aye.

The CLERK. Mr. Murkowski.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Aye.

The CLERK. Mr. Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. No.

The CLERK. Mr. Dodd.

Senator SARBANES. No by proxy.

The CLERK. Mr. Kerry.

Senator SARBANES. No by proxy.

The CLERK. Mr. Bryan.

Senator SARBANES. No by proxy.

The CLERK. Mrs. Boxer.

Senator BOXER. No.

The CLERK. Ms. Moseley-Braun.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. No.

The CLERK. Mrs. Murray.

Senator MURRAY. No.

The CLERK. Mr. Simon.

Senator SIMON. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Accordingly, the two-thirds vote has not been achieved. The Resolution, therefore, does not have the required two-thirds vote. It fails on the vote of 10 ayes and 8 nays.

Senator Faircloth.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Chairman, on a totally other note, I want to thank you for your leadership during this long, and it has been a long and complicated process. You have been fair and judicious throughout the proceedings, and in most cases, patient. But I do want to thank you for the manner in which you conducted it.

I would also like to extend my thanks to the entire Committee staff. All of you have done a great job. Mike Chertoff, Bob Giuffra, Alice Fisher, Viet Dinh, and all of the staff that have made it work. They have been here long hours and tirelessly made these hearings work and prepared and presented the facts to the American people. I want to give my thanks to all of the staff for getting out the facts as best we could.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much, Senator.

I want to thank you for bringing this to our attention, because I think we do owe the staff a debt of gratitude on both sides, Majority and Minority. It was not easy, a lot of conflicts, a lot of interest, a lot of pushing and pulling. They've worked under extraordinarily difficult circumstances and I believe that they have done an excellent job, given the circumstances and given the limitations placed on them. So I concur and I thank you for indicating this publicly.

Senator Sarbanes.

[No response.]

The CHAIRMAN. There being no further business, the Committee stands in recess.

[Whereupon, at 11:20 a.m., Tuesday, June 11, 1996, the Committee was recessed, subject to Call of the Chair.]
